"The boy could have been caught without the use of firearms," George Archer, another inmate testified. "It was impossible for him to get out of the field without being caught. There were trucks, cars and guards all around."

Gordon L. Havaline, a prison guard who fired six shots from a revolver at Parks, said he had no intention of hitting the man in the head or body. He had tried to hit Parks in the legs after the shotgun shots failed to stop him.

"I wasn't even shooting to hit the man," testified Elmer Hefky who fired two shots from a revolver. Another guard, Roy Laverty, said he called a warning to halt and fired one shot ahead of Parks, two around his ankles, and fired two more but did not know where they hit.

Parks, serving a 12 months term for theft, was due for release in November.

SAYS NO BOOTS DUMPED

Ottawa, July 20 (CP)—Reconstruction Minister Howe said last night in the Commons that neither the army nor War Assets Corporation had dumped any boots or shoes on the Pointe St. Charles dump in Montreal and he could only assume the dumping had been done by a private concern. Replying to recent questions as to responsibility for dumping of "thousands" of pairs of boots and shoes, Mr. Howe said that as a result of an investigation by the army and War Assets Corporation he could state that no footwear had been placed on the dump by either the army or War Assets.

IN MEMORIAM

POST — In loving memory of Mary Ann Post, who passed away July 21, 1944.

Two years have passed and gone
Since one we loved so well
Was taken from our home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell.
The flowers we place upon her grave
May wither and decay,
But the love for her who sleeps beneath
Shall never fade away.

—Ever remembered by George Post and Family.

REID — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Addie A. Reid, who passed away July 21, 1942.

Our family circle has been broken,
A link gone from our chain,
But though we're parted for a while,
We know we'll meet again.

—Sadly missed by wife; daughters, Pearl, Marvel and Ruth; sons, Morley and Malcolm.

COLDEN — In fond and loving memory our dear Grandma and Great-Grandma, Mrs. Joseph Colden, who passed away three years ago today.

They say time heals all sorrow
And helps us to forget,
But time, so far, has only proved
How much we miss her yet.
God gave us strength to fight it,
And courage to bear the blow,
But what it meant to lose her
No one will ever know.

—Ever remembered by Yvonne, Reg and Allan Lloyd.

WOOD — In loving memory of a dear brother, Bill Wood, who passed away five years ago, July 20th., 1941.

In a quiet country graveyard,
When the breezes gently blow,
Lies the one we love so dearly
That we lost five years ago.
He left behind some aching hearts,
That loved him most sincere,
We never had, we never will,
Forget you, brother, dear.
Silent his voice, vacant his chair,
Sweet are the memories that linger there.
We miss him and mourn him in silence unseen
And live in the memory of joys that have been.

—Sadly missed by Sisters, Mildred, Edna, Dorothy, Doris, Norma and Vivian.

WOOD — In loving memory of Bill Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warner Wood, who passed away suddenly five years ago today, July 20th., 1941.

We do not need a special day
To bring you to our minds
For the days we do not think of you
Are very hard to find.
If all the world were ours to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the face of our dear son
Come smiling through the door.
To all the world he was but one,
But all the world to us—our Son.

—Lovingly remembered by Mother and Dad.

WOOD — In loving memory of a dear brother, Bill Wood, who passed away five years ago today, July 20th., 1941.

Just when your life was brightest,
Just when your years were best,
You were called from this world of sorrow,
To a home of eternal rest.

—Sadly missed by Floyd and Josie.

Britons Tolerate Bread Rationing Though Their Patience Wearing Thin

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 20 (CP Cable)—Bread rationing, described by opponents as unworkable and unnecessary and by the government as an essential precautionary measure, becomes effective for the first time in British history this weekend.

Stormy scenes in the House of Commons and displays for public posters marked reception of the plan, announced by Food Minister Strachey on his return from a recent visit to Canada and the United States. The average Briton's patience seemed to be wearing thin.

The housewife doesn't expect much difference in her family's bread allowance for the ration allowance is generous, but there are grumbles aplenty over the new twists of red tape created by the order.

The country's bakers, openly rebellious at first, are gruidingly conceding that they'll have to give rationing a try. Winston Churchill advised them to do so in a Commons speech Thursday, saying it should be clear if the scheme broke down "it would be because of its own defects and not because of lack of effort on the part of the trade."

Bread is in fairly good supply at present although housewives find it pays to shop early as bakeries and stores frequently sell out by afternoon. A small 14-ounce loaf sells for two pence three farthings (about five cents) and a larger one-pound, 12-ounce variety for four pence half penny.

When rationing starts the purchaser will be required to yield two bread units for a small loaf, four for a large. A pound of flour takes nine units and cakes, buns or scones one unit a half pound.

The basic schedule of bread units allots five a week to children up to four, nine from four to 11, 13 from 11 to 18. A "normal adult" gets nine units a week, expectant mothers and women manual workers 11 and male manual workers 15.

Extra coupons can be obtained for adolescents and manual workers.

Thousands of families won't use anything likje all the bread units allotted to them and what they have over at the end of the four-week period can be translated into "points" which can be used for scarce goods rationed on a point basis.

Mr. Strachey meanwhile has given hints that rationing may not be necessary for a long period. The size of the Canadian wheat crop and how soon it can be started moving toward Britain may be deciding factors.

Canada Street in Rhodes

Canada's name is now perpetuated abroad through her service in the cause of liberty. It lives in many a foreign land because her service folk have fought and many of them bled and died for the liberty these other lands cherish so deeply.

It is a long cry from Canada to the scene of the latest tribute, a street named "Canada" on the island of Rhodes, so named "in token of eternal gratitude to your heroic country, the friend and protector of the Greeks."

What greater glory could Canada ask in recognition than to have those who have seen the benefits of Canada's service to the world rendered by her servicefolk and by her people in the interest of lands afar off add the name of this land to their city. To have helped to save the Greek people is something of which Canada must be proud for the Greeks are the descendants of the great cultured race who wrote history in the eastern end of the Mediterranean twenty-five hundred years and more ago and left a heritage for the ages in thought and inspiration, in art and poetry and in the development of freedom in the state and in the minds of men as the Greeks have done.

This isle lives in history and today is a bright gem of the Levant. It is forty-six miles in length and twenty-four miles in extent at the widest. It is mountainous and has fertile valleys, producing fruit, vegetables and wine. Its climate is the most beautiful in the Mediterranean. Its capital is Rhodes, which was formerly a powerful fortress. In the long ago of the days of Alexander the Great, this defence was nine miles in circuit. The city was deemed one of the finest in the world not only in the time of Alexander but ever since.

The name Rhodes recalls one of the seven wonders of the ancient world, the celebrated Colossus of bronze which was thrown down in an earthquake.

It is interesting to note that the islanders of Rhodes trace their ancestry back to Greeks from Argos. The city has been one of the seaports of world reputation.

Rhodes in so important a position in the eastern end of the Mediterranean has seen many rulers. It enjoyed with Italy, Spain and Sicily, a large trade seven centuries before the birth of Christ. The Persians had taken the city, but Alexander wrenched it from their hands. It was plundered by Cassius, one of the conspirators against Julius Caesar. It was struck by an earthquake in 157 A.D. The Saracens occupied it, but in time the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem drove them out.

Now Canada's name appears on a street of Rhodes, proof of the appreciation of what Canada has done for the Greeks during the past war. Canadians are grateful for this tribute of appreciation. Any service Canadians have rendered to the Greeks has been a service of freedom and of appreciation for what the Greek people have meant not only in the ancient past but in these latter days. Greek heroism in the late war can never be forgotten. It helped greatly the cause of victory.

The Spectator Celebrates

Hamilton Spectator has been celebrating this week an event of importance in the life of that important city, the one hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the Spectator. Hamilton became a city just a hundred years ago and the city a few days ago gave itself over to celebration. These two events, the city's incorporation and the newspaper's foundation, have been vital facts in the life of that community. The newspaper has kept step with the progress of this important city.

In its anniversary edition the Spectator sets an example of industry and interest in the life of the community and the surrounding country. On the front page is a view of the city and the words "Reflections of a Hundred Years" appear. That is what this special edition means. What Hamilton is today and what the Spectator is can be gathered from the very fine edition which Hamiltonians have the pleasure of reading and now of keeping as an invaluable reference to the Hamilton that has been and still is.

The Spectator, one of the outstanding newspapers of Canada, worthily represents the spirit of the city of Hamilton. In its anniversary number it has brought together facts which people of the present day will not soon forget for they will treasure this edition because it is a vast storehouse of local historic information. Such an edition proves the importance of historical societies and organisations to preserve traditions and records of the growth of a community. In this work of keeping alive the past with its inspiration newspapers play no small role. The Spectator in its anniversary number has presented this local history impressively.

Caviar Too

Some people think that perhaps the greatest unsung hero of history was the fellow who first dared to eat an egg, and that his only genuine competitor was the hardy who took the first human swallow of an oyster.

In somewhat the same perspective we find caviar enthusiasts, who baffle a lot of people—outside Russia—with their devotion to that black mass of sturgeon eggs that make this delicacy what it is, or isn't, and pay fantastic prices to get it.

That caviar should be inevitably associated with Russia, old and new, is not unnatural. They have always liked it, and many a newspaper correspondent has buckled under the impact of this foodstuff, along with other great ornaments of Russian edibles, at the breakfast table. Even with Vodka they considered it an excessive morning eye opener.

Mist

Mist usually implies confusion and obscurity. At the beginning of time, it is said, a mist went up from the earth and distorted the face of creation. Since then it has hidden the stars from the voyager, baffled the tired watchman and shut out the light of sun and moon.

Nevertheless, it is one of the beautiful phenomena of Nature, in its blues and grays and bridelike white. It is entrancing to see it rise from a meadow, roll along a mountain or blow in from the sea. There is exquisite pleasure in the pale gleam of a light through mist; in seeing, for intance, a lighthouse beacon shine faintly through the surrounding blue.

Walking in the mist is like walking with a friend. It is a cool, clinging presence, which comes, as the poet Sandburg says, "on little cat feet" and sits on "silent haunches." It wraps the traveller round, lays damp hands on his cheeks, and lends to the world he sees a charm that renders every mundane object—even street lamps and letter boxes—ethereal and mysterious.

Worrying Again

Those nervous people who awaited the first Bikini blast in a state of apprehension acquired new confidence—in some cases, approaching bravado—when the explosion failed to rock the world.

Their complacency has been jolted, however, but the revelation that Experimental Bomb No. 1 staged its act have a mile above and one-third of a mile off the intended point of detonation.

Suggesting that even atomic scientists share the human tendency to err, the report has started them off on a new round of worrying that will not terminate until the underwater bombing now on the agenda becomes history.

WAGE AND COST

Wage and Cost forever
Side by side will stay.
None the two can sever,
Struggle as men may.

Sight of this the ages
Never once have lost:
Up or down the Wages,
Up or down the Cost.

Things are made by labor.
Things for profit sold.
Pay and Price will neighbor
Until earth grows cold.

Though the law may irk man,
Under it we stay.
How to help the workman?
Would I knew the way.

ATOM BOMB TEST SEEN FROM CLOUDS

Moose Survives All-Night Ordeal In Power Canal

Timmins, Ont., July 20 (CP) — A year-old moose won an all-night battle with the swift waters of the power canal at Wawaitin Falls on the Mattagami River 20 miles southwest of Timmins with the help of employees of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

The moose was heard in the canal about 11:30 o'clock last night but when the sounds of splashing and snorting died away employees presumed it had drowned. But at daylight, it was still there. One workman threw a noose about its neck and it was hauled to safety. The animal had just enough strength left to head for the tall timber at an easy canter.

Asserts Tourists Annoyed by Check For Infractions

Niagara Falls, July 20 (CP) — Mayor George R. Inglis, President of the Ontario Mayors' and Reeves' Association, said Friday United States tourists "are decidedly annoyed" at the practice of provincial game wardens of stopping them on highways near the border to check them on fishing regulations.

The check was to determine if tourists who had been fishing in Canada had licences and had limited themselves to the legal catch.

"They (the tourists) have been complaining about it and many of them have stated quite frankly that they would not return to Canada," he said.

"If a check-up is desired for infractions of fishing laws, it should be made at the source at the fishing spots and not hundreds of miles away."

Capital Closeups

By DOUGLAS HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 20 (CP)— Up at the head of the big brown room with the high ceiling, the little man with the white hair and the white moustache and the twinkling eyes sat supreme.

Around him, on each side of him there were the six other chairs where his colleagues sat but they were empty now for this is what they call, in court circles, the "long holiday," comprising July and August.

The little man, somewhat of a Victorian figure in this background, was the Hon. Thibaudeau Rinfret. Because he sat where he did, in the big ornate chair, he was the most important judge in all Canada.

As you sat and you watched him you thought of other courts and other judges you had seen, particularly the one in New Brunswick who was very sharp and once told a witness to continue standing because "you can lie better sitting down."

There was nothing of this in the Chief Justice, although he seemed to like to add a touch of levity to proceedings.

For instance, the lawyer for the plaintiff brought up the need for speed in deciding his petition. All things considered, there was not much time.

"Yes," said the Chief Justice, "we shall have to go as quickly as possible. Your man must be minding the heat in jail."

When the lawyer inferred exception, the Chief Justice had to explain that he hadn't meant to be sarcastic.

If the lawyer had had the judge's sense of humor, he wouldn't have had to explain anything.

A little later, the sun slanted through one of the tall, tall windows and got in the lawyer's eyes and was bright on some of his many books and many papers.

Then the sun grew bolder and got in other eyes and the little man in the big chair admonished "that's what we get for sitting after four o'clock.

Finally the clock pushed along towards six o'clock and the judge and the reporters, too, were wondering when all this would end and the lawyer benevolently pledged: "I'm going to be very brief with this."

The Chief Justice chuckled again.

"I won't mind that," he said.

Intruder Locks Domestic in Closet

Toronto, July 20 — (CP)—Police were searching for a man wearing a panama hat and a pinstripe blue suit, who locked a domestic servant, Irene Cloutier, in a clothes closet and stole a gold watch from an apartment on Claude Avenue in the west end.

Miss Cloutier described the intruder as about 30 years of age. She was alone in the apartment when he entered and knocked her down, then locked her in the closet. Frightened off by the girl's screams the man fled with only the watch.

Miss Cloutier said the man struck her several times and her cheek was cut.

DESENSITIZATION IN POLLINOSIS

For the autumnal pollinosis season—and that ain't hay fever—it is not yet too late to undergo desensitization. Pollinosis is hay fever to you.

Desensitization is tedious, time-consuming and expensive, yet certainly not to be sneezed at—or perhaps I should say not to be wheezed at, in cases of major pollinosis that is, in cases where the distress is so great as to interfere with occupation, profession or business, and particularly in cases where asthmatic symptoms predominate.

The purpose is to develop or restore natural or normal immunity to the pollen or group of pollens to which the patient is susceptible, by skin tests with pollen extracts, and a series of injections of homeopathic doses of the specific pollens gradually increasing in strength till a full dose produces n oreaction.

This desensitization or immunity is only seasonal in duration—must be done over again each year. In major pollinosis, however, it is always worth trying.

Internal administration of various combinations of pollen extracts has been tried but, so far as I know, without the benefit obtained from injections—the foreign protein substance pollen that produces allergy and the desensitizing or immunizing process must enter the blood stream unaltered by digestion—through skin scratch, injection, inhalation, or direct contact with wound or pollinosis, eczema, hives, asthma, angio-neurotic edema (giant hives), neuralgia or "nervous" headache or migraine (periodic sick headache preceded by warning signals called aura), such as forsification spectra is one side of the field or vision), is still obscure, so far as our knowledge goes. We can only speculate as to why John Doe suffers an attack if he eats lobster or inhales ragweed pollen or sleeps on down or goose feathers, while none of these things gives Richard Roe any trouble. From recent studies of the subject of allergy it would appear that histamine may be the under cover agent directly responsible for all allergic reactions. In an early talk we'll discuss histamine.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Apology Rejected

Please do not be so humble and apologize for those occasional dams. Why does Mrs. B. L. D. read your column if your words irk her—if you used only panty-waist language she would find it less entertaining. Continue as you have always done—we like every word of it, and God Bless You, you bad, bad man. (Mrs. A.E.S.)

Answer—Thank you, Ma'am, but after all the reader who chided me—was it Mrs. B. L. D.?—had a good point, the bad example for young readers. Anyway I believe you both are kind.

Saccharin

Since reading that saccharin is used in soft drinks, chewing gum, canned foods, ginger ale, etc., I am excluding these. (L. W.)

Answer—I quoted the statement from Bastedo's "Materia Medica, Pharmasology and Therapeutics" (Saunders, '38). However, I asure you any one can use up to five grains of saccharin daily as a sweetener in place of sugar, with impunity.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is a White Russian?

In English "White Russian" has two distinct meanings and is confusing. Strictly speaking, the term does not refer either to the complexion of the people whom it designates or to their political doctrines.

As constituted before the revolution of 1917, European Russia proper consisted of three grand divisions — Great Russia, Little Russia and White Russia — and the Emperor was styled the Czar of All the Russias (not Russians). Three racial groups corresponding to these geographical divisions have been distinguishable among the Russians for more than a thousand years.

Great Russia consisted of the central and northeastern provinces, and the language of its inhabitants, particularly the Moscow dialect, was the literary and official language of the empire.

Little Russia, second of the three Russias in area and population, was the name given to the southern provinces inhabited by the Ukrainians and the Cossacks.

White Russia (the name is a literal translation of Russian "Belorussia") was a comparatively small group of western provinces bordering on Poland and the Baltic states. The White Russians intermingled to some extent with the Great and Little Russians, but they were influenced mostly by the Poles and the Lithuanians. Their language spoken by fewer than 10,000,000 people living chiefly in the old provinces of Vitebsk, Mohilev, Minsk and parts of Pskov, Smolensk, Cheringov and Vilna, resembles Polish more than it does literary Russian and it has a very meagre literature.

After the dismemberment of the Russian empire White Russia became one of the constituent units of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics with Minsk as the capital and most White Russians became "Reds."

Just why they were originally called White Russians is not known for certain. They have light-brown eyes and light-brown hair with a reddish tinge and some authorities consider them the purest Caucasian stock among the three grand divisions of Slavs in Russia. One theory is that the country was called White Russia (Belorussia) to contrast its blond inhabitants with the darker Russians of Mongrel and Turkish blood who lived farther to the southeast. The Russian word for "white" may also mean "free" and another theory is that the White Russians were so called because they were more independent and long resisted control by the Great Russians. Still another theory, the one generally accepted, is that the White Russians received their name from their characteristic costume of homespun flax — white smock, bast shoes, white leggings and white coat.

During and after the revolution of 1917 those Russians who resisted and fought against the Bolshiki wore white bands on the right arm. Since the Reds wore similar uniforms they called the Anti-Soviet soldiers "White Guards" or simply "Whites." In English this became "White Russian" and through this process the term came to signify any anti-Bolshevik Russian.

WEDDINGS

HUPFIELD—VANDEWATER

A very pretty wedding of widespread interest took place on Saturday, July 13th, when Velma Irene Vandewater, only daughter of Mrs. P. G. Vandewater, Wellington, was united in marriage with John Ronald Hupfield, son of Mr. J. H. Hupfield, Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. F. Lane in Wellington United Church, at three o'clock.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Harold Vandewater of Toronto, looked lovely in a white bridal gown, the top of which was satin, with cap sleeves and low square neckline. The full net skirt had satin bands, and she wore long white mitts. Her finger tip veil was crested with a Mary Queen of Scots headdress with orange blossoms. She carried a cascade of pink carnations, roses and baby's breath.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Arthur Orr of Belleville, cousin of the bride, carrying a bouquet of pink carnations and baby's breath was charming in a blue dotted organdy dress with long bodice shirred over the hips and trimmed with white eyelet ruffles at the neck and sleeves. Her shoulder length veil was crested with a flowered headdress and she wore long matching blue gloves.

Little Miss Beverley Wallace, cousin of the bride, of Wellington, made a very sweet flower girl in a long white organdy dress with ruffled white headdress styled similar to that of the bride. She carried a nosegay of pink carnations.

The groomsman was Mr. Howard Chambers of Toronto and the ushers were Mr. Don Ross and Mr. Eugene Greer of Wellington.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the pews being marked with large white ribbons and shasta daisies at the altar arranged with blue delphinium, orange blossoms and white hydrangea.

The wedding march was played by Mr. J. E. Tunstall of Barriefield. Just preceding the entrance of the bridal party, Mr. Alan Aylesworth of Napanee, sang "Because" and during the signing of the register "Thine Alone."

Later, the reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, where the latter received th guests in blue-grey printed mesh, long fuchsia glovs, navy accessories and corsage of pink rosebuds. She was assisted by Mrs. J. C. Hure, Toronto, sister of the groom, wearing flowered mesh with dark accessories and corsage of red roses.

The tea table, spread with lace cloth, centred with the bride's cake and flanked with tall pink tapers, was presided over by Mrs. Charles Thomas and Mrs. J. L. Ross. The spacious rooms were beautifully decorated with sweet peas and other flowers.

For her going away costume, the bride chose an aqua blue gabardine suit with brown accessories and pink "shortie" coat. The bridal couple, amid a shower of confetti, proceeded to the Laurentians for their wedding trip. They will reside in Verdun, Que.

Out of town guests included Mr. Leonard Hupfield, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Vandewater, Mr. and Mrs. J. C Hurd and Miss Ruth McCulloch, all of Toronto, Mr. E. M. Gibson, the bride's former principal at Windsor; Mr. and Mrs. Warren Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cameron, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Cruickshank, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. V. O. N. News

The Well Baby Clinic sponsored each Friday afternoon by the Victorian Order of Nurses is held with a large attendance at the Kiwanis Centre. During the summer months the attendance keeps up its high average because mothers realize that their little ones need special attention in order to avoid any of the occasional summer ills to which baby is liable.

By regular attendance at the Baby Clinic as soon as it is some weeks old, the baby's progress is recorded and careful check is kept on its development. The nurses can give practical advice concerning everyday care of the child and when necessary, advise the mothers to consult their family physician for special problems.

Later in the season toxoid and dental clinics begin and these needs of children are given special consideration. All mothers are invited to bring their infants and small children to this popular centre to take advantage of the opportunties the Child Health program of the Victorian Order of Nurses affords.

Crowning Glory Kept Lovely

Janet Blair pays especial attention to grooming her hair.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Every fortnight one's glorious crown should be shampooed. If the asmosphere is dust laden, a weekly shampoo is the rule. Unless the scalp and tresses are kept scrupulously clean, the old mop may become depleted, and then how will you feel about that?

True, the shampoo calls for the wave-set and that's a bother. Takes time and money. But beautiful hair is a grand good looks asset. One cannot afford to neglect the hirsute halo.

Between the skin of the scalp and the skull there is a layer of tissue. This tissue should not be allowed to become fixed to the skull. The blood supply is lessened by the tightening of the scalp, does its work less normally and actively, interfering with nutrition. Every little silky shaft gets food and drink from the blood streams.

Pinch Scalp

Pass pour fingers over your scalp. Can you pick it up, pinch it between thumb and finger? No? Then make it a rule to give your noble pate a brisk massage every night. Before doing that, brush the hair vigorously.

Treat it strand by strand, holding each tress away from the head, using the brush with a rolling motion. The tug of the hair will stir up the tiny blood streams that are in the papillae.

Place fingers and thumbs out-spread over the scalp Keep the fingers stationary, do circles with the thumbs. You will be able to move the flesh even if the tissues have tightened. These movements will be beneficial to your precious wool.

Do rotary motions along the nape line. Treat the temples the same way; hair thins there first of all when it has a tendency to moult.

Don't consider this a chore. Place your mystery story on your dressing table, get a nice shivery scare while doing your beauty duty.

GOOD MANNERS

Problems Concerning a Stepdaughter's Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband's daughter is to be married in church, and my husband is to give her in marriage. I love my stepdaughter most devotedly, and we get along wonderfully well. I have never met her mother or any other member of her family. The reception is to be held in her cousin's home, where the daughter and her mother formerly made their home. Would it be the proper thing for me to attend the church ceremony only....or attend the reception also? I want to do the right thing, but on the other hand, I do not want to cause embarrassment to any of the persons concerned. In order to avoid any possible error, I am willing to stand back. Different points of view and advice have been presented to me on this question, but I am interested only in doing what is correct.

If you advise that I attend the ceremony, what would be the proper seating for me in church, since the bride's mother, I'm sure, would be seated in the first pew.

A. I. S.

The reason why no one can give you definite advice about whether or not you attend the ceremony and particularly, the reception, is that there no definate rule about this. And quite naturally there can't be, because in the circumstances of divorce and the marriage of the child of divorced parents, there are generally many complications to be faced, sensitive feelings to be handled with special consideration. Therefore it is you, dear lady who must make your own decision, you must decide what is the most gracious way of coping with the situation. For the most gracious way is the correct way.

If I were you, in the circumstances you set forth, my inclination would be not to attend either ceremony or reception. But certainly I think I would not attend the reception, where the bride's mother would be hostess in the home of her relative... I believe that in this delicate situation there would inevitably be embarrassment for all concerned.

The situation might be different if you had met any of your step-daughter's other relatives, or if the reception were to be in a hotel suite; but with such a close family relationship existing in the home where the reception is to be, I believe you would show your devotion to this girl more exquisitely if you did not attend the reception.

If you do decide to go to the church ceremony, you should ask the usher to give you a seat in a pew, say several pews behind the bride's relatives; then after your husband has given the daughter in marriage, he joins you in this pew.

Introduce Your Beau to Your Parents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm a girl of sixteen, and just beginning to have dates. When a boy comes to my house for the first time, should I introduce him to my mother and father?

Rosanne.

A well-bred boy will take for granted that you will introduce him to your mother and father when he first calls at your house. If you hide your parents somewhere in the rear of the house, if you don't bring about a meeting between them and your guest, he won't think your manners are very bright. And even if he isn't a particularly polite boy, believe me he'll recognize and respect politeness when he sees it in action...and your manners rating will be high with him.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is This Love?—Or Just Plain Foolishness?

Would you say it was love that makes a girl go right ahead and marry a man who she believes has already given her a "raw deal"? Or would you say it was just plain foolishness?

Personally, I'm inclined to believe it's the latter, in the case of the girl who writes me as follows:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I'm a girl 18 years old and very much in love with a soldier from a distant state who is 19. He was stationed at a camp about 180 miles from my home, and at every spare moment he wrote me, and on weekends he always managed to come down. We finally became engaged, not formally, but with the understanding that I'd wait for him and if I wanted to go out with other boys, it would be all right.

"One day I received a letter from him saying he was going overseas. Then the next day I received a letter from a buddie of his, stationed at the same base, telling me to send the mail to him and he would forward it. Instantly I knew the boy I am in love with was not going overseas but going home. Investigating a bit, I found he had re-enlisted for a year and had 30-days furlough.

"Days and nights for a week I battled with myself, wanting to write to him at his home address saying how much I hated him. Then, finally my pride, and I must admit, my heart, could stand it no longer. I wrote to him saying that I knew he was home and I was disappointed but even though he wasn't honest about it I would still have faith in him. I told him I loved him, and worshipped him, and wanted to see him again.

"Then I received his letters again, explaining he had a reason for doing what he did, saying he loved me and would tell me all about it when he was down again. I miss him like crazy. Nights are nothing but nightmares, and through the day, when people go about me laughing, I begin to hate them for being happy.

"Now today he wrote again, asking if I'd marry him in the near future. I want to marry him, and I will. But, Miss Fairfax, what do you think of the raw deal I received from him? I hardly know what to think I only know I love him.

Since you've already made up your mind to marry this soldier, its rather odd that all you're writing me for is to ask if I don't think he gave you a raw deal. Is it possible that your mind isn't quite as firmly made up as you believe it is, and what you really want to know is, whether or not I think it would be wise to marry a man who treated you in such a way?

If that's what you're really after, then all I can say is that it seems to me it would be very wise on your part to wait until he gives you that promised explanation of his conduct before deciding to take him on as a husband.

I'm afraid that instead of being in love, you're merely infatuated with this soldier, which is an entirely different thing. For the girl who is truly in love wants to feel that the man she loves is a fine person, and one who will make her a loving and considerate husband, whereas you don't seem to give a single thought to what kind of husband this man will make you, just so long as you get him. He's Already disappointed and upset you badly, yet you're ready to take him on before you even know why he did it.

I hope I'm wrong, but I have a feeling you may find this young man is already involved in plans which do not include marrying you, and I think if you were smart you'd brush him off before he does it to you.

Questions and Answers

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper to Information Branch, WPTB, 490 Sussex Street, Ottawa.

Q. My children are going to a large camp for two months. I do not like to trust them with the ration books and wondered if I could mail sufficient coupons to the camp director?

A. No . . . the loose coupons would be of no value to him . . . it would be illegal for him to attempt to purchase rationed foods with these coupons and also illegal for any storekeeper to accept them. We suggest you either give the books to whoever is responsible for such things in the camp or send them to the director by registered mail.

Q. Would you please let me know when rental restrictions will be lifted so I can move into our own home by giving one month's notice to our tenants.

A. There is no indication that the "freezing order" will be lifted in the near future. When the regulations are changed to permit persons to give tenants one month's notice to vacate you may be sure there will be ample notice given both in the press and over the radio.

Q. My grocer has pork and beans and tomato ketchup for sale in his store but you cannot buy either one unless you buy a can of tomato soup and a can of vegetable soup at the same time. Is he allowed to do this?

A. No . . . This is a "conditional sale" and such sales are illegal. The display of merchandise in store in Ontario does not make it necessary for the storekeeper to sell. In other words he can refuse to sell these articles which are in limited supply, but he cannot ask a customer to buy something else in order to obtain any other product.

Q. I will be staying at a hotel for one week, must I take my ration book?

A. No . . . it will not be necessary to take your ration book along. A ration book is required only when a stay is for a period of two weeks or longer.

Bockwinkle Subdues Henning But Assaults Referee and Is Disqualified in Second Fall

Floors Official Three Times With Solid Punches With Victory in Sight; Morgan-Henry Draw and the "Bunny" Wins Over Mazzatti

Some graduates of the Applied School of Pachydermy just can't stand prosperity. They fall heir to the buffets of the more villainous alumni, then when opportunity presents itself and Victory proffers the laurel wreath, they turn their backs, slap opportunity in the face and give Victory the horse laugh.

That happened in the Hume Arena last night. Warren Bockwinkle, who has been on the receiving end of Lee "The Scowl" Henning's obnoxious mayhemic tactics for the past two or three weeks, basked momentarily in the warm smile of victory as the "Scowl" lay on the mat, oblivious, it appeared, to the budget, income taxes and the cheers of the faithful, then objected to Referee Ernie Powers' objection to his subduing methods; promptly heaved three solid haymakers to the Powers puss and found himself disqualified.

That happened in exactly 12 minutes of the second fall of the main bout. 'The Scowl' had gouged, punched, elbowed and generally Mephistoed his way to a win in the first fall after 16 minutes of gruelling going.

And the big cornhusker from Iowa with the Veronica Lake hair-do, shuffled his weight into the ring in eager anticipation for a quiet kill in the second heat.

This Was Different

But Mr. Bockwinkle apparently had been doing some thinking during the inter-fall recess. He remembered that the sock application from the Scowl's left flipper was so much weaker than that of the right. So being again the state the situation of being the football for the Henning boot, that is, he swung to the left.

He concentrated his attack on the Henning left arm, and had that member twisted at times like a pretzel after a two-day binge. This left the Scowl writhing in agony on the canvas on several occasions, much to the jubilance of the cash-customers.

But La Henning soon tired of this playful sport. He decided to call in reinforcements and gathered little pieces of stick from outside the ring where he hopped on numerous occasions, and rubbed them firmly and not gently in the Bockian optics, his stomach, or any part of the foe's anatomy that wasn't, at the time, under the scrutiny of the referee.

That, dear readers, started the pyrotechnics that led to the ultimate expelling from the ring of Mrs. Bockwinkle's husband.

And the Crowd Howled

He went into a miniature berserk rage. He ripped through the air like a gazelle, clasped the Scowl with a mysterious hold that involved clutching his neck from above and swinging it to and fro like a grandfather's clock pendulum. Now this is not in the textbooks on Applied Pachydermy. And Professor Powers knew it. He intervened, and the more pronounced the intervention the faster the pendulum swung, and the groggier became the Scowl.

Then Mr. Powers made the mistake, or was it, of grasping the Bockian curls and heaving him across the ring. The Bock flew back to the attack but took time out to land a solid punch on the Power jaw that sent the arbiter careening across the ring to slump in a corner. He charged back to the erring Bock and stopped another right to the puss. Then another. And another. Then the curtain fell.

Mr. Powers, a man of righteous judgmen i,tmme H judgment, immediately disqualified the Bock, while The Scowl lay prone on the mat listening to the Iowan cornbirds twitter.

Jim Goon Henry and Toar Morgan provided plenty of fast, furious action in the preliminary that ended in a draw after thirty minutes of exciting mat callisthenics. In the semi-final Al. Bunny Dunlop villained his way to a win over Jumping Joe Mazzatti. The Bunny, used all his tricks from the sack of villainy with Jumping Joe levelling the Bun off on several occasions with neat exhibitions of kicking. As a piece of arch-villainy, Dunlop with Mazzatti beaten, refused to wait for the count of three, but deliberately raised Joe above his head at the count of two and smashed him to the mat again and again before deciding to call it a day.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, July 20 (AP)—Yesterday it was a baseball man bemoaning the fact that returning war veterans aren't doing as well as expected... Today it's a boxing aficionado wondering if the Tony Zale-Rocky Graziano middleweight title scrap will furnish further proof of the same trend... Ring expert Nat Fleischer points out that Billy Conn, without benefit of tuneups after leaving the army, made a miserable showing against Joe Louis, "who definitely has slipped"... Red Cochrane stiffened five opponents in tuneups after leaving the navy, but the first time he met a tough rival, Graziano, it was "boom" and Red was all through... Zale has chalked up six easy knockouts this year and now he's about to meet his first tough guy—that same Graziano.. Slipping or not, Fleischer adds, these guys still have to be the headline fighters, because not one first class boxer was developed in the armed forces.

One Minute Sports Page

The International League's best major league prospects, according to prexy Shag Shaughnessy, aren't players but a couple of umpires, Arthur Gore and Douglas Robb... "They've been working together and they both concentrate on the game every minute they're on the field," he says...The world's largest city, New York, won't be represented in the team contest in the coming Public Links Golf Tournament... Notre Dame's football team will travel to all its "away" games by air this fall, which means flying to New Orleans, Baltimore, New York, Iowa City and Champlaign, Ill.

Dots All, Brothers

The television station which aired the Louis-Conn fight announces it will use a new "super sensitive" camera for the Zale-Graziano fracas... After showing Louis vs. Conn it ought to be super-sensitive now.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

The wrestlers' dressing room in any arena is not what John Public would imagine it is. Any fan who watches the big boys in action might well imagine a cacophony of snarls, grunts, arguments and whatnot. Far from it. The nearest approach that we can think of, insofar as peace and quietness is concerned is the annual checker championship of Bodunk Centre.

The other night the boys were sitting around doing the usual things, slushing cool water over heated bodies; quietly playing cards, or talking of, well of all things, fishing. Talking shop in a wrestlers' dressing room is as mythically taboo as whistling in an actors place of make-up.

But last night, some way or another, the conversation drifted around to a bit of shop. The topic of conservation was Big Ed Lewis, (he was the famous Strangler in his wrestling days) who is now contrary to all appearances, a potential millionaire. But the former world's champion didn't get his wealth to come from the squared circle.

No wonder then the boys down Montreal raised quizzical eyebrows when the Strangler, who was refereeing the bouts down there, asked for the loan of, and got $100 from Matchmaker Eddie Quinn. For they knew that Big Ed was in the mazuma, yet he hasn't any money.

But let Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson explain that. Lewis is a pretty shrewd character, who has travelled round and round the world, earned more than a million out of wrestling, invested some of it badly, spent most of it because in the flush lush days when he was world's champion, Lewis lived high, wide, and handsome in five-room hotel suites, and all that sort of thing.

• • • •

So his money went, and it wasn't so long ago that he found himself broke, or at least very badly bent, and with a dreary career of travelling the country refereeing wresting matches, to eke out a dubious living, which isn't the way a former champion of the world, and the greatest wrestler of modern times, should wind up.

But just when fortunes were at their lowest ebb, Lewis got what has proven to be literally, a million-dollar idea. He was refereeing some exhibition wrestling matches in convalescent hospitals for wounded soldiers, and, naturally, got to talking with the officers in charge about various forms of physical evercise that might help to rebuild these shattered and torn bodies. In use at some of these camps was a steel-spring stretcher-exerciser, to develop arm, shoulder and chest muscles, and which could be used for other forms of exercise too. It was all right, for athletes, but not for these men, who were far below par in physical strength. They struggled with it, tore their weakened chest muscles, developed soreness in arm muscles that forced them to halt, and, indeed turned them against that, or any other form of exercise.

This gave Lewis an idea. Always a bug on exercise, he figured out if he could develop an exerciser that would be less rugged, entail less strain, he might get somewhere with it. He figured the answer was in rubber. So he drew up his plans trundled off to Akron, contacted one of the big rubber companies, got a mold made of his own idea, tested it out, and pretty soon they were rolling off whatever it is rubber exercisers roll off.

First he had shown a specimen to Army convalescent leaders. They found it was fine for their purpose. The Army bought half a million of them, and there was no trouble getting the rubber priorities for Army use. Big department stores have taken hundreds of gross of them, and the old Strangler leaves from here to make personal appearances at Gimbel's, Macy's, Marshal Fields, and so right across the continent, as fast as he can get priorities for civilian rubber. The Navy and Air Force are interested, and his sales, he expects, will run over a million units.

The profit on each unit is about $1.00, so the Strangler makes half a million on his sales to the Army, alone. But he doesn't get the cheque for two months, and that's why he had to borrow $100 from Eddie Quinn. And that's why they both laughed as the Strangler pocketed the money that once represented a mere tip to the bell-boy.

"I won't go broke again, though," said Lewis. "I've had my fling, went through a fortune. The postman knocked twice, for me, and this time I dragged him right in. I'm married, but of course I'll never settle down to a life of domestic ease. I like to be on the move, keep travelling, going around, meeting people. I'm through with wrestling, too. It's been good to me. I held the world title five times, and probably I could beat a lot of today's top-notchers. But it's a young man's game. I might referee an occasional match, but wrestle—no."

This exerciser must be quite a thing. It's simple enough, an elastic with a grip on each end. The Strangler has drawn up a chart of twenty exercises, and, in fact, uses it himself, and has thinned down a bit. "When I was travelling across continent by train, I used to use a similar contrivance, and exercise in my drawing-room for hours," he said, "to pass the time and keep in shape."

Anyway, the millionaire borrowed $100.

And here's a weekend smile with a racetrack touch. A bit ancient perhaps but worthy of repetition:

A couple of school teachers, eager to befriend someone, anyone, decided to give away $100. "Let us," said the first, "present this $100 bill to the first person we meet, who looks like he might be able to use the money." The other agreed and the search began. They walked all over the town and finally ran into the most bedraggled wretch they ever had seen.

"This", they said, "is our man."

After introducing themselves, they pressed the century note into the poor fellow's hand, muttered a hasty "Good Luck!" and departed, happy and certain that no $100 bill ever had been spent for a better purpose. Imagine, their consternation when, on the following afternoon the man dashed into the school and handed his benefactors the munificent sum of $800.

"Good Luck won," he said, "and paid 7-to-1."

PAYING OFF IN PEAS AT HIALEAH

Instead of trying to pick winners, Claire Meyer and her brunette pal, Marion Elvins, both of the Miami School of Modelling, find that they can't lose by picking cow peas at the Hialeah race track. The thirteen acre racing strip has been planted with velvet beans, cow peas and watermelon to prevent erosin while the track is idle during the summer season.

Yankee Cast-off, Pitching In Aura of Pennant-Bound Sox Adds Lustre to Boston Stars

Bill Zuber, Who Couldn't Win for Yanks Has Won Three Straight for Sox; Newhouser Wins 17th and the Dodgers 'Come Out of Slump Downing Cincinnati 8-4

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Bill (Sinker Ball) Zuber, a luckless pitcher who couldn't get anybody out for the Yankees, is proving to be a $7,500 bargain for the pennant-bound Boston Red Sox.

Picked up for the nominal waiver fee when New York cut him loose, the 31-year-oldster has earned three straight decisions for his benefactors and hasn't been beaten yet. He added a four-hit, 912 decision over Chicago yesterday to his impressive record.

Even in victory, Zuber had to play second fiddle to Ted Williams yesterday when umpire Red Jones evicted 14 White Sox players and coaches after he had warned pitcher Joe Haynes about "dusting" Williams.

The Pale Hose resented the charge that Haynes was "throwing at" Thumping Teddy. A yammering from the bench resulted in Jones thoumpang out Ralph Hodgin, Dario Lodigiani, Ed Smith and Bing Miller. When the riding persisted, Jones cleaned out the dugout.

Williams appeared to be the least excited person in the park, calmly brushing the dust off his uniform and then lining out a single. Ted's first hit, a double in the first inning, had started the Sox off to their easy triumph with the first two runs.

Boston's phenomenal Fenway Park record against the western clubs now reads 28 won, 2 lost (both to Bobby Feller).

With the Yankees and St. Louis Browns unscheduled, the Red Sox upped their lead over second place New York to 11½ gamees.

Hal Newhouser chalked up his 18th victory for Detroit in an unimpressive performance against Washington 10-5, allowing 12 hits.

Hank Greenberg's tremendous triple with the bases loaded and Birdie Tebbets' two-run double helped the Tigers overcome a 5-0 Washington lead and go on to win. Mickey Vernon's four hits in five at bats enabled him to regain the batting lead from Williams.

Barrel-chested Pat Seerey of Cleveland hammered two home runs, his 15th and 16th, in the Indians' 6-1 romp over Philadelphia Athletics.

Brooklyn came out of its disastrous slump long enough to down Cincinnati 8-4, and go into a first place tie with the Cardinals, washed out of their night tilt with the Phillies.

Pee Wee Reese's seventh inning triple and Dixie Walker's two-run homer in the third helped the Dodgers' Hugh Casey gain his 7th verdict on relief. Clyde Shoun, who replaced starter John Hetki, was the Cincy loser.

Rookie Warren Spahn continued his impressive lefthanded work, dumping Chicago 6-1, to give Boston its third straight western series. Ray Sanders and Tommy Holmes paced the attack with six of the 12 hits off three Cub hurlers.

Pittsburgh and New York were not scheduled.

ORIOLES TIED WITH NEWARK IN THIRD SLOT

Catcher Lollar Adds Spark to Birds' Attack; Montreal, Leafs Idle

(By The Associated Press)

Baltimore is tied with Newark for third place in the International League today and things are looking up with Sherm Lollar back in his 1945 home run stride.

Returned within the past week by the parent Cleveland Indians for more seasoning, the husky catcher belted a grand slam home run last night in the 14th inning that helped send Newark Bears crashing to a 10-4 defeat.

First place probably is beyond the reach of the Orioles who trail leading Montreal by 14 lengths but second place is just around the corner. Tommy Thomas' Birds are only one game back of the runnerup Syracuse Chiefs.

Ray Flanigan had stretched Newark's string of scoreless innings to 26 when the Bears erupted with three runs to tie the game in the ninth. Newark matched Baltimore with a score in the 10th but wilted under Oriole pressure in the 14th. Ed Robinson's double and Lollar's clout were the big blows.

Jersey City and Syracuse managed to play a couple of scoreless innings with Bill Emmerich and Mike Schultz as the opponents before rain intervened but the other two scheduled contests were washed off the books before the game time.

Both Montreal at Toronto and Rochester at Buffalo were postponed because of rain and wet grounds.

Toronto, July 20—(CP)—From Western Ontario comes word of a gent who deserves a lot of credit for hopping up the Guelph Minor League baseball team, name of Nelson (Lefty) Adair. Lefty has stepped in as relief hurler from time to time and while a little wild and without much speed has made his experience count. Experience is one thing he has plenty of. He's been bitten by the baseball bug for more years than he likes to remember.

Jack (London Free Press) Park recounts the following incident: "We ran into Lefty before a game and he thanked us for a reference we made to the fact he pitched a game. As we had not been particularly complimentary at that time we did not figure thanks were in order but Nels explained: 'You said I was over 40 in your write-up. Actually I am 51.' "

If you mention the word "caddy" to a tournament golfer you're apt to be answered with a bitter laugh. The trouble? It's merely that golfers say there are few caddies in the country worthy of the name.

The Scarboro Golf Club decided to remedy the situation. One Alan Renick is conducting a school for caddies and hopes to be able at least to teach them to hand a golfer his club correctly, to refrain from whistling and to know where to stand.

Joe (Toronto Star) Perlove tells of a painful display during the recent Canadian Open at the Beaconsfield Club.

"Vic Ghezzi was lining up a putt. He was examining the right of way most minutely, probing it for depth solidarity, specific density and a tendency to start a weed suddenly, when his caddy walked across the roadbed and implanted a heel, dab-smack on the line of flight."

Connie Smythe seems of the opinion that N.H.L. hockey is becoming effeminate. Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle quotes the Leaf coach as saying "The Leafs have won and taken part in their last sissy championship."

Smythe shudders when he recalls that Leafs finished a recent season the least penalized of any N.H.L. club. He says such a thing never happened to them before and will never happen again. He insists next season will see more action reminiscent of the old days when hockey players were men and elbow and hips were used for more than clothes-hangers.

To lead "up to" a hand means to lead to a hand that plays last in that trick. A hand that you lead "through" is the hand that plays immediately after the one that leads.

The "up to" hand is the fourth one that plays on that trick. If west leads, it is up to south. North leads up to west. East leads up to north. South leads up to east.

The "through" hand is the second one that plays on that trick. If west leads, it is through north. North leads through east. East leads through south. South leads through west.

Thus, a west lead is through north and up to south. North leads through east and up to west. East leads through south and up to north. South leads through west and up to east.

Among the many good bridge rules is this: Lead up to weakness and through broken strength. There are, of course, deviations to be considered. But not today.

Lead up to weakness in dummy. That means to lead a card in a suit in which dummy has only poor cards. The reason is very plain.

If dummy is weak in that suit, where is the unseen strength? It must be in the two unseen hands. One is the declarer. The other is your partner. And your partner plays after declarer.

NORTH

WEST

EAST
♥8 6 3

SOUTH
♥K J 9

Suppose east gets into the lead with a club. By this time he is able to see the weak dummy hearts. The strong unseen hearts must be in south and west. So, east leads a heart.

South must play next. This puts west in a very desirable spot. West sees the dummy cards and need not be afraid of them. He is safe in merely covering what south plays.

Pulleese, Mr. Hemingway. What are you leading up to?

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, July 20 (AP)—The era of big, beautiful premieres returned to Hollywood Thursday night.

It was like old times along Hollywood Boulevard as several thousand people lined the street to watch the celebrities converge on Grauman's Chinese theatre. The occasion was the premiere of "Anna and The King of Siam" and it caused the biggest accumulation of fans in five years. The usual police staff was tripled.

Multi-colored searchlights cut through the sky as the country's best-known and best-paid working people drove up to the theatre in their limousines.

Unusual for a Hollywood occasion, the film started only 35 minutes later, leaving latecomers like Lana Turner and Bob Hutton to grope down the darkened aisle.

"Anna and The King of Siam" proved worthy of all the to-do, being a charming adaptation of the popular book. Irene Dunne and Rex Harrison couldn't be better in their roles. Movie fans should be warned that there are no musical production numbers with the Harem girls, no boy-meets-girl story. Just a simple, humorous, touching tale.

Some people don't forget. Toronto-born Mary Pickford still has parties for servicemen at Pickfair, where the boys are treated as royally as a visiting Duke.... Strict orders have been issued to Bing Crosby about no more practical jokes... Billy Wilder took three hours to line up 300 extras and horses for a shot in "Emperor Waltz" and then Bing walked up to P. A. mike and dismissed everybody for lunch... The Braille Institute will distribute synopses of movie plots for a better enjoyment of films by the blind.

Shirley Temple wouldn't let R.K.O. cut her curls for "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer." Said she: "They're as much a part of my character as my dimples."

What's Doing in Sport

Paul Vineyard, of Harrington, Del., leading reinsman at the harness race meeting at Roosevelt Raceway, Westbury, N.S., was suspended last night for 15 days. C. Stuart McLean, Jr., presiding judge at the track, said that Vineyard was found guilty of "not trying" with Little Brown G. in the fifth race last night. Little Brown G. finished second.

In moving third reading of a measure in the British Commons for substantial reduction in the entertainment tax on sport events yesterday, Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, charged that the Scottish Football Association had failed to reduce admission prices as the English League had done and promised to apply pressure.

The hotel burglar who robbed pitchers Kirby Higbe and Hugh Casey of cash and their pay cheques at Cincinnati, calmly walked into a bank there yesterday and cashed both cheques. "I'll beat the Reds today," he assured the unsuspecting teller.

The referee and judges gave a unanimous eight-round decision to Jimmy Callura, 123, Hamilton, Ont., over Bob Richards, 123½, Spokane, Wash., in their feature fight last night at Long Beach, N.Y.

In English County cricket yesterday, the match between Glamorganshire and Lancashire resulted in a draw while Gloucester won by an innings and nine runs over Hampshire. Somerset defeated Northampton by seven wickets.

After the police games in Toronto to today, the teams of Detroit, Toronto and Montreal are scheduled to compete in a constables' field day at Montreal next Saturday. One week after, Aug. 3, Canadians go to Detroit.

Rich Stakes Attract Entries at Arlington

Chicago, July 20 —(AP)—Two races which may gross $121,750 were expected to attract many patrons at Arlington Park today as Calumet Farm's Armed went after the Arlington Handicap prize and a brilliant field of 19 thoroughbreds aimed for the Arlington Lassie Stakes—world's richest offering for two-year-old fillies.

The Arlington handicap will have a gross value of $58,300 if all 12 overnight entrants start and the winner will earn a net purse of $40,200. The six-furlong Lassie will gross $63,450 if all 19 go postward, with the winner getting $52,200. Heading the field is Main Chance Farm's War Fan and Arthur B. Hancock's Jr.'s Swift Blue Grass.

National Tennis Title Battles Open on Monday

By ANDY ROSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 20 — (CP)—High point in the tennis season, the Canadian tennis championships open here Monday with 150 Canadian and United States stars clashing at the Rideau Lawn Tennis Club for the first national titles to be awarded since 1940.

Due to the heavy entry, all 15 Rideau Club courts and nine of the adjacent Tel-Aviv Club will be used for elimination in the early rounds.

Some 80 racket wielders will battle for the men's singles title, headed by Don McDiarmid of Ottawa, Canadian champion of 1940, and Morey Lewis, ranking California player, who won the title in 1939.

Montreal is represented by a strong contingent, including two members of Canada's ill-fated Davis Cup squad, Brendon Macken and Henri Rochon.

Others representing clubs from Quebec to Vancouver, round out the entry. They include Don Hodges of Regina, Davis Cup team candidate and Dave McKenzie of Peterboro.

Three strong United States players are seeking the women's singles title — Noreen Haney of Summit, N.J., eighth ranking junior in the United States last year; Mrs. Morey (Babe) Lewis, ninth ranked in California and Mrs. Jack Fisher of Orange, N.J.

Canadian hopes will be carried by such ranking stars as Jean Adele Burritt of Toronto, Ontario and Eastern Canadian champion this year; Pat Macken, sister of the Montreal Macken Brothers; Betty Fahey, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Ruth McKee, Peterboro, Ont., and Winnifred Harpell, Port Arthur, Ont., triple winner in the Canadian junior tournament this week.

Toronto, July 20 — (CP)—Barbara Ann Scott of Ottawa today added to figure skating laurels the Lou E. Marsh Memorial Trophy as Canada's outstanding sports competitor of 1945. She became the first woman to win the trophy which perpetuates the memory of the former sports editor of the Toronto Star.

The unanimous award to the winsome 16-year-old Miss, who holds the North American figure skating title and is eagerly awaiting an opportunity to demonstrate her skill at the 1948 Olympic Games, was announced today by Alexandrine Gibb of the Star, non-voting secretary to the five-man board of judges.

The Ottawa girl takes a place with some of the nation's best known men athletes. The last individual winner was Theo Dubois, the Winnipeg sculler, who was awarded the trophy for 1941. In 1942-43-44 the trophy was 'awarded to perpetuate the memory of all Canadian athletes who made the supreme sacrifice' in the war.

Previous winners were: 1936—Dr. Phil Edwards, famous half miler of British Guiana and Montreal; 1937 — W. Marshal Cleland, the noted rider of Troy and St. Catharines, whose father, W. B. Cleland, died only yesterday; 1938 — Bobby Pearce, the Hamilton sculler; 1939— Bob Pirrie, the Toronto swimmer; 1940 — Gerard Cote, marathon runner from St. Hyacinthe, Que.

The Ottawa girl, who won her first skating championship at the age of 10, won on the first ballot. Her victory was so emphatic that the judges decided not to issue the names of men athletes nominated.

Barbara Ann began skating at seven and her coach — Otto Gold — said that at 10 she was in the "gold medal class." She has won the Canadian senior title in the last three years.

For nine months of the year she practices figure skating, seven hours a day, 5½ days a week. Her coach gives her Saturday afternoon off but as Barbara once said, then "I have to practice the piano."

Gosh-Awful Play Provides Critics With Chance to Vent Churlish Humor

By MICHAEL O'MARA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, July 20 (CP)— A barn-storming production which cheerfully advertised that New York critics would call it the worst play that ever hit Broadway arrived in town this week and the critics took up the challenge and laid on the cudgels.

"Ah say that ad's wrong, son," mimicked Vernon Rice of the New York Post, as he led the chorus of churlish comment. "It's the worst play that ever hit anyplace."

The monstrosity in question, "Maid of the Ozarks," had 82 weeks in San Francisco and 68 in Chicago included in more than five years in the hinterland before it invaded Manhattan. A hillbilly musical with Neo-Minsky overtones, it also told the public in advance: "It ain't art but it sure is sexy."

The $10,000 advertising campaign that preceded the maid of easy virtue into town was the most remarkable thing about an otherwise grievously dull affair. It even included a circus parade.

"We cater to classy people," its backers remarked on one billboard. "Everybody in the audiance must wear shoes."

Compared to what is presented as comedy in the script of "The Maid of the Ozarks," that's an uproariously devastating quip.

At the other end of the theatrical pole, seeking artistic plan rather than notoriety or heavy financial return, a group of graduates of the Yale Drama School have slipped into New York and opened up business without fanfare but with a certain amount of success.

The group, calling itself "The Spur Theatre," has leased the historic Cherry Lane playhouse in Greenwich village for a season of four productions. Their first, Sean O'Casey's "Juno And The Paycock," almost is a tremendous success.

Long-run records for all-Negro productions in New York were smashed this week when "Anna Lucasta" rang up its 800th curtain. Movie rights to the drama which catapulted Hilda Simms into the "star" bracket have not yet been sold—producer John Wildberg is considering making the film version himself — but just about every other by-product profit has been made and there have been few empty seats since the show opened Aug. 30, 1944.

'Nobody Asking' For Secrets At This Stage

New York, July 20 (AP)—Soviet delegate Andrei A. Gromyko, playing a stand-in role among the scientific advisers to the United Nations Atomic Commission, was on record today as saying that 'nobody is asking for secrets" of atomic know-how at this stage of atomic control discussions.

The remark was given emphasis by the fact that the five quoted words were the only ones given in direct quotation in a 700-word official U. N. report of yesterday's secret meeting of the new 12-country scientific and technical advisory committee on atomic energy.

The only reported point of conflict yesterday arose over Mr. Gromyko's proposal that the scientific committee chairmanship should pass back and forth between the representatives of The Netherlands and Poland. This was authoritatively said to have been beaten by 10 votes, with Poland abstaining.

Dr. Hendrink Anthony Kramers of The Netherlands was named temporary chairman.

Mr. Gromyko, who represents Russia in all political deliberations on atomic control, turned up among the scientists as a substitute for the Soviet scientific representative who now is observing the Bikini atomic bomb tests.

In the official version of yesterday's meeting the Soviet delegate said "nobody is asking for secrets" and then was indirectly quoted as saying the time was ripe for discussion of the methods of exchange of scientific information on the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

Dr. Richard C. Tolman, the United States scientific representative, told the committee that information on peaceful uses and dangerous activities of atomic energy are inseparable because up to a certain point the same processes are used in both fields of research.

CHAPTER 12

Work was an escape from torturous loneliness and from thoughts that hurt and haunted. Work was the realistic blade that cut through agonizing thoughts, leaving no room for them. But there was pain in her eyes and a new bitterness about her mouth that Louis saw. His patients complained to her, he thought, bringing her their tales of family discord, their illnesses, their complaints about incorrigible children.

When at noon the waiting room was empty he lighted his pipe and sat on her desk.

"I saw Mark last night," he said. "He's going to be all right. He's made of sturdy stuff."

"How is Miss Winters?"

"She'll come out of it with a few scars and think herself a martyr. Iris, stop kidding me. You can't fool me. I know the meaning of every wink of your lashes. Camilla has Mark bound hand and foot. She knows it because she knows he's a gentleman and sportsman. That's rotten luck."

"How was he last night?"

"Seething. Forgotten about his bad arm. That's trivial compared with the other. He didn't want her when she was beautiful. I didn't see Camilla. No one has except her family and it wouldn't surprise me if they are exaggerating. There's still plastic surgery, you know."

"I thought of that, too."

"Run out and get some lunch. Busy afternoon ahead."

"I want it busy."

"You're a game young woman, Iris."

"I'm not—really."

Stopping in a florist shop, she looked around at the bright array of spring flowers. Standing very still, her hand touching the fragile petals of a white lily, she thought, "I should send him some of these. Lilies to signify that a beautiful thing is dead—has got to be dead."

But instead she bought long stemmed red roses—red roses for courage they both must have—and took one from the bouquet and pinned it to her dress.

When she got back at the office, Louis said, "I see the wreck of my marriage all about me, Iris. Somehow it matters less to me than the wreck other people are making of your happiness and Mark's. My work can fill my life. You've been wrong. Do you know that? Until you met Mark you loved an imitation."

"I never thought that of Joel."

"We never know those things until it's too late."

"Are you going to see Mark tonight?"

"Yes. Aren't you?"

Suddenly her eyes were suffused with tears. She drew in her shoulders and looked away from him.

"Why should I go? It makes it so much harder. It's so much harder to be close to what you want, knowing you can never have it, than to stay away. Louis, Mark loves me. He told me. But when he touches me, I'm still miles away from him. I would do anything—anything to keep him from being trapped into this marriage."

The telephone rang and Louis picked it up. He turned to her and said, "I think it's Joel. Do you want to talk to him?"

"No. Not now." And then reached for it. "Yes, I'll talk to him."

Joel said, "Did you see in the papers about the Christian crackup?" Iris did not have to guess his mood today. "You know now I was right about him, don't you? He had Camilla Winters with him. People like that, who think they own the road because they drive high-powered cars, deserve what they get."

"What is he saying to you?" Louis cried angrily.

"I read about it," said Iris.

"I guess that's that. What about dinner tonight and a show?"

She thought, "And let you gloat over Mark's accident—sorry that he wasn't killed? Let you be commanding and possessive toward me?"

"I'm sorry, but not tonight. I'm very tired, Joel. We've been busy here at the office and I've been under considerable strain. I just want to sleep."

"Well, you know if you won't go out with me there are plenty of girls who will. You play around—why shouldn't I?"

"That's your privilege."

"Is there no limit to your patience, Iris? That's a poor demonstration of love."

"It doesn't matter. It don't matter, Louis. But Mark must not sacrifice himself. I made this decision with Joel myself. I wasn't forced." She looked up and smiled. "Mark loves me. There is something wonderful, knowing it. It makes me happy just to know that."

"But my dear, love unfulfilled is a beautiful flower that never bloomed."

During the following days Selina gave Iris the solitude she desired. There were few new reproaches left in Mrs. Wade. What she thought or might have said were merely reiterations of what she had already said. She knew that Iris was tense and troubled, that she walked about the house late at night because she could not sleep, that she ate scarcely anything. Though she said nothing, the rebuke was in her eyes: "I told you so. I told you so. You have brought this upon yourself."

The days were short and filled with work; the nights were endless stretches of loneliness, thinking of Mark's brown face against the white hospital pillow and camilla in the same building, content with the price she had to pay for him. The scene in his room Iris lived again and again. "In the future that will be all I shall have, the memory of that day."

Mark's note, badly written with a clumsy left hand, read: "Iris, my dearest, I do not know the meaning you attached to the flowers you sent. To me they meant steadfastness and honesty. That's why I say you can put China between you and me and I'll love you and want you."

"Love you and want you." And in the years to come when both were married to pity and duty—would those words be any consolation? "A beautiful flower that never bloomed," Louis had said. It was true, painfully true. Could a frantic hour stimulate them for a lifetime?" Mark, I am not thinking of myself. I don't care about myself. I wasn't tricked. I was blind and young. But you are being tricked."

After dinner one evening Iris was alone in her room. In the faint light she lifted her head as Mrs. Wade came in and crossed the room.

"Are you asleep, Iris?"

"No."

"There's a woman downstairs who wants to see you. She came in a big car and she's beautifully dressed. She's a Mrs. Ralston."

Joan Ralston, Camilla's sister, took her eyes from a critical survey of the drab room and set them upon the girl descending the steps, a tall graceful girl with dark eyes that had a new sadness in them. So this was Iris Wade, she thought, of whom society had heard through various channels of gossip. This was the pretty secretary who had Mark in pursuit and with whom, it was reported, Louis Tracy was in love. It was not difficult to imagine that many men might love this combination of gentleness and grace and beauty. But Mark Christian had actually come here—here when the doors of every drawing-room in the Valley were open to him. Either Mark had degenerated or else Iris Wade was an enchantress.

"Mrs. Ralston. I'm Iris Wade. Won't you sit down?"

"Thank you. Do you mind if I smoke?"

"No. Please do."

Thoughtfully Joan tapped the cigaret against the end table. I'm Camilla's sister," she said evenly. "I think that more or less explains why I'm here."

"It is almost sufficient," said Iris.

Iris was seeing before her a woman of great beauty who had married a man supposedly wealthy only to discover that he had lost his money at a time when many fortunes were swept away. To no one had the socially prominent Ralstons told of their precarious financial plight. When it became clear that Gerald Ralston would have to support Camilla if Mark did not marry her, pride was sacrificed in visiting this drab house to remind Iris Wade that by every decent and unwritten law of society Mark belonged to her sister.

Had Joan been honest she would have said, "Gerald can scarcely support me and my little girl. I am scoffing at your modest home, Iris, but at least it is probably yours. The house I live in will never be mine because we shall never be able to pay for it."

To Iris she said, "Things of this sort are terribly difficult and embarrassing. I thought we could talk this over sanely and intelligently."

Iris's cool exterior belied the turmoil inside of her.

"You want me to do something for you."

"No. For Camilla. The decent thing," said Joan.

"What is the decent thing?" and Iris saw that Joan's fingers holding the cigaret were trembling. Iris thought, "Why are you trembling? What are you giving up?"

"To release whatever claim you have on Mark," Mrs. Ralston answered.

"The only claim I have on him is that he loves me and I love him. Nothing can break that. That's stronger than anything else."

"I have been told that you are a girl of deep understanding. Camilla has loved Mark as long as she can remember. Our parents were neighbors. They've been together a great deal. There has never been anyone else for her. Numerous times she's turned down men who wanted to marry her, thinking that when Mark had finished playing he'd want her to marry him. I know these things. I know Camilla—her faults, her extravagance. But she loves Mark—in her way. Her way may not be as fine or as deep as yours."

Iris sat perfectly still. Her eyes had never been darker.

"One thing you apparently don't know," she said, "is that I'm engaged to another man. That seems to have been overlooked."

"You admit you love Mark and yet you are going to marry some one else?"

Iris nodded gravely. "Yes, I do admit it. I love this other man in a very different way. I'm going to marry him. I haven't seen Mark since the day after the accident. I'm not going to see him again."

"I didn't know this!"

"Not many people do."

Joan smiled. "Then that makes this visit futile and rather ridiculous. I don't want to be unkind. You and Mark are from different worlds. You don't know his family and friends. He has a very proud family. It isn't simple to step from one world into another. People snub you, ignore you."

"I know all that. I have been wrong. I shouldn't have seen him after the first night we met. But what I felt was stronger than I was. We called it friendship, but it was greater than that. I was happy and I knew I had to let it go—that it was one of those brief unforgettable things."

"You're wonderfully honest. That's what Louis Tracy says of you."

Then Iris said, "Mark will marry Camilla if she wants him under the circumstances. But do you want her to marry a man who doesn't love her, who will marry her because it is the gentlemanly thing to do?"

"She doesn't deserve that," said Joan soberly. "For a little while she might be happy but it couldn't last, knowing that every time she looked at him you stood between them. And you, Iris, don't you realize that every time you look at your husband Mark is going to stand between you?"

"I'm going through with the bargain I made. For me, you see, that's the decent thing."

HAD 316 DESCENDANTS

Houston, Tex., July 20 (AP) — A Negro man believed to have been between 112 and 121 years old and who had 316 descendants, was buried here.

He was Jasper Cullin Darrett who until about a year ago hoed daily in his little truck garden.

By his recollection he was 121 years old this year because he said he was an eight-year-old boy when the "stars fell" in the meteor shower of 1833.

The third of his three wives, who is now 77, said he gave his age as 56 when they were married 56 years ago.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop were on our way back from a walk, and I said, Heck, pop, here comes Admiral Tricker, now I'll have to stand and wait while he stops and talks to you.

He's limping too, horse blanket to blazes, pop said. That means he's got a touch of his famous roomatism and I'll have to hear all about it again, ne said, and I said, Well what are you going to do, pop?

I guess I'll have to beet him to the puntch, pop said.

Which just then Admiral Tricker stopped going passed, saying to pop, The weather is going to change. My roomatism is back and that's a sure sine. It's going to rain before another day and you can bet your bottom doller on it, he said.

If I was a betting man I might take a flyer on that, because whenever by ear itches it's an unfailing sine of fair weather, and the docter tells me it's a roomatic itch, pop said, and Admiral Tricker said, The ferst thing when I woke up this morning, I knew I was in for it. These roomatic panes shoot werse than bullets, there's nothing werse, he said.

Well, that's all in the viewpoint, pop said. Sometimes there's nothing werse than something you're not even sure about. For instance take my case right at this very moment. I have a stabbing sensation on the bottom of my foot, as if there was a pebble in my shoe, but on the other hand it might meerly be a rinkle in my sock that will smooth itself out if I ignore it. I dont like to take off my shoe and investigate, out here in public, and yet if I dont get the question settled soon I'm sure I'll have one of my nerviss breakdowns. Pebble or rinkle, rinkle or pebble? Come on, Benny let's get home before this suspense kills me, he said.

And he quick grabbed by hand and kept on going before Admiral Tricker got a chance to get started on his roomatism again.

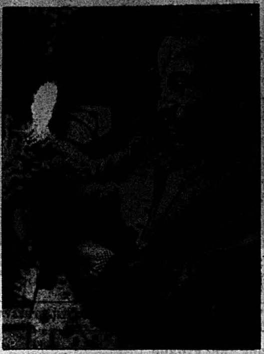
IRAQ'S MONARCH IN ENGLAND



During a visit to England for the victory celebrations, 11-year-old King Fiesal II of Iraq is shown on the grounds at Grove Lodge, near Windsor, where he is staying during his visit. The youthful monarch forgets the bigger problems of state as he plays with his pet kitten, just as any other youngster his age.

Hope Abandoned For Four Miners Buried Under Clay

Duparquet, Que., July 20 (CP)—Hopes of rescuing four men, trapped yesterday some 900 feet below ground by a rush of clay in the Beattie Gold Mine here, were abandoned today as a mine official said the men were buried beneath about 180 feet of clay and that it would take at least a month to reach them.

Harry McGowan, manager of the mine, said 16 men had been at work on the mine shift but that 12 of them, working on higher levels than the four men, were able to escape.

The four, all listed as residents of this northwestern, Quebec municipality, were:

Paul Matish, shift boss, a widower without dependents; Scott Clark, 24, married, with one child; John Hemovic, 45, unmarried; Joseph Bedard, 24, unmarried.

Matish, working on the fifth level, descended to the level below in an effort to warn the three other men. The rush of clay poured into the shaft as the four were coming up in the "skip" elevator.

Shifts, consisting of 15 men each were immediately put to work to remove the clay.

Mr. McGowan said: "From present indications and having been down to the fourth level and to the clay itself, there does not seem to be any possible hope of their being alive. We have done everything possible to cope with the situation."

Cause of the slide was not immediately known but it was believed that a concrete pillar caved in and that a concrete bulk-head went with it, causing clay and mud from "glory hole," previously joined to main mine operations by means of drifts, to pour into the mine.

Tweed— At a regular meeting of Tweed Village Council held recently, the tax rate was struck at 16½ mills, a one-mill increase over 1945 The increase was due to the Consolidated School Board raising their rate from 9 mills to 11½ and also to the cost of garbage collection which is a new service to ratepayers.

A by-law was introduced to borrow under debenture, an amount up to $9,000 to build an addition to Tweed High School. This has been laid over until approval from the Ontario Municipal Board has been secured.

Lone Bandit Robs Bank in Village And Escapes

Beachville, July 20 (CP)—Ontario Provincial Police were scouring the country around this village near Woodstock today in search of the lone bandit who yesterday held up the Beachville branch of the Bank of Montreal and escaped with an unestimated sum of money.

Bank authorities would not divulge the amount stolen by the man, said to be about 45 years of age, who strode into the bank yesterday afternoon and thrust a gun in the faces of bank teller Richard Thurtell and messenger John Palmer. The bandit scooped up the cash from the steel cage and left in a hurry.

As the bandit fled Thurtell fired a shot from his revolver which missed. It brought an answering shot from the bandit, the bullet smashing a window above the teller's head.

Police said that before the bank hold-up, the bandit had engaged a taxi driven by Amos Adams of Woodstock, had driven to a lonely spot where he robbed Adams of $4 and forced him from the car. The bandit then drove the stolen taxi to the bank here and after the bank hold-up used the taxi for a getaway.

It was reported that the stolen taxi later was parked on a Woodstock street where eye-witnesses said that a man left it and calmly strolled down the street, carrying a brown paper shopping bag.

Nazi Jewel Hoard Found Near Luneberg

Herford, Germany, July 20 — (Reuters)— Millions of pounds worth of treasure, including jewels and bonds confiscated by Germany in Europe, have been discovered near Luneberg, it was disclosed today.

Boxes hidden in a cellar were found to contain items "of an almost priceless nature," Military Government officials said.

"The property," a British expert said, "is the largest yet discovered in the British zone, and contains jewels and gems of fabulous value, besides a large quantity of negotiable bonds."

Since discovery of the treasure, a mysterious black book has been obtained by Military Government officials from an unknown person.

In the book was a letter signed by four S. S. officers saying the contents of the book are of great importance.

"The Military Government links the contents of this book with the treasure which has been discovered," the British expert said.

"Records in the book, which the Nazis were unsuccessful in destroying, will now assist in tracing the lawful owners, or their heirs, so that the property can be returned to the respective Governments."

Perfume Racket Broken in N.Y.

New York, July 20 —(AP)— The aroma of perfume, police said, two men were selling to hapless victims for as much as $250 for a 13-bottle box left a trail behind them that led to their arrest.

The men, who police identified as Robert Bennett Goldman, 46, of Beachmont, Mass., and Theodore Marks, 48, of Brooklyn, were charged last night with grand larceny.

Police said they fleeced diplomats, stage and radio stars and socially prominent persons of "several million dollars" during the last 20 years and had been sought in cities from New York to Miami on many occasion.

Their arrest came last night after Detectives James Markley and James Coen saw them leave an automobile bearing Florida licence plates. Coen stood his ground, while Markley followed Goldman and Marks into the hotel.

Police said the pair sold concoctions of rubbing alcohol, oils and coloring matter—which cost them about 50 cents to make and bottle—for about $20 a bottle.

They packaged the perfume, police said, in bottles bearing Chanel, Tabu, Schiaparelli and Patou on Paris labels.

Forecasts A-Energy Driving Steamships Within Five Years

Sydney, Australia, July 20 — (CP) — Steamships running by atomic energy within the next five years were forecast by Dr. Karl T. Compton, one of leaders of the American party at the Bikini atomic bomb tests. Discussing in an interview the possible application of atomic energy to peacetime uses, Dr. Compton said he could see no immediate application other than steamship propulsion.

MILLARD VOICES

"The company started some weeks ago to prepare strike-breaking activities," he charged. "I believe provocations to disorder are coming from inside the plant."

Pickets Alert

Hamilton, July 20 (CP)—Pickets with orders to keep out of fights unless attacked, today kept up constant patrol outside the gates of the Steel Company of Canada Hamilton Works as the strike called by the United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.) for a minimum of $33.50 for a 40-hour week went into its sixth day.

Some of the men working in the steel plant behind the picket lines—men who have kept up partial production in the sprawling steel works since the strike started—were beginning their second week inside the plant. The company says that upwards of 2,000 are at work; the union says not more than 1,200.

The company yesterday said food supplies for employees inside were ample, but on the picket line talk continued about the possibility of plant food stocks dwindling. Union men, vigilant against any new attempt to take material over the Canadian National Railways tracks, for the last two nights have kept about 500 men on an all-night watch.

Besides the men on regular picket duty at the gate union members have been posted along the high wire fence which extends along the company property fronting Burlington Street. This group not only keeps close check on movements in the company property but also watches for non-striking workers attempting to get out of — and perhaps back into—plant property by scaling the fences or crawling under them.

The union yesterday claimed that the pickets had caught 24 men trying to slip out of the plant, had "roughed them up" and sent them back into the plant. A few unionists suffered bruises in the struggles.

Both company an union spokesmen seemed agreed that if any new violence breaks out, it would occur in the vicinity of the main gate, probably near the scene of the previous clash early Wednesday.

Reports from inside the besieged plant told of distribution to the workers of the first issue of a daily paper—the "Daily Billet." Company officials said the two-page paper would contain news of happenings inside and outside the plant, and information gathered at the company's downtown welfare office concerning activities of workers' families.

She is the daughter of Countess Vera Fugger-Czernin and step-daughter of Dr. Kurt Schussnigg, former chancellor of Austria, who spent seven years in prison for his defiance of Adolf Hitler. Mrs. Bee could dwell in a castle in Austria, but prefers a home in Bay Ridge.

Pres. Villarroel Of Bolivia Is Assassinated

New Regime Calls Itself Institutional Government

La Paz, Bolivia, July 22 (AP)—Revolutionary leaders promised immediate restoration of civil liberties today after seizing the government in a bloody four-day uprising climaxed by the assassination yesterday of President Gualberto Villarroel.

Street fighting, in which approximately 2,000 persons were reported killed or wounded, abated after the revolutionists paraded through La Paz with the battered, semi-nude body of the President draped over an army tank.

Earlier, the President's body had been hanged from a lamppost in front of his palace. At the conclusion of the parade, the body was returned to the same lamppost and strung up again along with the bodies of three of his trusted subalterns.

The situation was still confused today as the leaders of the revolt attempted to restore order after one of the most chaotic days in the history of this country, where revolutions are taken almost as a matter of course.

Some members of the army and a few of Villarroel's lieutenants managed to escape the angry civilian mobs and flee to the hills. It was not immediately determined whether they planned a countermove on the capital.

New Government's Statement

The new government is composed of university professors and students, Labor Union groups and several prominent figures including the Dean of the La Paz Superior Court.

First official act of the revolutionary regime which calls itself the "institutional government," was to issue a communique calling for national unity and restoration of "popular liberties," which were suspended under Villarroel's "strong man" rule.

The communique also said that all political prisoners would be freed and that all political exiles would be welcomed back in Bolivia to "collaborate in the restoration of democratic liberties and guarantees."

SPECIAL MEETING HELD

London, July 22 —(Reuters)—A special cabinet meeting was held here Sunday morning, it was learned today. Sunday cabinet meetings are unusual in peacetime and it was believed that none had been held since the end of the war last year.

The Liberal News Chronicle said that only two subjects could have been sufficiently urgent to warrant calling of the meeting—the Palestine crisis and possibility of mass sabotage by bakers of the bread rationing scheme which was inaugurated Sunday.

Flight in Plane Used to Cure Girl Of Cough

London, Ont., July 22 —(CP)—The unethical but apparently practical use of an airplane as a cure for whooping cough has been advanced as a result of a successful experiment on 10-year-old Mary Anne Barrie of St. Thomas.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Barrie, became desperate after the child suffered with whooping cough for weeks. They consulted a physician concerning a magazine article statement that a ride in an airplane at an altitude of 6,000 feet or more was beneficial. The doctor didn't know if it would work but suggested it was worth trying.

Saturday afternoon, Mary Anne was brought to London, an airplane was chartered and she and her father spent a one-hour aerial cruise over Western Ontario. When they landed the girl felt better. Today her parents report the cough practically gone.

Scientist to Push Buttons in Sequence To Spring A-Bomb 15 Miles Away

By ELTON C. FAY

Aboard the U.S.S. Mount McKinley, July 22 (AP)—Dr. Marshall Holloway, who will pull the trigger on the next atomic bomb, is convinced that the age of push-button warfare is already here.

The soft-spoken, calm-mannered Cornell University professor won't even see the show. He will be pressing a button in a room without port holes on a ship 15 miles away from the blast July 25 (July 24, Canadian time).

We will have slept on top of the bomb the day before, and perhaps that is close enough.

Present plans are for Dr. Holloway to sleep aboard the weapon craft on the final night, along with Rear Admiral W. S. Parsons, deputy task force commander, and Herbert J. Hall, Los Alamos, N.M., former faculty member of the Massachusetts Institute of Techonlogy.

In the last few minutes before "mike" hour, Dr. Holloway will sit down before a walnut cabinet containing rows of buttons, each of which controls a sequence of the firing mechanism.

Following a split-second schedule, he will punch each button until he comes to the last, which is located in a distinctive position set off from the others.

At 30 seconds minus explosion time, his finger will go down on that button and the "glorified alarm clock" mechanism will take over.

"I will then sit back and wait to see what happens," Dr. Holloway said with a grin.

Dr. Holloway also did not see the July 1 air burst because he was too busy down in his cubby

CHINESE REDS CLAIM VICTORY NEAR NANKING

Unconfirmed Report Says Government Army General Captured

By SPENCE MOOSA

Nanking, July 22 (AP)—Chinese Communists claimed a resounding victory today with the capture of the vital coastal plain only 60 miles east of Nanking.

Communist spokesman Wang Ping-Nan asserted 6,000 of the troops "threw down their arms in protest to the civil war" after they were ordered to attack Communist lines near Taihing, 60 miles east of Nanking.

Captured in the battle, Wang added, was Gen. Wang Tieh-Han. He said the captured General commanded the government's 49th army.

The bulk of the 26th and 79th divisions of Gen. Wang's army followed him into captivity, the Communist spokesman said.

The spokesman asserted the Communists were holding a line about 35 miles north of the Yangtze River near Jukao, which is 100 miles east of Nanking and the same distance northwest of Shanghai.

"They will not attempt to advance toward the Yangtze," Wang said, "although fighting in that area ended with the collapse of the 49th army."

There was no confirmation from government sources of the Communist claims.

The government's central news agency alleged, however, that the Communists already were embarked on a "full-blown offensive" in this general area and would use gains there for "springboards to jump onto Nanking and Shanghai."

Madame Sun's statement, which some observers thought might mark her active re-entry into Chinese politics, emphasized:

"We are threatened by civil war into which reactionaries hope to draw America, thus involving the whole world. Such a civil war, though undeclared, has already begun. This calamity must be stopped in its beginning.

"The present crisis is not a question of who wins—Kuomintang or Communist. It is a question of the Chinese people, their unity, liberty and livelihood. It cannot be settled by balancing armed forces or bargaining for this city and that territory. Not party rights but human rights hang in the balance."

Benes Says Czechs Will Not Yield Any of Tesin Area

Prague, July 22 —(CP)—President Eduard Benes in an informal address said Saturday Czechoslovakia under no circumstances would yield to Poland any of the territory of the Tesin region on the Polish border. Negotiations between Czechs and Poles in connection with the territory broke down several months ago.

Attlee Govt. Faces Difficult Decision in Demand For Investigation of the Press

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

For upwards of 300 years — ever since the abolition of the iniquitous star chamber in 1641 —Britain has had a free press which has thundered its beliefs and likes and dislikes as an inalienable right.

This week the new Socialist government will decide whether to inaugurate a Royal Commission to investigate the charge that some of Britain's great newspapers have been abusing that right. This investigation has been asked for by the National Union of Journalists—newspapermen who are "left" of their employers politically—and the demand is backed by more than 100 members of parliament.

The charges relate to the attitude of the "capitalistic" press towards the Socialist government and its program of nationalization. The socialists accuse the Conservative newspapers of "suppressions, misrepresentations and inventions." They say that labor's program isn't being truly presented. They assert that Britain's great newspaper combines are monopolistic and squeeze out small competitors more friendly to socialism. They want to know what influence "financial and advertising interests" have on the newspapers.

Some of the newspapers are extending a welcome to the investigation, saying they have nothing to conceal. The majority, however, are against it and hold with the declaration of former Prime Minister Winston Churchill that the members of government are "reaching out their hands against the freedom of the press."

If the government carries out this investigation, and bases it on generalities rather than concrete charges, it will be a very daring performance. At least that's the way it strikes your correspondent, who has lived many years in Britain and knows how jealous the whole country is of free speech.

A man's right to speak his piece is traditional, and you can see the demonstration of that any evening if you circulate among the many soap-box orators in London's Hyde Park. There they advocate any sort of "ism" they wish, frequently in language that would curl your hair, and the blue-coated "Bobbies" just stand by and grin, so long as the speakers don't incite the crowds to break the law. Socialism itself got its early innings right there in Hyde Park.

If the investigators have any totalitarian ideas about controlling the press, then the government will have picked up a hot potato, for the public wouldn't stand for it.

Undoubtedly some pretty strong political talk is being bandied about in Britain these days. The Socialists are new in power and they are up against a press which in the main believes in private initiative and not in nationalization of industry.

It also is true that the great English newspapers and newspaper combines are extremely powerful. Britain is a snug little community and the big papers are pretty well able to blanket the country. The influence of the London press reaches throughout the land for example, Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express is published not only in London but in other strategic cities and claims the tremendous daily circulation of 3,575,000.

Thus it's easy to understand the annoyance and concern of the Socialist government as it tries to inaugurate its new leftist program. Its concern scarcely can be lessened by the knowledge that its success in the general election of last year was due in no small degree to the fact that many Conservatives deserted their party and voted for the Socialists because of dissatisfaction with the Conservative government. The Socialists will need those votes in the next general election four years hence.

Shift in Clay, Which Caused Four Deaths in Mine Last Week, May Endanger Future of Town, Mine

By JIM HORNISK
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Duparquet, Que., July 22—(CP) — The life of a gold mining community in the wilds of northwestern Quebec hung in the balance today because a shift in the earth's surface caused the death of four miners and endangered future productivity of its industrial mainstay.

This town of 1,800 persons is almost entirely dependent on the prosperity of its chief labor user, the Beattie Gold Mines Ltd. And the life of Beattie Gold Mines, according to old-time residents, had become precarious since Friday morning when uncounted tons of slimy clay plunged into the underground working levels of the mine.

Trapped in an ascending cage by the deluge were four veteran miners. Now buried under 150 feet of clay, they were Scott Clark, 24; Paul Matish, 45; Joseph Bedard, 27, and John Hecimovic, 45.

Beattie was just getting ready to pour its first gold bar in nearly four years when the clay slide came. The first bar would have been poured at the end of the month had the accident not occurred. Now it may be delayed a short time. But pouring of a second and suceeding bars is what is foremost in the minds of Duparquet sitizens.

It was a landslide in 1943 that spelled three years of delay for the mine and the community. During the past three years when staffs were depleted by war and since veterans returned to the mine, work had been proceeding at top speed to bale out the countain of cement-like clay left in the wake of the earlier cave-in.

Beattie had been a successful enterprise since 1932. Duparquet had made plans for ambitious development.

There was hope that a railway spur would be constructed from the twin cities of Rouyn and Noranda, 18 miles distant. There was a scheme for building 60 new homes this year, and a dream of erecting a new hospital and a modern college. Now, apart from the four victims of the latest slide, citizens are anxiously wondering just how badly the mine has been damaged.

One of the chief difficulties in the operation so far is the tendency of the clay to keep forming its own level, just like water. It's a job now of removing the entire bed of clay because it is impossible to drive a tunnel down to the wrecked skip in which the four men were trapped.

Order Beer Sale Two Evenings Each Week

Toronto, July 22 (CP)— The Liquor Authority Control Board of Ontario announced on Saturday new regulations governing sale of beer in hotel and club beverage rooms in the Province, among them one requiring each authority holder to remain open for at least one hour each Tuesday and Thursday night.

Other regulations limit to one bottle or one glass of beer the amount which may be served to a customer at one time. They also require that the beer be ordered before it is served and a Board spokesman said this is designed to end "peddling of beer" in beverage rooms by waiters who carry full trays of beer from table to table, selling them without prior orders.

The new regulations, which are effective Tuesday, July 23, also reduce the hours a beverage room may stay open by one hour a day. New hours are 11.30 a.m.-2 p.m., 4-6:30 p.m. and 8-10 p.m. Previous hours were 10:30 a.m.-2 p.m., 4-6:30 p.m. and 7:30-10 p.m.

However, few beverage rooms have been open in the evenings, especially in Toronto, and the new order provides that "each authority holder must open his beverage rooms at 8 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays and so arrange his supply of beer to remain open on such evenings for at least one hour."

Br. Army Headquarters And Palestine Govt. Office Are Wrecked by Explosion

Assassins Plant Bomb In Hotel

Jerusalem, July 22. (CP)—A Palestine Police communique said at least fifty persons were believed killed in the palatial King David hotel, headquarters of the British Army and secretariat of the Palestine government, when "terrorists" exploded a bomb there today.

Unofficial reports said about 60 were wounded by the blast which damaged the right wing of the hotel in which the secretariat was housed. Military headquarters were on the upper floors.

Five assassins were said by eye-witnesses to have planted the explosive after shooting at a British officer, storming the hotel grounds and herding its employees against the walls.

(Reuters News Agency in a dispatch by John Calder said there were two explosions, spaced about five minutes apart.)

One of the Largest Hotels in East

The King David hotel was one of the largest in the Eastern Mediterranean countries. Army headquarters were on the upper floor and it was from there that British officials recently directed the arrest of Jewish agency leaders in Palestine, ordered the search of many Jewish settlements and the seizure of large quantities of hidden arms and ammunition. Army officials said the arrests and searches were aimed at Jewish terrorists.

Sir John Shaw, chief secretary of the Palestine government, was at his desk on the fourth floor of the military headquarters building when the bomb exploded. He escaped unhurt.

The blast marked the latest phase in the effort to bring peace between Arab and Jew in the Holy Land. Even as the bomb exploded, negotiations in London were proceeding between Jewish and British officials.

Part of the hotel was damaged badly. Ambulances and taxis were pressed into service to remove the injured. Strong police guards prevented approaches to the wreckage.

Eye-witnesses said the attack party consisted of about five men. They shot at the British officer at the hotel gate, which they stormed and passed. Hall porters and other employees were forced to the walls.

Immediately after the explosion, the panicked people inside who were not injured started rushing the exits.

A fire followed the explosion.

Reuters' News Agency reported that a "number" of senior British government officials were believed killed in the explosions.

Scene of Blood and Ruin Related by Eyewitnesses

By JOHN CALDER

Jerusalem, July 22 — (Reuters) —I arrived at the King David Hotel today about five minutes after the first of two explosions destroyed the British military headquarters offices and killed, it is believed, 50 persons.

The second explosion threw me to the ground.

I saw bleeding workers and officials crawl from the smoke-obscured building, screaming for help.

Trapped men and women were heard screaming inside the wreckage. Five minutes later, when the smoke started to drift off into a sunny, cloudless sky, I saw a huge, gaping chasm where the 5-storey southwest wing of the palatial hotel had been.

Wounded soldiers and civilians, their clothes spattered with blood and their faces covered with white dust, staggered dazedly outside the hotel.

A shaken lieutenant colonel — veteran of two wars — tried to stop bleeding head wounds. All he said was "I have lost my lance corporal."

Guests who were sipping preluncheon cocktails in the hotel lounge were among those who escaped.

Other eye-witnesses told me that the explosions were set off by four or five armed men who entered the basement of the hotel and held up servants at gunpoint. The invaders apparently escaped.

I didn't see the first explosion but the second erupted with a tremendous roar. Immediately acrid smoke and whirling dust obscured the frontage of the hotel.

Military and civilian ambulances co-operated in removing blast-shaken persons who groped their way into the sunlight, their faces streaked with crazy patterns of white dust.

One Arab clerk, holding a hand over the bloody mess that had been his eye, asked me: "Please take me to hospital."

Hundreds of troops and workmen used acetylene torches and winches to find bodies believed buried under wreckage.

Russian Professed To Have Serum To Delay Old Age

Moscow, July 22 (AP) — Dr. Alexander Alexandrovhich Bogomolets, Soviet scientist and politician who said that human beings normally should live to be 150 years ago, died Friday night at Kiev. He was 64.

The Soviet Council of Ministers said that Bogomolets, who created a serum known as A.C. (Anti-Reticular Cytotoxic) which he maintained would hold off old age by slowing up deterioration of connective tissues, succumbed of a "grave disease."

In an interview six weeks ago, Bogomolets said that some of his assistants had taken doses of his serum, but said nothing about having taken it himself.

He told correspondents at that time he suffered from a heart condition.

He said the serum was effective in restoring connective tissues and speeding the healing of wounds, but that it was no "elixir of life" in the fantastic sense.

CROP HARVESTING REVERSED

St. Thomas, July 22 (CP)—Two weeks of hot weather have reversed the usual order of crop harvesting on local farms. Oats and barley were cut recently on several farms while winter wheat and hay were still ripening. Normally spring grains follow winter wheat by about two weeks.

FINDS TURTLE OF BOYHOOD DAYS

Cherry, Ill., July 22 (AP) — Swimming in Nell's Creek recently, Dick Lord caught a turtle which had Dick's name carved on its back and the year Dick put it there—1924.

'Canadians Unsung Heroes of War' Says Reviewer

New York, July 22 (CP)—"The Canadians were unsung heroes of the war," Gladwin Hill commented in yesterday's book review section of the New York Times in a review of Ross Munro's book, "Gauntlet to Overlord," published in Canada earlier this year.

Hill says in part:

"Although, like the deeds of the Canadian army which he chronicles, Ross Munro is not well enough known to the average American, he was among the top half-dozen of the thousands of correspondents who reported the war in Europe.

"As The Canadian Press' leading front-line correspondent throughout the war, he saw more fighting than possibly any other correspondent....

"His book is one of the finest first-hand accounts of war that have appeared."

Recounting briefly the operations of Canadian troops from the First Canadian Division which arrived overseas four months after Hitler invaded Poland, to the end of the war in Europe, Hill adds:

"These European-Mediterranean campaigns Munro recounts—most of them first hand—in detail that makes his book virtually an official history....

"This puts the book on an entirely different plane from the hell-for-leather memoirs of the "I" correspondents.

"Munro, . . . eschews synthetic coloring, yet manages to convey in cold factual terms a better picture of war, death and courage, and how a good correspondent works, than most of the adjective-heavers."

Millard Says There Should Be One Body to Deal With Wages and Prices

Ottawa, July 22 (CP)— C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) today outlined to the Commons' Industrial Relations Committee the union's case for recognition of steel as a national industry, placing it directly under the National War Labor Board.

Mr. Millard was questioned by J. J. Robinette, committee counsel, as the parliamentary group continued its study of the steel strike and industrial unrest in general.

H. G. Hilton, President of the Steel Co. of Canada, Hamilton, was present at the meeting and it was considered likely he would follow Mr. Millard as a witness.

Mr. Millard said steel as a basic industry which served many other industries, should be designated as national. The industry operated in more than one province.

At present steel wages are dealt with by regional boards and may go to the National Board on appeal.

The Union leader said he had "some misgivings" about iron ore reserves in Canada being developed for shipment abroad. It could be processed to some extent at least in Canada.

Mr. Millard and Labor Minister Mitchell entered into a discussion on wage and price control. Replying to the Minister's questions Mr. Millard said he felt there should be full opportunity for collective bargaining. Wages might then be referred to a government board for review to decide whether the wage increases agreed on would require price increases.

"There should be no interfer-

FAIR PRIZE LISTS READY IN FEW DAYS

The officials of the Belleville Fair Board have announced today that the prize lists for the 1946 Fair will be posted within the next few days.

MERCHANDISE SALES BOOSTED BY TOURISTS

Belleville merchants report an increase in sales due to American tourists passing through the city, although it has not been as strong in the last two weeks. One manager stated that because of the lack of articles, the tourist trade is not as profitable as other years.

NEW APPOINTMENT

Mr. Frank Murray, who was formerly of the R.A.F. stationed at Picton, has obtained his release from the Service and has received an appointment with the North American Life Assurance Co. and will be located in Belleville. Mr. Murray is married to the former Isobel Stewart of Belleville.

SPRINKLER SYSTEM SAVES LOCAL PLANT FROM SERIOUS DAMAGE

The automatic sprinkler system at the Belleville Sargent plant on Pinnacle Street was credited today by firemen with having saved that building from possible serious damage as result of japanning liquid catching fire early Saturday morning. Firemen were called to the building shortly after three o'clock and brought the blaze under control with the use of foamite.

Japanning mixture is stated to be highly inflammable and the sprinkler system aided materially in bringing the flames under control.

The only other alarm answered by the department over the weekend was the result of a grass fire.

FORMER WAR VESSEL NOW PRIVATE YACHT ANCHORS IN BAY

A reconverted sub-chaser having all the lines and fine appointments of a palatial private yacht, dropped anchor in the Bay of Quinte over the weekend while its passengers and crew enjoyed local scenery. Painted white with luxurious lounge chairs scattered about the deck, the trim former sub-chaser presented a pretty sight as she rode at anchor in the middle of the bay on Sunday afternoon.

SMALL BOY FORGETS TO THANK RESCUER

An unidentified small boy can thank John Snyder, a Toronto swimmer, for his life today. The youngster was swimming off the Bay Bridge early last night and got beyond his depth. Snyder, a visitor, who was also enjoying a plunge, noticed the lad's plight and pulled him to shore.

The boy gasping, shook himself free of his rescuer and dashed down the bridge and around the bay shore road.

LIGHTNING STRIKES TWICE IN SAME AREA

Shattering the age-old saying that lightning does not strike twice in the same place, two trees, a cedar and an elm, standing within an area of only a few feet on the property of Mr. Roy Woodbeck, two miles east of the city, were struck during the severe electric storm last Friday evening. Mr. Woodbeck stated the cedar was struck during the height of the storm and a minute or so later a bolt ripped the bark from the elm.

P.S.—Scientists in the know claim there is nothing to prevent lightning striking twice, or even a dozen times in the same place, although the law of averages are against such a thing happening frequently.

FISHING PARTY GETS GOOD CATCH OF BASS

After what is said to be a lackadaisical attitude on the part of the elusive bass, which have thus far disdained the bait of anglers, the finny blacks and greens are starting to turn to the hook diet. On Sunday, a party of cottagers on the Trent Road went across the bay and got themselves eighteen nice fish in a little over an hour.

FEWER SHAD RESULT IN BETTER SPORT

The unwelcome shad, a small herring-like fish that annually invades inland waters and forms the greater part of the diet of game fish, is gradually becoming scarcer, according to anglers of the city and district. The fish, which at times litters the beaches off Lake Ontario, appeared this year in larger quantities than usual and as a result anglers' catches were light. Now, however, with the departure or demise of the shad, catches are getting better.

HIS WIFE'S BLOND LOCKS SUFFERED

Mrs. Mary Moreton, (right), mother of three children, is shown as she appeared in police court in Philadelphia, Pa. Her husband, Gabriel Moreton, 34, (left), is accused of beating his wife and cutting her blond hair close to the scalp. He is also accused of forcing her to sign a confession that she went with other men while he was overseas in the army. Mrs. Moreton allegedly accused her husband of sending her a news clipping telling of the murder of "mother of 3" by a Morristown, Pa., vet.

'It's Snowing up Here' Says Former Belleville Boy Now on Baffin Island In Radio Conversation With Brother

Literally, Clare McKerrow, formerly of this city, and his companions are sitting on top of the world.

And while those on the "outside" are sweltering in high temperatures, fighting mosquitoes, and growling about the heat, the bay near where McKerrow is living is covered with four feet of ice, "and it is snowing steadily."

For Clare and his companions are engaged in the study of ionization of the stratosphere for the Federal Department of Transport, and their present home is five hundred miles north of the Arctic Circle on the northern tip of Baffin Island.

On Sunday night, thanks to the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Goodier, 152 Bleecker Avenue, Clare's brother, Murrell McKerrow, 78 Queen Street, was able to carry on a two-way radio conversation with his brother high up in the icy wastes of the north.

Had Hour's Talk

The conservation lasted for over an hour and according to Murrell, "my brother's voice sounded as clear as though he had been in the next room."

"Its beastly hot, down here," Murrell started off.

A chuckle came over the air. "What do you mean, hot?" his brother inquired. "It's snowing steadily here, and there is four feet of ice in the bay."

The only contacts with the outside world for these lonely men of the government are radio and an occasional aircraft that brings supplies.

No Rationing up There

The outpost, Clare told his brother, is one of the most northern habitations in the world. "The food is good, and the quarters comfortable."

And, the boy in the north added with a chuckle, "we are not bothered with rationing up here."

Before the party left Ottawa for the far northern assignment it was provided with every conceivable form of clothing and supplies to offset the vigorous climate of the Arctic.

McKerrow hopes to complete the assignment this Autumn and after visiting his parents in North Bay, and relatives and friends in Belleville to "take off" again to another corner of the earth to conduct experiments in that vast field of limitless development-radio.

Builder of Home Makes Uses Of Old Cedar Fence Rails To Construct Walls of House

Current shortages of building materials such as nails and lumber may be holding up housing construction in practically every part of Canada, but the inability to get such materials is causing little worry for at least one enterprising Canadian who is building himself a house—out of cedar fence rails.

He is Samuel Ray, salesman for a Toronto district brass manufacturing concern who while his plant is out on strike is building the house just north of Belleville on Highway No. 14. When the first is completed he intends building a second cedar block cottage on an adjoining lot.

Used Elsewhere

Although construction of a house utilizing cedar blocks is a new departure in residential building in Eastern Ontario, according to Mr. Ray the idea is not a new one and has been a proven success in British Columbia and also in the Fort William district. But in the Belleville district prospective home builders are definitely interested and each day Mr. Ray answers dozens of questions regarding construction details.

"Cedar wood is the best insulation possible" explained the builder. "The practice with this type of construction is to stucco directly to the blocks for outside finish. Plaster is applied directly to the inside of the blocks."

Lowers Heating Costs

General plan of the house Mr. Ray is building is of one-storey construction with cottage roof. The house will have four rooms and bath, and also will have a special storage room in lieu of a basement. As result of the fine insulation provided by the cedar block construction it is expected the house can be heated by one kitchen stove.

For building material Mr. Ray is using cedar fence rails taken from a farm in the Ivanhoe district, 20 miles north which he has purchased. Already 90 years old, the rails show little signs of deterioration. "If they last another 90 years, I will have no worries," he said.

Nine - Inch Lengths

Rails are sawed into nine inch lenghs and are laid in mortar, the block ends forming the outside of the wall. Block lengths anywhere from eight to ten inches are recommended for thickness of wall. The house is built on concrete foundation with wall corners being formed by special upright planks with horizontal stringers every few feet serving to bind the wall. Window and door headers are also tied to corners for additional strength.

Special care must be given to see that the corners of each block are well laid in mortar to prevent possible loosening. When laying the blocks, the wall is kept straight through use of a straight edge. The builder states that about one course of blocks can be laid each day and estimates two weeks would be required for two men to complete the block laying.

Will Save Over $1,000

A big saving in labor and material costs makes this type of construction considerably less than when using conventional materials. It was estimated the saving would amount to well over $1,000 on the average sized small house.

"But the best part is that I am not held up for building materials. All the lumber I will require will be for floors and for the roof."

Theft Loss $300 Not $100,000

Montreal, July 22 — (CP) — Clovis Fournier, superintendent of Canadian National Railways Police, in a statement last night denied reports of theft of more than $100,000 worth of merchandise from 21 freight cars here Friday night and placed the loss at two cartons of cigarets valued at $300. Police said Saturday that a gang of men with trucks went about its unloading of the cars unhurriedly in the downtown freight terminal of Bonaventure Station while C.N.R. employees, who witnessed the hijacking, thought it a normal unloading.

Bombay, July 22 (CP)—Mohandas K. Gandhi advised Palestine Jews yesterday to abandon "naged force" as a weapon against British restriction of immigration and to adopt instead the "matchless weapon of non-violence."

Rain Puts Out Forest Fires In Maritimes

(By The Canadian Press)

Anxious Maritimers breathed a sigh of relief today as an all-night rain that cloaked the three seaside provinces brought much needed aid in the fight against forest fires which have destroyed thousands of acres of timberlands during the last week.

All fires in Nova Scotia were reported either under control or completely out last night, while in New Brunswick, a light rain brought relief to weary firefighters battling a stubborn blaze near Moncton. In Prince Edward Island, a fire near St. Andrew's was raging out of control last night, but rain was expected to help snuff out the blaze.

In Cape Breton, firefighters were able to bring conflagrations in the Leitch's Creek and reserve districts under control late Saturday after a heavy rain shower soaked the woodland. An outbreak on the Sydney-reserve highway which felled 15 telegraph and telephone poles before being brought under control Friday night, was still smouldering last night, but there was little possibility of flames breaking out again. The downpour also extinguished blazes at several other points.

On the Nova Scotia mainland, a blaze between Upper Musquodoboit and Sheet Harbor was brought under control last night after racing through 5,000 acres since Friday. Chief Forester G.W. Creighton described the blaze as one of the worst he had ever seen and for a time it had threatened to sweep the 30-miles to Pictou.

The disastrous blaze near Moncton which burned over 40 square miles since Thursday was petering out last night.

Two other small outbreaks occurred in New Brunswick yesterday, one near Dorchester, and one on the McLaughlin Road, five miles north of Moncton, but both were brought under control last night.

The fire near St. Andrew's in Prince Edward Island started in a woods belonging to William Rice Friday and was reported to be still unchecked last night after destroying 50 to 60 acres of timber.

Calves Scored For Care and Management

The calves entered in the various calf clubs of Hastings County have recently been scored for care and management by Mr. Harry W. Burns, assistant agricultural representative.

The individual clubs met in the evening of the day of Mr. Burns' visit, for practice in the judging of dairy cattle and the making of an adjustable rope halter with which the members will show their calf at the Achievement Day.

The Madoc Calf Club met at the farm of Mr. Fred Irwin, Cooper, on Tuesday, July 16th; the Sidney Calf Club at the farm of Mr. D. A. Thrasher, Centenary, on Wednesday, July 17th, and the Rawdon Calf Club at the farm of Mr. George Sutherland, Stirling, on Thursday, July 18th.

In general the calves looked as if they had been very well cared for. In the majority of cases the calf is being stabled. Mr. Burns complimented the boys on their enthusiasm in club work and mentioned the fact that there would be some very keen competition at the various club achievement days.

Motorists Pleased By Supervised Parking Saturday

Supervision of parking behind Front Street stores, especially to the rear of the Canadian Department Stores and Kresge's was instituted by the local Junior Board of Trade on a trial basis on Saturday with district motorists expressing their appreciation of the manner in which parking was directed. It was estimated that between four and five hundred cars were handled in and out during the day and evening.

For the first two Saturdays supervision of parking to the rear of Front Street stores will be of an experimental nature, with the Junior Board of Trade to decide on concrete measures as result of the experience gained. Parking on Saturday was under the direction of Mr. Fred Maund, of Maund Services, with two assistants.

Traffic congestion on Front Street was instrumental in the Junior Board of Trade inaugurating the supervision of parking on the vacant lots along the river bank.

CUBS GOT STUBBORN

Timmins, July 22 (CP) —Bear cubs make ideal pets, but it can become embarrassing for their owner if they get stubborn. Leo Lapierre caputured three of them two months ago at Golden Lake, 10 miles from here. Recently they invaded a neighbor's home, crawled unler a bed and refused to budge for several hours.

Hints 5th Column In Civil Service Of United States

Washington, July 22 (AP) — A House of Representatives Civil Service Subcommittee declared Saturday that United States security is threatened by presence of persons of "questioned loyalty" on Federal payrolls.

To permit them to remain "seriously endangers the security of our country," the subcommittee said in a report.

The group said the testimony it took "is sufficient to indicate immediate necessity for certain action and to warrant further study and inquiry into the entire problem."

It specifically recommended that:

1. A special Federal commission be created to unify security and investigation work being done separately now by the various agencies.

2. Congress provide funds immediately to permit fingerprint and name checks of all Government jobholders.

The report, made public by the full Civil ervice Committee, was compiled by Reps. J. M. Combs (Dem., Tex.), chairman; George Fallon (Dem., Md.) and Edward Rees (Rep., Kans.). Rees did not sign it, however, but filed a separate statement saying he thought it was not strong enough.

He said that in a number of cases, employees were hired "subject to investigation" when there was grave question regarding their loyalty. A number of them are in Federal employment now.

"Immediate and thorough housecleaning of all these of doubtful loyalty is what is needed", he said.

Newest, Biggest 4-Engine Transport Plane is Christened

Montreal, July 22 (CP)— History was made in Canadian civil aviation here Saturday when Canada's newest and biggest four-engined transport plane, which reportedly will fly faster at high altitudes than any other plane in the world was christened "North Star" by Mrs. C. D. Howe, wife of Reconstruction Minister Howe. The 40-passenger transport, a type which will be used by Trans-Canada Air Lines and the Department of National Defence, is a combination Trans Canada and Douglas design with a British power plant.

Grocery Automat Arrives

You'll Shop With a "Gun" in New Type of "Keedoozle" Stores First of Which is Opening in Chicago—Expected to Outdate Present Self-Serve Stores

(By Virginia Irwin in St. Louis Post-Dispatch)

When the modern housewife wants something for dinner, she may soon revert to the technique of her pioneer ancestors and do her shopping with a gun. She won't hurt anything, however, for this gun—about the size of an automatic revolver—doesn't shoot. It's really an ingenious bookkeeping machine. It does her shopping for her at a robot grocery.

The inventor of this new-style grocery is 63-year-old white haired Clarence Saunders, who is about to stack up his third great fortune. Saunders, who formerly owned the $100,000,000 Piggly-Wiggly chain, expects to open his first robot grocery in Chicago next month. Similar stores will open in other cities as soon as equipment can be built.

Saunders call the gun the 'key,' and, for no particular reason except that the name popped into his head, the store will be known as the Keedoozle.

A Keedoozle is a cross between a shooting gallery and a typesetting machine, where you look at boxes of graham crackers, bars of soap, cans of soup, or the best cuts of beef, in sealed glass and chromium cases. You walk down the aisles and push little buttons at the items you want. The Keedoozle keeps track of your purchases, which are then delivered to the store door neatly wrapped together in one package.

Saunders has spent ten years and $600,000 to perfect the system which he expects will outdate present day self-serve groceterias.

The electrical robot contains more than 200,000 feet of wiring. "It sounds complicated and it is," Saunders says. "It's so complicated that it intrigued the company that makes dial telephone equipment. It was the first new electrical idea they'd been interested in for years."

Here's how the Keedoozle works: On entering the store you will pick up the key, or gun. In the handle is a roll of white paper. You'll walk past rows upon rows of more than 2000 grocery items until you come, say, to the noodle display, where you wish to make a purchase. You put the barrel of the key into the slot beside the noodles and press a button near by. That prints the name and price of the purchase on the paper in the key and punches a series of dots.

Thus your shopping list is neatly recorded in the key, which the cashier will put in another machine that "reads" the grocery list. This machine translates dot combinations into electrical impulses. These impulses trip certain hidden chutes among the thousands which hold the items of stock in the great warehouse upstairs.

The chutes deliver 20 items every four seconds to the packaging counter—and can, if necessary, double that speed. As the items slide down the chutes onto a belt, they are emptied automatically into one big basket. Clerks then transfer the items into conventional shopping bags.

Fresh vegetables will be packaged and sold by portions. If you want string beans—all strung, washed, and ready for cooking—for a family of four, you'll point your key and press a button four times. All vegetables, in fact, will be washed and cleaned.

Saunders' Keedoozle doesn't even smell like a grocery store. Instead of that familiar aroma of onions, mackerel, and laundry soap it will have the aroma of a lady's boudoir. The air-conditioning system will waft out the scent of attar of roses.

"Will this increase the cost?" asks Saunders. "Far from it. All we want is 10 per cent of the manufacturer's cost. To keep operating, other stores need a 40 per cent profit. We'll pay good salaries to our employees, but we'll need only a handful in each store.

Saunders organized the Piggly-Wiggly chain in 1915 and ran it up to 1260 stores in 40 states with a $100,000,000 annual business. He lost control of the company while trying to resist a bear raid on the corporation's stock in 1923.

He came right back with a new chain-store system called "Clarence Saunders—Sole Owners of My Name Stores," but lost it in the depression.

In 1937, he introduced an experimental Keedoozle in Memphis, Tenn. The intervening years have been devoted to making refinements which will be introduced when the new store opens in Chicago. Later the biggest Keedoozle of them all — to be erected in Memphis— will stretch three blocks in one direction, about a block in the other. It will be a complete department store, where "five-cent items will sell for three and one-half cents and ten-cent items will sell for seven cents."

Reports differed as to the manner in which Villarroel met his death. One source said that when crowds surged into the presidential palace, slaying guards and soldiers who attempted to turn them back, they found Villarroel hiding in the attic. Another report said the President was wounded when he tried to escape through the palace corridors.

Plane Strafes Revolutionists

Early yesterday, a plane swept low over the city and strafed the revolutionists. Later, another plane flew overhead and the pilot tossed out his hat containing a message saying: "The Army Air Corps is with the people."

Some members of the Air Corps participated in an abortive coup June 13, in which at least five persons were killed. Many aviators fled from the country with their planes after the revolt was put down.

The current revolution began July 13, when a student was killed during a demonstration in support of teachers' demands for higher pay. The government then prohibited all demonstrations, and a general strike was called in protest of this action.

Fifty persons were killed and 250 wounded last Thursday when police fired on a crowd of demonstrators.

Realizing that his regime was wabbling, Villarroel reorganized his cabinet Saturday, forming an all-military body. When this failed to halt the revolution, he resigned yesterday morning and prepared to flee the country in his private airplane.

However, student leaders, who had amassed a large number of arms during the night, threw up barricades around the presidential palace and moved in for the kill.

Most of the army units which Villarroel had hastily assembled in the capital during the last several days refused to defend him. Some units even turned their arms over to the revolutionaries, and two regiments pledged their support of the new regime.

The municipal police and two army battalions, one of which was the presidential guard, remained loyal to the president.

Nestor Guillen, dean of Superior Court, assumed the role of acting president, but said in an interview that he would retain that post only until Thomas Monje, court president, was well enough to assume office.

Guillen said he and others in the revolutionary junta "form only a provisional government to call elections and then turn over power to a government chosen by the people."

Villarroel had served as president since Dec. 20, 1943. He came into power following a revolution in which an army group overthrew the government of Gen. Enrique Penaranda.

Rising North American Prices Unlikely to Affect Aussie Consumer

By WILLIAM STEWART.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canberra, July 20 (CP. Cable) —Rising prices in the United States and the raising of the Canadian dollar to parity with the United States dollar are unlikely to have any great immediate effect on the average Australian consumer, most of whose everyday purchases are subject to government price control maintained by subsidy.

Australian purchases in Canada and the United States still are governed by an import control virtually on the same basis as they were during the war, with newsprint the largest single item bought in Canada and automobiles and trucks a close second.

Since the Canadian dollar went up, increasing the prices of purchases by Australia whose currency is pegged at the rate of 25 shillings to the British pound, it has been reported here that the price of essential imports from Canada would be kept at the old levels by subsidies applied as part of the price control program.

No Car, Newsprint Subsidies.

However, it also has been reported that these subsidies would not apply either to imports of newsprint, which is produced in Australia only in limited quantities, or to automobiles, both of which would be classed as luxury items. That would mean that Australian buyers would have to pay for them at the new and higher exchange rate, getting only about $3.20 value for every Australian pound, instead of about $3.60 as formerly.

It has been reported that T. B. Fallows, Canadian newsprint representative, will come to Australia shortly to discuss the entire newsprint supply question with publishers here.

Under price control, subsidies are paid to primary producers to keep costs to the consumers down and it is under this system that essential goods from Canada now will be subsidized.

Imports from Canada.

Newsprint, $500,000; trucks, and automobiles, $500,000; timber, $180,000; aluminum, $65,080; artificial silk, $70,000; wood boxing material, $30,000; book paper, $30,000; fabrics, $20,000; asbestos, $15,000; carbon electrodes, $14,000; ship repair materials, $11,000.

In addition to the above-mentioned, there also are such miscellaneous imports as pickles, medicinal preparations, photographs, wallpaper, typewriters, saws, needles, electric meters, copper wire, lenses and dolls.

BE KIND TO ANIMALS

DR. BAKER'S COLUMN
Edited by Dr. Charles B. Baker, B.V.Sc.

HINTS

The Old Mother Hubbard advice to "give the poor dog a bone" fell a long way short of adequate rations, but it is dangerous to overfeed a puppy. It is easy to estimate the proper quantity of food for a meal.

There is a wide choice of easily digested foods which may be given a young puppy, but the cardinal rule to remember is that too little at a time is always better than too much. Experience is the best teacher and what may be lacking at one meal can easily be made up at the next.

A Basketful of Beauty... but there is more than beauty in that basket—there is intelligence, faithfulness, usefulness and loyalty.

Collies have been the constant companions of shepherds and farmers for hundreds of years and the stories of their sagacity and cunning are almost incredible. They are indispensable to the farmer for herding sheep and cattle and they make excellent watchdogs and companions.

Saved Many Lives

Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery in a speech the other day said that there had been he thought certain criticism of his entertaining the captured German General Ritter von Thoma after the battle of El Alamein in the memorable days of that time.

But he added, that "I got from Von Thoma certain information about the character and military methods of (Field Marshal Erwin) Rommel, his superior commander, that stood me in good stead in later battles and which without question saved many British lives."

So that dinner to the captive German Von Thoma played a part in the later battles, in the great pursuit of the enemy by the Allied forces across the northern coast of Africa, in the battles in Italy and in Western Europe and Field Marshal Montgomery could say that many British lives had been saved by what was said at that function at which the German was shown the courtesy of being entertained.

The alert British commander learned details from Von Thoma, which gave him a sufficient impression of the type of rival Rommel was and Montgomery put to good effect what was learned at that North African meeting.

Statue Proposed

Margate city council has had a request from a citizen that it launch a national campaign to erect a giant statue of Winston Churchill on the cliffs of Dover as a perpetual symbol of British liberty. The citizen added the thought that the statue should show Churchill holding his famous cigar, the tip to be illuminated by day and by night for all time, to be seen by ships in the channel.

The good that Mr. Churchill did during Great War No. 2 will live in history's farthest stretches down the years. The leadership he gave in the hour of danger for the whole of civilization of this age and the accumulated wisdom and freedom of all the past can never be forgotten.

Mr. Churchill is one of those men who strike the imagination. His greatness shone not only in his great strength of mind, his wisdom and knowledge of history and of political freedom, his stout defence of the spirit of British freedom and of the free nations of the world but in the very individualistic qualities of the man and the things he would do. One was his smoking of a cigar and the appearance of the cigar so often. It is already marked for memory. Then the manner in which he used the sign of victory in the days when victory was not yet achieved, proved the genius of the great leader in knowing how to impress upon the United Nations' peoples. This "V" sign in the use to which he put it served greatly in the cause of the fight of freedom against aggression.

Whatever the form that Britain's tribute to Mr. Churchill will take, it will be impressive for he stood the veritable spirit of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales and of the nations of the Empire and the spirit of love and liberty everywhere.

P.O.W. Dog Helped to Outwit Japs

This dog story was told at the BBC overseas microphone recently. It concerned Judy, a pointer that has been awarded the Dickin Medal for bravery—and she's been a prisoner of war, the only officially "registered" one.

Judy came to the microphone with L.A.C. Frank G. Williams, and at his request said "Hello" to the listeners. Mr. Williams followed on with an outline of her history. It began before he knew her but he'd been able to piece some of it together. Born in Shanghai, she was bought by the ship's company of H.M.S. Gnat as a mascot. She met plenty of adventure with them, and nearly ended her life by falling overboard in the Yangtse. She was in Nanking when it fell to the Japs in the early years of their attack on China. Then she became the mascot of another ship, H.M.S. Grasshopper. Japanese aircraft wrecked that, and the survivors of the crew were stranded on an uninhabited island off Singapore, many of them wounded and Judy among them. Desperate searches failed to discover any drinkable water on the island until Judy took a turn. She waited for the tide to go out and then explored the sand which had been covered by seawater. All at once she began to drink. She had found a spring of fresh water bubbling up through the sand. But how she knew it was there is a dog secret. It saved the crew's lives.

It was when Mr. Williams was sent as a prisoner to Medan, in Sumatra, that he first met Judy with some of the Grasshopper's men. He shared his rice ration with her, and she showed her gratitude by special attachment to him. He persuaded the camp commandant to register her as a prisoner-of-war. Throughout her three-and-a-half years of captivity she refused to fraternize with the Japs, and many a time they threatened to shoot her. "We always managed," Mr. Williams said, "to talk them out of it, though we got beaten up for our cheek."

Judy was free to wander but she stuck to the camp. To relieve boredom she would chase monkeys and flying foxes in the jungle. Many a time she warned the prisoners of tigers, snakes, and scorpions in the neighborhood. Once she was bitten by an alligator—another wound to add to her shrapnel ones. Then came her biggest moment—she found the shin bone of an elephant! It took her, her owner vowed, two hours to dig a hole big enough to bury it!

But perhaps Judy's strangest adventure was when the prisoners were shipped from Medan to Singapore. They were forbidden to take the dog with them. So Frank Williams smuggled her on to the ship in a rice sack strapped to his back. In his words, "she spent the best part of three hours upside down in that sack in blazing tropical heat! And she seemed to know that one wriggle would have been her end." Next day, in the Malacca Straits, the ship was torpedoed. Through all the turmoil while the ship was going down Judy was as calm as though nothing was happening. She swam for two and a half hours before being picked up by a Japanese escort vessel.

The prisoners admit they owe a lot to her. For when they were on their last legs, in the months before liberation, they often said: "Well, if the old dog can hang on, we can make it too" and says her master, "it was she that kept up our morale more than anything."

History in the Streets

Mr. Churchill as guest of the city of Metz rode down a highway called Street of the American Twentieth Corps or, in the original, Rue du Vingtieme Corps American. It is a graceful and grateful recognition of services rendered by a very old friend of the French people, and after the somewhat elaborate manner in which one finds history recorded in the street names of foreign capitals.

Street names after historic personages are, of course, common everywhere, but not so with historic dates. Paris has a street of the Fourth of September and Rome has a Street of the Twentieth of September. In both instances it is the same month of the same year. The Third French Republic was proclaimed on September 4, 1870, two days after Napoleon III's surrender at Sedan. Closely connected with this, the troops of a united Italy entered Rome on September 20. More than one street in Latin America is the Avenue of May, which is the great liberation month in that part of the world.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE BIG FISH

The big fish said: "Just look at me!
For I'm as clever as can be.
The reason I'm of such a size
Is I have studied to be wise.
I've learned to tell, with just a look,
When in the minnow there's a hook."

The big fish said: "Mistake I may,
But hooked, I always get away,
I'm not like foolish fish that grab
At every beetle, worm or crab.
When I suspect that things aren't right
My good sense tells me not to bite."

Yet, one day from a rod and reel
There came a most enticing meal.
It promised more than any fish
Had dared to dream of or to wish.
Though lesser fish would none of it,
The big one fell for it—and bit.

"Ah!" said the man at close of day,
"Not all the big ones get away.
Of men and fishes this is true:
The greatest can be foolish, too!"

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, July 22 — (CP)—New charges against persons linked in various ways with Canada's spy probe will probably not get into any depth of legal water until late August, reliable quarters report.

They happen to arise just when legal circles are in the midst of what they call "the long holiday," running through July and August. Consequently, repeated remands are expected until late August when the wheels really will begin to turn.

In all, it looks like September — and late September at that — before the full scale of espionage trials is reached again. Several here from the original 14 detentions have been stood over until September 9 but that is a nominal date, the opening of the fall assizes of the Ontario Supreme Court.

Chief Justice Rinfret of the Supreme Court of Canada gave at least two of them a good reason to ask for adjournments from that date when he rejected the petitions of H. S. Gerson and M. S. Nightingale for writs of Habeas Corpus to get them out of Bordeaux jail in Montreal.

They are serving three months terms for contempt of court in the Fred Rose case. Their freedom will virtually coincide with their appearance in the Ontario court, a fact which — the Chief Justice said — should give them a good basis for asking for further time to prepare their cases.

Labor: Possibility that the Commons committee on labor relations may extend its probe into Canadian industrial unrest beyond the present parliamentary session is being predicated in some Ottawa quarters.

Special arrangements would have to be made and one suggestion is that a small number of the 35-man committee should continue to function as a commission. The field the committee is surveying is a broad one.

So far it has centred its attention on the steel strike. Hopes have been expressed that a settlement of that strike would bring an end to other work stoppages and provide a basis of settlement in other pending disputes.

Major labor organizations are expected to make submissions to the committee and the Canadian Congress of labor co-ordination committee has already indicated that it will urge the committee to establish a general wage pattern.

Expectations are that once the committee completes its investigation of the steel strike it will take time out to consider how far it should go in its general enquiry.

Miss Toronto, 1946 Title Won By Six-Foot Beauty

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 22 — (CP)—Toronto grew its crop of beautiful girls tall and dark-haired this year as Irene Ayers, 21, six feet two inches, was picked Miss Toronto 1946 in the 10th Police Games beauty contest Saturday over 54 other lovelies.

Second place went to Phyllis Webb, 19, also a tall brunette of well over five feet six, and titian-haired Rita Ryerse, 21, five feet nine, came third.

Miss Ayers, ticket saleslady for the Toronto Transportation Commission, now may turn her grey-blue eyes toward Atlantic City where Miss Toronto 1946 and Miss Canada 1946 (Marion Saver, Toronto) has been invited to compete in the Miss America pageant next September.

Judges, along with their advisor, Vincent Trotta, Atlantic City's beauty contest expert, had their troubles picking a winner from among contestants who included girls from the Toronto area and also from Hamilton and Burlington. They decided on Miss Ayers as being the type of girl "you would like most to think about."

Irene said she hopes to use the $300 she won toward a modelling course. She also wants to take singing lessons. Other prizes she received included a diamond set wrist-watch, clothes, and a screen test.

Preparations for the underwater test of the atomic bomb will be completed tomorrow (Monday, Canadian time) when target submarines are submerged in Bikini Lagoon and an electronics rehearsal is staged.

As preparations went ahead, Vice-Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, atom test commander, observed that the bursting of the world's fifth atomic bomb might be delayed at least a week because of adverse weather.

Admiral Blandy added, however, that meteorologists hoped a high pressure area would shove an inter-tropical front southward and bring clear weather to the area.

The test now is scheduled for Thursday morning, Bikini time (Wednesday afternoon, Canadian time).

NUTRITIONAL DEFICIENCY AND HAY FEVER

Everybody knows that hay fever is caused by the pollen of one plant of another (ragweed, in most cases) but nobody knows why pollen in the air has no effect on you and me but causes so much grief for the other fellow. For Pete's sake, sophomores, don't tell me about "resistance." Nobody knows that that is either.

Here is my theory—not that I know any more about it than any doctor does, but anyway it will do no harm to consider it, whether you think there's any sense in it or not.

Susceptibility to pollen or sensitivity if you prefer, is due to nutritional deficiency, specifically calcium and vitamin D deficiency.

It is only a little over a century since hay fever was first attributed to pollen (1831). But even fifty years ago only an insignificant percentage of the population have hay fever. Today, according to recognized authorities, four percent of the population have hay fever, and of these more than a third develop asthma.

According to recognized authorities' calcium (lime) edficiency is the most prevalent nutritional deficiency in America, due chiefly to the inadequate per capita consumption of milk and cheese and popular ignorance of the importance of including leafy vegetables in the daily diet—the greens and salad vegetables. A dinner is not a well balanced meal unless a real salad (one or more fresh greens, herbs or leafy vegetables to be eaten raw) constitutes the first or an early course.

More or less enthusiastic reports of benefit derived from high calcium diet and/or supplementing the ordinary diet with calcium and vitamin D, from readers of this column over a period of many years, support my contention that people subject to hay fever should take steps to correct this common deficiency. In the booklet "The Calcium Shortage" (for copy send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope) are instructions about diet.

Whether for prevention or alleviation calcium feeding is nutritional, not medicinal. For this reason it should begin well in advance of the hay fever season, although even only a week or two may suffice to alleviate the most distressing symptoms, particularly the weeping or constant flow of watery secretion from the nose and irritating tears.

In the pamphlet on Hay Fever (available on written request if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope and no clipping, please) I give what I find to be the present consensus of medical opnion on the medicinal treatment of hay fever.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

No Jack

I am a woman (not a man as my name may suggest), aged 52. I have been sewing like mad on a power machine for many years, and I believe a "nip" might do me good, if you will be kind enough to send be instructions. I mean, of course, a "nip" of iodine. I have just begun to do somersaults on the lawn, too. What fun. And what delight I find in reading our favorite column.

(Jack———).

Answer—I'm glad you are not confused about that "nip"—some readers were too all-fired ready to take it as applying to booze. Too bad you waited all these years to do somersaults. Every one should roll a string of 'em on the floor first thing every morning. The how and why are explained in the pamphlet "Invitation to the Somersaultauqua"—mailed on written request (not a clipping, please) if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope.

Be Kind to Your Dogs

Please print directions for building up fallen arches (N.F.)

Answer—Go barefoot, toe in, and be sure to get plenty of vitamin D or sunshine on naked skin every day. More specific instructions in booklet "Care of the Feet"—for copy send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

Can a moving object reverse its course without stopping?

No moving object can reverse its course completely without first coming to a standstill. A bullet fired or a ball thrown straight up into the air stops for an infinitesimal period before it begins to descend. The piston of an engine stops for an instant at the top and bottom of each stroke.

Suppose a rifle bullet is travelling in one direction and that it meets and is carried back by a cannon ball travelling in the opposite direction. Does the rifle bullet stop completely in reversing its course to travel back with the cannon ball? The fact is that the rifle ball will have to stop a "theoretical" instant before starting in the opposite direction, notwithstanding the cannon ball conti[illegible] on its original course. In [illegible] at least the cannon ball would [illegible] slowed up slightly.

Do rainbows ever appear as complete circles?

Rainbows due to showers of rain, says the U. S. Weather Bureau, are never seen as complete circles by observers at ordinary elevations. Such bows, however, do sometimes appear from points well up in the air, as from a balloon, airplane or mountain top.

Aviators see the phenomenon most frequently at a considerable altitude when the sun is near the horizon.

The peculiarly colored circles that appear occasionally around the sun and moon are not true rainbows. An occasional circular rainbow produced by mist or spray is seen at ordinary elevations.

In "The Voyage of the Beagle" Charles Darwin described such a rainbow seen during a storm at sunset off the coast of Chile. "During a few minutes there was a bright rainbow," wrote the naturalist, "and being carried along the surface of the water, changed the ordinary semicircle into a circle—a band of prismatic colors being continued, from both feet of the common arch across the bay, close to the vessel's side; thus forming a distorted, but very nearly entire ring."

Six submarines will be submerged tomorrow at a depth of 60 feet. Actual submerging operations began today but it will take until tomorrow to complete.

Two other submarines — the bomb-battered Skate and the Parche—will be anchored on the surface.

Sub commanders agreed that the submerged craft, will stand little chance of surviving the terrific underwater blast, since they will be closest to the centre of detonation.

Concrete blocks, anchored by bridles ore and aft, will hold the submarines at the desired depth. The boats can be raised by pumping air into them.

Bee Hunting Can Be Easy

(By Eddy Dressen in Coronet Magazine.)

It's only surmise, but perhaps if there hadn't been a beekeeper among the hardy folk who stepped from the Mayflower onto Plymouth Rock, the colony would have failed. The Pilgrims had no sugar or saccharin—nothing except honey to sweet the foods they ate. And their only source of honey was wild bees.

Oddly enough, wild honey is just as available today, and just as free, as any Pilgrim ever found it. One of the most delicate and delicious of all confections, it's a nourishing food to grace the table of anyone who will go out and seek it. And you don't have to hunt through thick brush and dense forests.

If you live in a village, town or on a farm, almost certainly wild bees are within reach. Nor are city people excluded. I live within the limits of a great city, and last summer wild bees were sipping nectar from my front-yard flowers. I traced them and found the hive in a hollow tree between two busy boulevards.

Bee hunting is neither complicated nor expensive. The first essential is a pair of good eyes. Then you'll need a bee box, a glass plate to cover it, a bit of honeycomb, a handkerchief, some oil of anise, an axe, a bread knife, a wooden paddle, a bellows and a couple of water pails. If you're afraid of stings, better play safe and equip yourself with a veil and a pair of gloves.

After the first frost is the best time to start looking for your bee tree. Wild bees work until the flowers are gone, and after a frost you can begin with any flower field that has survived. But first, you should be briefed on the habits and activities of one of nature's most fascinating insects.

A bee hive is not just a collection of insects but an organized, disciplined city presided over by a queen mother. In the colony will be from 80,000 to 100,000 workers, whose functions are varied, and up to 200 drones. Each bee has its own specialty, and the "mind" of the hive is the collective mind of all the bees therein.

Every morning before the workers stir—the queen's sole function is to lay eggs and the drones to fertilize them—forager bees set out from the tree that you are hunting. They locate fields of flowers, and by some mysterious process communicate their finds to the workers. Yet the colony will concentrate on only one kind of flowers one day. If buttercups and strawberries are simultaneously in bloom, the bees will collect from either but never from both.

On the hind leg of each worker is a pair of tiny cups surrounded by hairs. These enter the flower, and pollen clings to them. But the bees drink the sweet syrup in the bottom of the flowers, accepting it into the first of two stomach. Apparently if the bee is hungry, it can open a duct into the second stomach and take as much syrup as it needs. When the bee is loaded to capacity with pollen and syrup it starts back to the hives.

Meanwhile, other bees, detailed for that express purpose, have remained in the hive to build honeycomb—the storeroom for the workers. They shape the hexagonal cells with their mandibles and build them with beeswax — a substance they secrete. If any worker is so loaded with nectar and pollen that it is impossible to get home, it is possible that one of still another detail might fly forth to help it, even sharing the load and carrying it to the hive.

The task of the bee hunter is to intercept one of these workers, and that's where the handkerchief comes in. Bees have a keen sense of smell. Thus oil of anise holds a powerful attraction. Saturate your handkerchief and hang it over the tallest grass in the meadow you're covering. Sooner or later a bee will alight. Flick it into your small honey box in the bottom of which is a bit of honey, and close the glass cover.

For a few minutes the insect may buzz angrily but before long it will discover the honey and settle down to work on it. When the bee has all it can carry, remove the glass and let it go. The bee will rise, circle several times, then set out in a straight line for his tree.

Follow it as far as you can with your eye and keep walking in that direction until no longer certain you're going correctly. Stop and hang up your handkerchief again. You'll soon attract another bee. Go farther up the line and keep going. By some inexplicable power, the bees that have been in your box tell others what they've found. Then, by the time you're close to the tree you may have as many as 500 bees coming and going in a steady line. Follow the line until you come to the tree.

Now you have to cut the tree. But before getting out the axe, it's best to climb the trunk and use your bellows to puff a little smoke into the bee hole. Then cut the tree down as skillfully as you can. A smashed tree means honey all over the place. Also, until you have felled a few bee trees, wear your veil and gloves.

Don't expect a bonanza in every tree. Once I watched a bear climb a pine stub, rip open the honey and feast. After he had gone, the remaining bees moved upward and began anew. We decided, when fall came, to fell the stub ourselves. But the honey was tainted, and we never knew what made it so. Perhaps pine pitch.

After felling the tree, use your axe to cut deeply above and below where you think the honey may be, and pry out the section. Scrape the honey loose with your bread knife, collect it on the paddle and dump it into your pails. I've heard tales of how to take enough honey for yourself and leave enough for the bees. But even if one could judge accurately how much the bees need, the hive is open and Winter will freeze it hard.

The next problem is the bees themselves. Scoop them with gloved hands into any container with a cover. Then carry them home and put them in a cold place—a woodshed, for instance, is a good spot. Give them honey to eat, and inform some beekeeper that you have a swarm to sell. One friend of mine sold nine in a single season, averaging $12 apiece.

There's one thing certain about wild honey. Once you've tasted it, once you've savored the delicious essence of wild flowers, the tame product will forever after seem just what the name implies—tame.

WEDDINGS

COLPITTS—GOOD

The following wedding will be of interest to many readers in Belleville and district as the bride is well-known here.

Parham United Church was the scene of a pretty Summer wedding at 2:30 p.m., Wednesday, July 10, when Rev. W. T. G. Brown of Kingston, united in marriage Marguerite Isabell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Good, Parham, and Rolfe Reynolds Colpitts, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Colpitts, Moncton, N.B. The church was decorated with baskets of white Madonna lilies, tall blue delphinium and ferns.

Given in marriage by her father, the fair-haired bride was lovely in a gown of white satin, fashioned with high neckline inset with net, long sleeves with pointed tips, and fitted bodice which buttoned down the back to the full skirt. Her floor-length veil of silk tulle fell from a tiara of white flowers, and she carried a cascade of American Beauty roses and bouvardia tied with wide satin ribbon. Miss Adelaide Colpitts, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. Her gown was of turquoise lace, made on slim princess lines. She wore long matching mitts, and a flower hat. Her flowers were Talisman roses and gladioli arranged in a semi-cascade and tied with yellow ribbon. Little Roma Marguerite Reid, niece of the bride, was flower girl, in a long dress made of pink balloon cloth made with bouffant skirt and net overskirt, and a low neckline edged with tiny forget-me-nots. She wore pink mitts, and a coronet of pink and white sweetpeas, and carried a nosegay of pink roses and sweetpeas with long streamers tied with pansies.

While the guests were assembling Mrs. Velma Buck sang "I'll Walk Beside You" and "I Love You Truly". At the conclusion of the ceremony she sang "Because". She was gowned in white silk jersey and wore a small lace hat and a corsage of white sweetpeas. Miss Mary Card presided at the organ.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Good received the guests wearing a finely checked two-piece dress and a broad-brimmed hat. Mrs. Colpitts, mother of the groom, was attired in flowered silk jersey, and matching flower hat. Both wore corsages of pink roses. The bride's table was centred with the three-tiered wedding cake surrounded with white tulle adorned with pink sweetpeas and rosebuds. Luncheon was served to about 50 guests. Dr. Brown proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom replied. Telegrams of congratulation from distant friends were read.

For travelling the bride changed to a pale blue two-piece dress with embroidered neckline, a white flower model hat, white accessories, and a corsage of Talisman roses. Following a two weeks' honeymoon in Toronto and Muskoka the couple will make their home at Dalhousie, N.B.

The bride is a graduate of the training school at the Kingston General Hospital. She graduated last month and was silver medallist. The groom is a graduate of Acadia University in mechanical engineering. The groom's gift to the bride was a matched set of travelling bags.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

MEIKLEJOHN—BRESEE

A pink and white arch, flowers and fernery formed the setting in the United Church, Salem, for the wedding of Marorie Eileen Bresee, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bresee, to Rev Grant Meiklejohn, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Meiklejohn of Campbellford. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. F. Townsend, of Deseronto, and the wedding music was played by the bride's brother, Mr. Claire Bresee.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was a lovely figure in her floor-length gown of white silk bengaline, with full net skirt, deep net yoke, sweetheart neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. Her embroidered finger tip veil was caught with lily-of-the-valley and orange blossoms from her mother's wedding veil. She carried a circle of American Beauty roses. Her only ornament was a gold heart-shaped locket and bracelet, gifts of the groom. Mrs. Stanley Norris, sister of the bride, wearing a white sheer floor-length gown with deep inserts of lace, sweetheart neckline and long sleeves, was matron of honor. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. Miss Doreen Bresee, sister of the bride wearing a floor-length gown of pink sheer, and carrying Talisman roses, was bridesmaid. Both attendants wore waist-length veils held in place by coronets, trimmed with flowers. The pretty little flower girl was Lenore Montgomery, niece of the bride, gowned in blue sheer and carrying a nosegay of sweetpeas.

Mr. Granville Meiklejohn, brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Cardwell Bresee, brother of the bride, and Ray Fry, brother-in-law of the groom. During the signing of the register, Mrs. T. F. Townsend sang "O Perfect Love".

Following the ceremony the happy couple were greeted by many relatives and friends and showered with best wishes and confetti.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents where Mrs. Bresee received the guests wearing a mauve suit and a corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Meiklejohn, mother of the groom, was attired in a dusky rose ensemble and wore a corsage of pink and blue sweetpeas.

Luncheon was served on the spacious lawn about 50 guests. The bride's table, covered by the bride's own embroidered Irish linen cloth, was centred with the three-tiered wedding cake. Rev. T. F. Townsend proposed the toast to the bride to which the groom replied. The groom's father and brother also made appropriate remarks.

For travelling the bride donned a pink silk jersey dress, white accessories and a blue shorty coat. Following a honeymoon through Yellowstone Park, the couple will make their home at Coleville, Sask.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

Norwegian Mother Expresses Thanks For Child's Coat

Although Norwegians have been fortunate in being able to secure sufficient food since the departure of German occupational forces, clothing in this Scandinavian country is extremely scarce, according to a letter received recently by Mrs. Grant Kerr, R.R. 6, Belleville. During a clothing drive one year ago Mrs. Kerr contributed a small child's outfit which was received by a Norwegian family who wrote to Mrs. Kerr in appreciation of the articles. The letter was written in Norwegian and translated here by Capt. Knudsen. The letter follows:

Mrs. Grant Kerr:

I was one of the lucky ones who received a child's coat for my little girl of five.

I'm writing you as I found your address in the pocket of the little coat.

This coat fitted my little girl fine and you'll never know just how welcome it is. We have so little here and the things to wear are so hard to obtain, especially for children.

I for my part have not had any new clothes since 1940 so you can see I haven't much to spruce myself up on. Silk hose and underwear are practically out of the question, but it is no use growling, especially when you can see yourself through each day.

It is so nice to receive clothes that are clean and mended. As to the food situation, we are not doing so bad. We have been most fortunate in receiving just about everything that is necessary.

Yes, I would indeed like to hear from you people again and also hope that this letter arrives to you safe. We also have a little boy of four years who received a new suit, for which we send many thanks.

I sincerely hope you can understand my writing because I am a very poor letter writer. You see I'm used to my husband writing all letters from our house. My husband at the present is in the hospital and has been in five weeks. He is not expected out until the end of this year. For myself, I'm 34 years and my husband 37.

If you people are interested as regards what is going on, please drop us a line, because I would like very much to hear from you again.

Thanking you again for everything.

not enough ORIENT* nylons yet
... here's why
PRODUCTION of Orient Beauti-Skin Nylons, the world's most beautiful stockings is steadily being stepped up. But here's why there's still not enough: True, the shooting is over, but many reconversion problems must still be overcome. New textile machinery is practically impossible to obtain. Machines currently in operation are staggering under a huge backlog of orders. Expansion of manufacturing facilities to meet the increased demand is out of the question right now. And the changeover from rayon to nylon yarn presents another delay. The distinctively different characteristics between rayon and nylon yarns create problems requiring changes throughout the whole process of manufacture. Some of these changes are mechanical others are manual, calling for new techniques on the part of personnel handling nylon yarn. And although demobilization is nearly completed, there still exists a shortage of expert personnel.
IS THE SITUATION IMPROVING? YES!
The makers of Orient* Beauti-Skin* Nylons are doing everything in their power to supply you with the quality and quantity you want. When you buy stockings, ask for Orient* Beauti-Skin*. If your retailer can't supply you, remember the current difficulties. And if you are fortunate enough to receive Orient* Beauti-Skin* Nylons, you can be justly proud for you have obtained the world's most beautiful stockings.

Summer Night's Dream

By ALICE ALDEN

This certainly is a delightful summer for dressing up nights, whether the choice be a very worldly, strapless grande toilettee or a beguilling little cotton affair. Somewhere between the two, and very much at home on the dance floor, is this pretty evening frock fashioned of rayon, in a fine broadcloth weave. Fuchsia, light and dark blue on a white ground makes for an exciting color scheme. The star-spangled ruffles end abruptly at the shoulders, the low-cut back is held by narrow star-strewn straps. The bodice is becomingly shirred at the waistline and cut in a slimming V to the full skirt.

BEAUTY

Strange are the ways of the insidious fat cell

Reducing Overdeveloped Arms

Strange are the ways of the insidious fat cell. It doesn't seem to care where it lives, though its favorite location, together with its family and friends, is the midsection of the body. This is mainly because that area gets less exercise than any other part of the human frame. A woman may have a fairly slim torso, yet the calves of the legs and the upper portions of the arms will expand. Just no sense in it, as far as we can see.

Legs can be slimmered if exexercise is long-continued. One must ride a bicycle, walk on tip toes, do high kicking. To reduce the size of the arms, the muscles must be given hard work to do. They must work like a horse. If a woman hasn't patience and determination, there's no use of making a fight against adipose padding.

Tennis is ideal, not only for arm reducing, but also for trimming down the calves that have expanded, soft and flabby.

Tennis provides swift running, and there is much lifting up on the toes. There is a constant stretching of the body that strengthens the muscles of the abdomen and back. The movements required to return a swift serve call into play every muscle from the fingers to the shoulders.

A rowing machine, used for fifteen minutes or half an hour daily will throw fat cells into a painc. Good for diminishing the waist measurement, too; bending back and forth will tighten the muscles. Adipose tissues will not remain on firm flesh. What they're looking for are nice, soft fibres that have little or no activity.

Heavy massage by an operator who doesn't mind hard work will delete suet on any part of the body. The process is slow. Cells are crushed and beaten down by pinching, rolling and slapping with strong fingers. This of course is the lazy girl's method. Results will come faster through vigorous exercise.

The ideal arm is almost round, except at the elbow where it flattens front and back. The flesh should be solid. There should be no slack. The lines should taper to a neat wrist. A lovely arm is a beauty asset. Arms and backs don't get enough attention from the grand army of beautifiers.

Now that the season for summer sports is here, it is up to every plumpie to do some figuring on figure defects. With tennis, golf, archery, rowing, swimming and tramping through the woods, the lady of overdeveloped proportions can beat the adipose game, get herself into youthful form again. She must, of course, mind her diet, cut down on sweets, starches and fats.

Fashion Flashes

Interior decoration, these days, includes smart and lovely negligees and hostess gowns. White crepe makes a slim, graceful gown, its snug bodice fastened with a row of tiny self buttons. Tiny birds in flight are scattered over the gown. These are of tiny iridescent blue sequins and silver beads.

Geetting ready for next season is the fur-trimmed tunic topper, foreseen as a major fashion. In the medium-priced bracket is a nice coat of royal blue woolen with squirrel, in scalloped effect, used for an ascot scarf and the lower half of the bloused sleeves. Worn with or without a belt.

Big success of the "little fur" broadtail, ranging form the inexpensive processed American lamb all the way to Russian broadtail. A smart new jacket of Indian lamb in a neutral sand shade is made with balloon, push-up sleeves and a wide four-flare back. Nice for travel wear and grand over afternoon and evening things.

It's good that white shoes got away to a late start, for the shops are still showing them this late in the season. A luxury white shoe is a high-cut sling pump in white kid suede, with medium heel and a kiltie tongue that has touches of gray reptile. Quarter-inch platform is nail-studded.

This summer many a sub-deb will be enjoying her first evening frock. A delightful model has a skirt of finely striped pink and navy taffeta, the stripes used horizontally. The skirt is draped over the hips and tied in a big, double-bustle bow. The short-sleeved, sweater-like top is of navy crepe.

New lines accent many of the hats being prepared for fall. A large pink felt hat, with black bow and sheer veil trimming, has a brim with a dramatic upward sweep. Its asymmetric line reveals the face and has a charming off-centre bonnet effect. Hard to describe, but very flattering!

Quick-cleansing Javex makes toilets shine. Disinfects, deodorizes and whitens, all in one efficient, labor-saving action.

An Unappreciative Husband Makes Her Life Miserable

I wonder what would happen if some of these wives who have unappreciative husbands suddenly stopped nagging at them and quarrelling with them about it and tried buttering them up?

I don't mean that these wives haven't plenty to quarrel about, nor much excuse for their nagging. But since that approach doesn't help matters, it might be a good idea to try another and see what would happen. Sometimes by handing out a little soft soap instead of hard words, the recipient is surprised and shamed into better behavior. And there's nothing to be lost by trying such tactics.

That's what I'd suggest to the troubled wife who writes this letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am a housewife and mother of six children.

"My husband is a good worker, but he lives only for his work. He never takes time to go to church or to consider my feelings at any time. We are always at outs with each other. He disagrees continually with us all, never appreciating anything that is done for him. No matter what food we have, or how it is fixed, he always complains about it and wants something different.

"I have thought of leaving him several times in the 22 years we have been married, but it seems like I just can't get started. But in my opinion, it would do him good.

"My oldest girl is married, and my youngest child is six years old. My husband seems to love him in his curious way. But I know he couldn't love me, or he would do different. If the children go anywhere, especially the girls, he calls me all kinds of names. I have ceased to care how he takes what I do, and just go on from day to day, dreading every minute with him. Life is too short to be spent that way. I have asked him to go away for awhile, but he just stays on and makes my life miserable.

"I have done the best I can to be a good wife and mother. If I have failed, I can't help it. He blames all his misfortunes on me, saying it's my fault because he hasn't got more. But in my heart, and the children's, I know it isn't my fault.

"Please tell me what to do. Must I go or stay?

"E. S."

I am sure you have done your best to be a good wife and mother, and there is, indeed, nothing so discouraging as to do your best at anything and apparently meet with nothing but failure. And it is quite true, too, that life is too short, as you say, to be spent in an atmosphere of bitterness and unhappiness.

But what will you do if you leave your husband? Will you have any trouble getting money from him to support yourself and the children? Or do you think you can get work and support your family yourself? This is something that you had better think over carefully before deciding to leave your home.

It will be very hard to do, I know, but I would like to see you try the plan I suggested in the beginning of this column before you call it a day with your husband. That is, give him praise and wherever you possibly can, and make up your mind you won't quarrel with him over the other things. Set a definite period for trying this out—say a month, to start with—and then let me know what happens. I have a feeling you may find it make things a little easier, for you know it is very likely that your husband loves you too in that "curious way" of his, and that gentleness from you might succeed where quarrels have failed.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other evening my wife and I went to a large, formal dinner given in a private suite of a hotel by very dear friends of ours in celebration of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. In attendance there was a headwaiter and several waiters. Toward the end of the dinner I thought I saw one of the guests give a tip to a waiter. I may have been mistaken, because this guest sat quite far down the table from me. But it did make me wonder if I also should have given a tip to the waiter serving me. Is this expected of a guest at this kind of party?

Jim

No. At this kind of party, given in a restaurant, in either the public dining room or in a private dining room, every item of expense is the responsibility of the host, exactly as it would be if he were entertaining in his own home.

On Which Side, Salad Plates?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When salad is served with the main course, on which side of the dinner plate should the salad plate be placed?

S. E. L.

Either side is correct. It is easiest to reach if placed at the right side of the plate, but usually there is more room to place it on the left side. In a restaurant, it is fairly standard practice to place the salad plate on the left side of the luncheon or dinner plate. . . but if you think it would be more convenient to have the plate on the right, you may change it on the right side.

Naming a Definite Hour for Late-Afternoon Parties

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Twice in the last few months I have received invitations to a late-afternoon party on which the hour was given definitely; that is, instead of what I had thought was always "done", giving the hours as, for example, four to seven o'clock. In one case "four o'clock" was written on the invitation, and in the other case, "five-thirty". Is the hour-naming custom changing?

K. E.

There is indeed a definite trend toward naming a specific hour for a late-afternoon party. I have noticed this particularly on invitations to parties where there is a guest of honor to be introduced to many guests, or where some other definite circumstance suggests the convenience of guests arriving at approximately the same time. For a tea party, "four o'clock" or "four-thirty' is often written on the invitation; for a cocktail party, sometimes "five-thirty" or "six o'clock". This naming of a definite hour does tend, I think, to at least try to solve the problem of guests staying so late at a late-afternoon party. But even though an hour is named, it is expected that guests still have the privilege of arriving somewhat later.

When the Bridegroom is Divorced

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am engaged to marry a man who has been divorced. I would like to know if it is proper for us to have a church wedding.

2.—He has a 13-year-old daughter. Is there some way in which we could include her in the wedding party?

E. M.

1. This depends on the regulations of the denomination of the church in which you wish to be married . .. you should consult with the minister about this.

2. It is not considered good taste to have as an attendant a child of either a bride or bridegroom who is divorced.

Thumping Ted Williams, Red Sox Star, Like 'Ole Man River' Just Keeps Rollin' Along

Baseball's Man of the Hour Leads in Everything but Base-Stealing and is a Sure Bet for "Valuable Player" Award

By JACK HAND

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Thumping Ted Williams is baseball's man of the hour — almost certain to be named most valuable player in the American League if Boston Red Sox win the big prize.

Adding 11 points to his batting average with one afternoon's efforts on seven hits in nine times at bat, the sharp-eyed slugger is tops in American League batting at .365, and ranks first in runs scored, runs batted in, total hits and home runs. It's a good thing he never took up base stealing.

Williams hit for the cycle in yesterday's second game triumph over St. Louis, 7-4, topping a single, double and triple with his 27th home run.

A double and a brace of singles by Williams drove in one of the runs Dave Ferriss needed to record his 15th victory of the season by a 5-0 score. Tex Shirley and Cliff Fannin were the Brownie losers.

Now 11½ games out front with 64 to play, the Sox appear a certain bet to earth the pennant if they manage a .500 pace. To match that leisurely pace that would result in 97 wins, the second place Yankees would have to take 44 of their remaining 65 contests — not an encouraging prospect.

Floyd Bevens had hurled and batted Yankees to a 3-2 opening nod with his two-run homer but Chicago's anemic hitters climbed all over starter Al Gettel, Joe Page and Jake Wade for their biggest inning of the year and a 9-3 verdict.

Detroit blew a chance to pick up ground on New York by losing to Philadelphia Athletics 4-3, in the first of two. Even Hank Greenberg's 23rd homer with a man on couldn't save the issue. The world champs got even in the nightcap, 11-7.

Washington edged out Cleveland twice, 2-1 and 7-3.

St. Louis and Brooklyn continued to run neck and neck in the National, winding up respective home stands and road trips all even with 53-34 records.

Howie Pollet threw a four-hitter at Boston Braves in the first game but needed Stan Musial's two-run homer to defeat Johnny Niggeling, 2-1; Erv Dusak's circuit clout with two on eased Harry Brecheen's task in the 8-4 second tilt triumph over ex-Card Mort Cooper.

Vic Lombardi blanked Pittsburgh with three hits, 3-0, but Hank Behrman required some bullpen help from Hal Gregg and an inside-the-park homer by Carl Furillo with a man on to sink the Pirates 6-5.

Chicago split with the Phillies. Hank Borowy worked the 3-0 opener. Ken Raffensberger handed Claude Passeau his fifth straight setback in the 4-2 second tilt.

After Ewell Blackwell had whitewashed New York with five hits, 5-0, in the curtain raiser, Cincinnati Reds succumbed to the slants of Long Johnny Gee.

Cubs the Team To Beat, Says "Lip"

Pittsburgh, July 22. (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals may think they can overhaul Brooklyn Dodgers in a National League stretch finish, but Bums' Manager Leo Durocher says they're not the least bit disturbing to him.

"See that team beating the Phillies," said 'The Lip' pointing a finger at the Chicago-Philadelphia results on the scoreboard in Forbes Field yesterday. That's the team we'll have to lick for the pennant, and not the Cards. It's the Cubs, and brother they're much tougher."

Charlie Grimm's Cubs recently slammed the Dodgers in four straight games, although Leo, in typical Flatbush fashion, declares "we had 'em licked in three of the games."

Leo returned to the Dodger bench after a five-day suspension to watch the bums defeat the sagging Pittsburgh Pirates in both ends of a double-header yesterday, 3-0, and 6-5.

"I see some of the sportswriters have us dropped out of the pennant race completely. Sure, we've been going bad but we're still even with those Cards. You can't count a team out that's tied for the lead."

STRANAHAN BEATS THE PROS

Frank Stranahan, millionaire amateur golfer, Toledo, O., receives a silver loving cup from J. M. Loomis, president of Hillcrest Club, after winning there the Greater Kansas City, Mo., invitational golf tournament by one stroke over Johnny Bulla. Bulla, as the leading professional, received first prize of $2,500.

ROYALS ARE ABOUT "IN" AS FLAG-WINNERS

Win Two More Sunday Over Runner-Up Chiefs; Toronto Splits With Newark

(By The Associated Press)

Even their worst enemies must concede Montreal Royals are just about "in" as International League pennant-winners with a 15-game lead and a third of the season to go.

If the Royals should drop off from their sizzling pace to play even .500 ball in their 57 remaining games, their closest rivals, Syracuse Chiefs, would have to win 45 of 59 contests to close the gap.

As Syracuse, Baltimore, Newark and none of the other clubs have shown any signs of travelling at a .700-plus gate, the Brooklyn farmhands should not have to worry.

Two more decisions yesterday over the runner-up Chiefs just about blacked out the last faint ray of hope for the pursuers.

Thirteen hits sewed up the opening 4-3 verdict for Jack Banta who required relief help from Chet Kehn in holding back the Syracuse club's home-run attack by Hank Sauer and Van Harrington. Jackie Robinson and Early Naylor posted home runs in the 3-2 finale in which starter Cy Buker was saved by the veteran Curt Davis.

Newark had to be content with an even break in its double bill with Toronto, dropping the first game, 6-5, but grabbing the nightcap, 1-0, in 4½ innings.

Baltimore clung to third place by a half-game despite a 6-1 loss to Rochester, and Buffalo Bisons breezed to a 10-3 opening victory over Jersey City Giants but could only go to a 4-4 nine-inning tie with the cellarites in the second game, called because of rain and darkness.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

UMPIRE BAITING.

There was, we are informed from several reliable sources, plenty of umpire baiting at a Belleville Softball Association scheduled game at the Fair Grounds the other night. One of the chief sources of alleged player aggravation was the ejection of a member of one of the teams from the game. Fuel was added, so we are informed, to the somewhat flaming tempers of some of the players, by alleged poor judgment on the part of the umpire behind the plate.

Be that as it may. Sometimes umpires do err in their judgment. After all, they too are only human. But there is very little divinity on the part of some players when an alleged ball is called a strike or vice versa. As was the case the other night, we are told the umpire in question was subjected to language that was very fiery and embellished by names that could scarcely be called endearing.

And the umps ejected a player, who in his opinion had used language not taught in school. The player got the well known gate and the verbal fireworks started. Protests were going to be submitted. Not only on the ejection of the player mind you, but for his work in general and many other things charged. Where the umpire in question erred was that he did not throw a half dozen players out of this particular game. He would have been within his rights.

It is every player's right to argue. In fact it does a fellow some good at times to blow off a little steam. You'll find players on every team that are baseline lawyers, with the rules at their finger tips and abuse at their tongue-tips. But offer these grandstand orators an umpire's pad and mask, and nine out of ten will refuse. The tenth probably wouldn't recognize a strike if he saw it.

It is presumed, of course, that the dugout Darrows in their studious perusal of the rules did not overlook those pertaining to the umpire-in-chief in a game. They are printed in the same size type and are enclosed in the same book. It is therefore concluded then that these playing Portias know that an umpire is within his rights to eject a player if he uses abusive language.

And the players themselves know it—or they should. And they also know that it is a poor arbiter who will change his decision to save himself verbal abuse, or to appease the flaming tempers of irate players, who ninety-nine times out of 100 are in error themselves. True the fans love an argument. They love a fight better. But best of all they love hard-fought clean sport.

If an umpire is consistently in error. If his work is such that he draws the continuous wrath of fans and players, he should be reported to the umpire-in-chief of the Association, who will investigate the matter. If the arbiter in question is found wanting in official ability, and if the complaints are found to be justifiable then he will be barred from future activity by the Association executive.

But players should not and cannot institute a diamond court of justice and place the accused on summary trial. They will find that the arbiter's decisions are final, and in cases like this, they will be upheld by the executive.

The underground has it that the Peterborough Marines have snagged the estimable "Smoky" Smith, he of the redoubtable left flipper and who at present gets his mail at Batawa, for the Congress Tournament being held in Toronto, west of here, this week. If the lady with her ear to the ground is correct and if the Petes perchance tangle with the Trenton Flyers, who it is understood have garnered the services of one "Lefty" Garton, then the clash should be strangely reminiscent of that memorable Thornbury-Batawa series of a year ago.

Tonight, Lefty Whiteman's SWACOS take on the St. Louis Kiwanis Juniors at the Alemite Field. Both squads tucked wins under their belts in their last games, and will be out to continue the abbreviated streak. All squads are showing exceptional form these days and fans are urged to get out and support the boys and incidentally help themselves to some neat pastiming on the diamond. Curtain goes up at 6.30.

Questions and Answers Dept.

Divot Digger—"Why are there always 18 holes on a golf course?"

When but a sports pup, the Royal and Ancient Game was played in Bonny Scotland, over roughly constructed holes amid cattle-grazing fields, high-rocks, deep valleys and other rugged terrain.

Being natives of the country of origin of mountain dew, highland cream and other vintages with a smoky tang, the lads became accustomed to playing for a "nip-a-hole."

The hardy Scots, it seems, like those of other races, had varying capacities. Some of the lads were woozy at the tenth hole; others weaved at the fifteenth; yet others saw twin holes at the sixeenth, and the staid mid-agers strode confidently forward at the 24th.

Then an aged Scot found the answer to the question that bothered the kilted brassie-wielders. He evolved a standard for the number of holes on each layout in a very practical manner. Armed with golfing equipment and a decanter of liquor and a small cup (similar to the modern two-finger measure) this anonymous investigator set out to establish par for the course, and at the end of 18 holes he found he could not continue any further, so after naming the last hole "Thirsty" Gulch' he decided that if that was enough for him it would suffice for anyone else, hence the 18-hole layout.

Tonight's fare for softball fans will be served at the Fair Grounds at 6.45 with Frank Sedore's Flashes, hooking up with the Mountain View squad. Both teams are on the warpath for a win, and tonight's battle should be spiced with plenty of diamond action. It's getting near playoff time and every game now is of more than ordinary importance. Tonight's battle should be a thriller.

LIFEBOATS BUSY

DI MAGGIO HURT IN GAME

Another DiMaggio bites the dust! Vince DiMaggio (on ground) suffered a nasty gash on his right knee when Pete Coscarat, second baseman of the San Diego Padres, who had gone up in the air to take Jim McDonnell's high throw, came down on the Seal centrefielder as he slid into second base at San Francisco, Cal. The eldest of the DiMaggios will probably be out of action for two weeks.

Reds Report Destruction Of Secret Nazi Army

Moscow, July 20 (Reuters) — Destruction by the Red army during the war in the Caucasus of a secret Nazi army which was to have swept over the Caucasus against the British Middle East was described today in the Soviet newspaper Izvestia.

This "miniature army" was discovered when the Red army captured German-born ex-member of the French Foreign Legion, said the article which was an extract from a new book by Vitali Zabrutkin, "Caucasian diaries."

He told captors he had been assigned to a special formation called "Z.B.V." (Zur Besondere Verwendung, or special purpose force) which was to cross into Persia as the political and shock nucleus fo a drive against the British forces there.

An entire battalion of the formation consisted of Arabs from Transjordan, Syria and Palestine —all of whom had lived for a long time in Germany, the prisoner said.

Other members were Germans with experience in the French Foreign Legion. They were taught Arabic and studied such countries as Persia, Iraq and India.

Toronto, July 22. (CP)—Montreal police athletes gained a one-point victory over Toronto in the 64th Annual Toronto Police Amateur Athletic Association Field Day at Woodbine race track Saturday. Detroit trailed in this International meet by seven points.

The visiting Montrealers totalled 65 points, but a stout finish by Toronto in the 100-pound Caber toss, lost event on the card, nearly gave victory to the Queen City policemen.

Ian Hume, of Montreal, was high point scorer for the afternoon, totalling 28 points—five firsts and a second. He will receive the Toronto Police Amateur Athletic Association Gold Medal awarded to the Canadian Police Athlete scoring the highest number of points.

Golf's Golden Boy Poised to Grab Rich Links Prize

By. JERRY LISKA

Chicago, July 22. (AP) — Byron Nelson, golf's golden boy —peeved at critics who claimed he cleaned up last year because the top stars were in the armed forces—today was poised to grab the 1946 cash-collecting leadership in the $50,000 all-American tournament at Tam O'Shanter.

Nelson primed for a crack at the $10,500 first prize offered in the all-American by roaring from behind to win the $10,000 Chicago Victory National open yesterday with a five-under-par 279.

The all-American merry-go-round which opens today with three days of qualifying competition for amateur, feminine and professional entries finds Nelson owning more than $19,500 winnings in six major triumphs, while leading money-winner Ben Hogan—who finished far behind in the Chicago victory with a 286 —has some $25,400 for eight victories.

Nelson methodically ripped apart Medinah's puzzling No. 3 course yesterday for a closing 36-hole round of 69-68-137, five underpar, afer starting lackadaisically Friday with a 73 and then perking to a 69 Saturday.

As Nelson pocketed the victory open's $2,000 top money, (war bond value), he complained that he was "really tired", but said as long as he played (he plans to lay off for 1946 after the all-American and a National Professional Golfers' Association defence next month) he would "shoot the works".

"Ole Diz" Butchers King's English; Teachers Object But Fans Love It

St. Louis, July 22 — (AP) — Some Missouri English teachers may not approve of Dizzy Dean's baseball broadcast, but old Diz will stay in there and pitch, if the fans have their way.

The teachers are reported to have complained to the Federal Communications Commission recently that Dean's descriptions of local games played by the Browns and Cardinals were replete with errors of grammar and syntax. This, they said, was having a bad influence on their pupils.

Dizzy, whose microphone technique is as colorful and individualistic as his performances on the diamond a decade ago, mentioned the matter on the air a few nights ago, and scores of letters and telegrams poured into Dean's radio station, WIL, almost without exception taking Dizzy's side and condemning the teachers.

"You and your listeners at least know what you are talking about, which is more than can be said of some teachers" read one message.

Slaughter slud safe into second.

Marion throwed Reiser out at first.

The runners held their respectable bases.

Musial stands confidentially at the plate.

Don't fail to miss tomorrow's game.

Dean's only reply to his critics was: "Maybe I am butcherin' up the English language a little. Well all I gotta say is that when me and my brother and Pa was picking cotton in Arkansas, we didn't have no chance to go to school much. I'm glad that kids are gettin' that chance today."

A hand that you lead "through" is the hand that plays next to the leader. It is the second hand that plays to any trick. It is the hand that plays before the partner of the leader.

Lead through a strength is what you hear many bridge players say. They mean well. Their intentions are good. Many of them will even lay you odds that they are quoting the rule correctly, too.

Strength could be A K Q in a suit. What good could you possibly expect to come from leading through that? Leading through that kind of a holding is like cutting through concrete with a toothpick. Any disadvantage in leading through solid strength will be a long time coming. By the time it does you any good, if ever, the game is over. By then its only good is as a topic of conversation.

The rule is not lead through strength. It is lead through broken strength. If the strength is broken, there could be plenty of gain leading through it. Like through A Q, K J, A 7 4, or even Q J 7 5.

South is declarer and the spades in four hands are like this:

NORTH
♠ K J 7
WEST
♠ 10 5 4
EAST
♠ A Q 8 3 2
SOUTH

After other tricks have been taken, suppose west gets into the lead again. With nothing more desirable, west should lead a spade. It would be through broken strength in the north dummy.

A lead through such broken strength is usually a sensible try. It has a slight chance of creating a loss. But it has much more of a chance of resulting in a gain.

If east has the queen and not the ace, such a lead from west makes it easier for declarer. On the other hand, if east has both the ace and queen, he needs that lead from west.

In any case, the dummy spades would be a tough group for east to lead up to. West had better lead through it.

Lead through broken strength; not strength.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS.

Hollywood, July 20 (AP) — This is Bob "I-Never-Should-Have-Quit-That-Clothing Store" Thomas, telling you how to interview Bob Hope, or—round the Paramount lot in 80 minutes.

The toothpaste peddler is back from his entertainment tour in which United States citizens dropped a clear $250,000 into his pocket. He has sunk this cash and ten some into "My Favorite Brunette," a film which Hope enterprises is making with the assistance of Paramount.

I waited to interrogate Hope while he did a scene for the picture. But an automobile salesman got there first. He was delivering Bob's new car. Next a platoon of gagwriters and hangers-on descended. Hope left the assemblage to look at the new vehicle.

We hopped in the car and spinned around the lot. He parked in front of the makeup building as Bing Crosby came out. "When are you going to trade in your job for one of these," Hope shouted. Before Crosby could answer, he added, "Oh, well, I guess this would be too small for your clan."

Next we shifted three full golf bags from the old car to the new. Hope disappeared into his permanent dressing room. While waitign, I noticed him out in the street again. He had slipped out the back way. "Mister (Caps Mister) Hope—" I started.

"Aha! he aha-ed. "Now that I'm a producer it's mister. Recognition at last! Let's talk on the way back to the set.

We started to, but Bob noticed Dorothy Lamour in her dressing room. They exchanged a few sweet hellos. Next a photographer prevailed on Bob to have his picture taken with the new car. This accomplished artist walked up, seeking an idea for a drawing. Meanwhile, Crosby was trying out the new car.

"Let's talk in here," Bob suggested, heading for a clearly marked sign. We entered. He was cornered at last.

"What did you find out on your trip?" I persisted.

"People are decent," he said. He washed his hands and departed.

Thanks for the memory.

PRIME MINISTER SAILS

Halifax, July 20 — (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King embarked on the liner Georgic last night bound for the Paris Peace conference which he hoped would "be the beginning of a series which will bring about the final peace."

JIM 'GOON' HENRY MEETS HENNING HERE FRI. NIGHT

Those Belleville fans who have been screaming for somebody to come here and "molder" that outrageous Lee Henning may be in a fair way to being satisfied next Friday night. Manager Walter Gerow has succeeded in matching Henning with big Jim "Goon" Henry the Oklahoma Outlaw and they crash head-on in the Arena main bout this week.

Henning won a remarkable two-straight victory over Bockwinkle here last week and in doing so he did not endear himself (to put it very mildly) to the fans present. Leering Lee beat Warren for the first fall with as nice a piece of choking as the old Arena has ever seen. When he tried the same stunt on Bockwinkle for the second fall, Warren became so enraged that he "blew his top". The Bock went after Henning with some of his own medicine but incurred the wrath of the referee and was disqualified, automatically losing the bout.

A former favorite (?), Karl Krippler Davis returns on this card to meet Warren Bockwinkle in the semi-final. Davis is the noted Texas Tornado who stirred things up around Canada on his last visit to such an extent that he had to be banished from the country. Now he is back on promises to wrestle strictly according to the rules but that extreme change may be slightly doubted. Big Karl is tough and case-harnened and it seems unlikely that he has changed into a hero-type.

Pat Flanagan gets another chance at Bunny Dunlop. When they met two weeks ago Dunlop was disquilified but Flanagan wants to pin him this time.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Middleweight champion Tony Zale began tapering off for his title fight with Rocky Graziano of New York in Yankee Stadium Thursday.

The champion brought his intensive workouts to an end yesterday at Pompton Lakes with 4 rounds of sparring, giving him a total of 111 training rounds.

Meanwhile Rocky Graziano broke camp at Greenwood Lake, N.J., and moved over to New York to wind up preparations for the title fight. The New York challenger concluded his heavy workouts yesterday by boxing 4 rounds.

England required only four wickets to run up a 236 total in the first day's play with the Indian touring cricketers in the second test match of the season Saturday at Manchester. The first three English batsmen all scored 50 or more runs.

Washington Senators' one-legged pitcher, Bert Shepard, was released yesterday to Chattanooga, a Southern Association farm club, at his own request so that he could play more regularly. He lost a leg when shot down during a bombing raid over Germany.

Canada's bantamweight boxing champion, Kenny Lindsay, will make the first defence of his title when he tangles with Jackie Turner in a 12-round scrap at Vancouver Aug. 7. Lindsay won the title when he knocked out Toronto's Johnny Gaudes in 1941. Turner, who turned pro only a month ago, has yet to lose a fight.

President T. F. Lockhart of the U. S. Amateur Hockey Association reported at New York yesterday that its three principal leagues played to 1,617,659 patrons last season for an all-time attendance mark.

In a two-man race for the sculling championship of the 72nd National Rowing Regatta at Philadelphia Saturday, Jack Kelly, Jr., won from Art Gallagher by five lengths.

SPORTS FALLACIES

By MARGERY MILLER

Good timing is more important to the golfer than is possession of strength and size.

Living proof of this statement is Beltin' Ben Hogan, who weighs 137 pounds and is 5 feet, 6 inches tall.

Ben hits the ball farther than any but the three top drivers in the game — Sam Snead, Jimmy Thomson, and Chick Harbert. He outhits Byron Nelson, a much heavier and taller man.

Hogan more than compensates for lack of size with his mastery of timing. He is able to hit the ball at the time when his club travels downward at is maximum speed, thus gaining increased distance on his shots.

SEVEN PERSONS INJURED

Pembroke, July 22 — (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Cotnam and their two sons, Woodrow, 22, and Basil, 15, were critically injured and three others escaped with minor injuries yesterday when a truck sideswiped a parked automobile, glanced over to the wrong side of the highway and crashed head-on into the Cotnam's auto.

All are Pembroke district residents.

The accident occurred four miles east of here and Walter Parker, 32, driver of the truck, was later arrested on charges of dangerous driving and driving without a licence.

Montreal, July 22 (CP) — There's a wide-eyed youngster in Montreal today who is sitting on the roof of the world, and with reason. For he's going to be taken into the hearts of Dem Bums from Brooklyn along with other open-irised lads from all corners of the United States and its possessions.

And to the uninitiated, what could be more blissful than to delve in the mystery of the Mad Dodgers from Flatbush and learn their secrets of running bases, of snaring pop flies with their noggins and the other varied accomplishments of the cult?

The lucky youngster (Eds, name to be inserted later) was chosen Saturday at a game between two squads of youthful Montrealers, one French-speaking, the other English-speaking. He will get a trip to Brooklyn— and he'll play against the mighty Bums in the "Brooklyn - Against - the - World" series next month. Now you know why he's wide-eyed.

Happy Thought.

With the way organization is creeping into the baseball set-up, with Bob Murphy brandishing union contracts at the players and the owners meeting him on his own grounds with their promise of new contract revisions, it wouldn't surprise us if the game catches some of the other advancements of the atomic era. In fact, the American League batters might go on a buyers' strike and refuse to accept any more of Bobby Feller's strikeouts. And the turnstiles wouldn't object at all, if Ted the Splinter Williams didn't buy any of their tosses and park them in the stands.

Returning LaFayette's Visit

AMATEUR BASEBALL

(By The Canadian Press)

London Majors, currently pacing the senior intercounty baseball league, collected two wins during the weekend to maintain a half-a-game lead over Stratford Nationals. The second-place Nats won their tilt with Kitchener 7-1.

A Junior team— Galt Terrier Pups—stole the show in the weekend's Ontario Amateur ball games. Trailing Preston 7-0 in the ninth, the Pups unleashed a furious barriage of hits to eke out an 8-7 victory.

The Majors won their afternoon game the hard way, scoring three runs in the 11th for a 6-3 win over Waterloo Tigers. At night they beat Kitchener Panthers 9-2 after overcoming a two run deficit. Coach Jack Couch and Maxie Zink of Kitchener were banished from the game as Stratford handed Kitchener their second loss of the day.

Peterborough remained atop the Lakeshore League by stopping Bowmanville 7-5 and Kirkland Lake beat Porcupine Combines 4-0 to stay out in front in the Temiskaming League.

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, July 22. (AP)—One reason why 1946 baseball is not so hot, according to Frank (Shag) Shaughnessy of Montreal, International League boss (who thinks it isn't) is that most of the players don't know how to hit a curve ball. . . Of course, he might add that lots of pitchers don't know how to throw them, either. . . Shag's point is: "They swing at a curve just like any other pitch and the only time they connect is when one fails to break. In the old days we used to follow the ball and we could hit curves just as well as fast ball." . . . Shag also attributes the Dodgers' downfall to too many rookies. . . "The youngsters—first year players — are liable to let you down," he maintains. "The old timers stand up when the going gets tough." . . . Needless to say, Shaughnessy can be classed as an oldtimer.

Racketeers Go To Court This Week For Tennis Titles

Ottawa, July 22 (CP)—An entry list of 150 players was ready today to start working on eliminations for the 1946 Dominion tennis championships, to be decided at the Rideau Lawn Tennis Club this week.

The club's 13 clay courts will be utilized to run off early round matches in the heavy entry list and officials expected a busy day, beginning at 10:30 a.m. E.D.T., and possibly reaching third-round play by nightfall.

But the weatherman — who smiled with warm cloudless days on the Canadian junior champions last week—threatened to slow matters. He predicted an overcast sky and possible thundershowers.

A select group of 20 players whose past tournament performance showed up well have been favored with advantageous spots in the draws.

Top contenders for the men's singles crown are two former Canadian champions, Ottawa's own Don McDiarmid, Davis Cupper this year who won the championship in 1940, the last time it was held and Morey Lewis of Detroit and California, Dominion titleholder in 1939.

Mrs. Morey (Baba) Lewis, wife of the top-seeded foreign star, heads the women's singles draw. Her leading opponent will be Jean Adele Burritt, Toronto, winner of both Ontario and Eastern Canadian championships this year.

FAITHFUL

BY MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 13

Mashing out her cigaret, Joan said, smiling, "I didn't expect such keen competition of wits. Do you know what I expected?"

"A cheap girl who wanted to marry Mark's money," Iris retorted quickly.

"And instead I find a girl fighting for the man she loves, knowing she can't have him for herself. Iris," she leaned forward in the chair, "you believe in Mark, don't you? You believe in his honesty, sincerity, and good intentions? You believe in his love?"

"I don't think anything could shake my confidence in him."

Joan took her eyes away from Iris's calm believing eyes. Why hadn't Camilla told her what kind of girl Iris was? Camilla had said, "She's a secretary. She shouldn't be difficult to handle. Put on your most elegant manner, Joan, and she'll eat out of your hand." It wasn't as simple as that. Her honesty penetrated superficiality like a sharp knife cutting through thin veneer. Joan felt it was not Iris who was humble but herself.

"And you are so sure that nothing could shake your confidence in him?"

Iris smiled "Now what are you going to tell me?"

"Nothing. I can't tell you."

"Why?"

"I—I haven't the heart."

Iris' eyes were a challenge. "You haven't minded telling me that I'm a nobody and that people of your class wouldn't recognize me. "She lifted her head proudly. "What is it you haven't the heart to tell me?"

"I had saved it for the final thrust. In this battle of words, you've won, Iris. A woman fighting for the security of her sister can't compete with a woman fighting for the man she loves. I respect you and admire you for it. I do—really. But there is something else and—and it's true. I wouldn't be lying to you. It is absolutely true."

"And you refuse?"

"Camilla will have to tell you herself."

"But I won't listen to it," Iris said stubbornly.

"You can't escape it, my dear. If you won't go to her, she'll come to you. She's determined that you shall know."

Iris was smiling. "Know what?"

"That Mark has never had any serious intentions toward you." She got up and held out her hand. "I'm sorry I had to be the one to come. Perhaps some day I'll tell you why I was selected or rather—vounteered. Good-bye."

"I've never learned to be cruel," said Iris. "I could never take away from anyone a precious memory. That is what Camilla wants to do to me."

Irish walked to the porch with her and saw her get into a car driven by another woman. In the light of the street lamp she saw that the other woman was Annette Tracy.

Annette asked, "Well, what happened? fireworks?"

Joan looked ahead. 'A lot happened. Iris Wade is worth any man's fighting for. I hope my daughter is half the woman she is. Are you shocked? I couldn't tell her the message Camilla sent. I should have cried and apologized for delivering it. She makes us both look small, very very small, Annette, with our plots and our schemes."

Iris refused to let the ugly suggestion of Joan's words disturb her more than she was already disturbed. Yet at times it hung over her like a menacing cloud. In the days that followed she plunged into work with the intensity of one who had much to forget, seeing Mary and understanding Mary's endless pursuit of pleasure and people, and meeting Joel downtown for dinner.

From Louis she heard about Mark.

"He's home now," he told her, watching her face, knowing how much she wanted to go to him. "You're punishing yourself Iris."

"And if I should go to him, what would come of it? We'd just love each other more and then he'd turn to Camilla and I to Joel. Do you think she'll still hold him?"

"There's no doubt of that. He's in a ghastly position. When his friends come to see him, they say, Poor Camilla. Such a beautiful girl, too! I wonder what will happen to her now.' Mark is going to be the sportsman and the gentleman the world knows him to be. He'll marry her."

She did not tell him the question that was never out of her mind. "If I should go to Camilla and tell her how foolish such a marriage would be, she'd tell me what she sent Joan to tell me. Mark won't try to save himself. If I try to save him from this marriage, I'll sacrifice my faith in him. Shall I keep my faith and let him marry Camilla? Or shall I lose it and set him free?"

One day at lunch Mary said, "You're going to marry Joel? It's settled?"

Iris' red mouth was firm. "Yes. After all, I can make him happy. If I can do that much good, I'm going to do it. The night of the accident the way seemed awfully clear—the way to Mark. Now it leads straight to Joel." She smiled wanly. "The fog has cleared, I guess. It's useless to make a secret of my engagement any longer. We had to at first because of Mother."

Mary's eyes were kind. "Mark told me once that in order to win you for himself he'd have to make you unfaithful to Joel. Not even Mark could make you unfaithful."

"If Camilla had not gotten in his car that day, I should have been unfaithful to Joel and faithful to myself. A puzzle, isn't it?" She smiled.

"In that case," said Mary, "I can't ignore Joel and longer as your fiance. I have ignored him in inviting you to my parties. Next time, bring him. As a matchmaker I'm not so good, am I? It did my incurably romantic soul good to imagine you and Mark married, honeymooning. Julian and I went to Venice. I'm having a little party tomorrow night and I want you to invite Joel."

"Thank you, Mary."

When she called Joel, he said, "So I'm eligible for Mary North, eh? Why the change of heart? She never invited me before. She always had somebody else she wanted to marry you to. I wasn't good enough."

"Stop feeling inferior," said Iris. "You'll have a lovely time."

"With a woman who has tried her best to make a snob of you?"

"Will you go?"

"Of course I'll go. Am I supposed to meet you somewhere? I'm good enough for Mary North, but I'm not good enough to call for you at your home."

"I want you to call for me at home."

"Has your mother relented, too? This is too much. Did she hear I've been left a million?"

"I'll take care of that with Mother. You're to call for me at home."

Mrs. Wade was setting the table when Iris got home that night. Not stopping to take off her hat or gloves, she walked into the narrow dining room. Selina lifted her eyes.

"I heard from Eve today," said Mrs. Wade, separating the silver. "She's doing beautifully. Her teacher says she'll be a sensation." She shook her severely cut white hair. "I'm very proud of her."

Iris's mouth curved ironically. Had all the events of the past weeks, crowded and important, destroyed her fear of her stepmother? She could remember as a child that Selina's cold gray eyes had seemingly penetrated her and made her body rigid. She remembered hot childish tears at a rebuke and scolding. But fear of Selina belonged in a past that seemed terribly remote now, and Selina, clearly seen, was only an aging woman disappointed in her failure to govern her children's lives and particularly to bend Iris's strong young will her way.

"I'm proud of Tommy, too. He's doing well in his new position in the gasoline company's office. It's given new life to the boy."

"Then I'm glad you're proud of them both because—because what I'm going to tell you won't make you proud of me." She went to the table and put her hands on the white cloth. "I'm going to marry Joel, Mother, and I'd like, until we are married, for him to come here to see me. I don't like meeting him outside."

Mrs. Wade stiffened.

"Very well. I can't do any more. I suppose I'll have to make the best of it. I can say this for you, Iris, you're like your father. He never went back on his word. Is Mark the only man you've been out with since you've been engaged?"

"Yes, the only one."

Selina looked at her searchingly and then went on arranging the table. "I won't ask any questions. You never confided in me. But you're not a happy bride-to-be. Anyone can see that."

When Joel came that night, he took Iris's hands and drew her close to him.

"I've never seen you look lovelier."

"Because you see me only in my business clothes. Come into the living room. It's too early to go."

He looked around the room. "I feel like the prodigal," he said. "Would you mind explaining to me why I'm no longer an outcast? No, you needn't. Since I've been making extra money.."

"No, no, it's not that," said Iris. "You and I are going to be married and we can't hide it from the world."

Joel's resentment toward Mary north was quickly overcome. From the moment they entered the living room, bright with the colors of evening dresses, Mary attached herself to him and never let him experience a dull minute the remainder of the evening.

Iris knew that he was awed at the luxury and beauty that surrounded Mary. Again pity plucked at her heart for him because he had seen so little of beauty. One looked up at Mark; one looked down at Joel and forgave him.

On the way home the cab passed the apartment house where Mark lived. Iris lifted her eyes to the particular room she knew to be his living room. Who was with him now? A part of her, the faithful part, was in this cab with Joel, her fingers locked tightly with his. The other part of her was getting out of the cab, running, hurrying to the room where the light was burning, to stand before him, smiling, and then go to him and give him her lips and her hands.

"Clear sailing ahead for us now," he said.

"Are you sure there are no dark clouds?"

"What do you mean?"

"Nothing. Nothing at all. I want you to know that this money you're making has nothing to do with...."

"Yes, I know."

"You didn't let me finish."

"You mean it has nothing to do with my being permitted to come to the house. Iris, you'd—you'd never back out on me, would you? You'd never..if.."

She touched his face. "Did you say clear sailing? Good night, my dear."

Selina's nodding in the chintz covered chair in Iris's bedroom frightened her when she opened the door and switched on the light. Blinking sleepily, she said, "I waited up to tell you that Camilla Winters called. She wants you to come to see her."

When Selina went out, Iris sat down at her dressing table and looked at herself between the amber lights. Set Mark free of Camilla or break faith with him? Which? But she knew the answer. In the end she knew she would break faith with him to set him free.

Joan Ralston's house was a white structure with green shutters. As Iris walked up the path her mind was divided between her own thoughts and admiration for the pretty house. On a stretch of side lawn a nurse was playing with a curly haired little girl.

When she had called Louis that morning, he'd said, "Don't go. Don't let yourself in for anything like that. She'll humiliate you. Why do you want to go?"

"Because there must be something I can say to her to change her mind."

"A diminutive maid opened the door and led the way to the drawing-room. Joan looked up from a magazine and drew her dark brows together at the sight of the blue shadows beneath Iris's eyes and her mouth that was firm and determined. Why, she looked as though she had not slept for nights!

"Hello, Iris."

"I have come," said Iris simply.

Mme. Sun Yet Sun Favors Coalition Govt. In China

By SPENCER MOOSA

Shanghai, July 22 —(AP)— Madame Sun Yat-Sen, widow of the founder of the Chinese Republic and sister-in-law of its present leader, Chiang Kai-Shek, said today in a rare interview that a desire to promote war between the United States and Russia motivates Kuomingtang (government party) reactionaries seeking to stir up civil war.

Inactive in politics for years, she came out of semi-retirement to urge immediate establishment of a coalition government in the country now headed by her brother-in-law to appeal to the United States to foster such a move by cutting off all military supplies to China.

Madame Sun said that Kuomintang reactionaries were fostering a civil war they can't win "because they hope civil conflict in China will incite war between America and the U.S.S.R. and thus at last crush Chinese Communists."

Address on Potato Culture Heard By Farm Groups

The Hastings County Crop Improvement Association and the Tweed Boys' Potato Club held a joint meeting on the farm of Mr. Tom Kellty, Tweed, last Friday. Due to unfavorable weather conditions, the meeting that was to be a field demonstration on Mr. Kellty's thirty-five acres of potatoes, turned into a house meeting with about thirty district potato enthusiasts in attendance. Mr. H. L. Fair, agricultural representative for Hastings county, acted as chairman. Mr. R. E. Goodin, potato supervisor for the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, was the guest speaker.

Mr. Goodin gave a very interesting and educational address on potato culture, identification of disease and insects and several methods of control. He stated that the potato picture is tending towards specialization, that the average cost of producing an acre of potatoes in 1945 was $127, that in order to get best returns for the outlay it is necessary to have suitable land and potato machinery, time to properly care for the crop as well as a ready market for a high quality product.

Mr. Goodin mentioned the fact that potatoes, being a cool weather crop, required deep planting to insure cool and moist conditions, that a soil of high organic matter or humus and well fertilized would produce the better crop.

Mr. Goodin, when referring to insects, stated that potato beetles are not now considered to be the most harmful insects to potato crops, that flea beetles, leaf hoppers and aphids attacking the foliage at different times were most harmful and that all insects could be controlled by spraying or dusting with DDT at the proper time.

In his summary of diseases, Mr. Goodin said that now is the time to spray for protection against blight. He specifically mentioned bacterial ring rot as being one of the most harmful diseases of the potato crop and that it could be controlled by the exclusive use of disease free seed, crop rotation, seed treatment with one of the recommended dips, and formalin treatment of all cutting utensils, potato bags and machinery.

In conclusion, Mr. Goodin stated that the secret of success in potato growing was high yield of high quality product combined with a uniform market for the producer, that by proper storage, grading and business management combined with co-operative marketing, the above could be realized.

Mr. Wilfred Forestell, president of the Hastings County Crop Improvement Association and Provincial Director, then outlined a few local improvements in potato production and some highlights of production in recent years.

Mr. Fair then thanked the guest speaker for his informative address and turned the meeting over to a discussion of the various production problems confronting the individual growers present.

The meeting was unanimous in expressing its appreciation to Mr. Kellty for making his farm and home available for the meeting.

Livestock Receipts Dwindle at Toronto

Toronto, July 22. (CP)—Early receipts at the Ontario Livestock yards here are about half of average for a Monday and trading is almost at a standstill, despite the fact that retail beef prices rise today, livestock men today reported.

"The wholesale price of beef has been lowered today and the retail price increased, a dealer said, "and this means that the retailers can buy cheaper, sell at a higher price and make a good profit."

Dealers at the yard said that few cattle of good quality have been received. They said that packers generally bought up the best quality cattle during the last two weeks and that there will be little good beef available until the Autumn.

HOGS

Toronto, July 22 (CP)—Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were unchanged at Hull $20.75 delivered, down 20 cents at Brantford $20.20 plus transportation, unsettled at Stratford, in markets reporting early today.

CHARGES DISCRIMINATION IN INCOME TAX

Cornwall, July 22 (CP)—Rev. W. S. Atchison, minister of St. Paul's Church here, said in a sermon last night that income tax regulations discriminated between Roman Catholic clergy and Protestant ministers and that he would refuse to pay income tax until the situation was examined.

"I would like to see this matter go to court to be aired fully," he said.

DROWNED AT L. ST. PETER

Maynooth, July 22 — (CP) — Donald Johnstone, 16, of Leaside was drowned Tuesday while swimming in Lake St. Peter, six miles north of this northern Hastings county village. He had been camping with his father near the lake when the accident occurred.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, July 22 —(AP)— Apathy was the rule today in a mildly irregular stock market.

Scattered issued edged into the plus column at the opening but dealings were sluggish and the direction was indefinite near the four hour with fractional variations predominating.

Canadians on the big board at noon showed strength. Hiram Walker gained 3 1-4 at 139 1-2, Distillers Seagram 1-8 at 28, Dome Mines 1-4 at 22 and International Nickel 1-8 at 37 1-2. Canadian Pacific was off 1-8 at 18 5-8.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, July 22 —(CP)— Cattle were 25 cents higher on cows and other classes were firm at the opening today of the livestock markets. There were no early sales of beeves affected by the recent Prices Board ruling reimposing ceiling prices. Receipts: cattle 739, calves 1143, hogs 482, sheep 1149.

Good quality steers sold up to 13 with medium kinds going up to 12. Common steers were 10 up. Heifers ranged from 7.50-12.50. Good butcher cows were 9.50-10.50, mostly 10-10.25. Apple Crop in Eastern Ontario Expected to be One-Half of Normal

Apple production in the Ontario area east of Toronto will be approximately one-half a normal yield this year, Department of Agriculture, Fruit Division, officials said here today.

A yield of 150,000 barrels is expected, according to present indications, as against some 60,000 barrels grown last year in the same district.

The annual June "drop" a natural function whereby overloaded apple trees thin out their own bearing, was exceptionally heavy this year, especially in the McIntosh variety, fruit inspectors said.

Poor pollination has affected practically every variety this year, and this in conjunction with extremely warm weather has been the main contributing factor to the present indication that the yield will be much lighter than was expected earlier in the season.

Durham County, inspectors said, has the best prospects for a good average yield, while the Ottawa Valley in places has orchards that indicate a better than normal yield. But conditions in other parts of the province are such as to bring the general average down to something below semi-normalcy.

Some late varieties, especially the Northern Spies, have proved a disappointment. The yield will be much lower than was expected due in part to poor blossoming.

In any event, the officials said, there will be "some apples" and even the smaller available amount will be practically infinitely better than that of last year.

MILLARD

ence by a wage board until a wage increase is arrived at and the employer seeks a wage increase," Mr. Millard said.

Mr. Mitchell turned his questioning to price control and the question of how farmers should be protected.

"I could not agree to arbitrary price increases without provision for wage increases," Mr. Millard said. "Price control that doesn't take into consideration wage increases isn't really price control."

Price control in industry had to be based on adequate wages. The same thing applied to farmers. Unless farmers, who in the past had been poor customers, were made good customers industry could not be kept rolling.

Mr. Millard said he agreed with Mr. Mitchell that there was a relation between wages and prices but he could not agree that wage increases in excess of 10 cents-an-hour were inflationary. Labor would accept a board of review. If proper machinery was set up labor would "seriously consider" arbitration by labor instead of strikes to settle disputes.

In the field of labor relations the question of recognition of Union seemed past and he said he hoped the contentious question of Union security was being passed.

He disagreed with suggestions of Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Robinette that in effect the present war labor set-up provided for reviews. The board were bound by established government policy, such as increases, of 10-cents-on-hour.

"We now have two sets of machinery, one dealing with prices and the other with wages and there is no co-ordinating body," he said. "That is part of our difficulty."

Labor could have no confidence in a wage body which had no authority in prices. A body which had complete authority was needed.

Mr. Mitchell denied that any direction had been given war labor boards to restrict increases to 10-cents-an-hour.

"The only evidence we have is that no approval has been given to any wage increase in excess of 10 cents," Mr. Millard said.

Mr. Mitchell said that in the construction industry rates had been approved above 10 cents. Mr. Millard said no application had been made by the Steel Union in its present demand for an increase of 19 1-2 cents because it was felt an application would be useless.

omparative Canada-U. S. Prices

(By the Canadian Press)

ntario food prices are general- ower than those in the United es but the Canadian consumer s approximately the same es for his clothes and more his automobile than the Amer- consumer, a survey of re- sentative retail prices in To- o, Buffalo, New York and roit by The Canadian Press ealed today.

Widest price divergence was nd in barber-shop prices — a ve and a haircut costing 85 s in Toronto would cost two ars in Detroit on a Saturday, 5 through the week. In Buffalo the same treatment would cost $1.50. In New York approximately one dollar.

U.S. Bread, Milk Higher

The Toronto householder pays 10 cents for a loaf of bread and 13 cents for a quart of milk while in the three American cities milk sells at 18 cents quart — 21 cents a quart in New York if delivered—and bread 11-13 cents.

Butter prices range from 43 cents in Toronto to 75-90 cents in New York, 73-80 cents in Buffalo and 74 cents in Detroit.

Car, Coal Prices Lower

The American consumer's main advantage is in automobile prices.

A new four door sedan in the low priced field costs $1,348 in Toronto and approximately $1,200 n the United States. The same model in 1940 sold for $1,050 in Canada and for $750-$875 in the United States.

Canadian hard coal prices are lower than in the United States but the situation is reversed in soft coal prices. Hard coal sells for $15.50 a ton in Toronto, approximately $16 in Buffalo and New York and $17 in Detroit, while soft coal, which sells for $12 a ton in Toronto, sells in the three American cities at prices ranging from $9.50-$10.89 a ton.

Little difference was found in clothing prices although top limits of the price range are higher in the United States. Men's shirts cost two dollars and up in Toronto, and $2.50 up to $18 below the border. Shoes are available at $4.95 and up in Toronto, $4.40 and up in New York, and slightly higher in Detroit and Buffalo. The average woman's dress sells for approximately $18 in Toronto and $20 in New York where prices soar to $125 for some models.

Canned Goods Lower Here

Canned goods are noticeably cheaper in Toronto with canned peas retailing at 13 cents per tin while in New York a tin costs from 15-19 cents, in Detroit 12-17 cents and in Buffalo 17-18 cents. Fresh raspberries — if available —cost 29-35 cents a pint in Toronto and 35-40 cents in the United States.

The Americans cannot escape the higher food prices by eating in restaurants—meals average one dollar in Buffalo and $1.50-$2 in Detroit and New York. In Toronto the average restaurant meal costs 65-80 cents.

Men's Toes Won't Stand Open Shoes

(From the Saturday Evening Post)

We didn't believe it until we had stood in front of the shoe-store show window for fifteen minutes. Nevertheless, after that interval, it was still there; that pair of men's shoes with an open toe.

In spite of a fair reserve of confidence in the common sense and good taste of the American male, we are rudely shaken. After all, when this happened to women's shoes, they said it wouldn't last. They said even a woman would get tired of the great toe as a decorative object, particularly when it was painted mauve and tricked up to look as much like a real toe as those plastic sundaes in store-window refrigerators look like real sundaes. Nevertheless, the great toe is still raising its ugly head thru' the open toes of ladies' shoes. Maybe when we get enough nylons—

Of course you can argue that men are different, less like wax in the hands of a clothes designer with ideas. They have fought off purple evening clothes and yellow suits pretty bravely. But the sports shirt is gaining—we mean the one with the little Rollo collar—and look at the hand-painted tie; if men will pay up to fifty dollars to drape around their necks hand-painted pictures which would be rejected by the exhibiting committee at a summer art colony, you can't put the open-toed shoe entirely out of the running. It's a horrid thought for a summer day: Men wandering about in shoes that are an open challenge to the chiropodist. For our part, we'd rather brush aside the open-toed shoe for men as one of those "new numbers" that were dreamed up to get out from under the O.P.A. price ceiling. Until we see a man actually wearing a pair of these This Little Piggy models, let's forget the whole thing.

Mystery of the Bowler Hat

(The London Times)

"Mystery" is an overworked word, but it has a way of renewing its puissance if it is paired with another word of almost hum-drum unpretentiousness, and it would be difficult not to begin reading a story called "The Mystery of the Bowler Hat."

A correspondent this morning begs that he may be helped to solve just such a mystery. He has come by an ancient bowler that cries out to be dated. It appears to flaunt the common conception of the billycock.

This is no light task, and it would be shamefully easy to bedevil the plain issue by suggesting that the hat must have been made in Paris, where hatters have often indulged in freakish variations on English fashions with a shocking disregard of the unwritten laws which govern design in this country.

Our designers, recognizing that the hat is the very stamp of individuality, have not lightly tampered with it. Englishmen prove by their language that they have a proper sense of the place of the hat in life. Let the Frenchman name his names and the German appeal to the powers of nature, the Englishman will still calmly and reventl invoke his hat. But hardly such a hat as our correspondent so vividly describes.

It is also possible that this strange, this well-nigh incredible object was built to the order of an eccentric who wore it in the rain because he liked to feel the water-spouting refreshingly into his eyes.

Yet none of these facile theories carries the least conviction. There is no evading the obviously vital question, even though the failure to answer it may reflect discredit on the ordinary man's powers of observation.

Can it be said with assurance that the hat is not the relic of some transient fashion which few noticed and nobody remembers?

Yet a study of old volumes of Punch would reveal that the bowler was always in process of change. The transitions were never abrupt, however, and, if noticed at all, were calmly accepted and soon forgotten. Brims broadened and narrowed, curved and flattened, but the "feel" of the thing remained much the same.

The decline of the bowler, unlike that of the gibus, was gentle. Every one was wearing the hat, which, still rather shyly, likes to be known as an Anthony Eden before it was noticed that a revolution had occurred. Such sublime indifference to the details of our hats is proof of the implicit trust we repose in our hatters.

It is not, after all, impossible that we wore in our wild youth a bowler with a downturned rim; but, if ever we did, we have forgotten the date and wait patiently to be enlightened by the learned.

Electrical, Rubber Union Officials Meet in Ottawa

Will Appear Before House Industrial Relations Com.

Hamilton, July 23 (CP) — Representatives of 5,500 electrical and rubber workers left here yesterday to appear before the House of Commons Industrial Relations Committee at Ottawa which has been hearing both sides of the strike at the plant of the Steel Company of Canada here.

The United Electrical Workers Union (C.I.O.) announced that Joseph Bothen, representing 4,000 striking Canadian Westinghouse employees here will join representatives from other striking U.E.W. Locals at Toronto and Welland when he reached Ottawa. Also in Ottawa is Harry Yeomans, of the United Rubber Workers of American (C.I.O.) representing 1,500 striking Firestone Rubber Company employees here.

Picket line activity was slight at all three plants yesterday. A "war of nerves" between a company-estimated 2,700 workers in the steel plant and striking United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) pickets outside went on with the pickets peering through field glasses into the mill.

Yesterday the Steel Company released production figures for the week since the strike started, saying output was 7,490 tons of coke, 4,165 tons of pig iron and 12,532 tons of steel ingots.

Steel union officials said their workers have a strong strike fund behind them and that large contributions have come from sympathizing unions across Canada.

"We can wait as long as the company can," said one union worker.

The steel workers are seeking a minimum of $33.60 for a 40-hour week in Canada's basic steel industry. Production has halted at Algoma Steel Corporation at Sault Ste. Marie and at Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation at Sydney, N.S.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister Daley of Ontario told a U.E.W. delegation at Toronto that a recommendation for appointment of a commission in strikes at five Ontario plants will be sent to the Federal Department of Labor.

The strikes are at Westinghouse here, Electro Metallurgical Company at Welland, Amalgamated Electric in Toronto, Canada Wire and Cable in Leaside and Monarch Battery in Kingston. Some 7,000 workers are involved with the union demanding a 25-cent hourly increase and a 40-hour week.

Albanian Tribunal Sentences Four to Die

Scutari, Albania, July 23 — (Reuters)— An Albanian crimes tribunal has found 21 persons guilty of high treason and subversive activities and sentenced four to death, Albanian press reports said yesterday. The accused were charged with collaborating with the Italians and Germans during the occupation and with having organized an underground movement against the government after the liberation.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, July 23—(CP)—Synopsis at 7.30 a.m.: Frequent showers and thunderstorms occurred in southern Ontario Monday afternoon and evening and in the easternmost states throughout the night. A cool air mass has pushed inland to the central states and prairies with a line of thunder showers preceding it. Otherwise generally clear weather prevailed over most of the continent. Near normal temperatures prevailed over the north eastern continent, but farther south in Kansas and neighboring states maximums climbed to near 100 at many places.

Post-war Public Tighter Fisted With Its Tips

New York, July 23—(AP)—Waiters, bellhops, bootblacks, hack drivers and other New York service workers who rely largely on tips to build up their income say the post-war public is tighter fisted with its handouts.

The war-born spending spree turned up 25-cent gratuities for a job which now gets only a dime.

Officials of hotel and restaurant employees unions said persons who pay more for meals than during the war are taking out their resentment on waiters by tipping less. One union official estimated a 20-per-cent decline in tipping in middle-class restaurants.

Barkeeps who jovially give you a drink "on the house" are merely encouraging this, said a spokesman for the Bartenders' Union. To discourage the free drink practice, the bartenders have been granted wage increases.

In many midtown hotels bellhops lugubriously lamented the passing of the wartime high tip. One characterized today's tippers as a parade of dimes.

At Sardi's theatrical restaurant, however, there's a trend which demonstrates tipping is truly a weird social phenomenon. Summer patrons arriving without hats tip the hatcheck girl liberally anyway.

Labor Candidate Wins By-Election

Bexley, Kent, England, July 23—(Reuters) — Maj. E. Bramall retained the Bexley riding for the Labor government yesterday by defeating his Conservative opponent in a by-election by nearly 2,000 votes.

Maj. Bramall had 19,759 votes and John Lockwood, Conservative, 17,908.

In the general election of last July Mrs. Jennie Adamson, Labor, got 24,686 votes to 12,923 for Mr. Lockwood and 5,750 for W. Smith, Liberal.

The result leaves Labor with 392 seats in the 640-seat House of Commons. Conservatives hold 199, others 47 and two seats won by Labor in the general election — Pontypool and North Battersea, a London riding — are vacant and will be contested later this week.

Head of Stelco Assails Union's Policy Of Coercion and Violation of the Law

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 23 — (CP)—The Commons Industrial Relations Committee, with contradictory viewpoints before it, today continued its study of the steel strike which has affected plants in Sydney, N.S., Hamilton and Sault Ste. Marie.

H. G. Hilton, president of the Steel Co. of Canada, Hamilton, was on the witness stand when the committee adjourned last night. He is expected to be followed by representatives of the Dominion Steel and Coal Corp., Sydney, and Algoma Steel Corp., Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. Hilton's evidence yesterday made it clear that there are wide differences to be breached before a settlement can be reached in the strike now in its second week. He told the committee plainly his company was not prepared to go beyond its present offer of a wage increase of 10 cents-an-hour without new price increases and that he was flatly opposed to granting the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) union security provisions.

C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the union, had previously taken the position that the union was prepared to negotiate a settlement somewhere between its original demand of 19½ cents and 15½ cents. In his evidence he said union security rated in importance with the wage demands.

The union has also been seeking to have the three companies negotiate jointly with the union. Mr. Hilton expressed opposition.

The committee had an invitation yesterday from the Stelco president to visit the plant and seen men still working in the plant behind picket lines. He said the men who were abiding by the law bitterly resented "failure of the government to support them."

The company's formal submission included a number of sharp attacks on the union practices. Mr. Hilton spoke of "a strike against the government" and of the union's "callous disregard for the public at large." He protested at "the policy of coercion and violation of the law" and said there had been a constant campaign to disrupt the good relations between the company and its em-

DEFENCE CLAIMS PAPEN INTERESTED ONLY IN PEACE.

Says He Accepted Ambassador's Posts Only to Work For Settlements

Nuernberg, July 23 (AP)—Defence counsel for Franz Von Papen today described Hitler's best known diplomat as a man interested only in peace, who accepted ambassadorial posts in Austria and Turkey only to work for an amicable settlement of Europe's problems.

Dr. Egon Kubuschok, in concluding his final defence summary, said Hitler recalled Von Papen from Austria before the 1938 Anschluss, because Hitler realized that Von Papen would not follow a stern, radical political course.

Kubuschok said Von Papen hesitated in taking the post of ambassador to Austria in July 1934, and finally accepted only because he alone would be in a position to fulfill this task within the framework of true pacification."

Kubuschok quoted Von Papen as saying he had advised against the anschluss but that Hitler had "committed the madness of issuing the order to march in."

When Von Papen was sent to Ankara as ambassador, Kubuschok said, it was with the clear objective of maintaining a status of peace between Turkey and Italy.

His counsel asserted that Von Papen's intervention between the Turks and Italians prevented the war extending to Turkey and to more distant south-eastern territories.

$800,000 of Goods Smuggled Monthly Into Shanghai

Shanghai, July 23 — (Reuters) — Some 2,000,000,000 Chinese dollars ($800,000) worth of goods are smuggled into Shanghai every month despite strenuous efforts by the customs authorities to put an end to the traffic, it is estimated here.

Heaviest illicit traffic is in goods on the prohibited import list which includes cosmetics, silks and wool.

Hong Kong is one of the biggest leaks in the preventive system, Chinese sources say. Shippers take their cargoes to this port, where, because of insufficient control, it is easily smuggled to the mainland at night. Once the goods reach the Chinese mainland they can be moved into Shanghai, as they no longer rate as imports, but as goods stocked in China.

Corrupt Chinese customs officials are blamed for part of the goods which seeps into the country.

Housing Scarcity at Worst This Fall, Relief Not Felt Before 1947's End, Says Howe

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 23 — (CP).—Canada's housing situation, acute almost throughout the country during the war years, will be at its worst this autumn, and it will be the end of 1947 before relief will begin to be felt, Reconstruction Minister Howe told the Commons yesterday.

In a 20,000-word statement which Progressive Conservative spokesmen termed a confession of failure, Mr. Howe said materials and labor still were behind demand, so much so that a deficit of 150,000 housing units this autumn would swell to a deficit of 180,000 by the spring of 1947.

Some 46,900 dwelling units were built in the 12-month period following VE-day May 8, 1945, but this did little to relieve the situation.

"I anticipate that a critical period will occur in the late fall of 1946, when some of the relief now afforded by the occupation of summer residences will be lacking," said Mr. Howe on introduction of amendments to simplify the provisions of the National Housing Act and make it more effective. The bill was given first reading.

"Already the sponge-like qualities of our urban areas are being taxed to the limit," he said. "Relief can come only from new housing units completed during the year."

60,000 Houses Target

A target of 60,000 houses has been set for the year ending March 31, 1947, at least 80,000 units for the following year, and 10,000 units for each succeeding year.

Donald Fleming (PC — Toronto Eglinton), housing expert for the Progressive Conservative party, said the picture painted by the minister was an "admission of failure" and a "confession of incompetence." He called for the establishment of a continuing House committee which could keep tab on the housing situation and recommend ways of solving the problem.

John Probe (CCF — Regina City), first to speak for his party, urged that co-operative enterprises be treated on the same basis as mortgage companies in the matter of loans for house building. He suggested that the period for loan repayments be extended from 25 to 30 or 40 years and the rate of interest decreased to two per cent.

Before Mr. Howe took the floor, Justice Minister St. Laurent disclosed that law offices of the Crown are studying the final report of the Royal Commission on espionage as it deals with Dr. David Shugar and Miss Agathan Chapman, of Ottawa.

Trade Minister MacKinnon said he expected to be able to make an announcement within the next 48 hours on the proposed long-term wheat contract between Canada and Britain.

A government motion authorizing the House to hold three sittings a day was adopted and becomes effective today.

Kurt Meyer is Hero to Germans, Says Col. Macdonald, Advising Canada Never to Release Him

Windsor, July 23 —(CP)— Lt.-Col. Bruce J. S. Macdonald, prosecutor at the war crimes trial of Kurt Meyer, said yesterday that if Canada isn't prepared to accept responsibility for what goes on in Germany, she should not add to the responsibility of other nations through a blundering policy in handling Meyer, who was sentenced to life imprisonment in Canada.

On his return from Germany, Col. Macdonald had said that Meyer was a potential new fuehrer for the German people and should never be released from prison in Canada. He said in his address yesterday the Financial Post of Toronto had criticized the remark, saying that there are thousands of Kurt Meyers and that Canada should see to it that the conditions which give rise to such leaders in Germany should be corrected.

Replying to the criticism, Col. Macdonald said that in his view there is no other German better qualified to step into Hitler's shoes than the former S. S. commander. Canada had withdrawn its troops from Germany and showed no inclination to try to correct conditions there. Because of that the least Canada could do was to keep Meyer in prison for life.

Great numbers of Germans look on Meyer as a hero. All the Meyer worshippers didn't live in Germany, he added, relating that a young man at a Windsor railway station recognized the prosecutor and said that was the one who "tried our Meyer."

The remark was heard by an army officer. He thought the young man might have been an escaped German prisoner of war and tried to seize him, but the man scrambled up the embankment and disappeared.

"You can well imagine that Meyer is looked upon by Germans everywhere, and especially by the younger ones to whom he is well known, as a great hero. They are not concerned that his troops, with his instruction and blessing and permission, murdered unarmed prisoners. His trial and punishment, no matter how justifiable, in their eyes has merely made him a martyr. I could cite many instances to prove this by direct statement, but involuntary acts are the best.

"One of my officers was temporarily confined to hospital and had a number of loose papers lying on his table, including a small snapshot of Meyer. A German orderly cleaned the room daily without saying a word, until one day he spied the picture of Meyer. The voice, thrilling with hero worship, in which he involuntarily exclaimed 'Ah, Panzer Meyer' spoke volumes."

Part of Duncan, B. C. Built on Land Of Indians, Map Shows

Duncan, B. C., July 23—(CP) —A considerable part of Duncan, hemmed in on the south and west by the Cowichan Indian Reserve, actually belongs to the natives, it was revealed recently with the finding of an ancient map.

The map shows that a considerable portion of the city is actually built on land assigned to the Indians by a Crown Colony government more than 80 years ago.

For some time the city has been negotiating for the purchase of Indian land, and the Native Brotherhood, an Indian organization, presented the map to an amazed land surveyor last week. The Indians claim the land was transferred to white ownership without legal right.

It is not expected that titles will be seriously attacked, but a claim may be made by the Cowichans for compensation.

AIM AT DECISION ON PRINCIPLE OF ATOMIC CONTROL

A-Energy Commission Delegates Gathering In New York To Study U.S. Proposals

By MAX HARRELSON

New York, July 23 — (AP) — Delegates to the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission will begin discussions tomorrow on the key proposal in the United States atomic control plan — creation of an atomic development authority.

Although this proposal already has been discussed both formally and informally, the delegates have now reached the stage where they intend to seek a yes or no decision on the broad question of principle involved.

The discussions will take place in a closed meeting of committee No. 2, which has been set up to make specific recommendations to the atomic commission on questions of control. Other committees are considering problems such as development of atomic energy for peaceful uses and complex legal issues such as the veto.

At the initial meeting of committee No. 2 last Wednesday, it was decided to dispose of the general question of whether to create an atomic development authority before discussing Soviet Russia's proposal for an international convention outlawing the production and use of atomic weapons.

Although at least 10 of the 12 delegates already have expressed approval of the United States plan in principle, some of them expressed belief that the discussions might be prolonged by Russian opposition.

Gromyko to Speak

Soviet delegate Andrei A. Gromyko indicated last week that he would speak tomorrow on the lengthy United States memorandum dealing with the question of relations between the atomic development authority and the organs of the United Nations.

With these issues coming up for debate, the atomic control problem continued to overshadow the security council, which has been enjoying a lull for almost a month since its last debate on Poland's charges that Franco Spain threatened world peace.

Other U. N. developments:

The International Health Conference, called by the U. N. Economy and Social Council, completed a month's work and signed a newly-finished constitution for a world health organization.

Brooke Claxton, Canada's Minister of Health and Welfare and one of the signators of the health constitution, said:

"Canada, from the point of view of population, is a small country, but our interests are world-wide . . . Because of this world-wide interest, we are naturally concerned with world health. My government has pledged to do everything it can to support and help this new organization . . ."

The U. N. announced htat its statistical division would take over the activities and most of the staff of the economic, financial and transit department of the League of Nations Aug. 1.

Record U.S. Crops Corn, Wheat May Bring Whiter Bread, More Beer

By RICHARD P. POWERS

Washington, July 23 — (AP) — Prospective record - smashing crops of corn and wheat raised the possibility today of whiter bread, larger loaves and, perhaps, more beer, once the United States harvests are in.

At the same time the bumper crop outlook put pressure on government officials to decide soon whether to resume buying of grain for famine relief.

An agriculture department official close to policy making told a reporter it is possible there may be some easing of domestic restrictions on consumption of grains if the excellent crops prospects are realized.

Present regulations: prevent flour millers from producing for domestic demand more than 85 per cent of their 1945 output; require extraction of 80 per cent of wheat when flour is ground instead of the normal 72; cut bread loaf weights by 10 per cent, and restrict use of grain in production of alcoholic beverages.

When the Office of Price Administration died June 30, the agriculture department immediately stopped purchasing meat and wheat for foreign relief. Since then, the department has been waiting to see whether — and in what form — O.P.A. would be put back into operation.

In a special report yesterday, the department said the indicated corn crop, based on July 15 prospects, would total 3,487,976,000 bushels. The present record was set in 1944 when 3,228,000,000 bushels were produced.

The wheat crop is expected to hit a new top of 1,132,075,000 bushels compared with a record 1945 output of 1,123,143,000 bushels.

Known Dead 48 With 50 Missing; Search Continuing

Attlee Tells House Outrage Worst Recently in Palestine

Jerusalem, July 23 — (CP) — A police spokesman announced today the detention of 25 Jews in connection with the terroristic bombing yesterday of British headquarters in the King David Hotel which left 98 persons dead or missing.

The known dead total mounted to 48.

Military rescue crews who toiled in the debris of the hotel, the seat of British army headquarters and the secretariat of the Palestine government, reported that 41 bodies had been recovered and 7 others located. Fifty persons were unaccounted for.

The police spokesman said that, although most of the party which planted milk cans of explosives wore Arab dress, all the evidence indicated they were young Jews. Eyewitnesses said the attackers spoke Hebrew. The spokesman said a search was "going on right now in the old city of Jerusalem."

Two Vehicles Abandoned

A truck and a taxi, both stolen, which were abandoned by the attackers were searched for fingerprints and other possible clues.

Workers moved 200 tons of debris under floodlights during the night, and the officer in charge said the job was less than half completed.

Hospitals reported that 50 persons still were undergoing treatment for injuries and that dozens of others had been treated for minor wounds.

In the Jewish slum district of Montefiore all males were removed by troops and police for an identity check.

One Jew dead from bullet wounds and another man who was wounded were found inside the walled old city of Jerusalem this morning.

The Palestine government said the missing included 12 senior British officers of the government secretariat. The names of British victims were being withheld pending notification of their kin.

Palestine civil service workers scheduled a 15-minute memorial of silence at noon today for the workers killed in the blast.

Resentment Rises

Resentment of both Arab and Jewish communities rose noticeably following publication in the Palestine Post of the names of Arabs and Jews who were killed.

"The crazed calculations of men who have broken with their cause have weighted the air with horror," said the Post, which is the voice of official Zionism.

The Jewish agency likewise expressed horror and denounced the "gang of desperadoes" responsible.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Evelyn Barker said in an interview that the bitter part of the incident was that "there was no excuse for it, no reason for it."

"For a long time I have wanted to take over this whole hotel to prevent people you don't know from walking around freely," he said. "This is a terrific loss, not only in lives and property, but in records and documents."

After a night-long recovery

KNOWN DEAD — Page 11

London, July 23. (CP)—Prime Minister Attlee told the House of Commons today that, "of all the outrages in Palestine, many and horrible in the past few months," the blasting of the King David hotel in Jerusalem yesterday was the worst.

Mr. Attlee said his latest figures for "this insane act of terrorism" were 41 dead, 52 missing and 53 injured.

(Dispatches from Jerusalem said 48 were known dead and 50 were unaccounted for.)

The Prime Minister said all available information was to the effect the perpetrators of the crime were Jews.

"As this house knows," Mr. Attlee continued, "His Majesty's government are at this moment in consultation with the government of the United States with a view to arriving at proposals for a just settlement of the Palestine problem, which will be placed before the representatives of both Arabs and Jews.

"His Majesty's government has stated and stated again that they will not be diverted by acts of violence in their search for a just and final solution of this problem."

The bombing appeared to have destroyed virtually all possibility of early implementation of recent proposals for the admission of 100,000 European Jews to Palestine.

A highly-placed source said that consideration of dispatching military reinforcements to Palestine would be a Cabinet matter and that any final decision for sending additional British troops would be on the highest level.

Foreign Office reaction was summed up authoritatively but unofficially in this fashion:

The keystone of British policy, in regard to implementation of the recommendations of the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry, has been peace and public order in Palestine. It was to assure this that Britain embarked late in June on a course of mass arrests and widespread searches for concealed weapons and explosives.

The newest attack, transcending by far any previous anti-British activities, has emphasized that illegal forces intend to continue disorders in Palestine and that public order is more uncertain than ever.

The newest outbreak of violence similarly is regarded by the foreign Office as having strengthened the position of the Arabs, who maintain that their safety is progressively menaced by Jewish immigration This is particularly regretted by the Foreign Office because it reinforces Arabs resistance to any proposals for the disarmament of Moslems in Palestine.

Six Lose Lives As Car Plunges Thru Wooden Rail

Matapedia, Que., July 23—(CP) —Six young persons were killed early today in an automobile accident at the railway-highway bridge here over the Matapedia River.

The accident occurred when the car failed to make a turn over the railway crossing at the Matapedia Bridge, crashed through a wooden guard rail, and plunged 35 feet onto the beach rocks at the meeting of the Restigouche and Matapedia Rivers.

The six victims are believed to have been killed almost instantly.

AMERICAN TOURIST HAS SUITCASE OF CLOTHING STOLEN

Any "good neighbor" feeling which might have been entertained by a certain Clifton Sides, American tourist from Arizona, and Canadian citizens in general, received a rude shock this morning when the above named gentleman discovered that during the night someone had broken into his parked automobile and stolen a suitcase containing $500 worth of clothing and souvenirs picked up on his journey.

Mr. Sides had stayed the night ot a tourist home leaving his car parked near the street. During the night the no-draft ventilator was pried open by some person who then reached in and unlatched the door. Fortunately one other suitcase containing clothes had been taken into the tourist home for the night.

Police officers this morning investigated the theft.

U. S. TOURIST MAKES SENSIBLE SUGGESTION

An American tourist made a pertinent suggestion while pausing in the city this morning. Asking for information regarding a certain highway, he accepted it and smiled, "Wouldn't be a bad idea to have your city put up some signs, informing travellers how to get to these different highways. It works fine in my town."

EXCEPTIONAL STAND OF WHEAT HARVESTED

Although no claim is made for it being a record crop, a fifteen acre field of wheat on the farm of Mr. Roy Tracey, 2nd concession Thurlow township and immediately to the north of the former Universal Moulded Products, is nevertheless considered exceptional for this season.

In cutting the fifteen acres of wheat Mr. Tracey used 50 pounds or six eight-pound balls of twine, and stooked in the field the wheat comes well past the shoulders of the owner. The wheat is very clean and the field is entirely free of weeds of any description.

Variety of the wheat is Dawson Golden Chaff and it is grown on last year's sweet clover and alfalfa sod. The Tracey farm is now owned by the federal government, the farm having been purchased as a site to build veterans' houses.

FIVE APPLICATIONS FOR LIQUOR LICENCES UNDER CONSIDERATION

Judgment was reserved by the Liquor Authority Control Board on Monday afternoon when at a special meeting held in the city hall at Belleville five applications for licences were heard. Judge W. T. Robb presided over the meeting with members William Nugent and J. F. White being present.

The five applications received were from the Canadian Legion, Branch No. 137, Napanee; The Belleville Shrine Club; Rickarton Castle, Picton; Castle Inn, Picton, and Kumawae Inn of Lake St. Peter.

LACK OF MOISTURE AFFECTS OAT YIELD

Hot July sun together with the lack of sufficient rain will result in considerable light oats in the Bay of Quinte district this year, according to the weekly crop report published by the Ontario Department of Agriculture from reports submitted by agricultural representatives.

According to the report some oats which looked very promising three weeks ago have ripened too fast and thus prevented proper filling.

Practically all the fall grain is in stook while around 25 per cent of the spring grain has been cut. Pastures are below the average and the milk flow is falling off.

In Prince Edward county milk cows are also beginning to show the effects of dry pastures and heat. The pea pack is now completed but despite a comparatively short season a large pack was put up. Owing to the inability of canning factories to handle all the green pea crop, many growers have been left with part of their acreage to be harvested as seed.

KINGSTON MAN FINED $50 FOR ASSAULT

Appearing in local Magistrate's court on a charge of assaulting a police officer with intent to resist arrest, Raymond Yearwood, of Kingston, was fined $50 and costs by Magistrate T. Y. Wills on Tuesday morning.

The offence in question took place on the evening of July 13th, when Police Constable William Waring accosted three men drinking behind a Front Street store. The officer directed the three men to come with him to the police station but enroute Yearwood jumped on Waring's shoulders, while the other two men disappeared with a bottle of liquor which had been confiscated by the officer.

With the assistance of officers from the police cruiser, Constable Waring lodged Yearwood in jail, the assault charge following.

Lloyd Hicks Retires From Power Boat Racing After Disposing Of His Speed Boat to H. McFarland, Jr.

The "Miss Rugene," sleek all-mahogany 222 cubic inch Class D speed boat, a contender for the world's championship in her class has been sold to Harvey McFarland, Jr., Picton, her former owner Lloyd Hicks, district superintendent of the Supertest Oil Company here, announced today.

Mr. Hicks, vice chairman of Region 13, American Power Boat Association, and a veteran speed-boat driver and winner, also announced his retirement from active participation in the sport.

McFarland has taken possession of his new speedster and will be ready here for the all-important regatta series to be held in this district within the next few weeks. Mr. Hicks will accompany him on his jaunt around the district circuit that includes Gravenhurst, Barrie, Belleville and Picton and thence to Valleyfield, Quebec.

Named After Daughters

The "Rugene" named after Mr. Hicks' daughters Ruth and Gena, is a veteran of the water speedways and many trophies emblematic of her racing supremacy, gleam in the Hicks' home.

The sleek craft was built entirely by Mr. Hicks and mounts a special power plant. She is of mahogany construction throughout and is the climax of many hours, days and weeks of seemingly unending labor on the part of its builder.

Mrs. Hicks an ardent speedboat enthusiast, and a driver of more than passing ability spent many hours on the "Rugene" when she was in the process of construction. "It's like taking one of the family away," she smiled. "I certainly hate to see her go."

McFarland purchased the "younger sister" of the Rugene, another 222 cubic inch runabout named "Baby Rugene" a few years ago and has won many races and trophies with her.

Twenty-six years of flying spray, the roar of marine engines and the thrill of racing have passed since Mr. Hicks first took up the sport.

Won First Race in 1920.

It was in 1920 that he won his first "speed" race in a two-cycle engine powered boat that attained the magnificent speed of eight miles per hour off Point Traverse.

His next racing craft, the "Miss Melody" defeated that boat owned by the late Ed. Young, well-known Picton lawyer of that time, for the championship of the Bay of Quinte. Following his defeat, Mr. Young donated a magnificent trophy emblematic of the bay championship. Mr. Hicks built a boat for the purpose and promptly won the trophy three years in succession.

His next boat-building venture was a "flop" he says. She was the "Louise" a 210 cubic inch hydroplane that could travel "but couldn't turn in a ten-acre field." Disposing of the "Louise" Mr. Hicks built the Class D racing runabout "Baby Rugene," in 1931.

The "Baby" raced for four seasons and never finished lower than second place. One year she won five firsts and one second at various regattas.

Then came the "Rugene" the last, according to Mr. Hicks, to be built by the Hicks family. "No, siree" he declares, "I'm all through with the racing game. I'm going to get in some hunting. Besides I'm getting too danged old for such things."

Mrs. Hicks slowly closed one eye. "We'll see about that," she smiled.

Special Meeting Discusses Need For Industrial Sites

At a special meeting of the Belleville Industrial Commission Monday evening, the matter of the townships surrounding Belleville passing restricted building by-laws and thereby allowing industries of a certain value wishing to locate in the vicinity of Belleville to choose suitable sites, was discussed with the members of the Sidney township council.

Lorne McDougall pointed out that there were limited industrial sites available within the city limits and so the Commission would have to seek sites in the surrounding townships. He mentioned the fact that a large industrial concern was very anxious to erect a large factory employing 500 people in Sidney township. "All their requirements have been met," he said, "except that there are some very undesirable buildings adjoining the proposed site. If those buildings cannot be removed, this industry will not locate here."

Reeve Sam Nicholson of Sidney township told the meeting that the township would not hold up industry. "We, in the township of Sidney, wish to co-operate in every possible way with the city of Belleville," he said.

Mayor Frank Follwell mentioned that when the city planner made his survey, it would include all territory with a radius of three miles of Belleville. "We'd like to have a representative from each of the surrounding townships on the planning commission" said the Mayor.

Chairman Robert A. Pringle told the township council members that he would have the city solicitor investigate and advise the township council of the necessary legal steps for the restricted building area before their next meeting on August 5th.

Present were R. A. Pringle, Harry Rollins, Lorne McDougall, E. E. Follwell O. E. Butler, Mayor Frank Follwell, J. B. Badgley, S. M. Nicholson, Lee E. Grills and Fred H. Campbell.

Free Press One of Basic Foundations Of Democratic World Rotarians Told

Sports Editor G. H. Carver Says Free People Must Guard Against Restrictions to Speak Freely

A free press, unfettered by restrictions of governmental or private interests, is one of the basic foundations of a democratic world, Rotarian George H. Carver, sports editor of the Ontario Intelligencer, told the Rotary Club at its annual luncheon on Monday.

Speaking in the first of a series of classification talks Rotarian Carver, in an address based on "The Press," pointed out that without newspapers or with those bound to biased views by certain interests the average citizen labors under a terrific handicap.

He pointed out that the peoples of the Fascist and Nazi ruled countries were an outstanding example of what government-controlled outlets of news could accomplish. Ultimately, he said, it resulted in their defeat and eventual ruin and also that of those who used the press and radio exclusively to further their own ambitious ends.

Last War Incidents a Warning.

Quoting a Canadian Daily Newspapers Association definition of the meaning of the phrase "Freedom of the Press" the speaker stated that the incidents of the last war should provide a warning against any attempts by governments or other interests to restrict the essential freedom of the press. "A free people must stand guard not only against direct censorship but also against insidious encroachments. The only true free press is one which can record the news faithfully and comment on it frankly, without fear of direct or indirect punishment. It must be thorough accurate and unbiased in its reporting—sincere and thoughtful in all its editorials; cautious and bold, cautious until it knows the facts and bold when it is sure of its ground."

Freedom Established in 1735.

The freedom of the press, the right of the printer to freely publish opinion, favorable or derogatory to government was established in New York in 1735, Rotarian Carver said.

"John Peter Zenger, a young German immigrant of that city, established himself as the town's printer about 1726. Now the people of New York, like those of many another community, were partly for the governor's policy and party opponents. William Bradford, King's printer and his newspaper the Gazette supported the governor. In 1733 the opposition group persuaded Zenger to start another paper the Weekly Journal which expressed opposition views. Within a year Zenger was jailed by the governor, then tried for seditious libel. He had no means to defray expenses, but one of the most distinguished lawyers in America, Andrew Hamilton of Philadelphia, came to his defence. In a brilliant argument, Hamilton persuaded the jury that, contrary to the judge's instructions, it should judge the law as well as the facts of the case, and if the statements made by Zenger were true, there could be no libel. The jury found the printer not guilty.

This trial became a landmark in the development of the press as a voice of public opinion. From the time of Zenger, one of the remarkable features of political movements and social progress has been the influence of a public-spirited press.

History of Printing Reviewed.

The speaker reviewed the early history of printing from the time Asiatic tribes made word symbols on stone and blocks which were the first invention of the art of printing from movable types to that of Johann Gutenberg who invented the metal block or letter.

The printing press entered Canada at Halifax in 1713 which resulted in the publication of the first newspaper in Canada the Halifax Gazette.

One of the many loyalist printers to come to Canada during the American Revolution was one named John Howe whose typographic skill was matched by literary ability and business enterprise. He edited and printed the first magazine in Canada and many books and pamphlets on religious controversies which then flourished in Nova Scotia.

But probably his most remarkable contribution to Canadian life and letters, the speaker pointed out, was his son Joseph, who became like his father, a printer, then a statesman, and a Father of Confederation.

London Times Most Influential.

Referring to the London Times as one of the greatest newspapers Rotarian Carver reviewed its stormy career, that of a paper that fought for and achieved freedom of speech and employed this freedom to serve the people of England. Edited with extraordinary courage and integrity, the Times became the most influential newspaper on earth, loved and hated, but respected always. President Lincoln named it as the most powerful thing on earth except perhaps the Mississippi River.

The Times, the speaker said, has pioneered in almost every sphere of journalism. It was the first to give its own expressions of opinion a special page; the first to use the rotary press; to print by steam machinery and to send news by radio.

It fathered the "pony edition" during the Franco-Prussian War when two pages were photographed down to postage stamp size and smuggled into Paris besieged by Bismarck's troops. There they were enlarged and read by magic lantern.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Tom Wills and club appreciation was expressed by Rotarian Gilbert Scott. President Bert Howard was in the chair.

Flying Club Acquires Property North of Fair Grounds For Activities; First Plane to be Delivered Wed.

With the completion of two runaways on their newly acquired flying field, the Belleville Flying Club will commence active flying on Wednesday afternoon following the delivery of their first Tiger Moth plane, it was announced today by Charles Cawker, president of the local club.

Sixty acres immediately to the north and west of the Belleville Agricultural Park have been secured by the club for a flying field and during the past few days a power scraper was engaged to clear off the runways. The Tiger Moth will be delivered to the club by "Scottie" Cameron, well known civilian flying instructor, who with Charles Cawker, president of the local club and former RCAF pilot, will instruct members in handling the plane.

Second Plane Next Week

The club also expects delivery of a two-place cabin Aeronca "Champion" sometime early next week.

When interviewed this morning President Cawker was highly enthusiastic over the possibilities of the club's newly acquired flying field, claiming that its nearness to the city would be a decided advantage in gaining the interest of local air-minded potential club members. "The field is only a five minutes walk from the bus stop," he stated.

Entry to the flying field will be west on Herchimer Street to Sidney Street from where a road has been opened directly to the flying field. Hangar space will be built in the near future to house and service the planes, it was stated.

First chartered flight for the local club will be from Gravenhurst on Thursday when President Cawker will fly the club's Tiger Moth to the resort centre to fly Malcolm Robb, local lawyer, back to the city following his vacation. Mr. Robb is a member of the local club.

1,000-Foot Runway Ready

One of the two 1,000 feet runways which have been cleared at the new flying field runs in a northwest and southeast direction to full advantage of the prevailing winds in the Belleville district. The second runway crosses the first at approximately right angles.

Direction in which the runways run will serve to bring incoming and outgoing planes over the city thus drawing attention to activities of the flying club. Site of the new landing field shows up well from the air, according to Mr. Cawker who on Monday had the privilege of flying over the field in a private plane out of Mountain View.

Wednesday will be the last race meet, conducted by the Kinsmen Club of Belleville and the Belleville Agricultural Society, of the season and will, no doubt, be patronized by the citizens of the city and the adjacent towns and vicinity.

Considerable amount of the proceeds will go to help the boys and girls and those who can be benefited, by the patronage of citizens at the big horse meet Wednesday.

The entry list is large, both in trotters and pacers and in the running races. Horses from New York State will also be here.

FLASHES EDGE MT. VIEW 6-5 IN 11 INNING GAME

Flashes Come From Behind Three Times and Ronsky Drives in Winning Run in Eleventh

The Flashes edged out Mountain View by a 6-5 score in a close game at the Fair Grounds last night ending in the eleventh inning.

Latremonte, pitching for Mountain View allowed twelve hits, while Young of the Flashes was only hit five times, both pitchers striking out three men each.

In the last half of the first, Flashes scored twice on three hits and Mountain View came back with one run in the second. Then the Flashes tallied another in the third. Come the sixth inning and the Bombers opened up and dropped in three runs to make the score 4-3 in their behalf. But in the last of the ninth, Flashes tied the ball game with Moon crossing the plate.

Williams hit the only home run of the ball game, in the third inning and in the first he socked out a two-bagger.

With quite a bit of arguing with umpire Boyle, Vern Goyer was sent to the bench by Boyle. But it appeared that he was reinstated for in the next inning he appeared in his position on the diamond. The teams:

Umpires: Boyle, Bawden.

Score by innings:

Bombers	010	003	000	01—5	5	3
Flashes	201	000	001	02—6	12	4

LIFE GOES ON IN DESTITUTE GREECE

Six children at the municipal foundlings' home in Athens, Greece, all prematurely born, are examined by Dr. Anastasios Goulios, LEFT, medical consultant to the home, and Mrs. Jeanne-Marie Lothian Small, London, England, representative of the save the children fund, a voluntary society working with UNRRA in Greece. Two babies a day, on the average, are received at the foundlings' home. Most are found upon house doorsteps, some on the steps of the home itself. Due to unsettled economic state of Greece, foster parents are hard to find and the problem of what to do with these children becomes increasingly serious.

Good Weather For Underwater Test at Bikini

By ELTON C. FAY

Aboard the U.S. Mount McKinley, July 23. (AP) — Good weather was forecast today for Thursday (Wednesday, Canadian time when the first atomic bomb ever touched off below water subjects 75 ships to man-made pressures heretofore undreamed of.

As an "intertropical front" moved off 100 miles to the south, carrying with it the clouds that have hung heavily over Bikini, scientists made up a pool and guesses how many of these 75 ships will perish in the lagoon.

Associated Press Science Writer Howard Blakeslee reported from the Appalachian that these guesses were not being given out but one scientist said the shock would be 100 times greater than that from the air blast July 1.

The scientists were divided, Blakeslee added, on how much of the bomb's awesome power will go into water and how much into the air.

The guesses ranged from 50 per cent of the power entering the water to possibly 90 per cent of the total nuclear energy released. If the latter figure proves correct the damage to target ships should be terrific.

Dr. R. A. Sawyer, chief of the Scientific staff, said there probably would be no flash of light visible in daylight from the underwater burst, and no goggles would be needed.

Instead, he continued, a dome of water half a mile wide should rise above the explosion. The dome would be pierced by a water spout going up two or three miles high.

It was disclosed that four men were exposed to radioactivity from two to four times beyond the safety limit in the first test but all are recovering. One was exposed in a plane which drew too near the atomic cloud, another was exposed on the Japanese cruiser Sakawa and two others stayed too long on radioactive ships.

"Thumping Theodore" Continues To Hit

New York, July 23 (AP)—Ted Williams of Boston Red Sox and Johnny Hopp of Boston Braves continued to pound the ball during the last week with the result that Williams took over first place in the American League's batting derby and Hopp increased his pace-setting National League margin 10 points.

Including games on Sunday, Williams had collected 15 hits in 31 trips to the plate during the seven-day span to boost his average 12 points to .365 and replace Washington's Mickey Vernon as the top slugger in the Harridge loop. Vernon dropped to second with .357.

The fast-stepping Hopp banged out 10 safeties in 22 tries to jump his figure to .379, 10 points more than possessed by Stan Musial of St. Louis Cardinals. Musial also was on a batting rampage during the week, rapping out 13 base knocks in 27 times at bat to add nine points to his average and replace Brooklyn's Dixie Walker as runner-up to Hopp. Walker trails Musial's .369 with a .365 percentage, 37 points more than Johnny Mize of New York Giants.

Third place in the American League was held by Dom DiMaggio of the Red Sox with .339. Behind DiMaggio was Hank Edwards, Cleveland, with .326.

Amazing Play Of 2 Handed Tennis Star Excites Fans

By ANDY ROSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 23 (CP)—Those bemoaning the mediocre play of Canadian tennis in recent years can take heart from the performances of leading players at the Canadian junior tennis championships, especially those of Lorne Main of Vancouver.

The amazing all-round court ability and unorthodox play of the 16-year-old Pacific coast prodigy caught the fancy of the galleries as without the loss of a set, he marched to the junior men's singles final, being played here next Friday during the Canadian senior championship.

Few Canadians ever have been able to win tennis tournaments against ranking United States player.. Main is one of them, and, if he continues to develop at anything like his previous rate, by 1950 he might well make possible a strong Canadian bid for the Davis Cup.

He hits both forehand and backhand drives with terrific top-speed and uncanny accuracy, swinging freely with a two-handed grip that would seem awkward to most players. His volleys also are mostly two-fisted strokes, although occasionally he uses an orthodox right hand slap.

If there is any weakness in the amazing youngster's game, it is in his service and overhead smash, on which his coach, Ted Milton, has been concentrating this year.

Veteran tennis observers say that while his stroke equipment is good, Main's strongest point is his ability to think out strategy during a match and analyze an opponent's weakness.

He has another asset too, the knack of watching his opponent's movements while the ball is in flight toward him. At the last moment he eyes the ball again, smacking it to the most embarrassing spot at the other end of the court.

The unorthodox strokes are entirely his idea. He first got his hands on a racket at the age of nine, and unable to swing it with one arm, grasped it firmly with two hands and proceeded to wallop the daylights out of any youngster with the temerity to face him.

Next Friday he hopes to carry off the Canadian junior title in a match with Colin Maass of Westmount, Que., although he only entered the junior age group two weeks ago.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being a little steak under a lot of onions, and ma said to pop, Really, William, I mean really, the woodwerk in this dining room has practically gone back to a state of nature, as far as paintwerk is concerned. Do you realize it's been uncounted ages since we've had any painting done? she said.

That's just about the length of time it's been since a man in moderate circumstances could invite a little group of paniters into the house and think nothing of it, pop said, and ma said, Well yes, I admit things are different and the werld is changing under our very feet. According to the papers we'll be lucky if it doesn't change so radically that we'll wake up some dark morning to find there is not enough left of it to tell the tail, I mean if we're lucky enough to wake up at all. It seems that the atomic bomb is just an innocent drop in the buckit compared to the gassly new weppins all reddy to be released far and wide, she said.

By gollies that's a thought, pop said. It seems silly to sit here nersing our little bank account in the mist of fading varnish and cracking enamel when the whole werks may topple down on our heads at the drop of a rocket bomb. Let's finish up in a berst of splender. Let's have the whole house painted inside and out, he said, and ma said, Now William, there's no use jumping into the fire before you're even in the frying pan. You know very well we cant afford any such extravagance while any such labor conditions prevail, she said.

But my dear the end might come before we even got the bill for the painting job, pop said. What a bargain, he said,,, and ma said, Oh hush, I'll bring the subject up at some more suitable time.

Meening some time when pop isn't feeling so funny.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, July 23 —(AP)— The link between the current sports "boom" era and the "golden age" of the 1920's was just about completed when an Argentine polo team turned up on Long Island . . . The game of polo definitely is associated with big dough, but a lot of plain people became fans when international polo was booming 15 or 20 years ago . . . The Argentines were a symbol of what made the game popular—colorful hard riding Latin characters with Celtic cognomens . . . Of course, they came here mainly to build up their trade—breeding, training and selling polo ponies—but they put on a grand show in doing it . . . The newly-arrived Argentine team, El Trebol, is handicapped at 38 goals, just two below the maximum. Luis and Heriberto Duggan, who have played here before, and 10-goal players Carlos and Julio Menditeguy are so good they've had to split up and play on teams with North Americans . . . A Mexican team is due here in September to get international matches started.

Rent Control.

Memphis Chicks of the Southern Association have a policy when they release or transfer a player of arranging to hold his room for the player who replaces him . . . Under that plan, pitcher Jim Voiselle, brother of the Giants' Bill, had quarters awaiting him when he joined the Chicks . . . The arrangement proved so satisfactory that Jim is marrying the daughter of the owner of the house . . . He got a room, but not bored.

Off for Paris

Canada's contingent of representatives to the Peace Conference at Paris is on its way to this meeting of the greatest importance. The world has heard much of the peace conference following the First World War and its problems and wherein it failed to assure peace that would be lasting. Since the surrender of Germany and Japan in 1945 the world has passed through experiences quite different from those that were experienced before the 1919 conference. Thre was the sense of disillusionment which had been felt long before the Second World War broke out. This sense of disillusionment is natural and makes more than ever earnest those who will attend the coming meetings in Paris. To feeling has been joined regret that there has not recently been the full unity of outlook which guided the Allies in the fight to end Hitlerism and Japanese imperialism. So today there is an intense earnestness for security and peace and there is a profound sense of responsibility of the need of the nations to find the means of an enduring peace.

Canada, whose contributions to war and to peace, to rehabilitation and to every international effort have been worth while and who has been recognized by various peoples in whose sight the Dominion stands on a highly exalted plane, has grown in national stature and in experience of world affairs. She feels a sense of responsibility as a young nation to help seek and find the key to lasting world peace and democracy.

Canada's Prime Minister and the representatives travelling to Paris will be deeply interested in the discussions to open next Monday, when the conference opens. Their presence and interest manifest the Dominion's partnership in the recent struggle for victory and in the present quest for enduring peace.

More and more Canada is swinging into the orbit of the greater nations and her interests are of an international character. For her representatives to be in the presence of the leaders of the United Nations is an honor and a tribute as well as an opportunity to comprehend the fact of the expanding new world which awaits settlement, a necessary outcome from the struggle. By her own natural resources, her self-sacrificing effort for the Allies and her love for freedom this young nation has earned a place with the more powerful states. The present needs demand men of wide experience and sympathy with international problems, which directly affect every state whether large or small.

Red Cross Swimming Program

The Swimming and Water Safety program of the Canadian Red Cross is one of the interests which cannot fail to achieve results of the greatest importance. According to the News Bulletin of the Ontario Division about 75 branches have indicated their interest in this effort. Instructors' schools to qualify Red Cross instructors were held in a number of cities.

The records of loss of life during the summer through the inability of many persons to swim will draw public attention to this saving work which the Canadian Red Cross has undertaken for the training of boys and girls to give them the opportunity to learn to swim and otherwise take care of themselves in water.

There are now 107 Red Cross qualified instructors in Ontario.

After 150 Years

One hundred and fifty years ago, just five generations ago, there died a man whose name will endure as long as man has a heart and a love for the true, the beautiful, the good.

Robert Burns, Scotland's and the world's lyric poet, whose songs will cheer mankind to the end of time, enjoys an ever-increasing vogue. His popularity is not like that of the season's style in dress, it is that of the soul of man. Very few men continue down the ages for the sheer worth and beauty of their thought and their artistry in any field. More than any other master of song he is like Nature herself, governed by the full sweep of the emotions of humanity.

On Sunday in Montreal local Scots attended a service to make their memorial tribute to this interpreter of the human heart. There were also services at Dominion Square.

How few men a century and a half after they have passed will live in men's hearts and minds! Burns has especial appeal, the majesty of his poetry for its musical charm and the intense humanity of the thought and expression and the charm of his personality for there is also the abiding interest in the story of his life.

One of the proudest countries in the world should be Scotland which gave mankind one whose lyrics can be sung in any land and in any tongue. She has given a great gift to the world which the world will not let pass but which it will commemorate year after year as the anniversaries of Burns' birth and death come and go.

Our Fortunate Continent

Yet our circumstance is hardly to be compared in severity with that of Great Britain, judging by letters received from there and by reports of returning visitors. In England the meat ration is the equivalent of two chops a week, the egg ration one every third week. Poultry, game, sausages, kidneys, liver and the like are not rationed but, we are told, are rarely obtainable except by hotels and restaurants. Fish is fairly plentiful but hard to cook without fats. A few oranges are to be had every month or six weeks. Canned goods are seen in the shops but the catch is that they require points. And no relief is in sight. Yet what we have to remember is that, as austere as the food situation is in Great Britain, that country is regarded as a paradise of plenty compared with most of continental Europe. If we can contrast our present food hardships with those in Great Britain and bear in mind that hardships are infinitely worse on the Continent, we may get some idea of the tragic food situation with which millions of people are faced.

More Births

The mystery of the disappearing perambulators has been explained by the Board of Trade.

Prams.—Manufacture is now above 43,000 a month, compared with 36,000 a month pre-war. Yet shops have long waiting lists.

The answer, says the Board of Trade, is that more babies are being born than at any time in the past 20 years.

In 1944 there were 744,000 babies; the 1946 figure will be about 1,000,000.

There are 60 old-established firms and 20 newly licenced firms making prams, says the board.

The German Amnesty

Germany's shattered industry can not absorb the skilled workers. There is less room for men in government, in the export trades and in the other white collar vocations. Common labor is the essential need if the towns are to be rebuilt, and more people must be placed on the land if the occupied area is to achieve the desired maximum of self-help. The amnesty will take the shackles off and permit German manpower to work out a portion of its own salvation. It is an essential step toward peace in Europe, and we can take it that when the American authority decrees that there will be no freedom for major offenders under the denazification laws, it means exactly that.

RESTING

"Go up and rest!" they said to me.
Obedient to them I'll be.
If that's my doctor's fondest wish,
I'll rest while others clean the fish.

The medic tapped me on the chest
And said: "Old man, you need a rest!"
So heedful of his wise advice
I'll snooze while others go for ice.

Wood for the fireplace from the yard!
From such a task as that I'm barred.
My will to labor I must curb.
I'm resting now: Do not disturb!

"Who'll cut the grass?" and I reply,
Yawning, mouth-wide: "Oho not I!
The doctor said it would be best
For me to come up here to rest."

Old Country Letter

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Britain's reconversion to full civilian production still as far from complete, delayed by labor shortages, slowness of plant alterations, lack of machine tools and government control bottlenecks.

Raw materials are in better supply than manpower in most industries although scarcity of coal, timber and structural steel is causing some anxiety.

Unwillingness of pre-war workers to return to their old type of work is providing a long-term problem for some of the country's basic industries.

There seems little, if any, indications that impending nationalization plans for the Labor government have themselves caused any reconversion slowdown. Affected industries, generally accepting public ownership is inevitable, are carrying out development work as quickly as other businesses.

Almost every manufacturing plant needs more skilled workers and a better-balanced working force. Discharges from the armed services have been largely countered by retirement from industry of married women and elderly persons. The industrial labor force is about 1,100,000 smaller than in 1939.

Shortage in Coal Mining

Coal mining, basis of Britain's industrial economy, has 60,000 fewer workers than before the war; cotton spinning and weaving has 105,000 less; iron foundries 30,000 less. Reduced output in these lines indirectly affects a wide range of other industries.

The coal situation is most critical. Government spokesmen have warned that lack of fuel may cause widespread industrial shutdowns next winter unless the miners boost production — and there is no sign yet of any large-scale increase.

There is a general shortage of women workers in the light industries and finishing trades. Automobile production is hampered by a shortage of electrical equipment, blamed by manufacturers on a lack of women employees in Midlands factories.

Industrialists generally are agreed that government controls on production must be relaxed gradually but there is some complaint that official decisions are as hard to get as labor and materials. The amount of clerical work required by government departments is a heavy burden on many industries.

Former Air Station May Become Permanent Army Camp is Rumor

Picton, July 23—That the air station at Picton will become a permanent army camp, is the latest report. Col. W. E. Manhard, who was in Ottawa last week for a meeting at which Dominion construction plans were discussed, stated that reports were current in the capital, that the RCAF would gradually make way for the army to take over the station. Just what unit would be located there is not known.

"I have given up all hope of of being able to secure the buildings, or even part of the airport, as a site for an industrial development," said Col. Manhard.

Earlier Col. Manhard had proposed a model town there with a prefabricated house building industry.

A STRONG PUMP

An adult ordinarily has 28 pounds of blood, and at each pulsation the heart sends 10 pounds through the veins and arteries.

HOUSING

Replying to C. E. Stephenson (PC — Durham), Mr. Howe said that if the current steel strike continues all construction in Canada may be held up because of a shortage of nails. Nails now were in short supply but there was no evidence they were being exported or stock-piled.

480,800 New Houses Needed in Five Years

Mr. Howe said his department estimated that on the basis of official reports Canada needs to build 480,800 housing units during the five years ending March, 1952.

The need for housing is so great that it is desirable to limit industrial projects to those urgently needed from the point of view of employment. A housing program of 50,000 units resulted in employment for a full year of 143,000 men. This figure would be increased by 20 per cent for each additional 10,000 units constructed.

He outlined the shortage of skilled construction workers and said that a continuous flow of trained building mechanics from government sponsored courses is expected by the beginning of next year.

Mr. Howe said the supply situation on building materials has shown "noteworthy" improvement in the first five months of this year and steps have been taken to improve production.

Although the government was prepared to continue to give as much assistance as possible, both financial and physical, "it is necessary for industry itself to increase its capacity to meet the housing needs of the country in the years to come."

Operating of building material industries under "forced draft" would mean the difference between success or failure of the program. Extra costs might be involved in obtaining increased output and, if so, the government was prepared to consider meeting the costs. Where plant expansion was necessary to eliminate material bottlenecks the method used to stimulate expansion of war plants would be made available.

Building Materials Shared

All areas were getting their share of building materials under equitable distribution methods administered by the Prices Board in the same manner as that in which all other scarce supplies were distributed. Quotas were calculated on purchases during the base period and all distribution, whether to large or small towns, was on that basis.

Emergency shelter regulations, under which the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has the power to assist in making quarters available for emergency housing, likely will be continued during 1947. No slum clearance will be undertaken until the situation eases.

During this year, Wartime Housing Limited will have produced something like 11,000 low rental housing units for veterans' occupancy. These houses were of a semi-permanent nature and would have a life of 30 or 40 years.

Loans on Housing

Loans totalling $17,853,520 have been provided in the first half of this year, against $10,338,285 in the corresponding period of last year, under the section of the National Housing Act under which loans are made jointly by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and approved lending institutions to prospective home owners or to builders of houses for sale to occupants.

During the same period loans totalling $3,252,800, compared with $951,000, were made under the section of the Act dealing with joint loans for rental projects such as apartments and duplexes.

Housing Enterprises of Canada, Limited, an institutional holding company operated by life insurance companies, has undertaken construction of 3,443 units across Canada. Another 2,135 have been undertaken under the integrated housing plan, aimed at encouraging private firms to build houses primarily for veterans.

Says Slain Woman Declared She Had Been Threatened

London, July 23 — (CP) — Elizabeth MacLinden, slain former housekeeper for King George of Greece, spent more than one night with a man of whom she was in mortal terror, it was testified today at the formal arraignment of housepainter Robert Boyce on a murder charge.

Boyce's former landlady and a fellow painter, Arthur Stanley, said Boyce and the attractive housekeeper slept in the same room at least once.

Stanley said when he took them tea in bed Miss MacLinden asked if Boyce had a gun.

"I have been threatened that I will be shot," the witness quoted her as saying. Boyce, he said, made no comment but "just had a grin on his face."

Miss MacLinden was found shot to death early in June in a fashionable Belgravia mansion where she was employed.

BRASS SPECIALISTS AND LITTLE TIN DOCTORS

On the bowling green a Scot (that is, an Irishman, one of the Gaelic people of northern Ireland who settled in Scotland in the 5th century and gave it their name, says Webster) just naturally dislikes to be beaten. "Hard lines," I sympathized with one when he missed the last chance to save the game. "Hard lines?" he exclaimed. "Hard lines?" "That's the first time I've heard that in my thirty years in this country"!

I am forever defining, interpreting or explaining words I use in this column, for the benefit of readers unfamiliar with medical or technical language. You might think that by this time people would begin to know my language — but, honestly, folk are terribly dumb — I bet at least half of all readers of this paragraph would goggle at such simple terms as cri and vite, although I have defined them here scores of times.

Take brass specialists and little tin doctors. Both are indispensable terms with specific meaning and you must comprehend precisely what they mean if you pretend to understand what you hear everywhere these days in all about — I mean the numerous proposals, plans or schemes for supplying the starry-eyed American people with good medical service for a fraction of production cost.

It seems that a lot of the plain people (and nobody is plainer in this sense than I am) find it onerous to pay for the brass specialists and the little tin doctors after they have taken care of this month's installments on the car, radio, refrigerator etc. So it is up to Congress, the State or the community to correct the unbearable situation.

A brass specialist is a doctor who competes directly with the general practitioners in the community by bidding for public patronage on the basis of his mere cheek in holding himself out to the public as a specialist. Of the 20,000 specialists in practice at present (among 160,000 physicians in the United States) — well, certainly most of them are that kind of animal. A real specialist in a doctor who limits his practice to his chosen field and depends upon the confidence and respect of his colleagues, who refer patients to him for his advice or call him in consultation when they have difficult or unusual cases where his experience and skill may be useful. Experience, of course, skips all that — he begins practice as a "specialist", without wasting ten or fifteen years in general practice first. What does he need of experience?

The little tin doctors are nurses, practical, trained, registered, Saireygamps, who do not hesitate to diagnose, prescribe for and treat ailments and injuries on their own.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

How's Your Rheumatiz?

Since I began "booping" (as you said) my calcium and vitamin D intake my rheumatism is getting much better — in fact it bothers me now only when it rains.

(Mrs. O. M.)

I had a stiff shoulder after spading and planting a garden. For several weeks I couldn't lift my arm as high as my head or tie an apron in back. Read your column and vitamin D article and started taking some. In about a week I began to get relief and after a month my shoulder was again free from pain and stiffness. The main thing, as I and some friends with the same trouble have found is to keep it up until it does the trick. One must remember, as you said, it is food, not medicine.

(Mrs. A.M.C.)

Answer—Thank you, Ma'ams. Pamphlet "Calcium and Rheumatiz" mailed on request if you provide stamped self addressed envelope.

Wheat to Eat

Many thanks for your fine pamphlet on wheat — it answers all my questions.

(Mrs. A. O.)

Answer—On writing request, if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope, I'll send the pamphlet: "Wheat to Eat" which tells how to use plain wheat in the everyday family dietary, and why.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is it regarded as lucky to find a four-leaved clover?

A four-leaved clover is one that contains four leaflets instead of the normal three. The superstition that the finding of such a leaf will bring good luck is very old. In "Astrologaster" (1620) Sir John Melton wrote: "That if a man, walking in the fields, finds any foure-leaved grasse, he shall in a small while after find a good thing." According to an old English rhyme:

When sitting in the grass we see
A little four-leaved clover,
'Tis luck for thee and luck for me
Or luck for any lover.

And another runs:

An even-leaved ash,
And a four-leaved clover,
You'll see your true love,
'Fore the day is over.

This belief is not limited to English-speaking countries. It exists throughout Europe. "He has found a four-leaved clover" is said proverbially in Germany of a lucky person.

There are many refinements and elaborations of the superstition. In some countries, for instance, many people believe that the four-leaved clover, to be potent as a good luck charm, must be plucked on midsummer's eve, the period near the summer solstice. This fact has led some writers to suppose that the four-leaved clover belief originated with the druids or the ancient sun worshippers, who gathered clover and other "plants of magic power" at the summer solstice.

Plants undoubtedly played an important part in the druidic worship and magic, and since clover leafs with four leaflets were comparatively rare the priests may have attached especial importance to them. One theory is that the superstition arose from the fact that the four-leaved clover somewhat resembles the Christian cross in the arrangement of the leaflets and that therefore the finding of such an emblem endowed the finder with special virtue and the gift of detecting and warding off evil spirits.

But the true origin of the four-leaved clover as a good luck charm has been lost in antiquity and probably is past recovery. Often people ask where the four-leaved clover is mentioned in the Bible and ask for the book and chapter of the following alleged verse: "Lucky is the one that finds a four-leaved clover, but cursed is the finger that plucks it." Needless to say, there is no such verse, and the four-leaved clover, or indeed any kind of clover, is not mentioned in the Bible. Neither is it mentioned or alluded to in Shakespeare.

Million-Dollar Tackle and Bent Pin Enjoying Boom Year in Dominion's Fishing Grounds Survey Reveals

(By The Canadian Press)

From Nova Scotia's Medway river to the salmon streams of the Pacific Coast, hundreds of thousands of anglers, freed from wartime shortages of time and tackle, are combing countless Canadian lakes and rivers for varieties of game fish ranging from trout to tuna, bass to bluefins.

No standard pattern of technique or equipment can be seen as thousands of fishing expeditions give rise to thousands of tall tales—some of them perhaps true. The wealthy tourist with his motor launch and guide, the schoolboy with his bent pin and string can all be bound probing prolific fishing holes.

A survey by the Canadian Press today failed to reveal any estimate of the number of fishermen hunting the finned game with anything from a live minnow to a royal coachman. Provincial fisheries department report an anticipated record number of fishing licences although no figures are available. In some provinces licences issued already this year exceed those issued during all of 1945 and resort owners and guides report the number of anglers has doubled and in some cases tripled last year's figure.

But if fishing figures are not available, fish stories are. Already report of whoppers landed and whoppers not quite landed are rife.

Heavy Catches Reported

Off the Nova Scotia Coast, tuna and swordfish have been seen in increasing numbers and a 600-pound bluefin was landed off Yarmouth. For fresh water anglers, Nova Scotia streams offer salmon, speckled, grey and sea trout.

Sportsmen are flocking to New Brunswick's fabulous salmon pools in record numbers, with the provincial tourist bureau reporting a 50 per cent increase in licences.

Airminded anglers in Quebec are flying to remote lakes in search of pike and maskinonge while along the St. Lawrence and chaleur Bay salmon are answering the lure of artificial flies

Along the St. Lawrence near Cornwall, Fishermen say pickerel record numbers are getting record catches of small mouthed bass from the Rideau Lakes

Near Peterborough, both Rice and Pigeon Lakes have yielded 26 pound muskies, although the musky season does not reach its peak until late in the year In the Kawartha Lakes 11-pound pickerel have been taken with minnows and june bugs and worms Speckled trout, formerly main game fish of northern Ontario, has yielded to bass as the drawing card for anglers with pike and muskies high on the list A 38-pound muskie has been caught in Lake Nipissing and a 22-pound northern pike in Nosbonsing Lake

German brown trout have been literally begging to be caught in the Owen Sound district with a record 6 1-2-pounder going to Joseph Kropin of Owen Sound. Farther south in western Ontario, low creeks and dry weather have resulted in poorer fishing than previous years. Anglers are taking limits in yellow pickerel and bass in Lake Erie and a 22-pound channel cat was hooked at Port Maitland, at the mouth of the Grand River.

Licence issuers in Ontario have been supplied with more than twice the number of licences they received last year but there are no figures on the number of licences sold. But every indication points to a boom year despite difficulties in obtaining camping gear and some types of fishing tackle.

Lake trout topping 30 pounds have been taken in Manitoba with thousands of fishermen flocking to Whiteshell Provincial Park teeming with pickerel, pike, lake trout and bass.

ASKS $1,000,000 FROM JAPS

Ogden, Utah, July 22 (AP) — Mark L. Streeter of Ogden, a prisoner of the Japanese during the entire war, has asked $1,000,000 damages from the Nipponese. Streeter based the claim on loss of construction equipment and wages, and asserted damages to his character and reputation. The former prisoner of war was shipped to Japan and forced to prepare propaganda broadcasts, he charged.

Siam Has Posed Intricate Issue For U.N. Council

New York, July 22. (AP) — Siam has handed the United Nations Security Council an intricate problem in requesting mediation of her historic frontier dispute with French Indo-China.

It involves the unexplored problem of defining sovereignty over areas in three Oriental kingdoms which have been pawns of 19th century imperialism and 20th century Japanese aggression.

The dispute is older than French Dominion over-China which spans more than 80 years of friction and feuding with Siam over the lush Paddylands along the Mekong river.

The French laid claims in 1867 to territories counter-claimed by Siam. In 1907 Siam yielded the disputed territories—under coercion and a French show of force, the Siamese insist—to the hodgepodge of tribes and little kingdoms which France unified to a degree in forming the Indo-China empire.

Minor skirmishes continued intermittently along the Mekong until it was engulfed by the organized warfare creeping in from Japan in 1940-41. Then, after France had surrendered to Germany and with Indo-China prostrate under Japanese control, Siam struck eastward to expand her realm. It was a small-scale and almost unrecorded war but airplanes were used in combat where disputes even now often are settled with crossbows and arrows.

Liberated France now is the only allied power which has not made or maintained peace with Siam. The French have rebuffed Siamese offers to end their "technical state of war", and the French Colonial administration at Saigon has made it clear, the Siamese say, that peace will be made only after the territories are handed back to Laos and Cambodia.

The French, by their helplessness and passive resistance to the march of the Japanese, lost plenty of face in their brown-skinned empire and they have fought a difficult battle in their attempts to regain it.

Siam tentatively decided to appeal to the United Nations last May.

They did not formally ask the Security Council to step in as mediator until mid-July. Outside advisers had counselled that their position would be stronger if they first renounced the disputed lands and then asked for a boundary decision based on historic claims.

In bringing the case to the Council, the Bangkok government agreed to the charter terms providing that a non-member of the U.N. may submit a dispute if it promises in advance to abide by the council's proposals for settlement.

Proposed Treaties Would Strip Italy, Balkans, Finland

New York, July 22. (AP)—The New York Herald Tribune said today in a Paris dispatch that Italy, the Balkans, and Finland would be stripped of every means of waging effective warfare, under terms of proposed peace treaties prepared by the four-power foreign ministers at their recent Paris meeting.

The treaties are to be considered at a 21-power peace conference to open in Paris, July 29.

The dispatch said the following restrictions had been recommended:

Romania—An army of 120,000, not counting 5,000 anti-aircraft troops. A navy limited to 15,000 tons and 5,000 men. An air force of 8,000 men. No bombers.

Hungary—An army of 55,000. An air force of 5,000 men. No bombers.

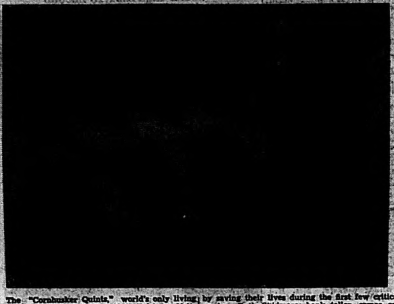
QUINT CALVES PAY THEIR WAY



The "Cornhusker Quints," world's only living quintuplet calves, visit the bank in Fairbury, Neb., to make a deposit in their personal savings account—money they earned at state fair exhibitions. At RIGHT is Dr. L. J. Smith, veterinarian, who became the Dr. Dafoe of animal husbandry by saving their lives during the first few critical weeks. Ruth Skidmore, bank teller, comes out from behind her cage to receive the deposit and meet quints personally. The quints were born last Nov. 20, and now weigh an average of 425 pounds each.

Greiser First Person Executed In Poland on Aggression Charge

Poznan, Poland, July 23 (AP) —Arthur Greiser, who sent thousands of people to Nazi death camps in the days of his ascendancy as Gauleiter of Poznan Province, went to the gallows in prayerful terror Sunday while 15,000 persons, many of whom he had persecuted, watched silently in Citadel Place.

Although his neck was broken, Greiser's body continued to writhe for seven minutes before physicians pronounced him dead.

The 49-year-old Greiser, who, as President of the pre-war Gdansk (Danzig) Senate, collaborated in the Nazi invasion of Poland, was the first person to be executed in Poland on the basic charge of waging aggressive war against the country.

An appeal for clemency, which the official Polish press agency asserted had been supported by the Vatican, was refused by President Bierut.

Vatican City, July 23 (AP) —A Vatican announcement yesterday said Pope Pius had made a last minute appeal to Polish authorities to spare the life of Arthur Greiser, former Nazi Gauleiter in Poznan who was hanged at a public ceremony Sunday.

Previously, Vatican informed sources had denied Polish press agency stories that the Pope had intervened, saying there was "no way" he could intercede. This statement apparently was based on the lack of normal diplomatic relations between the Holy See and the Polish Government.

The Vatican announcement quoted a Moscow broadcast as saying the Pope's intervention has caused "a great stir in Warsaw."

Mrs. E. Elmy, 14 Dunbar St., Belleville, writes: "Every woman likes to get her wash finished as early as possible on washday and I find Super Suds cuts my washing time in half and makes the clothes so clean and white, I never have to boil or scrub them. Super Suds is certainly a swell washday soap."

Thank you, Mrs. Elmy, for your grand letter. You see, Ladies, Super Suds is Concentrated. Super Suds actually gives you far more washing-power, which means sudsier, longer-lasting suds, for easier and quicker washdays. And Super Suds costs no more than ordinary washday soap.

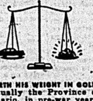
A THRILL FOR THEM
at Ontario's racetracks!

They come in hundreds from the States to watch the running of the King's Plate . . . one of Ontario's greatest attractions for racing enthusiasts. Whatever brings them to Ontario we all have a stake in their return . . . so let's do what we can to see they enjoy every minute of their visit.

WHAT CAN I DO? Each of us can pitch in and help and, in our own interest, we should. Here are a few practical suggestions from an Ontario hotelman, famous for his hospitality:

1. There's lots to attract visitors everywhere in the Province. Find out whatever your own neighbourhood has to offer and become a booster!
2. When you write your friends in the States tell them about some of the places they would enjoy visiting.
3. Try to make any visitor glad he came to Canada . . . and be really friendly.
4. If they ask for information or directions, always take time to answer them fully and graciously.
5. In any business dealings you have with them, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it up, follow the "Golden Rule."

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!



WORTH HIS WEIGHT IN GOLD! Actually the Province of Ontario, in pre-war years, profited to almost the same extent from tourist business as it did from the gold mining industry. It is up to each of us individually to see that this business goes on growing.

WE ALL SHARE! Yes, everyone benefits from the income Ontario's tourist business represents. This diagram, based on figures supplied by the Hotel Association, shows this clearly. Aside from hospitality, it's good business to make our visitors feel at home.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them . . . we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday . . . so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend.

"Let's make them want to come back!"

"This year there's beauty in our budget"

"Look at the difference in Gladys already," said the mother proudly. "She's just brimming with health."

"Yes, this year there's beauty in our budget," said Hugh. "Another six weeks of this will do wonders for you and the youngsters . . . and long week-ends here for me . . . it's swell!"

"But it's not really in the budget, Hugh."

"No. It's over and above the budget, certainly; but it's the budget that enables us to take this cottage without worrying. Once we've set aside our year-round expenses and our life insurance premiums, the rest is surplus. We can be extravagant with it. Until I had enough insurance to take care of the future I always felt a bit guilty about spending in the present. But now my mind is at ease. You and Tom and Gladys are protected. So long as we don't dip into what's needed for that, we don't need to worry any more."

• • • • •

When life insurance is properly taken care of in the family budget, present expenditures can be planned with a carefree mind. Future protection is of first importance. Once that is insured, the greatest source of worry is banished from every home.

Near you, wherever you are, is a neighbour in the life insurance business. Ask him for advice in planning your future. It is good citizenship to own life insurance.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

The younger and the older generation are often at odds

Upon certain matters the younger and the older generation often are at odds. But the feminine contingent are united on one subect, and that is make-up. At the age of fourteen, when a girl graduates from grammar school, she is entitled to the privilege of the lipstick. How this law came to be made, your reporter cannot tell you. But there it is. From fourteen on there is no age limit. Grannie has her cheeks tinted, lips rosy—and a sweet thing she is. No suggestion of getting on the shelf. She goes to town with the rest of the good-lookers.

Make-up for the White Haired Woman

The longing to be attractive was born in mother Eve. Every daughter of the human race has that desire, feels the same way about it. The mother who does not make every effort to retain youthfulness of face and figure not only is doing herself an injustice but also is being unkind to the members of her family who can't bear to see her appear dowdy. The chase toward the beauty rainbow goes on apace. Mother and grandmother can't be left behind. They'd be lonesome with unpowderd noses, lips as is, hair wadded in a style of remote vintage.

Come on Ma, come on Grannie, beat it to the beautery!

Mothers, of course, must be a bit more conservative when laying on the complexion batik than daughters whose young faces are better able to stand the color strain.

Too many white-haired women persist in using flesh tints or natural shades of powder. On the faded or wrinkled skin these tones are too conspicuous, especially if a foundation cosmetic is used. They often impart a lavender cast to the flesh, especially if a dark toned lipstick is applied.

Skins usually darken with the birthdays and, for that reason, a fairly dark powder is best. Rachelle, with a blend of flesh, gives the skin a peachy look. We are referring to the color of the fruit, not using the word as a flattering adjective. This blend imparts a glow of warmth and freshness, lends a vivid note.

Raspberry rouge is another mistake. On the white-haired sister it appears as purplish red. If the skin is sallow, this is distinctly unbecoming.

If the skin is sallow, rouge and lipstick should be of a red that has a golden cast, an orange-red. One can use a clear red if the complexion is toned down with a dark powder. The most common mistake is to use too light a shade of powder, too dark a shade of rouge and lipstick.

Marriage Held In Airplane At 10,000 Feet

Paris, July 23 — (Reuters) — A Hungarian couple — Miss Veronika Gabori and Juhasz Zoltan — were married recently in a French four-engine aircraft 10,000 feet above the Atlantic, it was disclosed Monday.

This first airborne wedding ceremony in French aviation history was performed by the captain of the plane, Jean Mouligne, with passengers acting as witnesses. The plane was flying from Dakar, French West Africa, to Pernambuco, Brazil.

Australia Considers Reducing Voting Age

Canberra (CP)—There is talk here that the Australian voting age may be reduced to 18 after this year's general election. During the war servicemen and women of that age were allowed to vote.

Other reports say there may be a redistribution of Federal seats after a census projected for 1947 and that the number of seats in the Federal House of Representatives, which corresponds to the Canadian Commons, may be increased from 75 to about 90.

Glamour for the Career Girl

Bette Davis Wears the Proper Make-up for an Evening Out

By HELEN FOLLETT

WITH a pretty frock and a knowledge of the art of make-up almost any girl can be glamorous at the evening festivity. If she is a career girl, has to restrain her sartorial longings during business hours, she will especially enjoy the role of fluffy dolly when she fares forth to the party.

She and all of us, should remember that, as far as synthetic aids are concerned, night and day should be sharply divided. Strong sunlight accents artifice. Soft lights soften it.

A woman who feels that she must exercise the utmost restraint during the day can go the limit in the evening. She can carry electric blue eye shadows with flecks of silver in them.

She can substitute dark blue mascara for the brown that she usually applies to her eyelashes. Lipstick can be vivid, powder golden.

Possibly she has found out that light markings with a dark eyebrow pencil at the far corners of her eyes will seem to increase their size, make them appear more brilliant.

The career girl will make every effort to get away from the appearance of daytime efficiency and capability insofar as cosmetic and dress lures woll do it.

Perfume, of course is the final touch. A light spray from the atomizer on chest and arms.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Girl Who Doesn't Know Her Own Mind

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was going steady with a sailor who had been overseas a year and a half.

I met another boy, named Bob, and I grew so fond of him that I broke off with the sailor to go steady with Bob. The sailor died of malaria, and when I received the news I became very upset and walked out on Bob.

Bob gave me another chance, and I walked out on him again. Still he gave me another chance, and I have not walked out on him yet. He has made about six dates with me and he has stood me up on two of them. Do you think he really likes me?

Marie M.

Well, I don't think it would be very surprising, if he felt you were a pretty poor risk to tie up to, do you, Marie? Nor do I think you can blame him for not being punctilious about keeping dates with a girl who thinks nothing of "walking out" on her boy friend whenever she happens to feel in the mood to do so. Why should you expect better treatment from him than he gets from you? I think he's been unusually patient with your monkeyshines.

About all you can do if you want this boy to be interested in you, I think, is to be very scrupulous about keeping every appointment made with him. If that does not show him that you've decided to be a more reliable girl friend, or if he still continues to break dates, then I'm afraid you have only yourself to blame for losing his interest, and I'd be more careful with the next boy.

Her Parents Interfere With Her Plans

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Don't you think a High School graduate has a right to ask her parents to let her go on with her education or work in a big city? If her parents don't want her to without a good reason, don't you think it's just as right to go ahead with the plans of going?

M. L. L.

It would be rather difficult to give a yes or no answer to your questions without more knowledge as to just what your plans are, or what may be the reasons for your parents' opposition.

All things being equal, it certainly seems fair enough that a girl who has finished High School, and wants to obtain further education, should be allowed to do so. But possibly your parents feel they cannot afford this.

If financial difficulties are in the way, then I would think it also fair enough that such a girl should go to work and earn the money herself for her further education, if she has the initiative to do so.

You evidently believe that your parents do not have a good reason for their refusal to permit either of these things. Are you quite certain their reasons are not good? Before you decide to go ahead on your own and act against their wishes, I would give serious consideration to whatever reasons they have. And if you want to write me again and tell me about these reasons, I'll be glad to think the problem over again.

Her Husband Leaves Her Alone Most of the Time

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a woman of 32, and have been married 10 years. I can't remember when I was out with my husband.

He is never home day or night, and he ran around for awhile, too. I'm very nervous, and don't lik the life I'm living. I have one child, and live alone most of the time. But I can't take it much longer, and I don't know what to do. Can you tell me what I should do?

S. S.

It seems as though you should either get yourself outside work, so that you could be away from home yourself during the day and see other people and think about something besides your loneliness, or else have some friend, or some member of your family, come and stay with you for awhile. Is either of these things possible?

Naturally it is harder to work outside the home if you have a child to look after, but perhaps you might make some arrangement for the child's care during the day.

You do not say whether you live in the country, where it might be hard to find and to arrange for your child, or in some town where such things are easier. Certainly I do not think anyone can live a lonely life indefinitely and I do think it is time you took some step to make things happier for yourself. Possibly you might be able to pay your family a visit. If your husband had to get along without you for several weeks, it might wake him up and make him realize what he is doing to you.

N.Z. Planning For Post-War Holidays

Auckland, N.Z. (CP)— New Zealand is preparing for a resumption next year of overseas tourist traffic which before the war was worth about $10,000,000 to the Dominion annually.

Before the war most visitors came from Australia, England and America for the trout and big game fishing. It is likely that the traffic from the United States will be much larger as soon as shipping is available. Large numbers of American servicemen stationed in New Zealand during the war have said they plan to bring their families to see the varied tourist attractions.

There is also likely to be a large increase in European visitors on holiday from India, the Netherlands East Indies and the Far East for New Zealand tourist officials are publicizing the Dominion in those areas as a holiday resort.

The chief drawback is the lack of first class hotels. However, W. E. Parry, minister of tourist and health resorts, has announced that de luxe tourist hotels will be built as soon as New Zeland's housing program is completed.

How to be an Ideal Guest

1. Answer your hostess' invitation at once Don't leave her in doubt as to whether or not you can come. If you can't come, she may wish to invite another guest.

2. Arrive when you are expected to arrive Your hostess must make her plans too.

3. Be as well-groomed as you possibly can be when you arrive. The first impression is important. And when you (or a maid) open your travelling bags, be proud of the condition of your clothes and travelling accessories.

4. Bring sufficient clothes; try not to bring too many; and try especially hard to bring the right kind of clothes (your hostess, in her invitation, should give you helpful hints about this).

5. Bring all necessary equipment for any sport in which you plan to take part The "borrowing guest" is a pest.

6. Be on time for meals and for engagements with your hostess or with other guests.

7. Be amiable, be amiable, be amiable. Be eagerly ready to fall in with your hostess plans, even if you don't particularly enjoy some of the plans she has made. If your hostess asks you what you'd like to do, help her out by making a suggestion or two. And if she offers a choice, she'll be grateful if you will be direct about your preference.

8. Be responsive. The success of a visit depends as much on the guest as on the hostess. It's the guest's responsibility to do his or her best to be entertaining, to make things easy for the hostess, to be pleasant to other guests.

9. Be alert to find out the customary routine of the family, their convenience as to breakfast service, the hours for meals, the usual hour for going to bed.

10. Don't expect to be "entertained" every minute of your visit. Naturally your hostess will want some time to herself and for her duties, and the thoughtful guest "disappears", to rest, to write letters, to read.

11. Don't have "food notions". That's a grim habit!

12. Be "neat and tidy". Keep your bedroom in order. Keep your bathroom or your part of the family bathroom in perfect order too.

13. Respect your hostess' property. Don't monopolize the telephone, either with outgoing or incoming calls. (If you make a long-distance call, find out the charge from the operator, and leave this amount, with a notation of the date and number called, by the telephone.) Don't wipe cleansing cream on the towels. . . tissues are made for this use. Don't be careless with your lighted cigarettes; and don't put a damp glass on the furniture, to leave a ring.

14. Be well groomed, and always appropriately dressed. Don't loll around in a negligee or pajamas or slacks when you should wear a dress. You may think you look "cute". .but your hostess may prefer to have you appropriately dressed.

15. Leave when you are supposed to leave. Even if your hostess urges you to extend your visit, it may be her politeness rather than her real wish or convenience.

16. Take all your belongings with you when you leave. It's a bore and a chore to have to send to careless guests the belongings they have left behind.

17. Write an appreciative and enthusiastic and sprightly bread-and-butter letter to your hostess . . . . .and write it promptly. And if you haven't taken a gift with you when you went a-visiting (or even if you did), you'll probably want to send a thank-you gift when you send your thank-you letter.

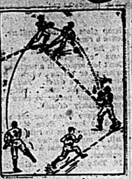
BASEBALL RULES



DOUBLE PLAY

When two players are retired as a result of a hit ball, it is known as a double play. For instance, if there is a runner on first and the batter hits a bounding ball down to the shortstop. The shortstop quickly throws the ball to the second baseman in time to force the runner at second. The second baseman in turn relays the ball down to the first baseman tagging the batter at first. The play going shortstop to second baseman, to first baseman.

The term "doubling the runner off base" also comes under the double play bracket. If there is a runner on first and the batter hits a line-drive to the first baseman, he is able to make a double killing, providing the base runner has taken a lead off the base, by simply touching same.

ORIOLES FLIT TO 3RD SLOT WITH HOMER SPLURGE

(By The Associated Press)

The rise of Baltimore Orioles from a second-division club to 3rd place in the International League has coincided with the marked improvement of the hurling of Ray Post.

Post, a 28-year old right-hander obtained from Cleveland Indians, was counted on in pre-season ratings to be one of the aces of the Oriole mound staff but it wasn't until late June that the big elbower began showing his expected form. Since June 28, Post has racked up six straight victories to bring his record for the season to 10 won and six lost.

Another factor in the Orioles' climb has been the increase of their home-run production. Including games of Sunday, the Orioles have clouted 85 homers with 28 of them smacked during this month.

The chances of Baltimore moving up beyond second place are remote as Montreal Royals are 15 games out in front but should the Orioles finish in the first division, they may be a tough nut to crack in the play-offs. Baltimore is only four percentage points behind the runner-up Syracuse Chiefs.

Last night's scheduled double-header between Rochester and Baltimore and single contests between Toronto and Newark and Buffalo and Jersey City were postponed because of rain. Syracuse and Montreal had played their contest on an earlier date.

"HUCK" REEVES HERO OF SWACO KIWANIS GAME

Husky Catcher Smashes Last Inning Homer With Two Aboard to Give Youngsters 7-5 Victory

"Huck" Reeves, sturdy young catcher of the Kiwanis Juniors developed a Ted Williams complex at the Alemite field last night against the SWACO squad, and became the hero of the piece and of his victory from defeat and send Kiwanis home winners by a 7-5 score.

It looked like curtains for the kids going into the seventh. Bobby Bunton, on the mound, had thrown the ball through second to centrefield in the fifth that sent two SWACOS across the plate to break a three-all tie. That made the score 5-3, and prospects did not look bright for the youngsters.

But they hadn't reckoned with freckle-faced "Huck." The husky youngster who had smashed out a triple in his previous appearance, and died on third, strode to the plate with mates Wright and Bud Green perched on the sacks. V. Green had already scored on brother Bud's hit and the score was 5-4.

"Huck" waited for the one he liked. It came and he smote the apple high and far into deep left centre for a round-tripper. It was one of the things a ball-player dreams about but seldom accomplishes.

SWACOS got an early lead in the second innings when Jack Elliot's single drove in Gordy Booth. They scored two more in the fourth on two hits and a walk and the remaining brace in the fifth when Bunton erred.

Kiwanis scored two in the third on two hits and Titus' error and got another in the fourth when Kelleher doubled Semark, who had singled, home. They went scoreless until the seventh when Reeves' bludgeon won the game.

Bobby Bunton was touched for ten hits struck out six and walked five, while Titus, tall righthander for SWACOS toiled the seven innings and allowed nine safe clouts. He whiffed nine and walked one.

Besides Reeves, Bush, B. Green got two hits, while for SWACOS Fitzpatrick, Gerow and Titus got two each with Rowbotham getting a two-bagger. Genereaux came through with a single.

The fielding was good at times with Genereaux and V. Green coming through with sparkling catches for putouts.

WILLIAMS POINTS OUT HOMERS

Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox grins as he points to the photo diagram which illustrates the lines of flight and destination of his three smashing homers into right field stands in the first game of the double-header at Fenway Park, Boston, Mass., which in all scored eight home runs against the Cleveland Indians.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

There has been a mild controversy among the baseball elite here regarding that three-base hit or home-run made by First Baseman Walt Gerow, Jr., of the SWACO squad against the Latta team last week. Gerow's hit came in the last half of the last inning with one man on and the score tied.

The runner galloped home easily with the winning run and Gerow scampered around the bases to the home plate, with plenty of time in hand, according to reports. The hit was scored as a triple, but there are some who claim the tall first-sacker should have been credited with a home-run and the final score 5-3 instead of 4-3 as was recorded.

Rule 22, Section 2 seems to clear the situation, and according to this corner's interpretation, Gerow should have been credited with the home-run and the score recorded as 5-3. The section states, "If a batman in the last half of the final inning of any game, hits a home run over the fence or into a stand, all runners on bases shall be entitled to score, but to score legally all bases must be touched in order by all runners. The final score of such game shall be the total number of runs made by each club."

There are some, perhaps, who will take issue with the decision to give Gerow the homer, and change the score due to the fact that the Alemite Field is not a closed park, and the ball in this case was not hit out of the park or over the fence. From competent sources, however, we learn that the hit was a solid clout, and would have gone for a four-bagger in any park.

Those roaring hellions of the speedways, the motorcycle racing fraternity, will be here on Monday, August 5 at the Fair Grounds under the aegis of the American Motor Cycle Association and sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, it was stated today by prominent clubmen. About twenty of the cream of American and Canadian riders will participate and it is expected the meet will attract race enthusiasts from a large district.

Much has been written regarding Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians and his now famous defence shift against Thumping Theodore Williams, he of the uncanny batting power who is threatening to erase the famous Babe Ruth from the fans hall of hitting fame.

"You can wager one of the other A. L. pilots will go Lou Boudreau one better and attempt some crazy-quilt defense against Ted Williams," writes Bob Murphy of the Detroit Times. "It will all add to the color and drawing power of the lean lasher from Beantown. But chances are the best defense any team can throw at Williams is one of the oldest in the book—a base on balls."

Manager Ted Lyons of the White Sox believes he has spotted a weakness in that Boudreau shift on Williams on July 14. Viewing pictures of the concentration of Cleveland players on the right side of the field, Lyons casually observed, "Boudreau didn't put anyone in the right field bleachers."

The latest tome on leather-pushing is on the mart and is a colorful book dealing with the exploits, experiences and what not of that greatest fighter of his day, Harry Greb.

Greb was a latter day Ketchell, it relates. He could fight and he could frolic and he did both with equal gusto. He was a great ring champion fit to adorn the company of Fitzsimmons, Ketchell, Walcott, Dempsey for that matter and certainly Gene Tunney whom he fought and beat.

Greb fought furiously with only one eye. He died under an anaesthetic. He was an easy trainer, a primrose pather, a fellow who flouted all the conventions. Pound for pound though he was the greatest fighter of his day, and he never bothered about weights as he measured his man.

He was rough and tough, a fighter of the Fritzie Zivic type though lacking the cruelty of the sadistic Kid McCoy. He would gouge an opponent in the eye, tramp on his feet, butt and bring his elboys into play along an opponent's chin. Referees were constantly after him but he always managed to get in his unorthodox work.

Kid Norfolk jabbed out his eye but Greb never uttered a complaint because he would have dealt out the same thing himself. He went after Norfolk and gave him an unmerciful beating and was quite pleased at the artistic job he did in return.

The last league game before they safari to Toronto on Thursday to take part in the Congress tournament will be played by the Trenton Flyers against Latta at the Fair Grounds tonight. "Moose" Matthews and his air crew are fully confident that they will make a creditable showing at the Congress and hope, when the smoke of battle is cleared, they will be the squad that goes to London for the finals. Latta, nothing daunted, are out to battle the Flyers to the last ditch and pick up some percentage points. Game starts at 6.30.

Grimy-faced "Huck" Reeves, sweat-streaked shirt sticking to his back, was mobbed by his mates of the Kiwanis Juniors baseball last night at the Alemite field when he trotted to the dugout after hitting the jackpot homer with two aboard and pulling a win out of what looked like certain defeat. White teeth flashed through begrimed freckles on a big grin as the husky youngster was pounded by his excited pals.

Previous to his game-winning sock, Reeves had smashed out a triple but died on third as his mates failed to come through with the necessary clout. The husky youngster, is developing into a good receiver and last night his pegs to second were right on the target.

But "Huck" is but part of this fighting gang of youngsters. In all fairness to them it must be said that we fully believe in the old sports adage that a game is not over until the last whistle has blown or the past putout made. Things looked dark for them in the seventh with SWACOS two runs up and but three men to retire. But the kids never quit fighting and battled in their as long as there was a chance to pull out a win. They've got plenty of fighting spirit, something that is a big factor in any sports organization.

Mountain View softballers returned to their earlier form at the Fair Grounds last night and lost a close 6-5 decision to the Flashes after an eleven-inning struggle. Irked by their 16-0 shellacking at the hands of Point Anne the other night, the air crew put on a valiant display and the ball game belonged to anybody until the eleventh when Dame Fortune threw her smile the Flashes way.

SUDDEN STORMS KILL 33

Rome, July 22 (AP)—Sudden violent storms struck the northern Adriatic Coast of Italy yesterday, and at least 33 persons were drowned. Many were swimmers. Sixteen of the dead were aboard a sailing craft which was pounded to pieces on a sandbar fives yards from shore.

Montreal, July 23 (AP)—Newsy Lalonde, whom many sportsmen contend is the greatest athlete this country ever produced, was rather hesitant about selecting an all-time all-star hockey team.

"Hmmm, now that's a tough one. Er, by the way did you see the Canadian open?... Did you see those Vega boys play tennis?...."

Mr. Lalonde, in spite of his 58 years—20 of them in big-league hockey—would much rather talk about almost anything than hockey.

"About that all-star team," we interjected, bringing up a subject that he had tried to forget.

"I think there should be two separate teams," he said, "except that there's no alternate for Bill Cook on any team; he was the greatest right-winger of them all."

He liked three Canadiens for his modern team—Bill Durnan, King Clancy, Butch Bouchard (he skipped Eddie Shore without the blink of an eye), Howie Morenz, Harvey Jackson, and again, Bill Cook.

And the best coach?

He named both Jack Adams and Lester Patrick.

"A good many won't like the teams, but there they are." He threw back his shoulders and fixed us with a steady eye. "Let 'em come," he said.

DAWES BLACK HORSE BREWERY

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Quite familiar is the creed to return your partner's lead. But be sure to make a switch if you gain more by the ditch.

To lead back the suit your partner has led is a good custom. But not when dummy cards advise you to shift to a different suit. Be guided by such new information.

Times are when the return lead in a different suit looks stupid. Before jumping down your partner's throat, however, better study the combinations of cards involved. You may learn something.

NORTH
♣J 7 3

WEST
♦J 8 5 2
♣9 5 2

EAST
♦K 7 4
♣A Q 10 8

SOUTH
♦9 6 3
♣K 6 4

South is declarer and north is dummy. You are east and partner in the west leads diamond deuce. If dummy plays ten or queen, slap your king on it and scoop in that trick.

Now, with what you gander in dummy, a diamond return is futile. No good for your side can possibly come of it. Better look for some return lead in a different suit. Look hard.

In this case come back with your club queen. Yes, the queen. It seems to break all precedent as to which card must be led from such a group. But see what it does for you.

Plainly in sight in dummy is club jack. What excuse could you have for leading the queen? Only because you have the ace and ten. Partner must realize this if he thinks. Thinks that is.

Your queen lead can do your side no harm. If partner has the king, your queen is safe. If south has the king, he will take your queen. But he would have had a trick with his king anyway.

Having announced your club holding, partner will lead a club to you when he can. If a club is led by south or dummy, your ace and ten are sitting pretty over the jack.

Clever plays are seen when you lose your bean.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, July 23 (AP)— So you want to break into the movies, eh? It's a cinch.

First of all, a friend inserts a note in a trade paper that you are testing for a role in the picturization of a comic strip. This surprises both you and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who is going to produce the film. He sends for you.

"Hmmm, a good likeness," he says, "how would you like to test for it tomorrow?" You gulp and agree.

You show up at Universal studio bright and early in the morning. You are ushered onto what is menacingly titled the phantom stage ("Phantom of the Opera" was filmed there.) A man begins daubing your face with pancake makeup.

"Give him some freckles and make his mouth wider," Fairbanks instructs. "First time I ever put on freckles," says the makeup man: "I'm usually taking 'em off."

Your face a bright orange, you confer with the writer, John McClain, who is to provide your lines. He labors and comes fourth with: "Why, Grandma, what big red lips you have!"

Now you wait. And wait. Fairbanks is also making tests for "The Exile" which he is going to make for International. Still you wait.

Finally someone calls your name. You step before the camera and a battery of lights. A dozen men adjust their lights on you and the cameraman tries to get you in focus. Everything is ready. Fairbanks gives some last-minute instructions.

A man places a board in front of your face and then takes it away. A voice says "action!" while your stomach imitates an electric fan, you gaze nonchalantly around the room and then say, "Why, Grandma, what big red lips you have!"

"Cut!" Fairbanks shakes your hand and says "thanks." That's all there is to it. Except in my case, it was done strictly for this story. I think.

The opening yesterday of the $3,500,000 racing plant at Atlantic City, N.J., was accompanied by a threatened strike by the horsemen over a number of differences including payments to stable attendants and the privilege of stabling horses elsewhere than at the new track. It was getting close to post-time when a truce was declared, with the horsemen giving the management until Wednesday to meet their demands.

A first-day crowd of 25,000 saw two horses, New Moon and The Doge, owned by Henry L. Straus, finish one-two in the Inaugural Handicap to return $9 for $2.

Against an array of French - Czech and Yugoslav stars, two American players, Tom Brown and Budge Patty, advanced yesterday to the quarter-finals of the men's singles at the French International tennis championships in Paris. Marcel Bernard of France eliminated Francisco Segura in a spectacular three-set game.

In the continued first innings yesterday at Manchester, England scored 294 for the last six wickets against the touring cricketers from India. The latter had only 160 runs for seven wickets when play was called for the day.

President Al Sutphin of Cleveland Barons in the American Hockey League yesterday announced the purchase of centreman Johnny Holota from Detroit Red Wings in the N.H.L. The transaction included cash and trade of centre Bernie Strongman from the Barons.

'Cyclone' Taylor Would Put Thrill Back into Hockey

Dazzling Star of Other Days Hopes to See Systematic Passing Restored to Game

By WILF GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, July 23 — (CP) — Twenty-three years ago Fred (Cyclone) Taylor hung up his skates and put away a prized hockey stick, soon to be sent to the game's Hall of Fame in Kingston, Ont., to end a brilliant playing career.

Now 61, he is the father of five grown children and is district superintendent of immigration for British Columbia and the Yukon here.

The blazing star of Ottawa's Silver Seven, Renfrew Millionaires and Vancouver Millionaires looks back on his hockey days with the firm conviction that making comparisons between stars of yesterday and today just can't be done. He will say only that in his day physical fitness played a much bigger part than in the modern game with its frequent substitutions.

Malcolm Brice, former sports editor of the old Ottawa Free Press, dubbed him "Cyclone," a nickname that epitomized the dazzling speed and prowess of one of Canada's greatest puck stars. Taylor now has no more than a spectator's interest, but like many a fan he longs for the return of the old systematic passing game replaced in recent years by uncoordinated rushes.

"It can easily be done," he said. "Just make a rule that when both teams are at full strength the attacking team must have at least two men near their own blue line. Only when a man is serving a penalty should the attacking team be allowed to use more than 3 men on a rush."

He also believes the game can benefit by a change in the rule which will permit an attacking player, as long as he doesn't pass the puck, to carry it into the defending team's blue line even if any of his teammates get into the zone, ahead of him.

Would End Stalling

This would give players opportunity for individual plays and eliminate stalling while attacking players in the defending team's blue line dash out to avoid being offside.

Cyclone's career stretched from 1900 to 1923 and in that era—one in which scoring points were not as liberally handed out as now—he obtained a total of more than 500 points. From 1912 to 1919, when he played regularly with Vancouver Millionaires, he led the scoring parade in all but two of those years, amassing a total of 148 goals and 97 assists.

He played on three Stanley Cup teams, but he takes greatest pride in having been selected as the centre of the all-star teeam in every year from 1904 to 1923.

Cyclone would like everyone to forget the story of how he scored a goal skating backwards against his former teammates on the Renfrew Millionaires in the first game played against them after he left them at the end of the 1907-08 season to play for the Silver Seven.

In jest, as he left the Millionaires after helping them win the Stanley Cup, he said to Fred Lake he'd score skating backwards in the first game against the Silver Seven next season. Tommy Gorman, recently-resigned general manager of the Montreal Canadiens, but then an Ottawa newspaperman, overheard the remark and publicized it far and wide.

The remark followed Cyclone wherever he went. It's only incidental to him that he did manage to score the goal. He'd rather not have made the remark, which he emphasizes was made in fun.

Sixteen Left In Quarter Finals For Tennis Titles

By ANDY ROSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Ottawa, July 23 (CP) — The competition stiffening after three rounds of play in men's singles yesterday, 16 survivors meet today to select quarter-finalists in the Canadian tennis championships being staged at Rideau Lawn Tennis Club.

Seeded players, with one exception—eighth-placed George Leclerc of Ottawa, advanced to the fourth round where they meet tougher opposition today.

Don McDiarmid of Ottawa, seeded first among Canadian players, meets Percy Bennett of Montreal, city intermediate champion this year, while the top-ranked foreign star, Hocey Lewis of Huntsville, Alabama, Canadian champion in 1939, will match strokes with Don Hodges of Regina, seventh-rated domestic player. Edgar Lanthier, a candidate for Canada's Davis Cup team this spring, had surprisingly little difficulty in upsetting Leclerc, winning in straight sets, 6-3, 6-0.

Henri Rochon, Montreal's Davis cupper who is seeded third in the tournament, won his first round match only after a hard battle with R. H. (Bob) Winters, Liberal member of the Commons for Lunenburg, N.S., Winters, out of tournament play for several years had a set-point in the second set before dropping by scores of 6-4, 10-8 what was possibly the best match of the day.

None of the other seeded men ran into serious difficulties.

Two minor upsets, featured play in the women's singles, with the seventh and eighth favored netters bowing out.

Beryl Butt, of Ottawa, a newcomer from England, disposed of Francoise Lacasse of Montreal, while Snia Swift, hard-hitting Capital Miss, advanced at the expense of another Montrealer, Doris Ell.

Doubles play begins today, with early round matches scheduled in all divisions—men's, women's and mixed doubles.

Windsor, Ont., July 23—(CP)—Ronald George Sears, 18-year-old Windsor youth charged with two "slasher" murders and three attempted murders, Monday was remanded until July 24 by Magistrate Ivan B. Craig of Chatham who was presiding here.

World's Series Golden Bait Dangles Before Cards, Cubs, Dodgers As Big Games Open

Red Sox "In" If They Can Play .500 Ball Rest of Way; Now or Never for Dodgers as National League Race Tightens

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

World series money will be dangling in front of the Cardinals, Dodgers and Cubs today as they open important series that will chart the course of the National League pennant race.

With Boston Red Sox about 'in' if they can play .500 ball the rest of the way in the American League, the senior circuit still is wide open. Although St. Louis and Brooklyn come east in a tie for first place with identical 53-34 records, the defending champs from Chicago are only 5 lengths back and coming strong.

Inability to beat the lowly New York Giants consistently has been as embarrassing to the Cards as failure to top St. Louis has been to Brooklyn. Mel Ott's gang has trimmed the Red Birds eight out of 13 and the Brooks have won only three of 12 from Eddie Dyer's crew.

St. Louis, fresh from a successful home stand in which they picked up five full games on the faltering Dodgers, opens its next-to-last long road tour in the Polo Grounds. Three dates there, followed by another trio in Boston lead to a July 30-31-Aug. 1 set at Ebbets Field.

Now or Never for 'Bums'

Brooklyn hopes to make the Flatbush faithful forget the dreary road trip on which they dropped eight of 13 by rallying for a solid stand at Ebbets Field.

It's now or never for the Dodgers as the schedule runs in their favor for the next two weeks. If they haven't opened up an appreciable gap on the Cards by that time, they will be in a desperate position.

Chicago, like the Dodgers has been plagued by failure to down St. Louis but has managed to stay in the race by picking on the Giants in 11 of 14 meetings. They are all even with the Dodgers in 14 games and can't afford to drop the series opening in Brooklyn tonight.

It's like old times in the American League with one club far in front and the others scrambling for a piece of change. Only this time it's Boston on top by 11½ games and threatening to make it more.

The Red Sox sluggers open their western invasion in Chicago, one of six night games scheduled, after yesterday's open date in both leagues. The runner-up New York Yankees play at St. Louis with the injured Joe Dimaggio remaining at home. Only an amazing spurt down the final 65 games and a complete Boston collapse could send the Yanks into the series.

AMATEUR BASEBALL

(By The Canadian Press)

Ralph Hammond, Welland Atlas Steels' strike-out ace, fanned 16 for the second time in two starts, as the steelmen trimmed St. Catharines 9-3 in a Niagara District Senior Baseball League game yesterday.

The big southpaw had an easy time of it after the steelmen built up a five-run lead in the second inning. Koslonski, Zemlenko and Bob Milencoff led the attack with three hits apiece.

In another Niagara district contest, Niagara Falls Houcks defeated Hamilton Consumers 14-3, to strengthen their hold on second place. Jiggs Rufrano allowed 3 hits in the seven innings he worked for the Houcks. Errors by the Hamilton team in the seventh, paved the way for a seven-run outburst by the Niagara crew which cinched the game.

In the Senior Intercounty Baseball League games, high scores were the feature. London Majors picked up 18 base hits in trouncing Guelph Maple Leafs 14-5 to retain their half-game margin at the top of the league. Stratford Nationals defeated the Galt Terriers 15-9 in a see-saw battle that saw the lead change hands several times until a six-run splurge in the seventh gave the Nats victory.

Staffordville Red Caps came from behind in the ninth to score four runs and defeat Delhi Tobaccomen by 6 to 5 in an intercounty intermediate contest.

In an Intercounty Junior League game, Hamilton Consumers took a firmer grip on third place when they defeated the fifth St. Thomas team 5-4. A fine display of clutch hitting in the eighth inning when they were down two runs, gave the Consumers a close win.

Odds Now 8-5 On Zale to Win Middle Title

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, July 23 — (AP) — Rocky Graziano, the tough young knockout artist from New York's East Side who will try to clout the middleweight crown off Tony Zale's noggin Thursday night at Yankee Stadium, was near bursting with happiness today just from the thought of being back home.

For five solid weeks they have kept Rocky hidden away up at Greenwood Lake in New Jersey, and only yesterday did they permit him to return to the smoke-clogged gymnasium near Madison Square Garden which he loves.

"Ah, I feel wonderful," exclaimed the wayfarer as he filled his bellows with the aromatic atmosphere which distinguishes the joint. "A couple of workouts here and I'll be ready — get rid of all that stiffness in my shoulders from the cold air up in Jersey."

The temperature must have been around 110 degrees at ringside as Graziano biffed his way happily through three fast rounds with one Frankie Best of Binghampton, N.Y. The sweat poured off Rocky and ran in rivulets down the chins of the spectators.

Meantime Zale, who is not so allergic to the country air, continued to train methodically at his camp at Pompton Lakes, N.J., where Joe Louis got ready to chase Billy Conn.

The champ has gained support steadily since he began banging his sparring partners about. At the start the betting commissioners were offering 13 to 5 against Zale, but glowing reports of his workouts and a flood of Zale money the last week had brought the figures down to 8 to 5 today.

Promoter Mike Jacobs expects more customers to witness the brawl at $30 tops than watched the lamented Louis-Conn bout at a $100 ceiling.

FAITHFUL

CHAPTER 14

"It was I who called last night. Camilla insisted. "Joan lowered her voice and continued, "I've been thinking over what you said. Such a marriage would be disastrous for both Mark and Camilla. I wanted her to marry because Gerald can't support her, as well as our family, and Camilla knows nothing of how to support herself. Their marriage wouldn't last—hers and Mark's. I'll have to make up my mind to share what I have with her." She got up. "I'll take you to her room."

In a cheerful room that led out to a sunny balcony Camilla, wearing a lace negligee, rested on a chaise longue. Her head was swathed in bandages but her eyes that looked at the simplicity of Iris's blue dress and her tall heeled white slippers and white turban were clear and fierce. No melancholy, no despondency in the depths of those brown eyes. They were confident and sure, with the same assurance that had looked at Mark so intimately that night at the bar.

"Come in, Miss Wade."

"Thank you."

"Smoke?"

"No."

And Iris drew up a chair near the chaise longue and sat in a shaft of sunlight.

Shrinking a little under the intense dark eyes beneath the white turban, Camilla said, "Please don't feel sorry for me. It could have been worse. Pity is one thing I can't tolerate." Lighting a cigaret she went on, "I sent Joan to see you. It's odd that when one needs one's sister she invariably lets one down. Joan has a soft heart. She couldn't tell you what you should know."

"Let us wait for a moment," said Iris, "about that."

"Let's not quibble. You'll not only find my heart soft." Camilla's pale mouth curved scornfully. "I'm going to be frank because polite preliminaries are so futile. I'm going to marry Mark. I expect him when he's well enough to come out. I have no intention of discussing my marriage with you. Men have affairs with their social inferiors. Every one knows that. But I want to make very sure that after I am married to Mark his old affairs will not interfere. You know as well as I that he is a very rich man."

Iris said, "You mean I might come back and ask for money. I might make a scandal?"

"It has been done."

"Then she comforted—I shall not do it. Is that all you wanted to tell me?"

"No. The other...."

Iris stood up. "Then let me tell you this. He'll marry you because it's the honorable thing to do. Not because he loves you. He loves me. You feel very superior to me, don't you? So superior you sent for me to come to you that I might be humiliated. Very well, I am a nobody. I work for my living. I have no painted ancestors on the walls of my home. But I am superior to you. Mark loves me. And, nobody that I am, I wouldn't marry any man because he felt sorry for me. I'm too proud for that."

"If he hadn't met you, if you hadn't deliberately put yourself in his way, he would have loved me. Everybody knows about you, Iris. Everybody knows you've been dressed for a rich husband by your mother. You can't deny that."

"I don't. It's true, perfectly true. You can say what you want about me, my life, and my family. Your sister didn't spare me much. But this one thing I want you to know—you can marry Mark but he'll never be yours. You can have his name and his money but he'll always be a stranger to you, an outsider. Because he loves me. You can be married to a man and live with him, but if his heart and soul aren't yours, he isn't yours. You may not think I'm right now. But when you're married to a stranger, married to him for the rest of your life, you'll remember this and hate it. I can't think of anything so—so empty!"

Camilla's clear eyes were lowered and her lashes fluttered. Iris saw her slim white hands grasp the sides of the chaise longue until the whites of the knuckles showed.

When the little maid opened the door and said, "Tea, Miss Winters," Camilla covered her face with her hands and thoughtfully pressed her forehead. The maid, sensing the taut atmosphere of the pretty room, went out quickly.

Iris thought, taking the china cup from Camilla, "They serve you tea and break your heart, these people. I have said all I can say, putting off what I can't bear to hear. My triumph lasted only a minute."

Camilla took a deep breath. Neither she nor Iris was calm now.

"It never occurred to me," said Carmilla." that marriage wouldn't give him to me completely. I love Mark. But to be with him every day, every night, and know his mind was far away... His kindness would kill me.... and he would be kind." She looked up. "Joan tells me you're going to be married. Why did you come if you did not want him for yourself?"

"To set him free."

"From me? You have, I couldn't live with a man who only tolerated me. But if I can't have him, you shall not either. Iris, do you know why I sent for you? To tell you it was Mark who paid that contest money your sister won! She didn't win it fairly. It was all arranged. You have a right to know this! Do you think Mark could have any respect for you? He might love you but he never had any idea of marrying you.."

"Mark—Mark did that! It was he who...."

"It is so simple when you put it together, isn't it? And it was so unfair! Your sister is studying with Mark's money. Isn't it natural for one to suppose that all of you are living on it?"

"Don't—don't say any more."

The china cup fell to the floor and shattered in fine pieces. When the door closed after Iris, it was opened again by the maid.

Tina's eyes were round with astonishment.

Camilla murmured slowly, "Smashed in fine bits. Her faith and my hope."

"Did you see her when she went out?" Camilla asked.

"I was standing in the door but she didn't see me. How could you hurt her like that?"

"Because I was hurt. What am I going to do, Jean?"

"People start over. Girls who've lost their money open tea shops and model clothes. Poor Iris. She was right, wasn't she? You can't marry him now. You've both lost him."

The bewildered little maid knocked and came in again.

"Mr. Christian is downstairs, Madame."

"Tell him to come up, Tina."

"The lady that was here, Madame....your best china...."

When she turned, Mark was standing in the doorway. She had never seen him look handsomer.

Camilla's voice was a t her own. "Hello, Mark. Come and sit by me."

He took the chair that Iris had sat in only a few minutes ago.

Mark's servant admitted her, looked at her curiously, and then discreetly departed, leaving Iris to wait alone. What had Louis said, "Love unfulfilled is a flower that never bloomed?" Now it could never bloom, she thought bitterly, because it had been bruised and crushed. Why had she come? To say to Mark, "You deceived me. The only perfect thing in my life has been made imperfect." And to say good-bye, shutting him away from her forever, yet knowing not even this could shut him out of her thoughts forever.

Momentarily objects in the room became fainter as Iris waited for Mark in his apartment. Through the windows she saw clouds pile together like a dark great bank and from them came a low rumble of thunder. Lightning lighted the sky as the first large drops of rain fell.

In spite of the long time she waited, neither anger nor shame abated. Mixed with contempt for Mark and this humiliating gesture of generosity was contempt for herself and for Selina whose cry so long had been, "You must make a brilliant marriage." No, she had not married a man with money but a man with money had made her cheap and degrading to herself and to the world. Nothing he could have done was as degrading as taking away her respect for herself!

There was little time to think of her mother and Eve and Eve's living and studying with Mark's money. One thing was certain and that was she could not go on living on his money. Iris felt a pang of pity for Camilla, her beauty gone, her future empty of the hope that Mark would share it with her!

Lightning played about the room when she saw Mark come in and look at her with surprise at finding her there. Was it possible to love and hate in the same breath? Iris's love went out to him from her eyes—hurt, stricken eyes. Her mouth was drawn. Her throat ached.

He did not pretend that this was a friendly visit and he hesitated to speak, knowing why she had come. Postpone it, he thought, although he knew she would not rant and shout. Better ranting and shouting than this maddening control of herself!

Not stopping to turn on a light, he went to her and sat by her on the divan. She couldn't despise him enough to forget this room and this divan where for the first time they had looked at each other!

"Iris, I won't apologize for what I did for you. Before we say anything else let me tell you I shall be forever grateful to you for telling Camilla a brutal truth. I've just come from there. I asked her to marry me and she refused. You went to her, knowing that she would tell you something about me to hurt you.."

He touched her arms and she drew away.

"That's a mild way of putting it—hurt. You, of all people, who know my loathing for things unfair, to degrade me to myself and my family and friends.. hurt is such a small word."

"I was trying to make it easier for you. Believe me, I was."

She drew away from him again.

"You were trying to buy me. The working girl who sells herself so that her sister can be famous. What right did you have to do that? I told Louis once I had no weapons of power and money to fight with. I've never had anything but my self-respect. Now you've taken that away from me." She turned and looked at him. "I suppose Tommy owes his new job to you, too."

His eyes met hers. "Yes. I did that for him."

"You did that, too? And I suppose in time you will take the mortgage from our home?" She laughed dryly, shortly. "It's ugly and sordid melodrama. How dare you!"

"I dared because I love you."

"My love has nothing to do with money. It's above it— was above it."

"You still love me, Iris. You wouldn't have set me free if you hadn't."

KNOWN DEAD

work, three men were removed alive today. They were Downing Charles Thompson, a senior British official, an Arab policeman and a member of the secretariat.

The explosion blasted the secretariat and the headquarters of the British army, situated in the hotel building, and damaged nearby structures including the Y.M.C.A. across the street. Windows were shattered throughout Jerusalem.

Fully-armed British Tommies patroled the city, which was placed under a strict curfew immidately after the blast. Bren gun carriers passed through the streets.

The Jewish Agency statement said that the executive of that organization and the National Jewish Council "express their horror at the dastardly crime perpetrated by a gang of desperadoes who attacked government offices in Jerusalem and shed the innocent blood of government officers and other citizens, British, Jewish and Arab."

A British officer said: "You see that wreckage? That's the wreckage of the Jewish state."

A British police officer, wounded in the arm, said: "Three of my buddies are on the slab from this, and God knows why I fought in Germany with those lads."

A British soldier, watching the removal from the wreckage of the body of a British army women's auxiliary, said: "There'll be hell to pay about our girls."

The attack was blamed by responsible Jewish sources on either Ir Irgun Zvai Leumi or the stern gang," underground organizations.

Twenty-five rooms on five floors of the hotel were destroyed by the explosion, which was described as equivalent to that of a 500-pound bomb. The explosion occurred at 12.30 p.m., 15 minutes after a girl had telephoned to the hotel that "your building is about to be bombed."

The young men dressed as Arabs planted the explosive in La Regence, the hotel's night club, while covering a British major and six hotel servants with pistols. Meanwhile, a number of other heavily armed youths exchanged shots with soldiers in the south end of the hotel, containing the secretariat offices.

The youth then fled, some of them apparently wounded. Two persons were arrested a short distance from the hotel.

The Cabinet announced in London last night that it had authorized publication of a White Paper which would show that Jewish leaders were linked with Palestine violence. It was expected that White Paper would be issued soon.

The Colonial Office in London withheld comment on the explosion. Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham Palestine High Commissioner, conferred with the King and was understood to have given him a detailed report on the tense situation.

Vancouver Paper Publishes First Since June 5

Vancouver, July 23 — (CP) — The Vancouver Daily Province published an edition yesterday, the first it has published since June 5 when the newspaper's printers walked out.

There was no disturbance as a light delivery truck pulled out from a lane that cuts through the Daily Province building. There were eight policemen standing shoulder to shoulder across the lane before and after the truck left.

It was a 12-page edition and was printed entirely from linotype-set type.

Several trucks followed the first one without any disturbances. A crowd of 100-odd persons gathered around the lane as the trucks drove out.

Publication followed within a few hours of a deadline set previously by labor spokesmen for a mass demonstration on Victory Square, adjacent to the Daily Province building.

Only a few persons carrying placards marched around the building this morning. The mass demonstration had been announced as a protest against an injunction obtained by the newspaper prohibiting members of the International Typographical Union (AFL) from picketing the building.

The Daily Province in a front page "announcement" said in part: "The Province is issued today with the assistance of union labor. The type was set by union labor in a composing room which is today as it has been in the past a closed shop."

Gives Denial Of Inequality In Taxation

Toronto, July 23 — (CP) — Hugh D. Patterson, inspector of income tax here, denied yesterday that there is inequality of taxation between Protestant ministers and Roman Catholic priests.

He was commenting on the statement made Sunday night by Rev. W. S. Atchison of St. Paul's United Church, Cornwall, Ont., that there is discrimination in taxing clergymen.

Mr. Atchison, president of the Cornwall Ministerial Association, said he would refuse to pay income tax "unless the Roman Catholic clergy do likewise to promote uniformity." He said his decision was a personal one.

Conditions which allowed Roman Catholic clergy to escape income tax payments during the war had been "an appeasement policy to Quebec."

Mr. Paterson said: "There is no preference shown any individual, nor any group. I fail to see what the minister is driving at.

"It might be he is speaking of weekly deductions. Ministers are paid stated salaries and their taxes are deducted each week. Roman Catholic clergy, on the other hand, receive no salaries but depend upon weekly collections for their income. It is impossible to estimate income for them, so they file tax returns at the end of the year on their income."

"They certainly pay taxes if their income is high enough. No one is exempt and there is no favoritism shown."

(At Ottawa, a Revenue Department official said income tax regulations do not discriminate between Roman Catholic clergy and Protestant ministers. "They are all taxed on their incomes and they all pay taxes," said the official.)

MARMORA

Three Are Taken To Hospital After Accident

Marmora (Special)—Two men and a boy were conveyed by ambulance to Belleville General Hospital on Saturday as the result of an accident on No. 7 highway 2 miles west of Marmora when a 1933 Pontiac driven by Gerald Hill of Havelock crashed into the rear of a 1927 Chevrolet sedan driven by Donald Althouse also of Havelock, throwing both cars into the ditch and badly smashing Althouse's car. The other car was also badly damaged. As far as can be ascertained Althouse applied his brakes somewhat suddenly as the cars travelling east met one proceeding westward. He sustained injuries as did Gerald Hill and his young brother Frank, who were in the rear car. Another passenger in the Hill car got off lightly and did not require hospitalization. Althouse was driving alone. The accident occurred about 8 p.m. and Dr. H. Crawford of Marmora was speedily on the scene as well as Constable W. D. Lavender and Provincial Constable J. Hatch of Madoc. Although the extent of the men's injuries was not learned, they are not thought to be serious. It is conceded that Althouse's escape from serious if not fatal injuries is miraculous. It is understood that charges will be laid by the police.

On the matter of wages Mr. Hilton said Stelco already had high standards and a 10-cent increase offered by the company would give lower paid workers more for a 48-hour week than they would receive from the union's proposal of a 19½-cent increase and a 40-hour week.

Wages had gone up sharply during the war. The April 1 increase of $5-a-ton in steel prices would amount to something over $5,000,000 a year for Stelco of which about half was earmarked for wages — the equivalent of 11 cents an hour — but other costs had been rising too.

"We are emphatically opposed to any form of so-called union security insofar as our plant is concerned," Mr. Hilton said.

He was questioned by Arthur Smith (PC — Calgary West) on his attitude toward a voluntary revocable check-off which would allow employees to voluntary request deduction from their pay of union dues. Mr. Hilton was opposed to that too.

"Frankly I can see no reason in the world why any corporation should object to the voluntary revocable check-off," Mr. Smith said.

"If we consider the revocable check-off this year it will be something else next year, all leading up to the closed shop," Mr. Hilton said.

The adjournment of yesterday afternoon's session cut off a brisk exchange between Clarence Gillis (CCF — Cape Breton South) and Mr. Hilton. Mr. Gillis suggested that Stelco was breaking the law by keeping employees in the plant day and night.

"You call off your pickets and they'll be out of that plant tonight," Mr. Hilton said.

"You let them out and get your feet under the table with the union - - -," and that was as far as Mr. Gillis got when Maurice LaLonde (L — Labelle) adjourned the meeting.

William Smith who lives near the bank of Crowe River said he never saw the fish jumping out of the water of the river to the extent which the ydid on Thursday night in all the years he has.

Chinese Cafe Proprietor Gives Farewell Party Before Leaving For Native Land

Marmora — Sam Lung, proprietor of the Glossy Cafe since December 1st, 1929, has disposed of his business to Lem Sam, the latter taking over on July 22nd. with Lem Jong who is his cousin and who has been his cook for the past nine years, he expects to pay farewell visits to members of the Lem family in Ontario for a few weeks and then will proceed to Vancouver to visit relatives there. Later he will go to San Francisco to sail by an American liner for his home in Hensam, 120 miles east of Canton. Thirty-eight years a resident of Canada, he has returned to China three times for a vacation. This time he is returning for good as is his cousin Lem Jong. A letter received on Friday evening from relatives costing the large sum of 750 dollars in Chinese currency for postage paints the picture of the rice situation in China a little brighter. Rains have brought the cost of this staple food down to half of the high cost which has been prevailing. But Lem goes back to his native country in the knowledge that the cost of living is tremendous. His love for his family transcends all other thoughts. On Sunday he served a fine repast to some of his closer friends at the conclusion of which W. J. Cottrell took opportunity on behalf of the guests to extend thanks for favors received and express the hope that Lem Lung and Lem Jong will be able to reestablish themselves in the land of their fathers and be re-echoing voices there of the truths concerning Canadian life as they have discovered it in their long stay in the Dominion. Later in individual parting gifts were made to the departing couple who have supported all deserving causes which appealed to them for assistance. Lem Sam who has taken over the cafe is well known locally having been employed at the cafe as a cook on two former occasions. Jung Ging comes to the cafe from Toronto as a cook of good repute.

Terrorism, Murder of Priests Reported Begun in Yugoslavia

New York, July 24. (CP)—The New York Times said today in a dispatch from Bari, Italy, that Marshal Tito's Yugoslav government has launched a terrorist campaign against "religion in all its forms" that extends to the "assassination of priests and nuns throughout the country."

The bylined dispatch by Camille M. Cianfarra quoted observers arriving from Belgrade as saying that 230 priests had been assassinated, 198 without trial, from April, 1944, to May 15 this year.

Cianfarra quoted a report given him by the observers as saying that of the 198 priests said to have been killed without trial, two "certainly were tortured before execution, while the bodies of three others were thrown into the sea after execution."

The report quoted by Cianfarra also said 11 nuns and 10 seminarists were shot dead or "massacred" and that "many others" who had been arrested had not been heard from.

Cianfarra said the report gave a detailed picture of the status of the Roman Catholic press under Marshal Tito's regime, suppression of religious teaching in schools, spoliation of church property, occupation and requisitioning of buildings owned by the clergy and agrarian reforms "that in many cases left the clergy without means of subsistence."

The dispatch listed the names of 32 priests who the report said had been executed.

In one case, the report said, a priest named Stefan Povoljniak was dragged from his home last May by police and shot dead in the street without trial. A similar fate was said to have been suffered by Charles Delija, shot dead in a public square.

Underwater Test Of Atomic Bomb Ready to be Made

Aboard the U.S.S. Appalachian, July 24 — (AP) — The historic test of an underwater atomic bomb against a fleet stronger than most navies of the world will be staged tomorrow (today, North American time), weather permitting.

Early today a small craft believed to be the one from which the earth's first sub-surface atom bomb will be suspended was towed into Bikini Lagoon past the 29 combat ships and 46 other vessels awaiting their possible doom.

From his flagship, the U. S. S. Mount McKinley, Vice-Admiral William H. P. Blandy announced that the test was on, while he kept an eye on the squally weather, ready to postpone everything if necessary.

A canvas will conceal the bomb from the eyes of the crew that will submerge it.

Only Dr. Marshall Holloway, Cornell physicist, and other scientists from Los Alamos, N.M., will see it. Dr. Holloway will sleep tonight upon the craft from which the bomb will ride submerged.

If all goes well with the weather, some time before the detonation hour of 8:35 a.m. tomorrow (5:35 p.m., E.D.T. today) he will set the mechanism that will prepare the bomb for detonation.

Then he and his crew of nine will board a small but powerful boat and speed away several miles to the waiting trigger ship, U.S.S. Cumberland Sound. There Dr. Holloway will unlock the door leading to the remote-control trigger.

This trigger will send out radio impulses which will set the detonating mechanism of the atomic bomb in operation.

Thereafter, no one is certain what will happen, although scientists are fairly sure that a monstrous waterspout will rocket into the sky to a height of two or three miles.

Closest to the explosion and possibly on the rim of the huge hole expected to be blown for a moment in the lagoon's waters are the battleship Arkansas, the submerged submarine Pilotfish, the famed aircraft carrier Saratoga and the cruiser Pensacola.

Two observation ships, U.S.S. Panamint, carrying scientists and foreign observers, and U.S.S. Blue Ridge, with its military observers, are expected late today or tomorrow from Kawjalein.

Britain Issues White Paper On Recent Violence

London, July 24. (CP)— The British government today accused the Jewish agency executive of involvement in recent violence in Palestine, basing this conclusion of evidence it said had been gleaned from intercepted communications.

The evidence, a White Paper declared, influenced the decision for widespread police and army operations in which more than 2,500 Jews in Palestine were arrested June 29.

That the Hagana and the illegal military organization known as Palmach "carefully planned movements of sabotage and violence under the guise of the Jewish Resistance Movement";

That both organizations worked under the political control of members of the Jewish agency;

That the illegal Irgun Zvai Leumi and the stern group have worked since last autumn in cooperation with the High Command of the Hagana on certain of these operations; and that the radio station KOL Israel, which claims to be "the voice of the Jewish Resistance Movement", has been working under the direction of the Jewish agency and has been supporting these organizations.

Sow all Russia's Grain Acreage With Selected Seed by 1950 Plan

By ERIC DOWNTON

Moscow, July 24 — (Reuters) — The entire grain area in the U.S.S.R. will be sown with selected seed by 1950, according to a statement by Peter Zabazny, chief of the Central Seed Selection Administration of the Soviet Ministry of Agriculture.

Zabazny said collective and state farms already have started work to achieve the seeding objective. First step is to restore the pre-war figure of 158,000,000 acres, or 84 per cent of the total grain area in the Soviet Union.

This acreage dropped to 60 per cent during the war, but rehabilitation is well in hand and the pre-war level is scheduled to be reached this year.

One hundred state seed selection stations and research institutes are engaged in evolving new varieties of plants and improving known varieties in the U.S.S.R. The stations are located in various soil and climate belts throughout the country, for experience has shown that the same variety differs in its yield in the different zones.

For the state selection stations new seed varieties are transferred to district seed-growing farms for propagation.

There are farms of this type with a total area of 4,000,000 acres. Seventy more selection and experimental stations are operated by groups of collective farms.

Agricultural research and seed selection are materially encouraged by such steps as awarding cash prizes ranging from 10,000 to 100,000 rubles for outstanding work in these spheres.

Defective Shells Killed Americans, Inquiry Reveals

By JOHN HENDERSON

Washington, July 24 — (AP)— A story of how United States soldiers were killed by their own defective mortar shells today capped the Senate War Investigation Committee's inquiry into profits of munitions makers.

It was supplied by testimony from Maj.-Gen. Alden H. Waitt, chief of the chemical warfare service, and two letters from unidentified reserve officers. They agreed there were deaths among American soldiers in Europe due to premature explosion of 4.2-inch chemical mortar shells on the battle fronts.

Gen. Waitt said he did not know how many died from defective shells, but estimated at least 10 or 12.

The War Department, he said, had been unable to trace the defective shells to any particular manufacturer although an effort was made to do so. He expressed belief that the trouble was due to specifications and design.

Replying to questions, Gen. Waitt said Erie Basin Metal Products Company, was only one of a number of manufacturers of the shell. Erie Basin was a member of the munitions group which members of the Senate Committee have come to call the Garsson Combine. Henry and Murray Garsson, brothers, were principal figures in it.

With Gen. Waitt's testimony, the committee temporarily recessed its hearings pending word from Representative Andrew May (Dem.-Ky.) as to when he will testify. He said he was busy with legislative matters but hoped to appear soon.

The committee has heard testimony that the Kentuckian interceded with the War Department to give contracts to the Garssons, and cashed cheques, as agent, which Garsson firms paid the Cumberland Lumber Company, Prestonsburg, Ky., for lumber which was never delivered. Representative May has declared all his activities were in behalf of the war effort and that he did not profit.

BRACKEN URGES THAT CONFERENCE BE RECONVENED

House Defeats Motion Of Want of Confidence Over Budget Details By 121 to 88 Votes

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 24 — (CP) — The Commons at a busy sitting yesterday concluded the formal debate on the budget, disposed of an opposition motion of non-confidence in the government, began study of the budget resolutions and dealt with several pieces of legislation.

Highlighting the finish of the budget debate was an appeal by John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, to the government to reconvene the Dominion Provincial Conference in an effort to make a united front attack on post-war problems.

He later watched members defeat 121-58 his party's motion calling for a vote of non-confidence in the government because of the contents of the budget brought down June 27. A similar C.C.F. motion was rejected last Thursday, 135-37.

On Common Ground

The opposition parties found themselves on common ground, however, when a vote was taken on the main motion to go into committee and study in detail the resolutions which will put into effect the tax changes proposed in the budget. By a close 97-81 vote, the House agreed to the motion, which in effect gives members an opportunity to express approval or disapproval of the budget.

Before budget matters were dealt with the House, at its first morning sitting of the session, adopted a bill amending the Criminal Code to increase from six to 12 the number of persons on Saskatchewan juries and to change the regulations surrounding the challenging of jurors in Alberta.

First reading was given a bill that will put into statutory form changes made in the Family Al-

Diplomatic Clash Over War Booty Is Seen Possible

By JOHN SCALI

Washington, July 24 — (AP) — A two-contingent diplomatic clash between Russia and the United States appears to be shaping up today over German and Japanese war booty.

At the root of the impending trouble are these factors:

1. Edwin W. Pauley's announcement that this country is considering a permanent halt to German reparations deliveries to Russia to offset "more than $2,000,000,000" worth of Manchurian industry "incapacitated" by Soviet removals from that country.

2. Disclosure by other officials that the United States will oppose an expected Russian demand for a share in reparations from the Japanese mainland.

Reporting to a press conference late yesterday on his findings during a 16-country survey, Mr. Pauley, head of the United States Reparations Commission, charged that the Soviet action in Manchuria has upset the "lives and welfare of 900,000,000" people throughout the Far East for at least a generation.

In the light of this, he said it is his "personal opinion" that the United States could extend its current ban on deliveries of German industrial equipment to Russia without violating the four-power Potsdam agreement on reparations.

The reparations official emphasized that the question of maintaining this ban still was only under discussion, but in discussing the overall situation in Germany he declared:

"Unless the occupying powers can get together in a wholehearted effort to carry out the Potsdam agreement we may find ourselves repeating the tragic blunders of World War 1."

Much Lumber Being Exported

Toronto, July 24 — (CP) — T. L. Kennedy, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, today said that old mills, which have been inoperative for years, have been re-opened by United States interests and exports of lumber to the U. S. have reached enormous proportions.

Exports are governed by the federal government and Ontario can see nothing to prevent lumber, needed for housing and other construction in Canada, leaving the country, Mr. Kennedy said.

Witness Identifies Sears as Person Who Stabbed Him

Windsor, July 24 —(CP)— Evidence was heard today at preliminary hearing of Ronald George Sears, 18, charged on two counts of murder, and three counts of attempted murder. It is alleged the accused is the "slasher" who terrorized Windsor for several months.

Crown Attorney E. C. Awry called as his first witness Joseph Gelencer, victim of a stabbing, July 5. Gelencer, still suffering from injuries, testified standing up but when cross examination started, was permitted to sit.

He testified that on July 5, he had been walking in a park adjoining Sandwich St. West when a youth approached and asked "Are you smoking cigars?"

The witness claimed the youth asked him to walk with him down a lane along the waterfront. He stated he followed the youth, and when they reached the waterfront, his companion laid down on the grass.

Witness claimed he turned and walked away. "All of a sudden a shock came in the left side of my back." He said he stumbled around and saw the youth running away as he "tried to fish the knife out of my back with my left hand."

He managed to rise to his knees and walked up an embankment to the street above, where he stopped a passing automobile.

A taxi was called and he was transported to Grace Hospital.

When shown a knife by Crown Attorney Awry which was believed to have been used in his stabbing, the witness stated "that is the knife sir."

Witness indicated that accused was the person who stabbed him, when Sears was pointed out in the prisoner's box.

The hearing is continuing.

WILL ENFORCE DEATH PENALTY SAYS DEPUTY PREMIER

Budapest, July 24 —(Reuters) —Matyas Rakosi, Communist deputy premier, said yesterday that the death penalty will be enforced for speculation in Hungary's new currency, the forint (florin), which will be placed in circulation, Aug. 1.

Ten Drowned As Cannery Tender Sinks off Alaska

Kodiak, Alaska, July 24—(AP) —Ten people drowned last night when the cannery tender Cougar foundered in heavy seas off the northwest shore of Kodiak island.

The crew of three and seven passengers perished.

The Cougar, owned by Frank McConaghy, Inc., a packing firm with headquarters in Seattle, was en route to Kodiak when a heavy northeast blow in treacherous Shelikof Strait foundered it off Rocky Point.

First meagre reports said the boat sank so quickly some of the victims did not even have a chance to don life preservers.

American Inflationary Tendencies Worry European Powers

Orono, Me., July 24— (AP)— Great Britain and the Western European countries "are all frankly worried," Prof. E. H. Underhill of the University of Toronto said today, "about the capacity of the United States to preserve its own economy from an inflationary boom followed by a catastrophic depression."

"If these things happen, they are afraid that they will not be able to insulate their own economies from the bad effects of the American devotion to 'free enterprise,'" he said in an address prepared for delivery at a University of Maine program on the theme, "Toward World Understandings."

HOBBY IN FULL BLOOM

Fort Erie, July 24. (CP)— Former Fire Chief William Armstrong, of Fort Erie, has a hobby of cultivating the wild hollyhocks which grow along the Niagara River bank and today his hobby—Hollyhock Park—is in full bloom. Beginning several years ago to cultivate the flowers, he now has hollyhocks stretching for almost a block along the River road.

TROOPS, POLICE COMB JERUSALEM FOR EXTREMISTS

Arabs Give Warning If Terrorism Goes On They Will be Forced To Defend Interests

Jerusalem, July 24 — (CP) — Tension in Palestine, scene of a wide manhunt for extremists who bombed the King David Hotel Monday, was heightened today by an Arab warning that if Britain failed to halt terrorism the Arabs themselves would be forced to take a hand.

While rescue workers continued to dig through the debris of the hotel here in hopes of finding additional persons still alive, British troops and Palestine police combed Jerusalem for leaders of the Jewish underground organization Irgun Zvai Leumi.

An announcement allegedly from that organization, received by the Associated Press last night said that Irgun Zvai Leumi "soldiers" staged the bombing, which resulted in at least 48 persons killed, 55 injured and 72 missing.

2 Officials Killed, 14 Missing

(Reuters news agency said revised official figures listed casualties as 52 dead, 42 injured and 72 missing.)

Early today the Palestine government, in a statement, disclosed that two high Palestine officials had been killed and 14, including Geoffrey Walsh, food controller and economic adviser, were missing but said in releasing the names of the missing officials 'it must not necessarily be assumed, however, that hope in respect of those persons need be abandoned as yet."

D. G. Kennedy, Postmaster-General, and Col. E. W. Keyes, assistant secretary to the government, were the officials killed in the blast while the list of missing officials included F. W. Blenkinsop, and G. T. Farley, principal assistant secretaries, Brig. Peter Smith-Dorriern, commissioned for commerce and industry, and Julius Jacobs, undersecretary for finance.

The question most frequently asked in the Holy Land was what effect the explosion, which destroyed a wing of the hotel containing British military headquarters, would have on the admission of additional Jews to Palestine.

The Arab warning to Britain accused Prime Minister Attlee's administration of "being too reluctant to use its full forces to wipe out terrorism and protect Arabs in Palestine."

If terrorism continues, the statement issued by the Arab executive said, "Arabs will be forced to protect their sons and interests with their own resources and with all the strength they possess."

29 Persons Held

The arrest last night of two wounded Jews brought to 29 the number of Jewish suspects now being held by police investigating Monday's bombing. Earlier, two other Jews —one wounded and one dead—were found by police in a schoolhouse in the old city. Police said they found two complete sets of Arab clothing, bloodstained and punctured by bullets, in the school.

The statement signed by Irgun Zvai Leumi, describing the loss of life as a "tragedy", claimed that British officials ignored warnings that the hotel was to be bombed, and thus were responsible for the high death toll.

"No warning of any kind of the impending explosion was received," British military headquarters said.

The Irgun message said the blast was an attack on "the Central

Four-Mile Dive to Bottom of Sea In Sphere Plan of Prof. A. Piccard

Brussels, July 24 —(CP)—Professor Auguste Piccard, Swiss scientist who with his brother Jean was the first to ascend 10 miles into the stratosphere, now is preparing for a four-mile dive into the sea in a steel sphere six feet, four inches in diameter with walls 3½ inches thick.

Prof. Piccard's attempt to explore the sea bottom, sponsored by the Belgian National Scientific Research Fund, will be made early next year, probably in the Gulf of Guinea.

He already is experimenting with a steel model of his undersea "balloon" under pressures ranging up to more than 3,700 pounds to the square inch. The device has a 15-ton spherical cabin topped by a buoy containing a supply of gasoline. An electromagnet underneath holds the ballast of iron filings.

The ballast—over-all weight of the craft before a dive will be about 40 tons—will carry the craft to the ocean floor, Prof. Piccard says. Released from a mother ship, two small motors will propel it along the bottom. When ready to rise, the Professor will cut an electric current to the electromagnet, disengaging the ballast.

The 10-mile stratosphere ascent ended in a tree-top near Cadiz, O., Oct. 23, 1934, after a flight from Detroit which carried the Piccards through heavy winds which damaged the balloon and caused it to crash.

Prior to the successful venture, a training flight ended May 16, 1934, on a field near Thamesville, Ont., 58 miles from the starting point at Dearborn, Mich. In a nine-hour flight, Jean Piccard and his wife passed low over Wallaceburg, Ont., dropped anchor and exchanged pleasantries with the crowd that gathered.

Algoma Steel Firm Opposes National Bargaining Plan

MacMillan Says Company Differences Are Too Great

Ottawa, July 24 — (CP) —Algoma Steel Corp., Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., today went on record as opposed to national negotiations for settlement of the steel strike.

The company's viewpoint was put forward by Gordon MacMillan, a director of the company, testifying before the Commons Industrial Relations Committee.

H. G. Hilton, president of the Steel Co. of Canada, Hamilton, had previously expressed his opposition to national bargaining. The third company involved in the current steel strike — Dominion Steel and Coal Corp., Sydney, N.S., has not yet been heard by the committee.

Mr. MacMillan's statement on national bargaining came in response to questions by J. J. Robinette, committee general.

"We consider differences in various nations among the three companies are such that they are not in a sense a national at all," Mr. MacMillan said. "From a practical standpoint we think we should negotiate with our own local union. We have been very happy with them in the past and technically they are the only agency certified to bargain with us."

Mr. MacMillan was also asked by Mr. Robinette on the possibility of Algoma advancing its eight-cent offer to the 10 cent increase proposed by Stelco.

"Eight cents is our limit," Mr. MacMillan said. "It would cost us close to $1,000,000 a year and that pretty well wipes out our profit. With contingencies ahead that we are all aware of we can't go any higher and maintain the financial stability of the company."

Mr. MacMillan told M. J. M. Lockhart (PC — Lincoln) Algoma's steel production was completely shut down by the strike. Output of coke was about 650 tons a day compared with a normal 5,000 tons.

Normal coke output was at the capacity of the plant. It would take about five days to get back into production when the strike ended.

Never Successful Enterprise

In his evidence Tuesday Mr. MacMillan reviewed the financial history of Algoma and said it had never been a successful enterprise, being unable even in the war years, to pay dividends.

LANDSLIDE DELAYS TRAINS

Sudbury, July 24 (CP)—Canadian Pacific Railway officials today said a landslide on the main C.P.R. line between Winnipeg and here has delayed trains to Montreal and Toronto. The slide, said to be one of the worst in the district in years occurred about 74 miles west of White River.

The slide took place yesterday and tracks were cleared and passable this morning, officials said. Traffic was delayed as much as 22 hours on east-bound rails.

Railway officials said the slide, which brought down about 15,000 tons of rock, resulted from the normal scaling operation conducted yearly on a 500-foot hill at the Red Sucker tunnel where the incident occurred. Crews test the hill yearly for loose rock and use dynamite to disclose rock that may be dangerous at any time. On this occasion "more came down than they bargained for," the railway official said. No one was injured.

GROMYKO REJECTS U.S. A-CONTROL PROPOSALS

New York, July 24 (AP) — Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet representative to the United Nations' Atomic Energy Commission today rejected the major United States proposals for control of atomic energy.

Mr. Gromyko, speaking at a session of committee No. 2, specifically turned down the American proposals for setting up an atomic development authority and for ruling out the veto on atomic matters.

In making his statement, the Soviet representative made it clear that his government was rejecting "as a whole or any part" of the third memorandum submitted by Bernard M. Baruch, United States delegate. This memorandum had summed up all principal points of the United States plan.

Senate Committee Recommends Taxation Changes For Gold Mines

Ottawa, July 24. (CP)—The report of the Senate Mining Committee recommending taxation changes to encourage gold mining was adopted in the Upper Chamber last night with only one dissenting voice.

While there was no recorded division, Senator James Murdock (L—Ontario) said the report practicalyly said "come suckers, bite" for it ignored stock manipulations.

He charged the committee was remiss in its duty in not calling the Securities Commissioners of Ontario and Quebec to testify and suggested the report be turned back to the committee for redrafting after they had investigated mining gambling.

Senator Murdock spoke of recent investigations which he said had indicated suspicion of certain gold mine promoters and he was afraid that the committee report, it adopted in its present form, might put more money into the pockets of some of the promoters.

He said the committee report gave itself to the interpretation that the members were in favor of the promoters regardless of who was "hit or hurt".

Senator A. L. Beaubien (L—Manitoba), a member of the committee, defended the report and declared that Senator Murdock was misinterpreting the purpose for which the committee was set up. The committee was established to study the economic value of the mining industry to the country and that was what it had done.

He said that mining, by its very nature, attracted risk money and he told of a mine he saw at Noranda where $252,000 was spent before the first ounce of gold was produced.

Test of Guinea Pigs With Vaccine Increases Resistance to T.B.

London, July 24. (CP)— The Lancet, British Medical Journal, said vaccination experiments on guinea pigs had greatly increased their resistance to tuberculosis and that some doctors believe the same treatment may heal the disease in humans. Guinea pigs inoculated with tuberculosis germs from wild mice were strengthened to such a degree that the average survival of 12 unvaccinated guinea pigs was 192 days, compared with 403 days for 12 vaccinated animals.

RADIO INSPECTOR ARRIVES IN CITY

A. E. G. Argue, radio inspector of the Federal Department of Transport, Ottawa, arrived in the city today in connection with the Dominion-wide annual check-up of radio licences. Mr. Argue will cover the city and district and expects to be in the district for the next week or so checking on radio-owners over a wide area.

BOY APPREHENDED SHOOTING AT LIGHT BULBS WITH AIR RIFLE

Daylight thieves Tuesday afternoon stole a 1935 Ford Sedan from the place where it had been parked on Victoria Ave., it was reported at the local police station Tuesday. Owner of the vehicle, Ross Livingstone of Corbyville, stated the car had been stolen some time between two and three in the afternoon.

Numerous complaints of young boys firing air rifles within the city limits have been received at the police station with several air guns having been confiscated by officers within the past two weeks. The most recent complaint was from a Parker Street resident where it was stated boys were firing at electric light bulbs. An offender was apprehended by constables who asked the lad to report to the police station.

LARGE NUMBER U. S. CARS OBSERVED HERE

A steady parade of American cars is rolling through the city these holiday days. One observer counted eleven passing the "Four Corners" yesterday within a space of fifteen minutes. New York and Ohio licences appeared to predominate, but there was a smattering of cars from other states as well.

BOYS FEAST ON GREEN APPLES

"Green apples and salt" days have come back again with this year's prospects of an apple crop. Youngsters were seen on the street today munching the fruit with little or no thought of the possible tummy-aches ahead of them.

POLICE HOLD TEN BIKES FOR OWNERS

The garage of the city police station is more or less a clearing house for lost, strayed or stolen bicycles. There are at least ten "on parade" at any time, awaiting owners. Some of whom have neglected to procure the necessary licence.

FLIES AND MOSQUITOES NUMEROUS IN DISTRICT

There appears to be no lack of insect-power in the mosquito and bug armies. These sultry summer evenings the winged invaders buzz hungrily into house and cottage and are not a bit fussy which part of the human anatomy offers the best meal. The flies are particularly numerous and voracious in the northern sections according to travellers. One returned from the north noticed the inside top of his car covered with a peculiar species of bug which, he believes had taken refuge from a rare period of cool weather.

MOTORCYCLIST HURT IN CRASH WITH CAR

Norman Barriage, 78 College Street, suffered severe abrasions to his head, shoulders, elbows and right leg when the motorcycle he was driving on Station Street was in collision with a motor car on Tuesday evening.

According to the police report Barriage was riding his motorcycle east on Station Street with Walter Bellis, R.R. 6 Belleville, as passenger. Opposite the Belleville Creameries Barriage attempted to pass a car going in the same direction only to have the car suddenly turn to the left. The motorcycle struck the left front fender of the car, careened off and sideswiped a tree. Bellis was uninjured.

Byron Lott, Hastings 'Grand Old Man' Honored by Friends On Occasion of 91st Birthday

Sterling tribute to Byron O. Lott, one of Hastings County's grand old men, was paid Tuesday evening by county and township officialdom, professional men and a host of other friends as they gathered at the Hotel Quinte to honor the former Sidney township dignitary on the occasion of his 91st birthday.

Mayor Frank S. Follwell acted as master of ceremonies for the occasion and called upon Mr. Lott's friends in public and private life to pay tribute to the man who was expressed as a "friend to all".

It was a happy evening for Byron, as Mr. Lott is known to his host of friends, as felicitations and congratulations were received from every side with the wish that he live to enjoy more birthdays. In honor of the occasion Mr. Lott was presented with a handsome self-winding wrist watch suitably engraved. The engraving read "To Byron Lott on the occasion of his 91st birthday, 1946."

Gives Family History.

Indicative that despite his 91 years, sight and mind remained keen, Mr. Lott immediately gave the time as the watch was strapped on his wrist by Mayor Follwell.

Expressing his profound appreciation of the kind gesture on the part of his many friends, Mr. Lott gave a brief history of his family, telling how his great grandfather had come from Scotland in 1796 or '97 to settle on the 2nd concession of Sidney township.

"Contrary to the general belief that I am a native of Rawdon township, I was born on that same lot in Sidney township," Mr. Lott recalled. "My father moved to Rawdon in 1868."

"I was quite young but I remember the snow was very deep," Mr. Lott continued. "With a neighbor I drove 15 head of cattle and calves to my new home while my father drove ahead with a sleigh load of sheep and three hives of bees."

He had been a bee keeper by heritage as his great grandfather had brought bees out from Scotland. Ancestors of his mother's side had been United Empire Loyalists, coming to Canada from the state of Vermont to settle near Hay Bay. Ancestors on both sides had lived to a "good old age."

Has Voted Both Ways.

In reference to his political career, Mr. Lott disagreed with the popular belief that he was a hard boiled "grit." "Yet I will say that I have voted both ways oftener than anyone in this gathering."

Mr. Lott recalled his entry into municipal government back in 1895. He had defeated his opponent, the late James McComb, for the position as deputy reeve by a majority of 127, when that gentleman ordinarily gained a majority of approximately 300 votes. Mr. Lott stated he had held the position until he resigned to run for the provincial legislature.

It was a purely non-political gathering which assembled to pay homage to Mr. Lott, with stalwarts of both Liberal and Conservative parties joining hands to pay him tribute. Sportsmen friends were there in force to recall happy days in the hunting camp, while members of the bee-keeping association were on hand to pay tribute to their former associate.

Harry Moorman led in community singing with Leo Riggs acting as accompanist. A quartet of Harry Moorman, J. A. Thomson, Alf. Evans, and Jimmy Bankier, favored with vocal numbers, while Mr. Bankier was also heard in several solos.

Superintendent of O.S.D. Denies Charges by Members Deaf Assoc.

W. J. Morrison, superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf here, today strongly denied charges levelled at his institution by officials of the Ontario Association for the Deaf now in session in Toronto.

Answering the charges of David Peikoff, Association president "that the same people (those in charge of the O.S.D. here) do not hesitate in the least to deceive the public by hand-picking pupils for demonstrations in lipreading and speech" Mr. Morrison stated that all demonstrations given at the O.S.D. here are given by all classes just as they are. Demonstrations are put on for the public by classes as a whole and not by individual students."

Three University Graduates.

To Donald C. Kidd's charge "that not one Belleville graduate in the past 16 years has qualified for college or university education whereas before that time more than ten graduates went on to university," Mr. Morrison replied that "as far as I know three students have graduated from university in that time. Two of them became deaf after eight years of hearing. At least two graduates that I know of have entered university."

"Mr. Kidd," said the superintendent, "received all his education orally in New York, Toronto Day Schools and in a hearing class at Kenora High School."

"Before 1906," Mr. Morrison said, "no pupil in the O.S.D. here obtained a high school entrance certificate. Last year eight students received these certificates, two of them passing with honors. Usually between eight and ten students pass these examinations annually.

Entrance Grads Return.

It is a custom in American schools for the deaf, the superintendent went on, to graduate pupils from Grade 9. "The eight students who passed their entrance examinations here this year, will return next year to take up Grade 9 work. They also have the privilege of one year full time vocational work after graduation."

Referring to Mr. Kidd's recommendation that a "superintendent who converses with the deaf in their language and who knows their problems should be engaged here," Mr. Morrison stated that most of the successful American schools for the Deaf have superintendents who have had previous experience with hearing children only.

"No deaf teachers have been engaged here since 1906," Mr. Morrison said. "A teacher to be engaged here must have a 1st class certificate with at least two years successful teaching experience with hearing children. They must take a training course of from one to three years before they start to teach."

Special Courses Taken.

Many OSD teachers here have taken special courses in the United States. This year, three studied at Ypsilanti, Michigan and another studied in New York City.

A former OSD teacher is now attached to the famous John Tracey Clinic for the Deaf in Los Angeles, California, and another has been offered a position in a residential school in the same state.

In New York State, Mr. Morrison pointed out, there is one school with 2,000 pupils, 95 per cent of whom are taught orally. The largest school in New York City, School No. 47 with 500 pupils has no deaf teachers. The second largest, Lexington Avenue School has 268 pupils all of whom are taught orally. Rochester and Buffalo schools, he said, used the oral system of teaching more so than does the OSD here.

University Heads Agree on Need Adequate Training

(By The Canadian Press)

Consensus of Canadian university leaders today indicated complete agreement that emphasis should continue to be placed on prividing adequate education for Canadians. The possibility "we may be educating brains for export" was regarded a secondary consideration.

That quote came from Dr. G. P. Gilmour, Chancellor of McMaster University, in a Monday address at Hamilton when he expressed doubt that Canada could absorb all university graduates now being trained.

His speech, commenting specifically on the federal government's university training program for war veterans, brought immediate reaction.

Maj.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns, director-general of Veterans Rehabilitation, Ottawa, said a government inter-departmental advisors committee was studying the question of professional opportunities as related to the numbers being trained in Canadian universities.

He added: "We recognize the problem that arises from the fact that Canada has always exported a percentage of her professional personnel. This emigration seems to be inevitable but not necessarily bad.

"To suggest that because some of our student-veteran graduates will leave the country we should deny them training seems to me to be very wrong indeed."

Best Possible for All

At Vancouver, Dr. Norman A. M. MacKenzie, president of the University of British Columbia, said in comment on Dr. Gilmour's assertion that the main concern is to provide the best possible education for all citizens. There is a question whether there will be enough trained men and women for expanding economic conditions, he said and he was not sure that it was a mistake to train students with the idea that they will eventually go to other parts of the world. An exchange of brains and young people was an advantage to all concerned.

At Kingston, Dr. R. C. Wallace, president of Queen's University, said that Canadians "need all the education we can get." He questioned the view that a large percentage of university graduates are leaving or would leave the country.

At Halifax, Dr. A. Stanley Walker, president of the University of King's College, said, "If Canada grows as she should, the university graduates will be absorbed. It depends on what business and industry are prepared to pay. If we expand as the situation demands, we can absorb our own university students and then some. If we don't expand, we will go on exporting brains. At the present time Dr. Gilmour has a right to say what he did."

At Fredericton, Dr. Milton F. Gregg, V.C., C.B.E., president of the University of New Brunswick, said he has given much thought to the points raised by Dr. Gilmour.

He said the most outstanding quality shown by veteran students when they were in the services was the quality of initiative, and added, "I would like to feel that this university is enabling them to obtain such intellectual equipment as will give that initiative the widest scope in peace.

"The matter of exporting brains will depend upon the responsibility of all of us for Canadian economic stability. This responsibility, the veteran students are showing every sign of being willing to share."

British Labor Regime Nears First Anniversary of Rule

By GLENN WILLIAMS

London, July 22 — (AP)—Just five days before the British labor government celebrates its first year of unfettered rule, it began to ration bread Sunday.

That drastic step — which the unrestricted submarine blockades of two great wars did not force — is a sort of birthday yardstick to measure the mixture of realism, idealism and socialism with which the government has met the turbulent transition from war to peace.

Better living for the people, however, is still what government critics call "jam tomorrow." Food is more tightly rationed than a year ago, clothing coupons are still closely restricted, and house building, although moving ahead, is moving slowly.

Demobilization and Recon version have been carried along smoothly.

Nearly 2,500,000 men have been mustered out of uniform and unemployment has been held, so far, under 400,000 — less than two per cent of the working population.

In the realm of foreign affairs, foreign secretary Bevin has fought bitterly over a succession of conference tables, tangling most frequently with V. M. Molotov, Soviet Foreign Minister.

Obviously, progress has been made toward peace. All that's necessary to show that is to recall the position last July 26, when the labor government took office.

But defeated Germany still is operating on four different economies and Mr. Bevin has complained of the burden of spending $325,000,000 a year to keep Britain's share afloat.

Britain has concluded two trade pacts with France and signed trade agreements with most other powers of Western Europe, quietly undertaking to construct a give-and-take economy around her.

The government has openly deplored Spain's Francisco Franco—but still trades with Spain and still keeps an Ambassador there. The presence of the Ambassador has been a thorn frequently pushed into the government by its party supporters.

Freeing of Colonial Peoples

The Socialists, who, in the days before they came to power, frequently clamored for freedom for Britain's colonial peoples, have set about freeing part of them.

A plan for India's independence—under which that country could choose either full independence or became a self-governing Dominion—was announced in May. Shortly afterward, Prime Minister Attlee disclosed British plans to pull all military establishments out of Egypt.

A new system of centralized government for the Malay States has gone through parliament with little debate, although some Malayan Sultans denounced it as "annexation" of their realms.

At home, Socialism has been advanced methodically. The Bank of England has become government property. The coal mines soon will be taken over.

Laws to put civil aviation, the Giant Cable and Wireless company and all development of atomic energy under public control have been introduced.

Laid out for future introduction are nationalization of iron and steel, railways and road transport, gas and electricity.

In all these attempts to legislate socialism, the government has avoided any sort of confiscation and each bill carries provision for full compensation of owners of nationalized industries.

Capital Stock Issues Under Close Control

All issues of capital stock have come under close control of the government, which also won quick continuance of wartime controls over men and industry.

In the field of social legislation Britain claims to lead the world—a claim based on recently-introduced revisions of three laws.

These three bills embrace comprehensive workmen's compensation, a national insurance bill covering—with one paycheque deduction—all social payments from maternity benefits and child subsidies to death payments, and a national health bill designed to bring good medical service to all Britons.

Close controls have been held over inflation. Tax cuts have included complete repeal of the war-time 100 per cent excess profits tax and a cut of 10 per cent in basic rates of individual income taxes—which still remains at 45 per cent of their pay.

Wage Increases Kept Low

Wage increases have been granted to many workers — but the increases have been kept low.

Labor unions, which make up the heavy strength of the party, have accepted quietly—and even supported—continuation of the long work week and only small pay boosts on this promise: That once production catches up with the tremendous backlog of goods shortages, they'll begin to achieve a five-day week and fatter pay envelopes.

Through it all there has not been a single major strike authorized by any union. One serious stoppage did occur last winter among dockworkers who staged an unofficial strike for higher pay and a different system of hiring casual labor.

Soldiers worked the docks in the emergency and by mid-February a new law to regulate the hiring of dock workers had gone through parliament.

After a year's reign the government is promising to ease the life of the people, fretful over threadbare clothes and meagre, monotonous meals.

Extend Soviet Plan For Nationalization of Former Nazi Works

Berlin, July 24 — (AP)—The Soviet-endorsed plan for the nationalization of former Nazi-owned industries first adopted in Lower Saxony, will be extended to Brandenburg, another province in the Russian occupation zone, it was indicated today.

The properties involved are classified as having belonged to war criminals and active Nazis.

Voters of Saxony approved expropriation and state ownership of about 500 such plants in a plebiscite June 30.

The British-licenced Berlin-telegraf reported today that in Bradenburg 720 enterprises had been listed for expropriation.

Shaw at Ninety

George Bernard Shaw who will be ninety years of age on July 26th., has been a figure of more than national importance. He has been one of the great before the public in his age. Most men follow a pattern which is rather easy for others to understand even though they be men of genius. Shaw himself has been one of the most entertaining of men because of the peculiar character of his work and his humor, and cutting wit as well as because of his personality. He has written political pamphlets which have been widely read and his sparkling wit shows in them and in his comedies and dramas which have made him one of the outstanding playwrights in the modern world. Some have considered him for decades past the greatest of living writers for the drama.

Compton Mackenzie, the novelist, says of Shaw that no author has enjoyed for so long the respect of youth. His plays have drawn the patronage of millions because of the richness of his sense of comedy and his wit for he has been and is one of the most brilliant writers. His style is very pleasing and is easy to understand and one admires the enthusiasm and conviction he shows.

His ability to say a thing in perfect English, plain and yet rich (he is never ornate) is an appeal he has for every reader and listener. This will no doubt keep his comedies alive long in the future. The British public has always welcomed his comments and criticisms on every possible situation even though his remarks hit at them often—something he seems to like doing. He is one of the most brilliant men of the modern world. His genius is many-sided. He promotes ideas in his plays and knows that even though people may not accept his ideas they will enjoy the dramas. In his comedies he criticizes certain aspects of society and life of the age in which he has written but this does not lessen his appeal to the public. In some dramas he has gone far into the past to teach a modern lesson. He is something of a Puritan in his outlook.

Great comic writers are rare. Aristophaues was brilliant and sharp-tongued. Shakespeare as comic writer as well as writer of histories and tragedies long since won the world's honors for poetry and knowledge of human nature. His comedies were of the romantic type and always benign and kindly.

Shaw's comedies which are not romantic in the Shakespeare sense are very critical of institutions. He has brought to life Caesar and Cleopatra and made a drama that seems destined to live for the cleverness of situations and brilliant dialogue.

Shaw has lived to a great age. He has in his time enjoyed the passing scene of the world many years longer than other great writers and commentators on life. He is always Bernard Shaw, and his projection of himself into every utterance and every line he has written for the stage has not lessened his dramatic appeal. People may call him vain and pugnacious, unabashed and voluble, self-confident and self-conscious as one critic has said and they may not agree with him but they delight in him. He has made the passing scene of life more interesting because of his keen analysis and his strong opinions. His language is clear and rapier-like and he has written in a form of literature that proves his genius—that for the stage, the hardest of all expressions in which to succeed. There his literary fame seems to be sure, even after the problems become outdated.

Russell Landstrom of the Associated Press tells of the homage the world pays at this time to the philosopher and sage and of the tributes British celebrities have paid to this patriarch of letters in a book of special essays published in honor of his birthday, in the issue of a reprint of his "Back to Methusaleh" and in the presentation of his plays along with those of Shakespeare in Britain and later on the Continent of Northwestern Europe and Scandinavia.

Besides writing of criticism, sociological problems and creating drama, Shaw has been a great dramatic critic. And then for proof of his breadth of interest one has to consider his place in musical criticism for Shaw possesses a deep love for and knowledge of music.

Historic Errors

Many readers recall the announcement of the official correction of an error which had existed for centuries in the name of the Great Charter of British liberty. Since the earliest days it has been known as "Magna Charta" but the British Government has changed this to the plain "Magna Carta." Somehow the "h" had found its way into the records. Now for the long future it is to be known as "Magna Carta," the Latin, which is of course pronounced with the "k" sound for "c." Even the word "charta" had likewise been pronounced with the "k" sound in spite of the letters "ch."

People who have studied history in the schools in the distant past will perhaps find it difficult to write the title "Magna Carta," but that is and should have been the spelling.

Montreal Gazette refers to this official changing of a historical mistake and comments, "It might be thought that this is merely a reminder of the inaccuracies that attend transcription by hand and that the printing press of modern times has removed such risks." However the paper refers to a line, "for nearly two hundred years one of the most celebrated lines in English poetry" as having suffered notably from a printer's error. "When one comes to think of it, surely it is strange that Thomas Gray's solemn Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard should begin with the jingling line:

"The curfew tolls the knell of parting
day."

The paper points out that a comma had been dropped since back in 1750. Restoring the comma which appeared in Gray's copy the reader finds the line reading:

The curfew tolls, the knell of parting
day.

This, says the Gazette, restores the impressive solemnity at this poem's outset and adds "but alas for Thomas Gray, An Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard is not a legal nor a constitutional document. No government is likely to command that the critical comma be set back where it so evidently belongs."

It is probable that the familiarity of the usual punctuation in the line will continue to be followed.

Vanishing Goldeye

The Manitoba goldeye is a delectable fish when properly smoked. It has won a wide popularity among epicures. Without undergoing curing the goldeye has a flat and unexciting taste. The proper curing makes a wonderful change and imparts a flavor and a tang which epicures and all others appreciate.

Now it appears the goldeye industry is languishing. The demand is just as keen but the fish themselves show a sad tendency not to propagate. The total catch has become reduced very sharply. Now scientists are trying to find out the causes behind the laggard propagation, with the hope that a remedy may be found.

After all, why should the goldeyes seek to propagate their kind? A cereer which culminates on a plate on a dining room or restaurant table is not a high incentive for the perpetuation of species. That's probably the way the goldeye looks at it.

—Fort William Times-Journal.

Rust

The money value of scientific research has been strikingly illustrated by Dr. W. F. Hanna, director of the plant pathology side of the Dominion rust research laboratory. Last year, 2,000,000 acres of Manitoba wheat land, sown to a rust-resistant wheat, produced a 37,500,000-bushel crop. Under to propagate their kind? A career which rust resisting crop would have been cut in half ot a loss of $15,000,000. Yet the money spent in Canada, so far on rust research is only $2,000,000.

RHODODENDRONS

Rhododendrons seem to me
As if homesick they must be;
As if all man's care and toil
Can't replace their native soil
Or conditions, east or west,
Under which they flourish best.

Lovely though their bloom appears,
I have watched them down the years
Strangely sicken, pine and die,
Underneath an alien sky—
Wanting something, branch and root,
Strangers cannot substitute.

Beautiful at home are there;
Rich with leaf and blossom gay,
Stout of heart, but made to roam—
Forced to live afar from home—
Rhododendrons look at me
As if lonely they must be.

BRACKEN URGES

lowance Act by order-in-council.

Labor Minister Mitchell tabled an order-in-council abolishing as from Aug. 15 control over conscientious objectors to military service.

The party was opposed to the limitation that transfer of stock ownership could not be made except subsequent to the year 1944. It was opposed to the government's policy of compelling cooperatives to pay patronage dividends to non-members.

Bonded Debt Financing

Mr. Low said the system of bonded debt financing had been condemned. In every country where it was in force there were disastrous, recurring depressions and heavy burdens of taxation. When the people of Canada saw that the interest of the debt alone amounted to $481,000,000 annually they could foresee little hope of days of full employment.

There was "great" danger in the government's desire to balance the federal budget because undue pressure in that direction might result in a period of deflation. The government should meet the threat of inflation by "opening wide the floodgates of production" for goods and services of all kinds.

Study of the resolutions brought few developments. W.A. McMaster (PC — Toronto High Park) said persons in the low income brackets because of their number were bearing the brunt of the over-all taxes imposed by governments.

A. K. Fraser (PC — Peterboro West) called for revision of the provision which requires taxpayers to pay five per cent penalty for improperly calculating their taxes. Mr. Abbott said he did not think such a move would be a good idea. Arrangements were made to have the interest paid over a certain period when assessment by the income tax department was unduly delayed.

Jean Lesage (L — Montmagny-L'Islet) urged that surveys be made at five-year intervals to determine the average cost of living for single and married persons and that income tax exemptions be based on the information thus obtained.

C.C.F. and Social Credit party members expressed their opposition to a bill increasing the salaries and pensions of judges of Dominion and Provincial courts because no action has yet been taken to increase Old Age Pensions.

Want-of-Confidence Motion

The Progressive Conservative want-of-confidence motion called on the House to express regret that there were no taxation reductions provided for 1946, that there was no serious attempt to eliminate expenditures and that the policies of the government were discouraging production.

The motion drew support from some Independents and from the Social Credit party of Solon Low, who was among speakers following Mr. Bracken in the debate. Mr. Low urged that the government abandon the system of bonded debt financing and adopt the Social Credit theory of issuing debt-free money.

The main motion was supported only by government members after a recorded vote was called for M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader.

Mr. Bracken, for 20 years premier of Manitoba, urged that the government repeal minor taxes such as those on gasoline and electricity and that it leave the minor fields to the provinces. He suggested there should be established a central Dominion-Provincial committee to study Dominion-Provincial relations.

Review of Relations

After a review of the history of Dominion-Provincial relations, Mr. Bracken said the Dominion in proposed taxation agreements was asking the provinces to give personal income, corporation and inheritance taxes. He added:

"When the provinces say 'at least leave us a few minor fields,' the Dominion says 'No.' That is not democratic; that is not cooperative; that does not represent the conference mind. That represents coercion; it represents dictatorship."

Referring to plans to make cooperatives subject to taxation, Mr. Bracken said his party was opposed to the policy of imposing taxes on monies that were allocated for patronage dividends in 1944 and 1945. He was opposed to the conditions governing payment of patronage dividends, specifically the provision that they must be paid in cash. His party toow the position that cooperatives should be allowed to pay these dividends in cash or its equivalent of any kind.

WHEN SHE WORKS SHE WORKS LIKE MAGIC

One of our former readers writes to the publisher (not to me): "I never intentionally read his column any more because I get tired of reading the same 'tripe' over and over again, in different words..."—seems the gentleman, who has the Ph. D. degree, is irked because I do not share his belief in the occurrence of rabies in man. He urges the publisher to get rid of a "column which has been oposing for many years, many accepted public health procedures, including antirabic vaccination."

Good bye, now, folks.

Sometimes I dream and wake up laughing. I dream that the racketeers have at last caught me and I am running the gantlet—on one side a long row of yes-men of the A.M.A. under command of the A.M.A. mouthpiece, a selected parcel of brass specialists attended by Saireygamp nurses, and a battalion of "clinic" charlatans; on the other side a bevy of mincing dentists led by the editor of the A.D.A. journal gnashing his fixed dentures and breathing fury—the whole picture stirs me deeply and I wake up laughing.

Seriously, though, for a moment, it may be lucky for you people that I haven't any more friends in the medical, dental nursing, pharmacal and veterinary professions than you could count with your digits. That leaves me free to say what I think.

Last Monday I gave my theory on belief that calcium and vitamin D deficiency accounts for sensitivity to pollen, and allergic sensitivity to many other things. High calcium diet and calcium and vitamin D feeding is therefore advisable for every one subject to hay fever or any other allergic condition.

Today I recommend a simple remedy for the quick relief of the symptons of allergy. In some cases this remedy doesn't work at all, but when it does work it works like magic. It is ten grains of potassium chlorate and 10 milligrams of ascorbic acid (that is pure vitamin C) dissolved in a glassful of water. One such dose may be taken at any time when the symptoms develop, and if that is insufficient, take two pr three such doses a day for several days—that is, if it seems to give even temporary relief. This may be used by child or adult in the same doses. If it does no good it can do no harm or no more harm than the same amount of common salt would do. It is not a cure, merely a symphomatic relief.

Only a minority of the five million people subject to hay fever have written in for my pamphlet "Hay Fever" this season, but it is not yet too late to do so. For those subject to other allergic troubles I have another pamphlet "Relief for Allergy." Inclose stamped self addressed envelope and ask for either—if you ask for both inclose ten cents.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What trees are most likely to be struck by lightning?

In a general way it may be said that among the common larger forest trees, other things being equal, oaks and poplars are most frequently struck by lightning, while beeches and limes (lindens) are least frequently struck.

There is a great deal of superstition and folklore associated with this subject. The druids of Britain looked upon the oak as seat of the thunder god because it seemed to be struck more often than any other species of tree they knew. Formerly it was widely believed in England that the beech is never struck by lightning. The Greeks and Romans believed that lightning could not strike the bay or laurel tree and it is said that Emperor Tiberius for that reason wore a wreath of laurel during thunderstorms.

In Germany, France and perhaps elsewhere in Europe people used to gather the herb or shrub known as St. John's-wort on the feast day of the saint after whom the plant was named and hang it in the windows of their houses, supposing it to be an infallible charm against lightning. A twig of hazel was sometimes employed for the same purpose, and a similar superstition existed in England, where country people formerly planted the leek on housetops to protect the dwelling from the bolts of the thunder god. Some American Indian tribes in time of storm sought shelter when possible under a black gum tree because they supposed it could not be struck by lightning.

It is now known that all these trees are occasionally struck by lightning and that no species of tree is entirely immune to lightning stroke.

Lightning is an electrical charge seeking equilibrium. It follows the line of least resistance which is another way of saying that it follows the best conductors. Trees, steeples, chimneys and other tall objects and structures in elevated and exposed locations are most likely to be struck. Among buildings isolated churches with high steeples rank high as lightning hazards.

Statistics relating to the relative frequency with which various kinds of trees are struck by lightning are too imperfect to employ as the basis for a positive conclusion. Many factors are involved, such as the relative abundance of the species, the location of the particular tree in relation to other trees, the elevation of the land, the height of the tree, the nature of the soil and the condition of the roots.

The meagre data available suggests that other things being equal, a few of the more common trees may be liable to lightning-stroke in the following order: oak, poplar (cotton-wood), elm, willow, pine, walnut, ash, lime, maple, birch and beech. No great reliance, however, should be placed on any such list until after a great deal more data have been collected.

It is not true, as often said, that the majority of persons killed or injured by lightning are under trees when struck. Nevertheless the wisest plan is to keep away from trees during electrical storms. One is safer under a clump of trees than under an isolated tree and still safer in the open. The terrific heat generated when lightning strikes a tree often causes the sap to boil and evaporate. Valuable trees are sometimes provided with lightning rods.

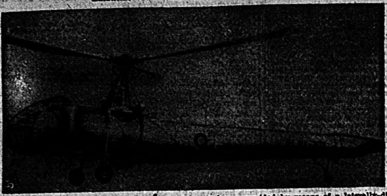
BRITAIN UNVEILS JET HELICOPTER



Until now on Britain's secret list of experimental aircraft, this helicopter, the Cierva Weir-9, is shown in its first public demonstration at an air pageant in Southampton. Built by the Cierva Autogiro Co., the single rotor machine has jet torque reaction. Torque reaction and directional control are provided by means of a laterally-directed jet, squirting sideways at the tail. The "urge" for the jet is supplied by the exhaust and the fan used to cool the engine. It is controlled through the pilot's rudder pedals by varying the incidence of the fan blades. Note the jet chamber in the tail.

History of Origin Of British Empire Theme of Talk

"To be asked to respond to a toast to the British Empire is the delight of any after-dinner speaker and gives him ample scope for any oratory which he might possess. But this Empire, as we know it today, was not ever thus and in these days when the shooting war is over and the shouting war continues, I think we might understand the attitude of other nations towards us a little better if we remembered a little more about the building of the Empire." So Said E. L. Fraser of Trenton when he addressed the Kiwanis Club of Belleville at their weekly luncheon meeting at the Hotel Quinte on Monday. The theme of Mr. Fraser's address was "John Bull Builds a Castle."

"When England and Scotland finally united after fighting some 314 battles and killing more than a million of each other, James the sixth of Scotland became King James the First in 1603, the flag of St. Andrew was placed beside the flag of St. George ending the wars if not the disputes between the two peoples.

Origin of Union Jack

"It is interesting to note" continued the speaker, "that King James, who had received part of his education in Britanny which is now northern France, was fond of signing his name in French, "Jacques." This looked and sounded to the English very much like "Jack" and, because of this, the two flags which flew over his palace somehow became known as the two "Jacks" or the "Jacks." About one hundred years later, Ireland also joined with the larger island and the flag of St. Patrick was placed over the Union flag forming the Union Jack as we know it today. Thus the flag got its name and combination of colors. Any flag which Canada might adopt at this late date would lose a lot of tradition unless the Union Jack is included in its makeup" said Mr. Fraser amid a chorus of cheers.

The speaker then traced the history of the British Empire down through the time of the discovery of America, the formation of the East India Company, the claiming of Australia for the Crown by Captain Cook, the addition of New Zealand which was forsaken by the Dutch, the proclaiming of Queen Victoria as Empress of India in 1877 and the purchase of South Africa from the Dutch for six million pounds sterling.

Defences Well Planned

"In those days, nearly all castles had a wall around them for protection and some even had forts in the walls for defence. John Bull did not forget his walls or his defences. Perhaps it would be just as well if we did not remember too much about how some of them were obtained. Suffice it to say that they are all strategically placed and are commonly known as Britain's "life-line." I mention only a few, most of them battle-scarred indicating their importance and how well they played their part in the last war, Gibraltar, Malta, Mandated Egypt, British Guiana, Hong Kong, Borneo, Bermuda, the Bahamas and several others too numerous to mention which you may recall.

To build a house is one thing and to make it into a home is another. Similarly, for John Bull to build a castle is one thing and to make it livable is another. Consequently, John Bull had his troubles and the making of each wing livable would be a story in itself" said Mr. Fraser. "There were rebellions in America and in Canada; there was trouble in Africa which finally resulted in the Boer war. The Indian wing is not very livable even yet. Perhaps John Bull has not always been right but we must remember that there were a great many types of people involved and great variations in the standards of civilization encountered."

Built by Adventurous Men

"Practically all the wings of the Empire castle were added because there were adventurous spirits who sailed the seas and because of the desire for the expansion of trade and the search for new merchandise. Perhaps business ethics were not always used in these transactions but I believe that England realized very early that to help rather than exploit the people was not only right but expedient. Never theless, in the building of this castle from the British Isles to the British Commonwealth of Nations, we have come through some very stormy times as reforms were very slowly made and our civilization gradually advanced."

"Many men have written histories of the rise and development of the British Empire and there are some men who would like to write the history of its decline and fall", concluded the speaker. Someone once said, "I will accept new views just as soon as they are proven to be true views." I believe John Bull will always have his castle just so long as he is able and willing to put into practice new views just as soon as they are proven to be true views."

The speaker was introduced by Harold Seldon and the thanks of the club was expressed by Eddie Logan.

The sing song was under the direction of Harold Carruthers with Leo B. Riggs at the piano.

Vice-President W. Lorne McDougall acted as chairman for the meeting.

Net Quarter-Finals To Resume Today After Rain-Out

By ANDY ROSS

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 24 (CP)—Due to the loss of practically an entire day, because of wet courts and intermittent thundershowers yesterday, the Canadian Lawn Tennis Championships resume today with 70-odd matches scheduled in an effort to bring the tournament to the quarter-final stage before nightfall.

Sixteen fourth-round matches are listed in the forenoon in men's singles play, while women's mixed doubles quarter-finalists also will be declared if the weather is fine. In men's doubles the matches scheduled will bring six teams into the quarter-final stage. Quarter-finalists were declared in women's singles Monday.

Yesterday, only seven matches were completed in early round men's and women's doubles and favored combinations advanced easily.

One of several matches halted by rain was on the verge of becoming an upset at one stage. The sensational Vancouver youngsters, Lorne Main and Bill Green, won a first set from the third-seeded duo of giant Don Hodges of Regina and Maj. Geo. Leclerc, hard-smashing Ottawa player, he held a 5-3 lead in the second, before the more seasoned pair squared the match with a 7-5 win in the second set.

The third set will be played today with a large gallery assured.

Another match sure to be a crowd-pleaser will be the meeting in fourth round men's singles of Hodges, seventh-seeded Canadian, and Morey Lewis of Huntsville, Alabama, top-rated foreign star. The No. 1 Canadian, Don McDiarmid, meets Percy Bennett, Montreal intermediate champion, in another featured fourth-round match.

New York, July 24 (AP)—You can give credit to Ford Frick (who doesn't want it) or to Larry MacPhail (who seldom refuses it) for the "revolutionary" idea of revising the form of baseball contracts...Or you can agree with Frick that the plan "just growed" and pass on the credit to Boston Braves of the National League for bringing up the idea of player representation which will be tried out for the first time next week...Major League club owners have discussed contracts for a good many years, but it wasn't until the Mexican League and American Baseball Guild stirred up the subject that they got away from leaving well enough alone ...In June, Frick sent out a bulletin about contracts to National club owners; at the all-star game leaders in the two leagues got together and decided a small committee could work better..."That suggestion came from the American League, probably MacPhail," says Frick .... Meantime the Braves had sent a players' committee to confer with owner Lou Perini and the club owners lifted their idea to apply it to all clubs...The results, if any, remain to be seen.

Marshal Zhukov Demoted To Minor Post Says Report

London, July 24 (CP)—Reports that Russian Marshal Georgi Zhukov has been demoted to a minor military post are described by the London Observer as "an important episode in the tug-of-war between party and army" in the Soviet Union.

In a world copyrighted column the Sunday newspaper said the unconfirmed reports were that Zhuhov had been dismissed from the post of Commander-in-Chief of the Red Army ground forces and appointed commander of the garrison of Odessa.

The newspaper said a precedent for the move "should perhaps be sought in the career of Marshal Tukhachevsky who, from Chief of Staff of the Red Army, had become commander of some Provincial garrison just a few weeks before his trial and execution" with seven others in 1937 for treason. "However, it is doubtful whether the sequel to Marshal Zhukov's degradation will be equally tragic," the newspaper commented.

After reviewing Zhukov's career since the end of the war, the Observer remarked that circles close to the Soviet Headquarters in Berlin had known for some time that the marshal was "falling into disgrace" and that it was said Generalissimo Stalin "charged the sturdy, stiff and bemedalled conqueror of Hitler's capital with responsibility for the appalling breakdown in the discipline of the Soviet troops immediately after victory, a breakdown that has cost Russia a tremendous loss of prestige."

"However, the root of the trouble had probably laid deeper" the article continued. "Marshal Zhuhov's present eclipse is an imoprtant episode in the tug-of-war between party and army, a tug-of-war that has seemed to dominate Russian political life ever since the 'cease fire,' though it has never been openly spoken of inside Russia . . .

"The compliments and the tributes may have gone to the heads of some of the victorious generals and marshals and kindled in them dreams of power. After the war the party has quite obviously had some afterthoughts and decided to reassert itself as the 'sovereign of the people.'

"In this it has had Stalin's powerful backing. The tug-of-war has certainly not yet come to a definite end. The new commander of the Odessa garrison may not have spoken his last word—yet. Will the wings of history ever again touch his broad, peasant-like bemedalled chest?"

Many Britons Go On Bread Strike

London, July 24 (CP)—Many Britons refused to buy bread and cakes today and a deliverymen's strike spread to two more areas amid mounting complaints against the three-day-old bread rationing system.

Food Minister John Strachey meanwhile promised consumers more sugar, beer and candy.

The buyers' strike left an increasing number of bakeries and stores with stale supplies of cakes and bread. Some stores sold them without coupons despite the possibility of legal action against them.

Northern Ireland bakers voted unanimously at Belfast last night not to join Northern Ireland "roundsmen" who had struck in protest against longer work hours caused by having to collect coupons for bread. One spokesman said: "We took the decision because we support the Labor Government. Bread rationing has got to be."

Earlier today two groups of British delivery trucks at Camberwell and Stamford followed the example of the Northern Ireland roundsmen.

In London the National Association of Master Bakers, over strenuous opposition, withdrew its motion of last week threatening a "revolt" against rationing. It decided to try the plan. As its 12,000 members have been doing, and "let it collapse through its own defects."

Mr. Strachey, who has asserted that bread rationing was necessary to avoid gambling with Britain's future grain supply, announced these food and drink increases at a press conference:

Sugar—An extra pound a person during the week beginning Sept. 15. The present ration is half a pound a week.

Candy—Half an ounce a week more beginning Sept. 15, bringing the monthly ration to one pound.

Beer — Larger volume, but the already weak product will become even weaker.

TRENTON

Trenton — Miss Mary Brown of Wragge St. and Miss Shirley Cleary are leaving on Friday to spend a week at Chalk River, Ont., with Miss Brown's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown, who will soon be leaving for an extended visit to Banff, Alta.

New York — For $22 a month the up-to-the-minute motorist soon may have a two-way radiotelephone in his car over which calls may be made from all sections of the metropolitan area to any phone in the Bell System, says the N. Y. Times.

The New York Telephone Company made the rate known yesterday as it gave details of the service to be initiated late this summer or early in the fall, subject to the approval of the Federal Communications Commission.

Like the service itself, rates still are to be approved. Tentative schedules, however, provide for a $25 installation charge and thereafter a $15-a-month rental fee in addition to a $7 minimum monthly service charge that will permit the subscribing motorist fifteen to twenty three-minute local calls. If calls are outside the New York service area, toll rates will apply.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Potter and Mr. and Mrs. Paro spent last weekend in Watertown, N.Y.

Mrs. Tom Quinn, Wragge St., is leaving on Friday to spend a week with relatives in Ernsville, Ont.

WEDDINGS

SPENCER—GAY

Stirling. (Special.)—St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, was beautifully decorated for the marriage of Marie Evalina, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gay, and Eugene Morton Spencer, Foxboro, son of Mrs Ferne Spencer, on July 20, at 2.30 p.m. The Rev. W. H. V. Walker performed the double-ring ceremony before an altar covered with pink and white ribbon. White hydrangea, blue delphiniums and fern decorated the church, and the guest pews were marked with pink roses and white satin streamers Wedding music was played by Mrs. R. H. Williams, Stirling. Miss Ethel Smith, of Belleville, sang "Because", before the ceremony, and "O Promise Me" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in traditional white slipper satin with V-neck draped bodice and long sleeves ending in points over the wrists. The skirt, draped at the hips, fell into a slight train, and her long veil of French net fell from a halo of orange blossoms. From her bouquet of American Beauty roses and maidenhair fern fell satin streamers caught with orange blossoms.

Miss Dorothy Gay, eldest sister of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing a gown of blue chiffon over satin with matching waist length veil caught to coronet of apple blossoms. Miss Marjory Gay was bridesmaid, in a gown of pink chiffon over satin, and pink waist length veil and orange blossom coronet. Both attendants carried Colonial nosegays.

Mr. Carl Spencer, Foxboro, was his brother's attendant. Ushers were Mr. Allan Smith, Belleville, and Mr. Arnold Foster, Bloomfield.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace with matching earrings. The maid of honor received pearl earrings, the bridesmaid a silver lapel pin, the groomsman a billfold, the ushers, gold tie clips, the soloist, pearl earrings, and the organist, a silver lapel pin.

Her nosegay was of yellow roses and mauve sweetpeas.

The groom was attended by his cousin, Mr. Clarence La Rue, Foxboro.

The bride's gift to the matron of honor was a pair of china earrings. The groom's gift to the groomsman was a set of penguin book ends.

Out-of-town guests were present at the wedding from Detroit, Windsor, Trenton, Lindsay and White Horse, Yukon.

BLACK—MACLAUGHLIN

John Dales Black, R.C.A.M.C., of London, Ontario. The groom's father, Rev. A. E. Black officiated. Mr. C. J. W. Taylor played the wedding music and Mrs. Hollis Hurlbert sang "Ave Maria" just before the ceremony and "Because", at the signing of the register. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Hugh D. MacLaughlin and the late Mr. MacLaughlin, of Oshawa, formerly of Belleville The groom is the son of Rev. A. E. Black and Mrs. Black, of Guelph.

The sleeves were long and pointed over the hands and the graceful skirt swept into a short train. A white flower halo held the long veil of embroidered net. She wore a strand of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried a bouquet of red roses and white gardenias tied with white satin ribbon.

Miss Josephine Hill, Reg.N., of Toronto, was the bride's only attendant, and wore a frock of petal pink satin and crepe designed with fitted bodice, bracelet length sleeves and a bouffant skirt of crepe with a slight sweep. She wore a pink flower trimmed headdress and shoulder length veil. A double strand of pearls and elbow length gloves completed her costume. Her flowers were a bouquet of pink roses, sweetpeas and blue cornflowers.

Rev. F. Honey, of Baltimore, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. AW1 Wm Alexander, of Winnipeg, and John D. Comrie Jr., brothers-in-law of the bride, were ushers

Roses, gladioli and hydrangea graced the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. John D. Comrie, Jr., Alma Street, for the reception The bride's mother received the guests wearing a street length dress of Queen's blue made with cape sleeves, large black hat and elbow length gloves, and corsage of red roses and bouvardia. The groom's mother assisted wearing silver grey crepe, black straw hat and accessories and corsage of pink roses, sweetpeas and cornflowers. The bride's table was centred with the wedding cake and flanked by ivory tapers in silver holders. Rev. F. Honey, who is leaving schortly for Chengtu, China, to engage in missionary work, proposed the toast to the bride.

Later Lieut. and Mrs. Black left by motor for Muskoka. For travelling the bride wore an azure blue crepe dress accented with embroidery, navy felt hat with veil and corsage of vari-colored gladioli. On their return they will reside in London, Ontario.

Women's Activities

WHITE'S W.A.

White's District. —Mrs. Glenn Meyers opened her home on Thursday evening, for the monthly meeting of the White's Woman's Association with the president, Mrs. Leonard Young presiding. The devotional was taken by the president after which several matters of business were discussed. A committee was named to make arrangements to decorate the church. The treasurer gave a report of expenses and plans were made to make extra money. Two members paid dues and $4.36 of birthday money was handed to the treasurer.

The program convener then took charge. "Running Away from Yourself", was read by Mrs. Bowers. "By Twilight", "Home" and "Is Ambition a Dangerous Thing?" were read by Mrs. R. Ketcheson, Miss Della Meyers and Mrs. W. H. May. A musical game was played with Miss Mary Rush at the piano. The ladies formed a circle and a parcel was passed from one to another. When the music stopped suddenly, the player who held the parcel dropped out. Mrs. J. Brown was the winner of the parcel, a pincushion. A flower contest was also given with Mrs. G. Clapp winning an ivy plant. Mrs. C. Ketcheson was thanked for her splendid program and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the hostess. The hostess assisted by Miss Joan Meyers, served refreshments.

SCOTT'S W.M.S.

The July meeting of Scott's W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. E. Chapman on the evening of July 17, with the President, Mrs. R. Dafoe, presiding.

Mrs. J. A. Lott read an article on "Breaking the Habit", showing how one boy found it very hard to do when there are so many temptations in liquor being offered in so many places.

It was decided to answer the roll call in August at the home of Mrs. Howard Dafoe by a card shower.

Mrs. Martyn had the last chapter of the book 'Angola Now' and asked the question "What of Tomorrow". She said there are one and-a half millions in Angola who must look to the United Church of Canada if they are ever to hear of Christ. The most pressing need is schools for women and girls. Angola is a mission field where any help will be acceptable.

Mrs. H. Dafoe had the chapter on "Currie of Chissamba" on "Currie a Wise Master Builder". First he taught the people of Angola different ways of cultivation, transportation, building of houses and then they were ready to help him in his church work. The Africans are quick to learn and very appreciative —so much so that they have been known to give as much as one-fifth of their earnings to help carry on the missionary work.

After much struggle and a great deal of uphill work he laid the corner stone of church at Chissamba in 1908. The cash outlay was $800; there was a great deal of handwork.

Mrs. Morley Sine had the last chapter of the Study book. It was really an epitaph to Currie. It showed that he was appreciated by all—first by his people in Africa, who showed their loyalty and love in many ways, and second by his colleagues in both Africa and Canada. When on his deathbed his mind wandered and he thought he was back in Africa, the question he asked was "Where are the boys?" This question has become the challenge of Africa to us in Canada Can we allow the torch carried by Currie to fall?

A Sun-Wise Play Dress

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IN THE MYRIAD drop shoulder designs at hand today, this one with the criss-cross halter is outstanding. (We'd say, however: Watch that criss-cross . . . .remove it before sitting in on a sun-tanning session, or it will tattoo you.)

But if you are showing off a tan, this is a mighty pretty model for you, made of black poplin with pastel bodice cuff and straps. Pastels are pink, baby blue and turquoise blue or gold. The model is a laundering item. Nine-to-fifteen sizes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

They love each other but still "can't get along"

Two letters just received from the same town give every indication of referring to the same situation.

One is from a young man, and the other quite evidently from his girl. Possibly they got together and each agreed to write me his side of the story.

Following the "Ladies First" principle, let's begin with the girl's letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am very much in love with a young man. We have been going together for six months. He tells me he loves me very much, but doesn't always show it.

"He used to be the sweetest guy in the world, but for the past week he's been a completely different person. But he says he still loves me.

"He is making me very unhappy, continually accusing me of not loving him and questioning my sincerity in everything I do or say I try to be patient and hope it will pass, but it doesn't. We are talking of breaking up. Please give me your advice."

And now for the young man's side:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am a young man who is very much in love with this girl, and she says she loves me too.

"But it seems as though we do not get along and yet we agree on everything. She doesn't believe that I trust her, and we are talking about breaking up. I would appreciate your advice."

Offhand, I'd say that if these two—or any other young couple—have difficulty getting along even before they're married, they're likely to find the going very tough afterward. This is especially true if there be any question as to complete confidence between them. For misfrust opens the way to all sorts of disastrous jealousies and suspicions.

There are only two—no, let's say three—reasons for a man continually accusing his girl of not loving him, and doubting her sincerity.

The first is that she may actually have given him cause for his doubt, in which case I think he would do well to think things over very carefully indeed before asking her to be his wife. The second is that he may be the neurotic type of personality which finds fault, criticizes and suspects even though there is not the slightest basis for any of it. And in such a case, this girl would unquestionably be letting herself in for a very poor time if she took him on as a husband.

But there is still that third possible cause of friction, and that is, either one, or both of them, may be in a temporary phase of irritability due to some purely physical cause such as fatigue, lowered vitality, indigestion, eyestrain or even a cold.. After all, the girl herself says it has only been "the past week" that she has noticed this change in her boyfriend, and "the sweetest guy in the world" could hardly have a complete change of character overnight. I would suggest that before making a definite decision to break up, as they say they are talking of doing, they both catch up on their sleep. Things look very different sometimes, when you're rested!

Of course there is always the possibility that these two may be temperamentally incompatible, and it's just beginning to show. If this is true, they'd better come to agreement on one thing, at least, which would be to call it a day right now, so far as any serious plans for matrimony are concerned.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Affectations are Old Stuff

Make-up is about the only artificiality left to woman, and, since all beauty fads come and go, even that may be cast aside In times past, when your grannie was a girl, a bride worried because her husband would eventually discover that her long braids were demountable. Her bustle was hidden on the closet shelf. Her bust ruffles were a source of embarrassment.

The steel-riveted, double-turreted corset, with a neighteen inch diameter was one of the oldest artificies It was worn in the middle ages and continued to distort the feminine shape until the end of World War I, when the Sweet Young Things said "What the heck?" and chucked it into the furnace.

Girls nowadays are genuine. They grow their own corsets of strong muscles. Their bodies have freedom of movement. Compare these pleasing babies to the belles of mid-Victorian days. These gals were never supposed to have minds of their own, were under masculine role, and considered a healthy appetite vulgar. Their most violent outdoor sport consisted of riding a horse sidesaddle in yards of trailing draperies.

The late war proved that there isn't much a girl can't do. Surely the world is a better place for a woman than it used to be. As girls have discarded artifices of dress, they have acquired more naturalness of manner. An easy friendly manner makes for charm.

One warms at once to a young woman who offers a friendly handclasp, who sends forth a vibrant message of good fellowship. You like her. If she has defects of appearance, you are likely not to notice them.

More and more are we learning about the value of a compelling personality. It is a strong force in social and business life. It is something that doesn't depend upon features? External perfections are a blessing. Women will seek them as long as the world wags on. But delightful, cordial manners throw them into the shadows. To look nice is nice, but to be nice is even better.

Let us have no pretending, no counterfeiting Let's be as is, but at our best at all times. Affability oils the wheels of life. The woman who has her nose in the air, who snubs others, who has quick words for those who serve or wait upon her, gains nothing but the contempt of her fellow creatures.

For these indulgences she pays a big price. Her face becomes hard and brittle Because of tenseness, she wrinkles early She is a lemon and she looks it. Even the dumbest can size her up at a glance, will tun at her approach.

Even the dumbest can sise her up at a glance

Fashion Flashes

FROM TOP TO TOE, all decked out in fur, is the way some fud designers would like to see us. Awaiting cold weather is a bolero suit made entirely of supple broadtail in gray, with matching beret and bootees!

Really different hats will have the spotlight, come Fall. Most becoming is a half-moon pillbox of carmel-brown velvet made with a rolling cuff. Its intricate jabot trim at centre back is formed by ermine tails dyed to match the velvet.

Endless are the variations of the tailored suit. Black and white crow's-foot checked tweed in a soft weave is used for a new suit made with high-peaked revers on the hiplength double-breasted jacket.

It's a big season at the resorts for the soft spectator sports dress. Rich blue butterflies form the pattern for the print on a white rayon crepe that makes a charming little frock detailed with softly pleated skirt and medium-length sleeves.

Not many women are going hatless this Summer, and why should they, with all the beautiful hats available? Smooth black straw braid is used for the big, slightly drooping brim of a charming open-crown hat. The underbrim is softened by a double border of fringed black grosgrain.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

When a Friendship Becomes a One-Sided Affair

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

About a year ago I was an honor attendant at the wedding of one of two of my dearest friends and constant companions. During the year there has come such an enigmatic change in our relationship that I would like to have your advice as to whether or not I should send her and her husband a gift for their first wedding anniversary. Because I love to give gifts to my friends and because I have always made a point of giving gifts for birthdays, anniversaries, and so forth, I hesitate to omit giving what to me would be, or at least should be, an important gift. (This girl, I might add, has stopped giving birthday gifts.)

Before my friend's marriage, our home was always open to her, because she was unable to get along with her father and sisters. Later I was always "Miss Fix-it" in her problems concerning her engagement, her family, and her prospective in-laws. But after the wedding the bride pushed me aside, criticized my family who had been so kind to her, and any friendship that remained between us seemed to be on my side only. Shortly after her marriage she completely isolated herself and her husband from all her old friends, although her husband expressed his wishes and at times forced her to visit her old friends. She now seems only to want to see a few of her favored co-workers, and has invited me to her apartment only once this year. What would you advise me to do about "acknowledging" their first anniversary?

Uncertain.

Apparently it was your wonderful patience and always-on-the-job kindness that coddled your friendship with this girl before her marriage, and now you are forced to make the decision as to whether or not you wish to continue your efforts to indulge her selfish idea of "friendship".

I can see no reason why you shouldn't send a first wedding anniversary gift if you particularly want to . . . and I certainly can't see much reason why you should make this gesture after the brush-off this "friend" has given you If you have a real feeling of friendship left for her (and I can understand that you very well may have) I think that you might be able to express this friendship better by writing them a warm-hearted note of good wishes, rather than sending them a gift that might, under the circumstances, be regarded as a duty-gift.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should a minister's wife feel any obligation to give a wedding gift when she is invited to a wedding? Or a christening gift when she is invited to a christening?

A. A.

The answer to both questions is "No" The minister and his wife might give a wedding present to the daughter of a dear and lifelong friend, or a christening gift to the child of intimate friends, but generally speaking, they do not give, and usually couldn't afford to give, a gift in acknowledgement of every invitation they receive to wedding receptions and christenings.

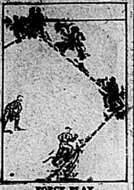
BASEBALL RULES



FORCE PLAY

A force play is only possible when a base runner loses the right to the base he occupies by virtue of the batter becoming a base runner himself. If there are 3 runners on base and two men out and the batter hits a slow bounding ball to the shortstop. Before the shortstop is able to field the ball, the runner who was stationed on third has not quite reached home plate, but the runner who was on first at the time of the hit is thrown out at second by the shortstop. The run does not count. The force-play does not necessarily have to be made at third.

It often happens that when there is two out and a runner on third and the batter hits a ground ball to the pitcher, the pitcher bobbles the ball, only to have the third baseman recover in time to throw the batter out at first. The runner who was on 3rd may have crossed the plate before the last out was made, but the run does not count.

But it must be noted. If the last out should be made on second, and not on a force play, should the runner on third score before the play is completed, the run counts.

CUT DOWN ON TAKING LAXATIVES THIS WAY

See How Regular You Can Be Every Morning

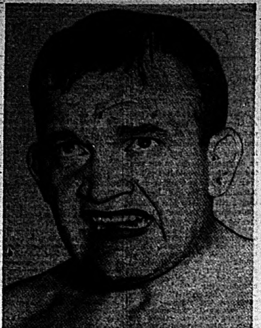
Try taking Carter's Pills this way: Start with 3 and set a definite time every morning. When you get regular every morning cut down to 2. After a few days, try 1.

Then try taking Carter's every other day. You may even find you can keep regular without any laxative.

You see, Carter's are so tiny you can cut down the dose—from 3 to 1—to fit the needs of your individual system. Without disappointment.

Carter's help clean out your intestinal tract not halfway, but thoroughly. They are doubly effective because made with two vegetable herbs compounded properly for thorough, easy action.

Thousands can cut down on laxative dosing this Carter way. Ask for Carter's Pills by name to get the genuine at any drugstore—35¢, 70¢, $1.00. Start the Carter graduated dose method tonight, and jump out of bed tomorrow rarin' to go.



"So they think this big guy from Oklahoma can do what a lot of other so-called wrestlers tried to do and failed," snarled Lee "The Scowl" Henning, pictured above in his best drawing room grimace. "The Jim Goon Henry will be Goon with the Wind after I explode a couple of wrestling atomic bombs around his midriff next Friday night—and I ain't foolin'. I'm getting tired of being buffeted around with all the fans thinking I am the villainous type. I'll be as gentle as I can with the Goon, and even that will be enough to send him back to Oklahoma talking like a Texan." The "Goon" grinned. "Why, Ah'll take that Iowa buckaroo so fast he'll think one of his cornfields has hit him in the head." So it looks like a fast and furious bout on Friday with plenty of action. Warren Bockwinkle meets Karl Krippler Davis a veteran villain in the semi-final while the old perennial, Al Bunny Dunlop, will be back to settle scores with popular Pat Flanagan.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Farley Faulkner, one of the better kiegiers of the district, and that includes Toronto, west of here, smashed his own bowling record at the Bowl-O-Drome last night rolling fifteen consecutive games for an aggregate of 4086 bettering his former mark of a one-man team of 3985 made a few days ago.

Farley's game average was 272.4 and that is considered a record in any man's alley. The game was witnessed by several spectators and the official score is signed by H. S. Dracup and J. H. Hill.

Faulkner, who has bowled extensively on Toronto alleys, has smiled to himself on several occasions when twitted by the city bowlers about "rolling on the funny alleys down there in the sticks." Now he is willing to give the "wise ones a break, especially those in Toronto."

"I hereby issue a challenge to any bowler anywhere, especially Toronto to come down here and use the same equipment, alleys, balls, etc., as furnished by the Bowl-O-Drome to beat the record of 4086 made in fifteen consecutive games for a purse of $1,000. I will put up $500 and the challenger will put up a like amount, winner to take all," he said today.

"This challenge," he said, "is meant particularly for the Toronto bowlers, but it is open to anyone anywhere. All I need is twelve hours notice. Any takers?"

The Latta baseball squad took the leading role in a diamond comedy of errors at the Fair Grounds last night, and Moose Matthews Flyers squad took advantage of their lapses and coasted hime with a 13-2 victory. Joe Marsh, husky diminutive Latta hurler, was in a "balky" mood and drew the ire of the umps on more than one occasion while Flyer runners calmly advanced one base. The Empson boys dropkicked the pill around in the field while tall Al. Wade, Flyer hurler held them safely in check at the plate. The win increases the Flyer lead at the top of the loop and it was their last game until after the National Congress Tournament which starts in Toronto on Thursday.

Coach Moose Matthews will take eighteen players on the quest for the Congress title. Pitchers Wade, Gibb and Curtis, will travel with the team from here while southpaw Lefty Garten will join the squad in Toronto. Matthews will start Garten in the first game against Toronto Mahers which gets under way at 7 p.m. Thursday evening. All the Flyer regulars including Jimmy Lee, Pram White, Garbas, Robertson, Gill and the rest are in prime condition and rarin' to go. The best of luck.

Elsewhere on this page is published the latest standing of the Belleville Softball Association. Point Anne is perched on the top rung with twelve wins and three losses. SACOS are second with 10-3; Flashes third with 9-4, Mountain View fourth with 6-9 and Goodmans fifth with 4-9.

The Ox Pointers are firmly entrenched on the top rung and, but there are some mathematical possibilities of changes in the standing. Sacos have one game to play, and a tied game with Flashes. If they win both, one from Goodmans they can tie the Ox Pointers for first place. Flashes have a game in hand against Goodmans and the tie with SACOS. If they win both they jump into second place, in which case Point Anne will be on the top. Mountain View is finished with the schedule but Goodmans who have two games in hand, can tie them for fourth slot by winning both. If the latter happens, the standing will remain as published with the exception of Goodmans and Mountain View being tied for the fourth berth.

Flashes and Goodmans play their remaining game tonight at the Fair Grounds, and it should be a worthwhile tussle. The kids are out to make that playoff spot and are ready to go all out to give the Maroon and Yellow the battle of their lives. On the other hand the Sedore crew need the win as a first step to the second slot, and you can depend on it, they won't be fooling out there come six-thirty of the clock. Better be on hand, and see one of the better softball games of the year. Goodmans will likely throw Boyle against the Vets, and with the rest of the youngsters stepping high, the joust should be worth seeing.

Golf today "stole" a time-worn gag from professional wrestling and will introduce the links first "masked marvel" in the $50,000 all-American tournament at the Tam - O - Shanter Country Club in Chicago. The tournament opens Thursday and the "Mask" will be entered. Spectators can take time off from neck-strain and win themselves prizes offered by George S. May, circus-minded promoter by identifying the gent with the eye camouflage.

Hobb Evans, new manager of Tam O'Shanter Country Club, has really written an order for the Tournaments this year, to feed the 65,000 diners he expects to serve at the event. Besides nearly 70 gallons of coffee, 20 gallons of tea, 80 gallons of sweet milk, and, of course, 1,000 pounds of ice-cubes daily, he will serve 350 pounds of pot roast, 350 pounds of baked ham, 400 pounds of veal, 500 pounds of fried chicken, 400 pounds of pork tenderloin, 800 pounds of roast beef and 800 pounds of ham on succeeding days of the Tournament.

Ask any member of the Trenton Flyers baseball squad, or as a matter of fact any of the personnel of the Trenton Air station who the tall slim chap, who follows the team around and shouts his encouragement when they are on the diamond playing or at practice, is, and they'll smile. He wears a size too small baseball cap jammed on his head and his infectious smile keeps the players in good humor.

He is Squadron Leader James Loftus, Roman Catholic padre of the station, beloved by all. A star basketball and football player in his younger days, the padre has never lost interest in sport nor in those who take part in competitive athletics. He is a man's man and the Flyers swear by him. He was born in Toronto but lived in the U. S. all his life with the exception of the past fifteen years which have been spent in Canada.

Padre Loftus is a much-travelled man and has lived in Boston, New York, Washington, Chicago and California. He was sent on loan to Ottawa University as an instructor some fifteen years ago and has never been returned. He joined the RCAF in 1940 and has been in the service since. "He's a regular guy" is the general consensus of the boys of this padre whose warm personality and amiable disposition has endreared him to all. He leaves with the team for Toronto on Thursday and one of the most ardent Flyer rooters in the Congress Tournament will be this tall, slim, smiling chap who has done and is doing a fine job with his fellows in the service.

FLYERS COAST TO 13-2 WIN OVER LATTA

Parade of Errors Features Fair Grounds Game With Losers Committing Nine; Wade Allows 5 Hits

Featuring the pastime with a merry-go-round of errors garnished with some bad baseball, Latta got a poor game out of its system at the Fair Grounds last night, and the Trenton Flyer opportunists taking advantage of the fact that the Doc Empson crew could scarcely do anything right, coasted home with a 13-2 win.

Joe Marsh, stocky Latta starting hurler was a victim of the error jinx. Joe, for some reason or other persisted in committing balks, no less than three, according to the umpires, and on one occasion he tossed away the ball when the bobble meant runs.

Marsh was nicked for seven hits for eleven runs in the five innings he toiled, but the greater part of the tallies can be credited to his mates errors. He walked three and whiffed one. Temple relieved him in the sixth and he allowed a lone smack for two runs scored against him.

Tall Al Wade, Flyer right-hander went the route for the winners letting the foe down with five hits, striking out four and wadking two. Two of the hits came off his delivery in the first when he was a bit shaky, but he settled down after that and restructed the opposition to three safe knocks.

Latta scored in the first innings on a walk and hits by Chapman and Empson. Their second tally came in the fourth when Weeks who had got to second by virtue of a fielder's choice and a stolen base galloped home when the Flyer shortstop threw the ball wild.

Flyers scored four in the third when the Latta balloon exploded, on one hit and four errors. They got to Marsh in the sixth and smashed out four hits, one a two-bagger, and with two walks sent six runners across the plate. Moose Matthews double and singles by Holdershaw and Garbas were responsible for three more in the sixth, and that ended the scoring for the aircrew.

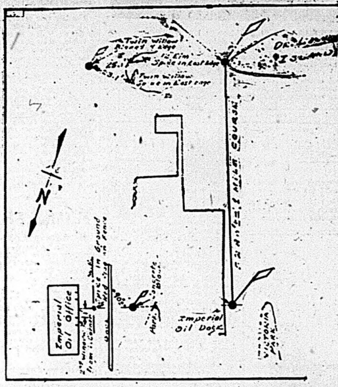
WHERE WORLD'S RECORDS MAY BE BROKEN



Above is pictured the special one-mile trial course sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association over which trials will be run to break existing world's records. According to a wire received this morning from Bob Schelling, Fort Erie, vice president of the association "trials will be definitely held over the Belleville course early morning August 8th for drivers who feel capable of breaking any marks made at Picton or other established Canadian or world's records." It is understood that attempts will be made to break the existing 225 cubic inch record of 88.716 miles made at Picton, August 5, 1940, at the Picton Regatta. Regardless of this, drivers have notified Vice Chairman Lloyd Hicks of the APBA and chairman of the Rotary Regatta being run here August 7th that they will make efforts to break existing records here, water and weather permitting.

Jimmy Clark Wins Medal With 134 In Golf Tourney

Denver, July 24 — (AP) — California's big delegation, headed by medal-winning Jimmy Clark of Long Beach and runner-up Robert Silvestri of San Francisco, dominates the field today as 64 golfers teed off for the first match play round of the United States Public Links tournament.

Clark's 134, lowest qualifying score ever shot in a meeting sponsored by the United States Golf Association, gave him the medal by a two-stroke margin over Silvestri and put the two Pacific war veterans into the championship flight along with 15 other Californians — highest number qualified by any state.

The 64 of the select circle, survivors of a sectional starting field of 3,586 — biggest in the history of American golf — are from 20 states, Canada and Hawaii. Qualifiers from outside the United States were Arthur Armstrong, Honolulu, and Rudolph Horvath, Windsor, Ont.

Two 18-hole match rounds were scheduled today and two tomorrow. The semi-finals Friday and the championship match Saturday will be over the 36 - hole route. Those failing to qualify teed off today in an 18-hole round for the Consolation Medal.

WOULD DIVERT WOODSMEN

Ottawa, July 23—(CP)—Harry Jackman (PC-Toronto Trinity) suggested last night in the Commons that the government take steps to divert woodsmen from cutting pulpwood for newsprint to cutting lumber for housing. Mr. Jackman said he was more interested in homes for Canadians than newsprint for Americans.

Can., U.S. Rowers Flock to St. Kitts

St. Catharines, July 24 — (CP) — From every important rowing centre in Canada and the United States oarsmen flocked here today for the 64th renewal of the Royal Canadian Henley Regatta, now rivalling the historic English Henley and the American National Regatta.

More than 600 contestants are entered for this year's Canadian Henley, being rowed on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The entries were such as to forecast unstinted future growth of the Canadian Henley. H. B. Burgoyne, president of the Henley aquatic committee, co-sponsor with the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen, advised city council that it is proposed to extend the Henley to five days in 1947. And in 1948, it is expected that the meet will run a week.

To get it into three days this year the C.A.A.O. is required to stage at least eight events Thursday morning.

The American oarsmen are fresh from the American National at Philadelphia, where Detroit took six senior finals and the Julius Barnes Trophy for high points with a total of 135.

If partner boasts he is a whiz, his ego is immense unless the windbag also is unerring in defence. The class of him you quickly learn by what he leads on his return.

When partner leads, the rule is to come back in that suit. Not always, however. When your eyes are open, know when not to. Maybe by reading the meaning of the led card. Or by what dummy shows.

Experts come up with some startling return leads. Cards they pick to lead on some occasions are truly brilliant. Many years of experience help them make these selections.

Many of your hard knocks can be saved by having some of these items pointed out. When normal subjects come easy, these specials can be added and usually remembered.

Spot yourself to the east hearts and diamonds from these:

NORTH
♦10 7 3

WEST
♥J 10 8 4
♦A 8 4

EAST
♥K 5 3
♦K J 9 2

SOUTH
♥7 6 2
♦Q 6 5

Your partner in the west leads the heart jack. Dummy in north plays the queen You take with the king. Obviously, a heart return from you will give dummy both next tricks in that suit.

With what you see in dummy, lead back your diamond jack. This is a very unusual return. But figure out what can happen. See that no combination in south can hurt your side by that jack lead.

If south has the ace and queen, he would always take two tricks in that suit. If south has the ace and your partner has the queen, your side has the other two tricks in that suit except the ace.

If south has the queen and your partner has the ace, the south queen is trapped. If partner has the ace and queen, your pair has all. And you still have dummy ten boxed in any case.

Listen, Mamie. Don't cry your eyes out if you never do such things. Bridge experts are probably the worst housekeepers.

Hollywood Column

Hollywood, July 24 (AP) — Screen-shunning Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine have no cause for alarm as yet, but Cornell Wilde has served notice that he is anticipating the day when his family will be billed as "The Wildes."

William Bacher, who directed Wilde in "Leave Her to Heaven," thinks the tea midea is wonderful, from a commercial point of view.

Says the august Darryl F. Zanuck: "It should be interesting." And when D. F. Z. says it's "interesting," that means he has an idea, too.

Cornel confided that the project may start this Autumn. Plans are being formulated for the screen debut of his wife, Patricia. What's more, the picture won't include him.

"It's better if she starts on her own," Cornel said on "the home-stretch" set. "Then, when we do a picture together, it will be that much easier."

Marsha Hunt's reason for free-lancing: She says M.G.M. discovered tht sahe's too versatile.

The beautiful Chicago girl told me on the "smash-up" set, where she is on loan-out, that this is her final chore for the Culver City folks.

"They were too busy developing their youngsters," she said.

"They knew they could depend on me for all types of roles. It got so bad that producers would come up to me and say, 'I hate Marsha, but when I make my big to ask you to do this small role, picture, I'll remember this'. But they lever did."

Margaret O'Brien today became the proud possessor of glamorville's smallest dance studio. 'Lefty' Newhouser, Brilliant Tiger Star, Wins 19th Game And Points to 30-Win Mark

Tall Hurler Has Lost Only Two in 21 Starts and Has 16 More Turns to Pitch; Red Sox Bow to Chicago With Williams Going Hitless

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Hal Newhouser thought he'd never get another chance at a 30-game victory season when he missed out in 1944 by one but he now has 19 victories and at least 16 more pitching turns for Detroit.

Two years ago when the Tigers just failed to nip the Brownies at the wire, Newhouser won 29.

The brilliant southpaw has worked an average of about once in every four games Detroit has played. He has won 19 of his 21 starts and his current victory string is seven games long after yesterday's 6-1 verdict over Washington. With 67 games to go, he figures to draw about 16 more starting turns, barring arm trouble.

Newhouser's lone relief job was a flop. Joe Dimaggio of the Yanks nicked him for a home run that sent the game into overtime and Tommy Henrich belted a decisive round tripper in the 11th inning. Since then he has been unbeatable, allowing only 10 runs in seven games and averaging about five hits a contest.. His strikeout total has soared to 161 and 1,006 for his big league career.

Routs Old Jinx .. ..

Detroit routed an old jinx, Dutch Leonard, as Newhouser continued his spell over Washington, allowing only five hits. The Tigers rapped Leonard and Marino Pieretti for 11 safeties.

Fine pitching was the outstanding feature of the day's program, limited to four American League games when showers washed out the entire National League program.

Allie Reynolds turned in a workmanlike job in blanking the A's 2-0 for his fourth success in a row. The Cleveland right hander helped down Penetang's Phil Marchildon with a seventh-inning single that drove in a run It was Marchildon's 10th loss against five victories.

Boston flopped on its first start of a long western swing, bowing to Chicago, 7-1, as the White Sox wrapped it up with five runs off Bill Zuber in the first inning. Johnny Rigney tossed a brilliant five-hitted at the league leaders, holding Ted Williams hitless although giving him his 100th walk of the season. A crowd of 49,376, largest ever to witness a single game in Chicago, saw the contest.

With a chance to gain a full length on the Red Sox, the New York Yankees fell flat on their faces in dropping an 8-2 game to St Louis. Four Yank errors and 14 Brownie hits doomed Marius Russo to his first setback.

AMATEUR BASEBALL

(By The Canadian Press)

Lefty Yuratovich limited Waterloo to three hits as Kitchener Bantams scored a 6-0 shutout in their first start in the Intercounty Baseball Association round-robin play-offs yesterday. Waterloo, defending intercounty champions, now has lost two straight.

In the Kingston Baseball Association senior series, Giants blanked Nylons 8-0 for their 13th consecutive victory. Paced by the seven-hit pitching of Howie Garrison, Giants were never threatened.

Nylons played the game under protest from the fourth inning after an adverse decision.

Four tie games must be replayed in the North Bay District Baseball Association schedule and the C.P.R. Pirates, who finished on top in the league will figure in three of them. The fourth deadlock occurred in the final game between North Bay Tip-Tops and South River. In a see-saw battle, South River scored the tying run in the ninth to make it 5-5.

JOOST BOOSTS BATTING AVERAGE IN INT. LOOP

Orioles Win Twin Bill From Wings and Climb Into Second Place; Leafs Rained Out

(By The Associated Press)

The big bat wielded by Eddie Joost of Rochester Red Wings during the early stages of the International League season has been considerably cooled off but the veteran shortstop still is enjoying one of his best seasons in organized ball.

Leading the league in batting and runs batted in for a few weeks at the start of the campaign, Joost now is batting .306. If he continues at his present pace, it will be the first time in his career that Joost will finish a complete season in the "300" Circle.

Now in his 14th year of professional baseball Joost has clouted 14 round trippers which represent half the total he has collected in his previous diamond activity.

The 29-year-old veteran belted two homers and batted in three runs last night but the seventh-place wings failed to take advantage of his blows, dropping a twin bill, 4-1 and 5-4 to Baltimore Orioles.

The double victory enabled the Orioles to move over Syracuse Chiefs into second place by one percentage point. The Chiefs, behind the three-hit tossing of southpaw Mike Schultz, blanked the pace-setting Montreal Royals, 7-0 Syracuse tallied twice in the fifth and clinched the decision with a four-run outburst in the eighth. Steve Nagy went the distance for Montreal.

Scheduled doubleheaders between Toronto and Newark and Buffalo and Jersey City were postponed because of rain.

JOCKEY RETIRES

London, July 24 (Reuters) — Britain's famous jockey, Harry Wragg, three times winner of the Epsom Derby, is retiring from riding at the end of the current season.

Wragg, one of three brothers who all became jockeys, will become a trainer and set up his stables at Newmarket.

He won his first derby in 1928 and was champion jockey in 1941. Among racegoers he is known as the "head waiter" because of his long-established racing habit of coming up from behind.

AT THE McCARTHY — Rita Hayworth has danced in many films, but as the alluring "Gilda", in the Columbia picture coming next to the McCarthy Theatre, she does one of her most provocative routines, displaying the beautiful Hayworth legs that carried her on her path to fame.

Dickson Latest Card Hurler to Get Pennant Minded

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, July 24. (AP)—Up to about a week ago St. Louis Cardinals regarded Murry Dickson as just another right-handed relief pitcher. Now they are almost positive he will win the National League pennant for them.

"If he can continue to pitch the way he did last week, we should finish in front," said Enos Slaughter, the Club's crack righfielder. "We don't need a whole lot of pitching to win it. Just a little more than we are getting."

Since July 14, when he suddenly became red hot, Dickson has tamed the Dodgers 2-1 in 12 innings, hurled four innings of scoreless and winning relief against the Phils, and beaten Boston Braves 3-1. He has won six straight, and he has ignited a spark that rival clubs will find difficult to extinguish.

"He's got a world of stuff, including a good knuckler," Slaughter continued. "Seems to me he shows more every time he works. He and Howie Pollet and Harry Brecheen, and Johnny Beazley should put us across. We have got a fight on our hands with Brooklyn and Chicago, maybe right down to the final week, but we ought to be able to take it. We always get better with the real hot weather."

While distributing credit for the Cardinal spurt, Slaughter also heaped a few laurels on Stan Musial for his play at first base since the former outfielder replaced young Dick Sisler in the inner works.

"Maybe Cavarretta of the Cubs can match him," he conceded, "but he's not better Honest, some of the plays Stan has made were so wonderful you couldn't believe they happened. He'll never go back to the outfield now, and it'll probably add years to his career."

Allie Reynolds, Indians—Shutout Athletics with three hits to notch fourth straight victory 2-0.

Regina, July 24 —(CP)— The Reid brothers' act switches its routine from competition to cooperation when it swings into the C.P.G.A. Canadian open at Edmonton next week.

Dr. Bob, 29-year-old Prince Albert dentist was extended to retain his Saskatchewan amateur golf title here earlier this month. It was his older (one year) brother Ben of Regina, also a dentist, who tangled with him in the final round of the tourney which had the gallery gasping towards the eighteenth.

Bob will captain the Willingdon cup team which includes besides his bespectacled brother; Gordon Beattie of Regina and Red McCormick of Moose Jaw.

The Reid family golfing feud really started back in 1936 when Bob first took the Saskatchewan amateur title by walking away from his frere in the final round. Bob still held the upper hand when they met again in competition play two years later.

Ben will be out to try to prove the supremacy of older over younger brother—but not with a vengeance until the Edmonton matches are completed.

Regina sport hunters are riding to the hounds in droves these warm summer evenings, but there are no foxes involved. The hounds are grey and the quarry is a mechanical rabbit.

After eight years of brain racking Maurice (Moe) Williams has done the trick and local fans are able to go to the dogs in traditional English style.

The floodlit pari-mutuels are doing big business at the track which some genius dubbed Wagtail Park.

In Canada, pari-mutuel betting is legal only on horses. But with a charity organization taking the proceeds at the dogs here, everything is squared.

Gamblers like the quick turnover on bets the hounds give and it's small wonder that horse track owners pale at the mention of a greyhound.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

A $300,000 ache in the ribs yesterday forced middleweight champion Tony Zale to postpone his title tussle with Rocky Graziano from this Thursday until Sept. 26 in Yankee Stadium. The ailment was diagnosed as a severe ache in muscles on the left side. With $200,000 in cash customers signed up and another $100,000 or more expected, it was regarded by promoter Mike Jacobs as a pronounced pain in the pocketbook. The postponement will make September about the busiest month boxing has seen, with three title fights in 20 days. The others are the welterweight bout between champion Marty Servo and Ray Robinson Sept. 6 and the heavyweight hammering between Joe Louis and Tami Mauriello Sept. 18.

Redvers Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Professional Golfers Association, said at Montreal yesterday an erroneous notice was issued 10 days ago at Toronto saying the Miller Trophy competition at Islington, Ont., Aug. 1-3 was for the C. P. G. A. annual championship would be held at the Riverhead Golf Club, Ottawa, Sept. 9 to 11.

Dog racing magnates in London yesterday blamed "a small hooligan element" for Monday night's riot at Harringay Stadium, when 17 persons were hurt. The incident came as the dog racing, a $800,000,000-a-year-industry, was under attack from church groups and some Members of Parliament.

India and England drew in their second test match at the old Trafford Cricket Grounds in Manchester, which ended yesterday. The end was exciting with England knocking up 294 runs in her first innings and India replying with 170.

The Royal Canadian Yacht Club has challenged the Rochester Yacht Club to defend the Silas L. George Cup in a three-day competition beginning Aug. 20 at Rochester, Frank H. Herrick, George Cup committee chairman, announced at Watertown, N. Y., yesterday.

Vitas T. Thomas' Spindle from the Racine, Wis., Yacht Club appeared the winner of the 333 - mile Chicago-to-Mackinac race on the basis of corrected times announced yesterday. The Spindle fourth to pass the finish line Monday night, was 59 hours, 21 minutes and 32 seconds out of Chicago. Her corrected time, however, was 51:21:16, best so far.

Twenty of the United States' college conferences yesterday threw a hay-maker at campus athletic commercialism, recommending sharp restrictions on financial aid and recruiting of athletes. Representatives of more than 200 universities and colleges unanimously agreed that athlete-shopping was reaching a dangerous stage.

AT THE CAPITOL — Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes and Dale Evans, in an amusing scene from "Don't Fence Me In", Republic's deluxe musical western, coming next to the Capitol Theatre. The added hit "Sergeant Mike," is the thrilling story of a G.I. and his dog.

Only One Way To Settle This Debate

Montreal, July 24 (CP)—Discussions as to who holds the Canadian bantamweight boxing title held the sports spotlight in Vancouver and Montreal today following title claimants from both cities last night.

Sammy Gibbs, Manager of Eddie Petrin, Montreal leather slinger who served overseas for four years with the Canadian army, says that Petrin holds the title, marshalled facts and figures to prove the statement and was backed by Frank Hogan, chairman of the Canadian Boxing Federation and Fred Duclos, chairman of the Montreal Athletic Commission.

"Certainly Petrin is champion" said Hogan and Duclos agreed with the statement. "Petrin's title was frozen during his war service and it belongs to no one else."

Petrin was awarded the crown Jan. 27, 1941, when he knocked out Alex McCullough of Hamilton, Ont., in the fifth round of their fight in Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, they said.

At Vancouver last night, Arnold Bertram, Manager of Kenny Lindsay, claimant to the championship, said Lindsay won the title by knocking out Johnny Gaudes at Vancouver July 4, 1941. Bertram said that Lindsay is listed in the National Boxing Association ratings in "Ring" magazine of July and August, 1941, as leading contender for the world crown.

Meanwhile, Bertram says that Lindsay will fight Jackie Turner in Vancouver, Aug. 7 and that the fight will be for the bantamweight crown.

Gibbs, looking at the Vancouver story said: "We are ready to defend our title against anybody, any time, any place."

FAITHFUL

BY MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 15

"Love mingled with hate and contempt for a man who tries to buy his way."

"Stop saying that. If I had wanted to buy you, I'd have told you what I was doing to win your gratitude. I wasn't paving the way for myself—but for Joel. You can't understand that, can you? Paving the way for him by lessening your responsibilities at home. Iris, you're upset and puzzled. This is not the time.."

Here eyes were less vehement when they met his again.

"This is the time to tell you that this gesture of yours has shaken my faith to nothing— has made the perfect thing in my life imperfect. For weeks since I've known and loved you it's something I've held on to. Everything could hurt me and disappoint me —but that was right and good. You and what you stood for. When everything went wrong, I looked up to it."

"I never dreamed it would be like this. I do things impulsively like that. It was not to humiliate you or make you cheap. You couldn't be, Iris. And I'm humble for what you did for me. Your gesture was magnificent."

"Do you think they'll keep silent, Annette and Camilla? Soon every one will know. People will point me out as the girl Mark Christian...."

"Loved and lost," he said.

For a second the lightning blinded her.

"I'm glad you weren't here when I came," she said. "I would have been shewdish. I wanted to be vile and abusive. When people are hurt, they want to hurt other people."

"Are you so much concerned about your reputation and what Camilla will spread around?"

"It's not very important. But that's all a poor girl ever has — her reputation. I've tried to keep mine clean."

"Once you said you forgave Joel for loving you too much? Iris, will you forgive me for loving you so much I wanted to make it easier for you?"

It was quite dark in the room except for the spasmodic flashes of lightning. Rain spattered against the windows. From somewhere in the apartment came a cool swift draft.

She got up and walked a little away from him. It was madness to stay and listen to his voice, to be so close she could touch him. Fire and ice she felt, looking at his smooth black hair and his dark eyes that waited for her answer. How close love was to hate — she had the impulse to cry out against him angrily one moment and the next to go into his arms and say, "Take me away from all this ugliness. Only you can take me away. Protect me from everything, Mark— from the lightning and the rain—from people like Annette and Camilla who will lie about me! Take me away from all this and love me so much I'll forget it ever happened!"

She turned her face away and said, "You might at least have given me the perfect memory of loving you when we are saying good-bye."

"Good-bye!"

"I didn't play the game with you. I fell in love with you, Mark. I didn't have any right to fall in love with you when I'd promised Joel—but I did."

"How wrong you are, Iris, with your stubborn loyalty." His hands were on her shoulders. "I won't beg you to listen to reason. I love you and want to marry you. When you know you're wrong, come and tell me. I'll be waiting. You're a fair person. If it takes years for you to know you're being unfair to yourself and this boy, I'll still be waiting."

She said, "Everything is wrong, twisted, and spoiled."

"I'm sorry I spoiled the perfect memory. That's all I can say ....sorry and grateful...."

"And good-bye."

Closing the door, she stood in the long empty hall, now dark, now briefly lighted by swift flashes.

Closing the door on Mark was closing out everything worth while and beautiful—everything she wanted. In moments like this you didn't cry or shout. You were terribly calm, omniously calm to an impersonal world. You thought of odd things at a time like this. Louis was taking off his white coat, Selina was setting the table, and the street cars were crowded. "While I've closed the door on happiness, closed out everything but my duty," and in the last minutes she had never loved him more.

Tommy was on the same street car. How long had Iris been standing in the rain? Her blue dress was spotted, her hair was damp.

She did not see him. She did not seem to be seeing anything. Her eyes, beautiful eyes, thought Tommy, who loved her, stared out bleakly as though the world were empty.

Many people had come to the club pool that day to seek relief from the heat. Some lay exposed to the sun, their backs reddening. An endless and growing line of dripping young figures climbed the ladder to the high dive.

On the sand Mary North, looking like a merry child in a red and white silk bathing suit, sat with Louis Tracy. They were looking at Iris, laughing with a brown little boy who was waiting his turn on the high dive.

"I'm glad you suggested bringing her out today," Louis said.

Mary squinted into the warm sun. "You men! Do you think she's forgotten? She didn't let you see her brood! In fact, she's been very gay about everything. She never mentions Mark's name but he is never out of her thoughts. We were walking yesterday downtown and a car drove by, the kind of car Mark drives. Iris stopped dead in her tracks. She hasn't forgotten."

"Nor has he. That's why he went away. Rest cure, he called it, after the accident. It wasn't that. He had to get out of town to stay away from her. A man has his pride too, you know. Every cent that Eve and Mrs. Wade didn't spend out of that ten thousand was returned to him."

"Iris didn't tell me that."

"Mark told me when he called to say good-bye. Iris says that Eve is singing in a church choir and working as an usher in a theatre. She'll go farther working her way. She went haywire with money." He shook his head. "Too bad it all happened."

Mary's laughter was deep and wise. "No, Louis. It isn't too bad. Better to have had it a little while than never to have had it at all. Iris is a gentleman, keeping her word. She's going to marry Joel, loving Mark."

Iris came out of the water, pulling the tight rubber cap off ner hair.

"Why so serious, you two? The water is marvelous!"

"We were just discussing the fact that I'm about to lose my secretary soon," said Louis.

"October, to be exact," said Iris. "The day—I'm not sure. Mary says I must wear her wedding dress and Mother says I must wear hers. What must I do? Joel says it must be a very quiet affair."

"If I were marrying you," said Louis, "I'd want the world to come and see."

Mary asked, "When is Annette coming back from Rhode Island?"

"Any time now," he said, "and then my reckless bachelor days will be over."

When Louis and Mary went into the water, Iris lay on the sand, her hands protecting her eyes from the sun.

That stormy day did not seem more than a month ago. It seemed only yesterday. All her life would that day seem as if it had been only yesterday, so close and near—the day she had said good-bye to Mark? Time had dimmed nothing of it in her mind—Mark's voice, his eyes, his hands on her shoulders.

She had turned to no one for sympathy but Mary who, knowing so well what it meant to fight despair alone, had given not only sympathy but a deeper and more enduring friendship. Mary had given parties to take Iris from loneliness, had taken her on weekend trips, had suggested swimming on afternoons when the appointment book at Dr. Tracy's office was not filled.

Joel had called the future "clear sailing.' From all appearance it was. Her engagement had formally been announced by Mrs. Wade who had grumbingly acquiesced. So conquered was she by circumstances she could not govern that she made only mild protests when Iris had announced that Mark was the mysterious donor of the prize money. Iris felt relieved when her stepmother said, "I won't let Eve use a penny of his money. I'll give it back. She'll get along. I wasn't keen on her going to Italy anyway. Lawrence Tibbett didn't go to Italy to learn to sing. Of all my children Tommy will be the one to look after me in my old age. You can never tell the way children will turn out."

Louis said, "Too much contemplation is not good for the soul, my dear."

"For the heart, you mean," said Iris. "Mine plays tricks with me. Her fingers locked with his and she smiled at him. "I know my friends now. You and Mary have been...."

"Friends in need. And you've changed. Odd thing that hurts make us stronger. You're a stronger person."

"No," loking away, "when a big thing has cut you down, you don't bother with the petty things any more. You and Annette— is it any better between you?"

"She's written only once since she left and that was to tell me when she was coming back."

"I'm so-sorry, Louis."

"As you say, that's how it is."

Mary cried, "No matter how hot the weather is I always shiver."

"I'll take one more dive and go," said Iris. She laughed at Louis. "You slave-driver, why can't we do this more often?"

There was a letter from Eve when she got home. She wrote, "Taking away the money took my pins from under me, Iris. But I don't want money I didn't win fairly. Working as an usher is fun—you see all the shows — and singing in a choir keeps one in a good frame of mind. Bonatini, my singing teacher, says my voice is unusually mature and I won't have to wait until I'm forty to make money with it. That's the ray of hope I cling to when I'm dining alone, thinking of you and Mother and Tommy around the dinner table."

At dinner Mrs. Wade, in a self-pitying voice, said, "When you've made your plans, Iris, I'd like to know what's to become of me and this home...."

Tommy laughed. "Stop worrying, Mother. Everything is swell. In three or four years Eve will be the pet of the opera, with sable coats and a villa in France. You've got a lot to live for and hope for. He smiled at Iris. "You took care of things here when money was low. When you're married, I'll do the worrying that Mother thinks is necessary to be done."

"I am glad," said Mrs. Wade indignantly, "that some one is going to do the worrying.."

Next day Iris noticed that Louis did not stop for a friendly chat. He seemed troubled, absorbed. The usually strong hands were not steady today. He was curt to his patients and asked Iris for case histories in a clipped voice.

At four o'clock, when the office was cleared of patients, he came to her desk. Iris knew, putting away the papers in her desk, that he had something unpleasant to tell her.

SPORT-TIPS by "Ace" Percival
SWIMMING #33 . . . FLUTTER KICK ACTION
KICK UP, NOT DOWN
Let feet sink from surface—don't kick them back down. Concentrate on kicking up. Keep toes pointed out behind at all times! Kicking down holds you back!
NOT TOO DEEP
Don't let feet sink too deep before starting "up kick." About 12 to 18" is deep enough. If legs are short, use 12 to 13" depth; medium 13 to 15"; long 15 to 18".
LEGS TOGETHER
When kicking, keep legs together as close as possible. Knees should be practically touching. Wide leg position causes you to roll and slow down!

Presents Scrapbooks Of Second Great War To Historical Society

Brantford, July 24. (CP)—Mrs. Margaret Heppestall of Brantford, makes scrap books as a hobby and has just presented to the Brant Historical Society Museum her latest collection. It consists of 51 volumes recording the events of the Second Great War clipped from Canadian and British newspapers.

MORE FRUIT INSPECTORS

Toronto, July 24 —(CP)— T. L. Kennedy, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, today announced the appointment of 50 inspectors to check peaches, tomatoes and potatoes sold to Ontario consumers. Mr. Kennedy said the action follows complaints last year of consumers paying high prices for low quality produce.

The peach crop is the biggest in the history of the province, the minister said. The pear crop will be a complete failure but apples will show 85 to 90 per cent of a normal crop.

TROOPS, POLICE

British administration, the secretariat of the conquering government and the headquarters of the conquering army."

Another Jewish underground organization, the Haganah, condemned the bombings and declared Jews should discard such methods in their fight against British policy.

Two persons were taken alive from the blast debris yesterday. Digging down more than eight feet, British troops rescued Donald C. Thompson, 52, assistant to Chief Palestine Secretary Sir John Shaw, who had been pinned for 31 hours between two huge concrete slabs. An Arab was rescued several hours earlier.

ALGOMA STEEL

"The company considers that its offer of an eight-cent increase an hour to all employees is a fair and reasonable offer and that in view of present conditions the company cannot afford to increase the offer," he said.

Government directions which compelled the company to produce less profitable lines such as coke and structural steel were a handicap. The union suggestion of reducing the present 48-hour week to 40 hours was impractical and would necessitate the employment of 700 additional workers who were not available.

The eight-cent offer would, on the basis of a 48-hour week, give the workers a minimum wage of $34.80 which was $1.20 more than the union was asking for a 40-hour week.

Mr. MacMillan referred to figures C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the union, had put before the committee to show that labor costs for each ton of steel produced at Algoma had dropped from $18 in 1939 to $13 in 1945. The Algoma representative said actually the per ton labor cost had risen from $13.06 to $15.65.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hilton's evidence yesterday he said that while he was prepared to resume negotiations with the union he saw no possibility of a settlement unless the union moved from its "arbitrary position."

Mr. Hilton was questioned by Angus McInnis (CCF—Vancouver East) on whether his company made contributions to political parties. Mr. MacInnis said he was asking the question because Garfield Case (PC-Grey North) had put a similar question to Mr. Millard.

The Stelco president said the company did make such contribution. He did not name the parties or amounts involved.

Passports for Any Country

Ottawa, July 24 — (CP)—Acting Prime Minister St. Laurent said today in the Commons that the Canadian passport office has been authorized to issue passports for any country on the map, on the condition that the person obtaining the passport signs an undertaking freeing the government from any responsibility in connection with transportation.

The undertaking made it clear that the applicant would run into difficulties in the matter of transportation.

He was replying to G. K. Fraser (PC — Peterboro West).

Counsel Seek New Conference With Heirens

Chicago, July 24 —(AP)— Counsel for William Heirens arranged another conference with the 17-year-old college student Tuesday as the state went ahead with plans to go before the Grand Jury and seek his indictment in the kidnap-killing of Suzanne Degnan.

Although Chicago newspapers for the last week have said Heirens would make a formal written confession of the slaying of the six-year-old Degnan child and of two other slayings, there was no immediate indication from defence counsel that he would do so.

Malachy Coughlan, one of the defence lawyers, said he and his associates had decided to question Heirens again after a long conference with the youth and a meeting with his parents Monday.

"We will take up matters pertaining to the pending burglary charges, as well as the murder cases, in which we anticipate indictments soon will be returned by the state," Coughlan said.

Heirens, held under $290,000 bond pending arraignment on 29 charges of burglary and assault, has not been charged with the Degnan crime or the other slayings. However, Chicago newspapers have said that he has orally admitted the slaying of Suzanne last Jan. 7. They also have reported he told of the "lipstick" slaying of Frances Brown, 33-year-old former woman member of the United States Navy, last Dec. 10, and of the fatal stabbing of Mrs. Josephine Ross, 43-year-old widow, June 5, 1945.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was waiting to be sent to bed, and pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma was walking around pushing crooked things straight and straight things crooked, saying to pop, There's always a silver lining lerking somewhere, William, and now that I think it over in detached aloofness, I'm really almost glad I arrived at Hookbinders, this morning too late to get a pair of nylon stockings, because now I dont have to walk around like a person stepping on eggs for fear of getting a run in my new nylons.

By gollies now I know what that glitter is, it's a silver lining of my own peeping through the fog, pop said. I smoked so many cigars today that my head feels woozy, so I decided not to smoke tonight, but now I'm going to light up a cigar, he said, and ma said, Now William that's rediculiss, I mean the silver lining would be if you passed a whole evening without absorbing nicoteen into your defenceless sistem.

Not at all, pop said. If my head gets any woozier, I'll have the sattisfaction of knowing that it really did get that way from smoking too much and not from something I ate. That's the silver lining, he said.

And he quick lit a cigar before he had time to change his mind, and I said, Oh boy, I've got a silver lining too. I've got a fierce knott in one of my shoelaces, and I can pull my shoe off without untying it but I cant get it on again, and if there was school tomorrow I'd have to undo the knott before I went to bed no matter how sleepy I felt, because otherwise it might make me late in the morning, but this is vacation so I can waist a whole hour untying it in the morning.

The result being ma undid it for me right then to be sure I wouldn't bother her in the morning.

Being another silver lining for her.

Woodville Post Office Robbed of Stamps, Cash

Lindsay, July 24 — (CP)—Police said the post office at Woodville, 15 miles east of here, was broken into Saturday and more than $600 in postage stamps, unemployed insurance stamps and cash stolen.

Tools used in the break-in were thought to be stolen from the Canadian National Railways tool house at nearby Lorneville.

Victims' Bodies Removed From Before Palace

La Paz, Bolivia, July 24 — (AP)— At the insistence of a woman civic leader, the bodies of President Gualberto Villarroel and three of his lieutenants were cut down from lampposts during Monday night and taken to a morgue Tuesday to await burial "as Christians."

The bodies had been hanging in front of the presidential palace for more than 24 hours, where they were viewed by thousands of persons. Villarroel and his aides were killed Sunday at the conclusion of a four-day revolution which resulted in 2,000 casualties.

Maria Teresa Solari, chairman of the Women's Civic Union, demanded that the bodies be removed, despite the fact that she had opposed Villarroel's "strong man" regime since 1944.

Meanwhile, the new civilian government moved swiftly to round up the remnants of Villarroel's supporters, and jailed a number of military leaders and members of the secret police.

(A dispatch from Arica, Chile, said the Oruro radio announced that Indian miners in the vicinity had staged an uprising and were marching toward Oruro. The radio added that miners at Pulacayo went on strike in protest against the "cruel death" of Villarroel, who was thrown from a balcony of his palace to an angry mob below.)

Most stores and factories have re-opened, and civilian looting appeared to be on the decrease. Crowds which broke into the home of two high ranking army officers were told by revolutionary leaders not to "touch anything because we shall auction all furniture to buy coffins."

Lt.-Col. Victory Alarcon, newly-appointed commander of the La Paz military region, directed all units of the Bolivian army to obey the provisional government, which is composed of university students and professors, labor revolutionists and some jurists.

Nestor Guillen, dean of the La Paz Superior Court, is acting president but has promised to step down as soon as the principal figure in the rebellion, Tomas Monje Gutierrez, president of the Superior Court, recovers from an illness.

The new government has said it would call national elections and restore civil liberties.

Rescue Party Sets Out For Missing Flier

Edmonton, July 23. (CP)—The Army-Air Force rescue party headed by Captain G. C. Brown, who Saturday joined in the search for Joe Barber, missing Jamestown, N.Y., civilian pilot, left the Alaska Highway at a point 100 miles northwest of Fort Nelson yesterday and are reported heading into the heavy bush and muskeg country to the north of the highway.

The party, guided by L. Larsen, veteran trapper in the area, will follow the bed of the Toad River to the north of Lake Summit and will search all cabins along the route. It is hoped Barber may have taken refuge in one after his Piper aircraft was grounded in the northern wilds more than two weeks ago.

During the search the men will be supplied with rations from the air and by means of "walkie-talkie" sets will maintain communication with search aircraft.

It is expected the Trail party will take three or four days to reach the location of the stranded aircraft. If no trace of the flyer is found in the Mosquito-ridden lower trail area the party may attempt the return trip by a more direct route across mountainous country.

Searching aircraft located the plane on a creek-bed relatively undamaged and the pilot had apparently abandoned it in hope of reaching help.

Doubts Canada Can Absorb All Grads

He was commenting upon the Federal government's university training program for war veterans.

"The policy of the government is good in intent and fairly good in result but I fear we may be educating a lot of brains for export," he said.

BIKINI BOMB BLAST AWESOME, DEVASTATING

CNR Freight Crew Refuses to Take Train into Plant

Attempt Made to Run Extra Supplies into Steel Works

Hamilton, July 25 (CP)—Refusal of a Canadian National Railways freight train crew to take a train into the picketed Hamilton works of the Steel Company of Canada today blocked an attempt to run several carloads of scrap iron and limestone into the plant.

More than 100 city police officers and detectives stood guard at the point where the railway spur line enters the property when the time came for the train to move.

At the same time several hundred pickets of the striking United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) massed about every entrance to Stelco's big Hamilton works on Burlington Street.

Shortly after 10 a.m., police in cruiser cars raced to the plant entrance and cleared union pickets away from the railway gate despite protests of union officials.

As soon as the pickets had been cleared from the entrance two Stelco constables opened the railway gates and removed stones and other débris from the track.

The crowd of more than 1,000 picketers and spectators clapped and cheered as the train departed.

Union officials quickly claimed the incident was a major victory. "The company has been broken—this ends it," declared Eamon Park, Public Relations Director of the local union. "They can't keep going if they fail to get scrap and limestone into the plant."

It was the first activity on the picket lines for several days in the strike which the steelworkers union called July 15 at the Stelco plants here, the Algoma Steel Corporation in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and the Dominion Steel and Coal Company in Sydney, N.S., to enforce its demand for a minimum weekly wage of $33.60 in basic steel.

The plant entrance which the police guarded was the one around which about 400 pickets and non-striking workmen fought a pitched pre-dawn battle eight days ago. On that occasion a company locomotive pushed two flat cars out from the plant and workmen opened the gates with a view to taking in a train. Pickets battled the workers for 25 minutes and the effort to move the train in was abandoned.

Justice Roach Recommends Work Be Resumed and Vote Taken on 10-cent Wage Boost

Ottawa, July 25 —(CP)— Mr. Justice W. D. Roach, industrial disputes commissioner in the current steel strike today recommended that work be resumed in the three plants affected by strikes and that the labor department conduct a vote on the proposal for a 10-cent wage increase after a "cooling off" period of 60 days. The union's demand was for a 19½ cent increase.

The commissioner's report was made public when he appeared as a witness before the Commons Industrial Relations Committee.

Mr. Justice Roach criticized the condition under which union officers had become "a dictatorship" with loss to workers of the right to determine whether a compromise offer was acceptable.

The report covered negotiations between the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) and the three companies—Dominion Steel and Coal Corp., Sydney, N.S.; Steel Co. of Canada, Hamilton, and Algoma Steel Corp., Sault Ste. Marie.

Britain to Buy 600,000,000 Bu. Canadian Wheat

Ottawa, July 25 (CP)— Trade Minister MacKinnon today announced in the Commons a four-year agreement under which Canada will sell Britain 600,000,000 bushels of wheat at a fixed price of $1.55 a bushel for the first two years and at minimum prices of $1.25 and $1 a bushel for the third and fourth years, respectively.

It provides that Britain will purchase 160,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat in the crop year 1946-47, 160,000,000 in 1947-48, 140,000,000 in 1948-49 and 140,000,00 in 1949-50.

Britain may sell or dispose of the wheat and flour purchased under the agreement "in whatsoever manner the United Kingdom may deem both in regard to destination and price."

Mr. Mackinnon said the contract provides that in the event of the United Kingdom requiring from Canada any additional quantities of wheat which the Canadian government is prepared to make available "such additional quantities which the Canadian government offers and the United Kingdom government accepts shall in all respects be subject to the provisions of the agreement."

Only One Man Survives Sinking Of Cannery Tender

Kodiak, Alaska, July 25—(AP)—Harold Aga, 20, only known survivor of the sinking of the cannery tender Cougar, told today how he cheated death for 11 frigid hours in stormy Shelikof Strait.

As Aga arrived by airplane for hospital care here, the death toll in the disaster was reduced from 10 to eight. He reported that a fisherman and cannery worker, at first listed among the victims, were not aboard when heavy seas foundered it Monday night.

Aga said the vessel sprang a leak four miles off Kodiak Island's northwest coast.

"Struggling in the water, I could barely see the passengers," he said. They were panicky and climbed into the rigging without life preservers.

Deaf Should Not Have Noisy Jobs, Very Sensitive to Sound Vibrations

Toronto, July 25.—(CP)—Deaf persons should not be assigned to noisy jobs, Benjamin M. Schowe of Akron, O., last night stated at the Diamond Jubilee convention of the Ontario Association of the Deaf.

"All the deaf are more than normally sensitive to sound vibrations and, for pathological reasons, many are actually hyper-sensitive to the irritation of noises which they perceive," he said in a speech translated into sign language for the gathering.

He said the aptitudes of deaf workers were too various to be channeled in one direction. A safe rule was to make assignments under congenial foremen on a basis of qualification for the job.

Jobs classed as common labor seldom were suitable for deaf persons. Deaf workers without special trade skills were most successful as machine operators and bench hands where manual dexterity was a prime requisite.

U. S. TO CONTINUE TO PRESS ATOMIC CONTROL PLAN

View is Held Facts Will Bring Everybody Into Line With U. S. Key Proposals

By MAX HARRELSON

New York, July 25 (AP)—An authorized source said today that the United States would continue to press for adoption of the Baruch atomic control plan despite Russia's declaration that she could not accept the key United States proposals.

This source said the United States delegation did not consider yesterday's statement by Soviet delegate Gromyko as Russia's final position on the atomic control question, but regarded it merely as an "argument" against the Baruch plan.

"We believe our plan can be sold," the informant continued. "We believe the facts will bring everybody in line with our view."

Russia's position was made known at a closed session of the atomic commission's committee No. 2 when Mr. Gromyko spoke at length on United States memorandum No. 3 dealing with the relationship between the proposed atomic development authority and the United Nations.

"The United States proposals in their present form cannot be accepted in any way by the Soviet Union either as a whole or as separate parts," Mr. Gromyko said, referring to the memorandum.

He said flatly that Russia would not surrender her veto rights or give up her sovereignty to the extent of permitting international inspection of atomic facilities.

He said it would be "dangerous and maybe fatal" to undermine the principle of unanimity of the big powers which was embodied in the U. N. charter at San Francisco.

Gromyko's Contention

Mr. Gromyko declared that the atomic development authority, as proposed by the United States representative, Bernard M. Baruch, was of "such a character that in reality such an authority would be independent of the security council and would have almost full autonomy."

A member of the American delegation, commenting on Mr. Gromyko's declaration, said the delegation was not surprised by his attitude and that more statements like this were expected as time goes by.

The big problem continued to be to find a way to reconcile the differences between the United States and Russia, which have existed since the atomic discussions started, he said.

Meanwhile, committee No. 2 will turn temporarily from the Baruch plan to Russia's proposals when it meets tomorrow afternoon. At that time, Mr. Gromyko is expected to present arguments in favor of his plan for an international convention to outlaw the production and use of atomic weapons.

This plan differs sharply from the United States proposals in that it provides for the immediate outlawing of atomic weapons, while the Americans want the weapons to be banned only after effective controls have been set up.

12-POUNDER GUN FOR USE OF SEA CADETS

Sudbury, Ont., July 25 (CP)—A brand-new 12-pounder gun of the type carried on Royal Canadian Navy frigates and minesweepers was delivered here yesterday for use by the 170 boys of the Sudbury Sea Cadet Corps. It will be mounted on the shore of Lake Ramsay.

Bikini Explosion:

Great Tower of Water Hurling Thousands of Feet into Sky Impressive Sight for Observers

By DON WHITEHEAD

(Associated Press Staff Writer who witnessed the underwater explosion of the atomic bomb from a B-29).

Kwajaelin, July 25—(AP)—Those who watched today's explosion of the atom bomb from close range were impressed tremendously by its power.

"Frankly," a high ranking United States Naval officer said, "if there had been men on the ships and they had seen tons of water hurled from the lagoon to pour down on the ships and then seen mists and steam and water rushing toward them, I don't believe they would have been fit for further battle."

For about 30 minutes, Bikini Lagoon's waters seethed and boiled and deadly vapors and steam curled around ships to hide them from view as though to claim them as victims.

I was in a B-29 press ship. Looking out of the top turret with other observers before the blast, I saw the lagoon placid and deserted except for the ghost fleet.

"Fifteen seconds until H-hour," a voice said over the inter-communications system. We waited for the seconds to tick away.

Like Giant Pile Driver

Suddenly water in the centre of the fleet erupted in a column half a mile in diameter. It shot toward the heavens like a giant pile driver to a height of several thousand feet. Then, as thousands of tons of water fell back toward the lagoon, there was another burst at the bottom of the dirty brown column.

This second burst mushroomed into a great dome-shaped cloud of water and steam and vapor. The top of this dome was white but the bottom was dirty brown, similar to the water column. A shock wave, hurtling out in a giant circle, was plainly visible.

From this giant, dome-shaped cloud shot concentric circles of mist reaching out about a mile. They dissolved as suddenly as they had appeared. Over the top of the dome was a filmy cap which also quickly dissolved.

At the base of the dome, a great blanket of vapor and smoke shot out in all directions to blanket the entire fleet. As it dissolved, there arose from the depths of the lagoon clouds of steam created by the tremendous heat of the bomb released under water.

STUBBY STEM

Unlike the atomic mushroom clouds from the New Mexico, Hiroshima and Nagasaki bomb bursts and the July 1 air burst over Bikini, this atomic cloud had only a stubby stem. Its mushroom rose only a few thousand feet, then slowly drifted north before it was broken up by winds.

For 20 minutes there was suspense over the fate of the target fleet. Then the mists began to rise and hulls of ships came into view. Youthful members of our plane crew cheered when they saw the silhouettes of the Saratoga (which later sank), Nevada, New York, Pennsylvania and Pensacola still afloat.

But the target fleet was in disarray. Ships were scattered from original anchorages. It was difficult to identify them. But it was evident one was missing — and then we saw it was the Arkansas.

As the first column of water shot into the air, there were huge waves in the centre of the target fleet. But these waves were only three or four feet high when they washed up on the beach of Bikini Island, three miles away.

4,000 Single Polish Army Veterans Will be Selected For Immigration to Canada

Ottawa, July 25. (CP)—Hon. Louis St. Laurent, Acting Prime Minister, announced in the Commons today that 4,000 single veterans of the Polish army that fought in Italy will be selected for immigration to Canada "shortly".

Mr. St. Laurent said that the Polish soldiers had served the Allied cause faithfully and well. Many of them did not want to return to their native land because of political considerations. Partly to relieve their flight and partly to relieve what appeared to be a permanent shortage in agriculture labor, a mission would be sent overseas to select the 4,000 single men.

They would be brought to Canada conditionally and would have to be qualified agriculture workers.

Mr. St. Laurent said the Poles coming to Canada would sign an understanding to accept farm employment for two years and stay in that employment for that period at wage rates and living conditions in the district where they are sent.

The United Kingdom would pay the cost of transportation for the Poles to Canada. The Canadian government would pay the cost of distributing them in Canada.

Any man carrying out the provisions of the signed undertaking would be granted right to permanent residence in Canada. Any man breaking the regulations would be deported to the United Kingdom.

J. R. MacNicol (PC-Toronto Davenport) asked if some of the men would not be available to industry.

Mr. St. Laurent said the Order-in-Council covered only 4,000 men qualified and prepared to accept farm employment.

Man is Ejected Successfully From Jet Plane

Chalgrove, Oxfordshire, England, July 25 (CP Cable)—Irish-born Bernard Lynch of County Meath today was successfully ejected from a jet-propelled Meteor aircraft — thus performing what was believed to be a history-making feat.

The plane at 8,000 feet was travelling more than 300 miles an hour and Lynch landed unhurt between two buildings.

A lever exploded a charge under the ejection device and Lynch was catapulted from the plane. He released two parachutes, one for himself and one for his seat. The test culminated three months of experimental work.

Steel Employees Of Montreal Firm Walk off Jobs

Montreal, July 25 —(CP)—Fabricating steel employees of Canadian Tube and Steel Products, Limited, began walking off the job at 11:57 today in a strike for higher pay and shorter hours.

The United Steelworkers of America (C.I.L.), bargaining agent for the workers, claims 800 members in the plant.

A reporter at the firm's plant in Ville Emard in southwestern Montreal said the workers started to leave three minutes before the noon deadline announced last night by R. G. Lamoureux, Quebec director of the union.

The workers straggled out in small groups and dispersed quickly. Nine policemen arrived at the plant shortly after noon.

A-Bomb Destroys Battleship, Sinks Carrier Saratoga And Seven Lesser Vessels

Geyser Rises Mile High, Full Damage Yet Untold

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE

Aboard U. S. S. Appalachian, Bikini Lagoon, July 25—(AP)—The first underwater atomic bomb, exploding with an awesome roar that thundered upward into a beautiful cloudy geyser, destroyed the battleship Arkansas and sank the aircraft carrier Saratoga and seven lesser vessels today.

Associated Press correspondent Don Whitehead, in the best position to view the blast from a B-29, said it was so powerful that the Arkansas was shoved far out of her original anchorage just before she plunged and other target vessels near the centre of the fleet of 75 were tossed about like toys.

First to go in the mighty plutonium blast that was the second chapter of the army-navy "operation crossroads" was the old 26,100-ton battleship Arkansas. She and two small craft, a yard oiler and a tank-landing ship, disappeared in the pink-fringed mist at 8:34 a.m. (5:34 p.m. E.D.T., Wednesday).

Seven hours and 32 minutes later, the 33,000-ton Saratoga, war-worn carrier, settled protestingly to the bottom of the Bikini Lagoon. Her bow nosed upward as if her stern were resting on the bottom, then disappeared.

A little later five of the six submarines submerged in the lagoon were found to be resting on the bottom. Whether they were crushed or had sunk through some defects in their air lines was not known.

Most Powerful Man-made Force

Probably the most powerful man-made force ever loosed — perhaps even stronger than the bomb that razed most of Nagasaki last August — the atomic bomb did not immediately sink as many of the 75 target vessels as observers had expected.

The true extent of the damage is still unknown, however. Ships still were "hot" with radioactivity many hours later. Naval men and scientists edged ever closer and re-entered the lagoon with sensitive instruments, trying to determine the danger and ascertain the full damage as soon as possible.

The radioactivity was so great that two tugs which went to the rescue of the Saratoga, under orders from task force commander Vice-Admiral W. H. P. Blandy to try to beach her, had to turn back and let the carrier sink alone.

The battleship New York and the Japanese battleship Nagato were listing, evidently damaged, as were the battered carrier Independence, the destroyer Hughes, the transport Fallon and the heavy cruiser Pensacola.

Death Toll Rises To 63 in Palestine Bomb Incident

Jerusalem, July 25 (CP)—The death toll of Monday's bombing of the King David Hotel today rose to 63 and the list of missing dropped to 55 as medical officers and engineers at the scene abandoned hope that any victims were stil alive in the rubble.

(Reuters News Agency reported casualties as 66 dead.)

Fatigued but grimly-determined soldiers continued, nevertheless, to play through a slowly diminishing pile of debris. Six persons had been rescued previously from the ruins.

Forty-seven persons still are confined to hospitals.

Battle-hardened soldiers who had seen action through most of the war declared there was nothing worse than this," after extricating the mutilated bodies of the victims.

Tension rose sharply following the issuance of the British White Paper blaming the Jewish agency for Palestine for certain acts of violence by underground forces. There was no crystallized reaction as yet, however.

Negro Kills Long Island Matron Rapes Daughter

Plandome, N.Y., July 25 (AP)—Mrs. Marjory Church Logan, 50 north shore Long Island society matron, was shot and killed and her 26-year-old daughter, Marjory was raped and shot in the head yesterday in their fashionable Flower Hill home. Nassau County police issued a nine-state alarm for a suspect they identified as a young Negro with "starey eyes."

POLES STUDY

Warsaw. (CP)—Although Poland's universities were hard hit by the war and many buildings were destroyed, there are more students today than before 1939. Total enrollment is 48,277, of which 39,467 are in state universities and 8,810 in private institutions.

Thunderstorm Causes Panic

Brussels, July 25 — (AP) — A violent thunderstorm caused near panic last night in parts of Brussels, where some persons linked it up with the Bikini atomic bomb test. Lights were put out and neighbors held excited conversations until doubters finally won out — and everybody went back to bed.

Dig Down to Ruins of Original London And Find Secrets of Various Ages

By WILLIAM E. MACKLIN

London, July 25 (AP)— Beneath the wartime rubble of London have been found archaeological secrets which for centuries had been sealed under buildings that foiled the curious researcher.

Investigators have dug down to the ruins of the original London built about 100 A.D. around Ludgate Hill, on which now stands St. Paul's Cathedral.

There is evidence that the original Londoners had a pottery industry that could have provided containers for the principal beverage of that period, although there is no evidence that Scotch whisky or tea yet had made inroads among the populace.

W. F. Grimes, keeper of the London museum, who has been conducting the research, said "a skull believed to be that of an inhabitant of Roman London, Roman glazed ware, and cooking pots and jugs of the middle ages are being unearthed."

Manufacturers of that period realized the importance of advertising. Many dishes contain the potter's name.

In one area of the old city a medieval centre of the tanning and leather industry was found.

"We discovered a number of funnel-shaped pits, heavily lined with wood consisting of planks packed by a wicker-work construction," he added. "Probably they were the soaking pits used by the craftsmen of the time."

Even then London had its slums as well as fine buildings. The findings will force a revision of the accepted picture of that period, Mr. Grimes said.

The discoveries recalled the chance finding of the famous Roman health resort at the western English city of Bath. In the evacuation for a basement in the last century, 2,000-year-old lead water pipes were unearthed. Further exploration revealed a complete system of swimming pools where Caesar's legions may have basked in the sun.

Paris Food Prices, Transportation Fares Jump

Paris, July 25 —(AP)— Paris food prices, transportation fares, and advertising rates jumped today and Paris newspapers, fearing a run of inflation, blared the news in bold, black headlines.

Although the basic price of meat had not been established, bread went up from about 6.72 cents to 11.76 cents for two pounds and milk from about 7.5 cents to 9.2 cents a quart.

The increases generally were attributed to 15 to 30 per cent salary boosts which are going into effect throughout the country.

In the newspaper field, where a 30 per cent payroll increase was made retroactive to June 1, advertising rates are going up about 20 per cent. Railroad fares have been increased 10 per cent and freight rates 30 per cent, while hotel rates went up 50 per cent last month.

People Can And Should Live To Be 300 Years Old

—Shaw

New York, July 25 (AP) — George Bernard Shaw believes that people "can and should" live to be at least 300 years old, "the necessary span of a worthwhile human life."

The Irish-born dramatist gave his views on longevity on the eve of his 90th birthday (Friday) in an interview with Hayden Church, of the Saturday Review of Literature, at his home at Ayot St. Lawrence, Tertfordshire, England. The interview is published in this week's issue of the Review.

A lifetime of three centuries is essential for "political maturity," said Mr. Shaw.

"Death is not to be regarded as natural and inevitable," he said. "We die because we do not know how to live, and kill ourselves by lethal habits. Mortality should be confined to murder, suicide and fatal accidents."

Mr. Shaw explained how he arrived at the figure of 300:

"I have lived 89 years and am not yet fully adult politically. Give me a second century of apprenticeship as a ruler, and at the end of it I might be qualified as a senator, and an oracle for a third century. . . ."

Credit Long Life Of Bernard Shaw To Vegetarianism

New York, July 25 (AP)—The cry of "foul" was raised today over the selection of "breast of chicken" as the main dish for the Saturday Review of Literature's 90th anniversary birthday dinner in honor of George Bernard Shaw. The dinner will be held tonight at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria. Symon Gould, associate editor of the magazine American Vegetarian, declared that Shaw's "astounding longevity is due in no small measure to his abstinence from flesh, fish and fowl for a period of over 55 years."

The council heard the protest and agreed the fad was "unsightly" but turned the whole matter over to the city attorney with instructions to handle it himself and Please Do Not report back.

TOURIST'S QUESTION GIVES STORE CLERK GOOD OPPORTUNITY

American business in city stores amounted to a seasonal high yesterday, merchants reported. One stated that his morning's business exceeded the total of the previous two days.

A quick-thinking clerk who toils in a variety shop when asked by an American paying his first visit to Canada, "What do we Yanks usually buy in Canada?" replied, "china and silverware".

Business was brisk for the next few minutes.

Ramsbottom, Windsor, has been appointed in charge of the Kingston detachment of the force, Inspector Harry Thompson, head of the Belleville district announced today. Car Collision Injures Girl From Montreal

Picton, July 26. — Following a collision between two cars in Hallowell township yesterday, Brenda Bray, 13, of Montreal, was admitted to Prince Edward County hospital here, suffering from an injured foot. The girl was sitting on the left fender of the car at the time. Less seriously injured were Mrs. James Bray, Carol Bray and Michael Dyer.

Driver of the other car in the collision was Mrs. D. E. Maddock, of Rochester, and with her were Mrs. Leland Brewer and doughter, Donna, all of Rochester. They escaped injury. Both cars were considerably damaged. Provincial Constable J. A. Rogers investigated. The two families were holidaying in the county.

Alert Observer Notes Different Marker on Car

How many motorists in the Belleville district would notice immediately if licence plates on their motor cars were switched without their knowledge?

Just such a question is in the minds of local police officers following the recovery of a car which was stolen Tuesday afternoon from Victoria Ave. The car, owned by Ross Livingstone of Corbyville, was recovered early Thursday morning parked on Pinnacle Street with a different licence marker on the vehicle.

Apparently after stealing the vehicle the party responsible had changed the marker with another automobile, the owner of which was not aware of the fact his car was carrying a different number until advised by a friend.

When asked by a friend if he had changed cars the motorist replied he had not. The friend then pointed out his car was carrying a strange number. Police investigation revealed it was the number belonging to the Livingstone car.

Two Men Fined For Causing Disturbance

Causing a disturbance at a young people's summer camp is a rather expensive form of amusement two Stirling district telephone employees learned to their sorrow in county police court, Thursday morning when they were assessed fines and costs totalling $26.

The two young men Wednesday evening were apprehended by provincial police following complaints from the leader of a that a number of young men were young people's camp at Oak Lake causing a disturbance. The young men were stated to have been hollering and throwing stones at the camp. Four or rive others stated to have been involved, disappeared before the arrival of the police.

According to the report the young men had been enjoying a swim in Oak Lake with the disturbance incident following.

"I am going to assess fines as though the men had been charged with drunkenness", commented Magistrate T. Y. Wills. "If they were not drunk they certainly acted as if they were.'

17-pound Pike Caught by Two Local Anglers

So there's no big fish in the bay?

Ask Alfie McCarthy and Harry Day that question and they will laugh at you and point with justifiable pride at one of the biggest pike ever hauled from the musky-infested waters of Muscote Bay.

The big fellow who gave them a tough thirty-minute battle yesterday afternoon tipped the scales at 17 pounds 8 ounces, and measured 43 inches in length. The head of the fish alone weighed 4 3-4 pounds.

The fishermen had hauled "four or five small ones" in their craft and were on their way home when the big pike struck. They were using a red-eye wobbler that fooled the big fish completely.

The boys today removed the head from their prize haul and within a short time will have it mounted as a trophy of their fishing expedition.

Constable Morris Given Promotion

Veteran of nineteen years in the service, Provincial Police Constable D. Price Morris, formerly of this city, now of Peterborough has been promoted to the rank of corporal in charge of the Peterborough detachment, Inspector Harry Thompson, district police head, announced today.

He joined the Ontario Provincial Police in December, 1927, after serving for some time as a member of the Belleville City Police Department. Shortly after his appointment, he was posted to Picton where he was stationed until 1930, when he was transferred to the Bancroft District.

Following six years service in the northern district, he was moved to Bowmanville where he remained until 1936, then proceeding to Peterborough where he has remained since.

Corporal Morris is well known in this district. He is a brother-in-law of Mr. Ernest Martin, 214 Church Street, and of Mr. Jack Clark of the butcher firm of Clark and Miles and a brother of Mrs. Henry Brooks, Foster Ave.

Boiled Peanuts Southern Treat

Tallahassee, Fla., July 25 — (CP)— It's boiled peanut time again—the season in which hundreds of unsuspecting northerners are taken by surprise by the soggy Dixie delicacy.

The average northerner visiting the south and buying a sack of boiled peanuts for the first time, thinks he has the regular parched variety. From all outward appearances he has.

It's only when he discovers the hulls are damp to his touch that he begins to wonder. And when he opens the shells to discover the nuts inside are soft and pulpy, instead of being crisp and firm, he's likely to turn to the nearest southerner for an explanation.

He'll be told that the nuts, boiled in salty water as they come from the vine, long have been favorites in the south at peanut harvest time. From then on, it's up to the visitor to acquire a taste for them or be cautious when purchasing peanuts in the future.

IN NEXT 30 YEARS

Seattle, July 25 —(AP)—The next 30 years may bring atomic propulsion, safe flights at speeds ranging from hovering to several times the speed of sound, unlimited world flying ranges, travel into outer space, "and other advances even more startling," Wellwood E. Beall, Boeing Aircraft Company engineering and sales vice president, predicted yesterday.

Body of Deseronto Man Found in Bay, Drowned Saturday

Missing since Saturday evening July 20th., the body of James Henry Maracle, age 34, of Deseronto, was found floating in the Bay of Quinte on Wednesday afternoon.

The body was found by Provincial Constable Sam Ervine approximately 100 yards from shore at a point opposite where Maracle was designated to have fallen into the water from a boat. An autopsy conducted by Dr. J. B. McKay, pathologist at the Belleville General Hospital, revealed Maracle had been drowned.

Police investigation into the incident revealed that on Saturday evening Maracle had volunteered to take a cousin, Hubert Green, home in a motor boat. During the trip the motor had run out of gasoline and an attempt had been made to row the boat to shore.

In some manner the boat tipped and Green fell into the water but while making his way to the shore he stated he heard Maracle asking if he were all right. When Maracle did not turn up a search was instituted, the boat being found the following morning. Dragging operations were commenced but proved unsuccessful until the body was found floating on the surface Wednesday afternoon.

A coroner's jury was empanelled by Coroner Dr. H. A. Boyce of Deseronto, the inquest being adjourned until called.

Cripple Sees World From Motorized Bed

Carman, Man., July —(CP)— Seriously crippled in a truck accident, Peter Dyck has been saved from a lifetime in hospital by a strange new motor vehicle that's really a motorized bed. For want of a better name, district people call it "Peter's Jitney."

Nine years ago, Dyck broke his spine in several places, and doctors told him he would never walk again. He remained in the Carman hospital until the spring of 1945, when he received a visit from garageman J. P. Neufield of Winkler, Man. Neufield said he thought he could build a car that would enable Dyck to get away from the hospital occasionally.

A few months later, Dyck was lifted from his bed and placed stomach-downwards in his new vehicle. He soon learned to operate his "jitney," and now he travels about with no trouble at all.

The car was made out of broken auto frames, angle iron, and "junk." Its controls, all hand-operated, are within easy reach of the invalid driver. The one and a third horsepower motor gives a top speed of ten miles an hour.

Patterson, Liberal opposition leader in the Saskatchewan Legislature and former premier, said in a speech prepared for delivery here yesterday that he did not propose to offer himself for leadership of the Liberal party in Saskatchewan at the Liberal convention in Saskatoon Aug. 5.

Young Lad Turns Removed Tonsils into Business Profit

This is the story of an astute young business man—a chap who stood just inside the door when opportunity knocked, and opened it before it could get away.

He is "Pat" Black, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Black, Chatham Street.

"Pat" figured the summer holidays were slipping away pretty fast—with not much revenue coming in. What to do, was the question.

Then Mother Nature, with a kindly eye beamed down on the youngster, and unwittingly lent a willing hand.

"Pat" is seemed developed a throat condition that necessitated the removal of his tonsils. In present day medical circles, this operation is a minor one—but it gave the young man the opportunity to develop his business acumen.

So he quizzed a good natured nurse. He asked questions about tonsillectomies. He inquired as to what happened to tonsils when they were removed. He was told.

Then came the great idea. He murmured a question about having his tonsils to take home. Authorities acquiesced.

Arriving home, plus tonsils carried in a small glass jar, he immediately informed the kids of the neighborhood.

Tonsils, to these adolescent minds were something that hurt the throat; that made a fellow make a face when he swallowed, and things that were cut out when they kicked up didoes. But, something to be seen, was a different matter.

And here's where Pat's business ideas came into play. If the kids wanted to see the tonsils so badly—they'd pay for the privilege. So he charged them a nickel, and that night when the figurative cash register was checked, Pat had $2.42.

Pat figures he either short-changed somebody or else was overpaid. Hence the odd two coppers.

But the thriving business turned out to be a brief one. It soared in a silver glory for a day—then suddenly folded up.

For a stern father, learning of the new "business," quickly put down the parental foot—and the tonsilar inducements to the kids' nickles are now in a spot where they cannot be utilized for business purposes, or for that matter, seen again.

Flying Club's New Plane Gives Several Passengers Flights Over City

For the first time since barnstorming days prior to the war Belleville civilians Wednesday afternoon had the opportunity of seeing just what the city looked like from an elevation of 1,000 or more feet when the Belleville Flying Club with their newly arrived Tiger Moth took up passengers for brief ten minute rides.

Flights were made from the club's landing strip to the north and west of the Belleville Agricultural Park with "Scottie" Cameron at the controls of the former RCAF training plane.

His Worship Mayor Frank S. Follwell was one of the first to take "wings" to have a look at the city from the air. The Chief Magistrate appropriately donned leather flying headgear for his trip among the clouds. He was assisted into the rear tandem seat of the Tiger Moth, the canopy was slid shut by the club president Charles Cawker and with a roar of the plane's motor the Mayor was in the air. An extra turn over the city was given for the Mayor's benefit.

Proof that flying is a sport looked forward to by members of the younger generation was the number of teen-agers clamoring for their turn to take to the air for a ride over the city. First member of the fair sex to go up was fourteen-year-old Beverley McCoy, who not satisfied with one trip, took a second turn in the Tiger Moth.

Initial usage of the club's new landing strip on the Ponton property just west of what is popularly known as the old Catholic picnic grounds, indicated that a satisfactory landing field, even for commercial use could be developed.

Already landing strips 1,000 feet long have been cleared of stones and grass and arrangements are being made to have a bulldozer level off the few slight knolls. Yesterday the pilot of the Tiger Moth had no difficulty in setting the ship down.

Flying club officials feel confident that with but little work both landing strips can be extended to approximately 2,000 feet in length. Minimum commercial flying field requirements call for runways 1,800 in length, it was stated.

He said the two-week-old boycott of Spanish ships by Latin American port workers was part of the campaign.

PICTON

McFarland Co. Awarded Contract For Sewerage

Picton, July 25 — A contract for the installation of sewerage was awarded by town council at a special meeting, with the successful contractor being the H. J. McFarland Construction Co., of Picton. The amount of his contract was $388,997.05. There was one other tender, that of W. H. Harvey and Son of Kingston, for 449,490.20. Actually, that of the McFarland Co. was for $369,259.65 based on the same plans and specifications. However, it was discovered that through an error, the specification sheets calling for tenders had not included the requirement for submission of a price on the Main Street sewer, although they had asked for a price on sewers to run behind the stores through a part of the business section of Main Street. The error occurred when the Toronto engineering firm got out the tender forms.

Council decided that the sewer would not run behind the stores but through the centre of Main Street throughout the length to be constructed. This called for an additional tender, and Mr. McFarland quoted the sum of $27,000 and he had tendered $7,262.05 for the abandoned item. His total tender price was thereby amended to $388,997.05.

Construction Items.

Items in the tender included $305,285.90 for sanitary sewers; $75,836.35 for sewage disposal plant complete, including grit chamber, marsh crossing and outhall sewer; $3,572.80 for sewage pumping station on Bridge Street including overflow; $4,302 for sewage pumping station on Front Street.

Though this tender was accepted, it was pointed out that the cost of the sewerage project would likely reach $450,000.00. In addition to the contract, estimates include $14,337 for disposal plant equipment; $5,858 for pumps; $1,060 for valves; $2,122 for chlorinator; $6,075 for engineering fee; $6,000 for pump house sites and rights of way.

Debentures will be issued but the term has not yet been decided. Mr. McFarland said that the project could be completed in a year if materials and labor are available.

At this meeting, former mayor and present Councillor Nesbitt was named acting mayor as Mayor Ralph Warren is leaving to reside in Barrie.

Royal Princesses Scrub Ship Decks

Dartmouth, Devon, England, July 25 —(CP Cable)— Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret getting a taste of life at sea with the Windsor Sea Rangers troop of which the girls are members, yesterday polished brass and scrubbed the decks of the training ship MTB 630. About 30 girls were aboard.

The girls also visited the battleship Duke of York. Princess Elizabeth thanked Capt. A. Nicholl for allowing the Sea Rangers to call their training ship Duke of York and in return received a battleship cap and tallies.

COAL CONTROLLER MORE OPTIMISTIC

Ottawa, July 25 (CP)—E. J. Brunning, Dominion coal controller, said a trip through western Canada coalfields had left him "encouraged" that their increased tonnage would enable coal-short central Canada "to pull through the winter."

"That prediction," he hastened to say, "depends on several things, notably the winter weather and further stoppages."

Rickarton Castle Plans Additional Yachting Facilities

Picton, July 25 — With well over $150,000 already invested in Rickarton Castle Hotel and International Yacht Club here, the owners are planning a more ambitious program. They have applied to the town for a building permit for $50,000 for a boat house and pavilion. The boat house would be equipped for boat building and all kinds of repairs and service, placed at the disposal of visiting yachtsmen. The pavilion would be part of the yacht club facilities.

The International Yacht Club has been organized in connection with the hotel for the promulgation of the arts of seamanship, sportsmanship and good fellowship, and is a non-profit organization. F. L. Ward, K.C., has been named Commodore, Harvey J. Vice Commodore and L. B. Calnan, Flag Captain. Memberships are now being received.

The castle was formerly the residence of the late Brigadier R. R. Hepburn, C.M.G., and for a time during the war was used as an officers' mess. It has been converted into one of the finest hostelries in the province. The latest addition is an outdoor dance pavilion with a marble floor. Located on the bay shore, just outside the easterly limits of the town, it is especially appreciated by those who visit Canada by water.

Camp for Girls.

Sponsored by the W.C.T.U., the annual summer camp for girls is being held at Consecon Lake for the next ten days. There are 55 girls from the surrounding district in attendance. In addition to an interesting program of sports and other recreation, there are periods for instruction in religion and temperance. Picton Kinsmen Club sent ten girls to this camp.

Mrs. George Teskey of Glenora is camp manager and Mrs. Mary E. Hope of Kingston, the camp mother. Miss B. Browning of Kingston is swimming instructor and camp cook is Mrs. T. Walsh of the same city.

Branscombe Trophy Back.

The Branscombe Challenge Trophy, open for competition among golf clubs within a radius of one hundred miles of Picton, has returned to the Picton club. This is the result of a Picton pair defeating Port Hope players who won it here and successfully defended it here a second time, at Port Hope and at Belleville. Representing the local club, Mickey Pike and J. Slater defeated L. Austin and W. Rowden of Port Hope. Slater had a net score of 78, Pike one of 71, Austin 80 and Rowden 73. There were fifteen Port Hope visitors here competing in match play. The Picton players won by 14 points. Next Sunday the Picton players go to Port Hope.

There is a great revival of interest in the golf club this year with many former servicemen resuming the game. Teas are held each Sunday afternoon and are largely attended.

Napanee Club Entertained.

Members of Napanee Rotary Club were guests of the Picton club Tuesday evening. Part of the visitors made the trip here by boat and previous to the dinner were entertained at the Golf and Country Club. Dinner was served at the Royal Hotel and was followed by a program by guest artists.

STRIKERS LOOT UNRRA SUPPLIES IN TOWN IN NORTH ITALY

Milan, July 25 —(Reuters)— Strikers in the northern Italian town of Rovigo dragged the local government representative from his home Tuesday and beat him in the street. They looted the town's United Nations Rehabilitation Relief Administration's supplies and overwhelmed police before peace was finally restored. A general strike of the town's 14,000 inhabitants against food conditions had been called.

Non-Striker's Wife Tells of Intimidation

Hamilton, July 25 —(CP)— Mrs. Murray McMaster, mother of three children whose husband inside the strike-bound Steel Company of Canada Ltd. plant, gave testimony against William Lewis, 58, one of the strikers at Stelco who is charged with intimmidation. Lewis is alleged to have approached Mrs. McMaster July 17 and warn her that if her husband did not come out of the plant his body would be found in the bay.

Mrs. McMaster told the court Lewis had said he was sent by 10 men and that her husband's boat would be overturned. He also told her one of her children would "be missing" if her husband did not stop work, she said.

Lewis told the court he was "attempting to keep peace" since McMaster had been rowing back and forth to the company and was carrying a revolver and "bragging what he would do." Lewis said he thought McMaster should "stay in or out and keep his mouth shut."

Lewis denied having said that harm would come to any of the McMaster children.

The case will be continued Friday.

World Health Organization

One of the great signs of the future for the health of the world is the formation of the international health organization planned by the United Nations. Just as communities gain by the improved health of other communities so it will be with nations. Some parts of the world where health measures are not highly advanced may well look with the brightest hopes for good results for the nations in the association and those of the rest of the world.

Co-operation of communities and a sound healthy policy have done wonders in Canada, United States, Britain and the other Western World countries.

The improving health of the world can be made an additional tie binding the nations together in a spirit of unity.

The Way Greiser Took

Execution blotted out this week, Arthur Greiser, a criminal of whom the world is well rid. He was hanged at Posen.

Greiser, President of the Senate of the Free City of Danzig, eight years ago this July, showed his love of that evil monster Hitler, by defying the League of Nations Council and delivering what the New York Times calls "the most insolent speech ever heard there." He scorned the League and "gave the Council members the Nazi salute and, turning around, thumbed his nose at representatives of the world press and public in the galleries."

Greiser did not have the forevision to see the end of his road for he had en evil genius, he was one of those men whom the world has justly considered a war criminal. Had Greiser seen in his mind's eye the shadow of the rope,—but then, it was not in the nature of evil men to see such an end. In the bombastic and fanatic company of Hitler and Hitler's ideas of aggression and self-enrichment he thought the way he chose would lead him to heights of power and loot. He could mock at everything the democratic world cherishes and he could throw his weight in favor of aggression. But something stood in his way. It was the spirit of freedom, which will never die, for all the Hitlers and Mussolinis the world has produced could not save him. The spirit of liberty, that burns in men's hearts, had the great say and the final say. Liberty led the way to victory for free men and to death or other punishment for the haters of liberty. At last the host of evil men were caught like rats when tyranny fell and no place could hide them, no cave was dark enough to save the men who were responsible for the war.

Greiser was caught with many others. Since then he had lived long enough to learn how lonely is the way of the criminal, how hard the path and how terrible the march to doom.

The world he mocked had the last word as justice will always have the final say.

It looked to the Nazis like an easy way to reputation, to high rank in the company of a Hitler and his sinister and evil group that Greiser and the gang took. But it was they who erred. Liberty and democracy do not make such errors nor commit such crimes. Freedom's is the way of the future and of life.

People Live Longer

While man naturally looks hopefully to the future for the prolongation of life, modern science is not only lengthening the life span of the average individual but saving the lives of hundreds of thousands or of millions who had they been born in other times and under other conditions of environment from that of today would have died early In fact a great many would never have been born but for modern economic, social and scientific conditions.

This war against disease and contagion is being relentlessly carried on by the sciences and gives hope that the progress attained will be lengthened with the years and that new discoveries will save and prolong lives.

A Russian doctor died this week at the age of 64. He was the inventor of a serum which he thought might make human beings live to the age of a century and a half. How good the serum is time will tell but man is always skeptical of such. The news of the doctor's death does not indicate that he himself expected to reach the age of one hundred and fifty years. But the news does show how eternal is the yearning for prolongation of life among mortals.

To the man of today a vision of a lifetime of one hundred and fifty years would be enticing if he could enjoy normal health and not have to face problems of economic adjustment that might be expected if human life became so much lengthened.

People can trust to the present attitude and trend of science to make life longer by preventing early death from disease, by advising people to take care of eating habits and of the food they eat and at the same time trust to the men of science, and doctors, to have a large share in making the nations healthy and strong.

Are Electrical Cars Coming?

So far electrically-driven cars have only been used as small delivery vans because the weight of the accumulators only permitted low speeds. It has now been made known that one of Britain's leading motor manufacturers, working with an electrical engineering firm, has been carrying out secret experiments with an electric car and that these experiments have been crowned with success. The new car is capable of 50 miles per hour. Up to the present the weight of the batteries' lead cell-plates has been the main handicap in the development of electric cars. After years of research work it has been found possible to use magnesium which is much lighter.

Where Do We Go?

Let us face the facts. Without our Empire we could not have emerged victorious from the war. Our strength, the power of our voice in world affairs, lies in the fact that we are the steel core of a world-wide Empire and speak as its Motherland. That Empire has given us command of the wide seas. It has brought the raw materials of the world to our industry and it has given us boundless markets. It has been our buttress since the days when our ancestors, by conquest and discovery, added land to land until the red on the map encircled the globe. It is today, in a changing world, the one sure foundation upon which our future can be built, our strength developed, our security made certain, and our prosperity restored.

JUST FOLKS

DISHES

When the dinner party's over and the friends have said: "Goodbye!"
There are ash trays to be emptied which with weariness you eye.
There's a room or two to straighten ere you turn to climb the stairs,
And you mustn't leave the parlor filled with dinner-table chairs.
But the task that most I dreaded, following several hours of fun,
Was that stack of greasy dishes she insisted must be done.

"It's too late!" I used to mutter. "Wait
'till morning, when I've gone."
"It will only take a minute," she would answer. "So come on!"
And she'd lead me to the kitchen. By the way she tossed her head,
Well I knew I'd dry those dishes or I'd never get to bed.
So, from kitchen to the cupboard I was kept upon the run
Till she said: "I feel much better now we've got the dishes done."

Oh, I don't know how to write it, but today, the way I think,
It would fill my soul with rapture to see dishes in the sink.
I'd give all I own this minute, after dinner we had planned,
Once again to stand beside her, taking saucers from her hand.
I'd wipe dishes night and morning till my time of life was through,
And I'd thank the Lord above me that the task was mine to do.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Where was the original home of the gypsies?

The basis part of the language of the gypsies is believed to be the nearest living relative of ancient Sanscrit and is taken to be strong circumstantial evidence that the gypsies originally came from somewhere in India.

Some of their physical characteristics as well as their customs also point to an Indian origin.

Although the gypsy tongue appears to be derived from an Indic language, and the people who speak it are generally regarded as the descendants of the remnant of an obscure Indic tribe, the origin of the gypsies is an unsolved ethnological riddle.

In the Balkans and surrounding regions they are called "Tziganes" in various forms, a term that some authorities derive from Greek "Athinganoi," touch me not, and suggest a connection between this name and the presumed fact that the gypsies were once untouchables in India.

The language spoken by modern gypsies is interlarded with words and inflections borrowed from Greek, Slavic, Romanian, Magyard, Spanish, German, English, French—in fact all the languages of the peoples among whom they have lived at length.

When bands of these swarthy, dark-haired nomads—without a history, a literature, a written language or a recognizable religion—first found their way into western Europe by way of the Balkans in the 15th century they said that they had come from a country called "Little Egypt," which various writers have identified with Egypt, Armenia and Greece. The erroneous supposition that they came from Egypt caused them to be called by some "Pharaoh's people" and by others "Egyptians," which in English was first corrupted into "Gypcians" and then "gypsies."

Gypsies usually do not refer to themselves as gypsies. "Romany," from their word for "man," is the name they apply to themselves. "The Romany Rye" (1857) is the title of a book by George Borrow and in the gypsy language literally means "The Gypsy Gentleman."

"Gyp," an American slang word used as a verb for to swindle or cheat and as a noun for a sharper or crook, is undoubtedly a corruption of "gypsy," for it was first employed especially in connection with horse-trading, a business at which the gypsies were adept. At Cambridge and Durham a person who acts as a valet or servant to college students is called a "gyp."

Expect Truman To Sign Revival Of O. P. A. Law

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

Washington, July 25 (AP) — President Truman's expected signature was the last step needed to revive the Office of Price Administration today.

Except for rents many of the agency's wartime powers will be curbed or removed.

But on Capitol Hill, virtually no one expressed any real doubt that the President will sign the revival bill which the Senate passed a few minutes after midnight, 53 to 26, and sent to the White House.

The House of Representatives previously had approved the measure, 210 to 142.

When signed by Mr. Truman, the bill automatically will re-establish rent and many of the price ceilings which lapsed July 1. O.P.A.'s plans are to follow quickly with a number of temporary adjustments on prices, pending calculation of new and higher ceilings required under the measure.

The bill gives O.P.A. life through next June, but it prohibits restoration of price controls at least until Aug. 20 on such major market basket items as meat and dairy products, as well as on grains, petroleum and tobacco.

Democratic leader Alben Barkley has termed it substantially the same bill the President vetoed June 29, but the Kentuckian and House Leader John McCormack (Dem.-Mass.) both have indicated the measure is acceptable to the President.

Even before the Senate began more than 12 hours of debate on the extended bill yesterday, O. P. A. administrator Paul Porter had his staff feverishly at work on a stack of new pricing orders in obvious anticipation of renewed powers.

O. P. A. officials acknowledged that in the case of many items the re-establishment of June 30 ceilings will be only temporary. The bill gives O.P.A. 30 to 60 days to revise prices in line with new standards set up.

Coal From West To Ease Shortage Of Fuel in East

Ottawa, July 25 (CP) — E. J. Brunning, Dominion coal controller, said a trip through Western Canada coal fields had left him "encouraged" that their increased tonnage would enable coal short central Canada "to pull through the winter."

"I'm not saying that western coal will be able to end the shortage here," he said, "but it should go a long way toward curtailing it."

"That prediction," he hastened to say, "depends on several things notably the winter weather and further stoppages."

Strip mines formerly controlled by the Government now were operated by contractors "and we expect they will produce a considerable quantity of coal."

"We hope to make up the deficiency in the central Provinces by operating them at full capacity all winter. There are five of them in Alberta." Considerable tonnage was expected from three other mines, all privately owned. In all western mines should be able to give "material help' 'to Ontario and Quebec.

Mr Brunning said arrangements had been made for rail transportation to move a definite 750,000 tons from the western fields and that figure might reach 1,000,000.

PUTTING ON THE DOG

It has been and still is my contention that two years is long enough to keep a young woman of normal intelligence in training as a nurse. With two years of standard hospital training she should be qualified to do anything a doctor requires of a nurse in general practice.

Nor in my opinion need she necessarily be a high school graduate. I contend that any young woman who has an I.Q. equivalent to that of a girl who has had two years of high school study is qualified to study nursing.

The educational standards for registration of nurses as set down by the nursing boards of the various states have gone beyond all reason. Any intelligent girl can acquire in two years all the knowledge necessary for the thoroughly competent nurse. I know that in my work I never have to ask any nurse to do anything which she could not have learned to do in two years' training.

Ah-ah—wait a minute. Before you fly off the handle-bars (apology to Lum 'n' Abner), my dear little brass specialist and my dear little tin doctor (I'll explain these epithets later), I had better tell you that I quote the foregoing paragraph verbatim from the remarks made by the late Dr. Charles H. Mayo in an interview published in a popular magazine.

If any state nurse examining boards now admit to registration nurses who have completed satisfactorily a two-year hospital course of training, I don't know about them. Neither do I know what Class A hospitals, if any, now graduate nurses on completion of two years of training, nor do I know of good hospitals where nurses are admitted as pupils in the nurse training school on presentation of evidence of completion of two years of high school study.

Only slightly more than 20,000 of the 160,000 physicians in practice in the United States are certified by the various specialty boards as qualified in their chosen fields—only one specialist for every eight general practioners! That makes things tough all over, for the wise-acres who feel they have enough diagnostic acumen to select the right specialist for themselves and have no truck with the "ordinary" doctors.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Your Baby and Your Figure

Please send me your pamphlet "How to Lose Weight," in the inclosed stamped self addressed envelope. How soon after having a baby is it safe to do setting up exercises? (Mrs. L. S. A.)

Answer—Ordinarily restorative exercises should begin the day after childbirth—such as the belly breathing exercise, and other systematic exercise several times a day, taken sitting or lying. The woman who has kept reasonably fit may and should be up and about the house four or five days after childbirth. Whether to restrict diet in any way depends on the nutritional condition — better have your doctor's approval of your diet, particularly if you are a 100 per cent mother. It is not important if you are just a 50 percenter—that is, if you do not nurse your baby. In any case if the caloric intake is decreased be sure to increase the vitamin and mineral intake.

This is High Praise

....so decided I'd like to have all of your pamphlets. Your clear, frank way of putting things appeals to my 13 year old son—he goes to town, so to speak, with a fact of physiology or hygiene he gets from "Doc" (and mind you, we use this title without prejudice) Brady, and so far you have never let him down in the spirited arguments in his class at ——school (R.M.T.)

Answer—Thank you, Sir. I'd rather have the confidence and respect of one such youngster than the approval or tolerance of a score of oldsters. Send stamped self addressed envelope for complete list of pamphlets available.

CVD Means Cardio-Vascular Degeneration

One term I came upon scared me—cardiovascular degeneration. If it is as bad as it sounds .... (T.A.)

Answer—But it isn't. If you are past middle age you probably have more or less cardiovascular degeneration—all of us old geezers do. It means heart and arteries gradually wearing out. Do you expect to remain young forever? It may reassure you—at any rate it will not alarm you, whether or no, to read the booklet CVD—for copy send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

GUARDS TO FACE CHARGES

Toronto, July 25 —(CP)— Attorney General Leslie Blackwell announced that a charge of manslaughter and an alternative charge of shooting and causing grievous bodily harm will be laid against three guards at the Ontario Reformatory in Guelph, for the fatal shooting of Donald Parks, 18-year-old prisoner, in an escape attempt July 11.

Mr. Blackwell said that John M. Kearns, Crown Attorney of Wellington County, has been appointed to conduct the proceedings. The three guards are R. H. Laverty, G. L. Haviland and E. J. Hefkey.

"The Crown will proceed against the three guards," Mr. Blackwell said, "by presenting a bill of indictment charging the three jointly with the two offences before the Grand Jury at Guelph Assizes which commence Sept. 16.

Pravda Article Attacks Hoover, F.B.I. Over Redin

Moscow, July 25 — (AP)—J. Edgar Hoover and the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation were attacked Wednesday in a Pravda article which declared the arrest of a Soviet naval officer in Portland, Ore., last March was a "criminal conspiracy."

The officer, Lieut. Nicolai Redin, was recently acquitted in a Seattle federal court on charges of espionage.

(Waiting in Seattle to return to Russia with his family, Regin said yesterday: "The American people will always have a friendship with us.")

Journalist David Zaslavsky, writing under the headline: — "Black deed of the American secret police," said:

"There is and was no 'case of Redin.' There is the case of the American secret police and a known part of the American press which prefers to keep quiet about it. With this it determines its share of participation in the filthy conspiracy against democracy itself . . .

"The Soviet officer was seized in the streets, rudely pushed into an automobile, humiliatingly searched and kept semi-naked in a cold cell. He was treated shockingly, in a way not persimmible in any country, certainly not in a country pretending to be democratic.

"If it had not happened in 1946 in the United States, Comrade Regin would have had every reason to believe he was under the paws of the Gestapo."

The article declared the result of the trial was that the American public came to recognize that Redin was an honest and modest Soviet officer to whom the Americans owed respect and gratitude for his wartime achievements.

Zaslavsky said Redin's arrest was the signal for a fierce anti-Soviet campaign by the "reactionary" American press.

The article said that as the final proof of the "full senselessness of the provocation," the Russians already knew the secrets (of the destroyer tender Yellowstone) which Redin was charged with trying to get thru bribes, having previously been given possession of an American ship equipped with the devices in question.

Second Seat Won Within Two Days By British Govt.

Pontypool, Monmouthshire, England, July 25 — (Reuters) — The Labor government won its second parliamentary by-election within two days, it was announced Wednesday, with D. Granville-West, 41-year-old county councillor, retaining the House of Commons seat of Pontypool vacated by the death of Arthur Jenkins.

West polled 22,359 votes compared with 8,170 for Peter Welch, young Conservative graduate of Cardiff University who was West's only opponent for the seat.

The Labor majority of 14,189 in voting yesterday compared with a majority of 19,383 votes gained by Mr. Jenkins in last July's general elections.

In the first of three by-elections this week, Major A. Bramal held the Bexley, Kent constituency for Labor with a narrow victory over John Lockwood, Conservative. The third by-election will take place in North Battersea, a London riding.

Probe is Sought Into Fire At Campbellford

Campbellford, July 24 (CP)— A Fire Marshal's investigation was sought today after an early morning fire which damaged the home of Thomas Forsythe, local correspondent for the Peterborough Examiner, and which Forsythe said was set "deliberately".

Forsythe said he had received threatening telephone calls since publication of a story in the Examiner recently in connection with a local court case.

Firemen brought the blaze under control following a two-hour fight. Damage was confined to the rear of the building.

Prompt action of a neighbor when the fire broke out aroused the Forsythe family.

Gerald Smith Sent to Trial On Murder Count

Kingston, July 24 —(CP)—Despite defence contention that the Crown had failed to establish intention, Gerald Smith, 23, of Kingston yesterday was committed for trial on a charge of murder arising from the shooting of Richard Morgan hehe early July 8. He will likely be tried at the Fall Assizes.

Dr. M. L. Morison, coroner, told Magistrate J. B. Garvin he found Morgan's body slumped over the steering wheel of a truck near Smith's house. Smith had told him he fired at the tires of the truck in an effort to keep Morgan on the premises until police arrived. Smith had said he called police after Morgan tried to break into the house.

Child Is Killed Two Others Hurt, Near Winona

Hamilton, July 25 — (CP) — One child was killed and two others seriously injured late Tuesday when a car driven by a Hamiltonian crashed into three children on the Queen Elizabeth Way at Glover's side road about two miles east of Winona.

Evelyn Flatt, 11-year-old twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Flatt, of Fruitland, died in hospital here about an hour after the accident.

The other two children, Gertrude Nylund, 12, and Phyllis Marzalek, 14, both of Fruitland, were removed to hospital seriously injured but in no immediate danger. Gertrude suffered a fracture of her right wrist, lacerations and bruises to her body and shock. The latter sustained a fracture of her right knee and also lacerations and shock.

John McPherson, Hamilton, said to have been the driver of the car which struck the three young girls as they stood at the side of the highway waiting for traffic to pass, was questioned by Provincial Police at the scene.

Provincial Constable Leonard Dixon, said he had been only able to assemble meagre details as to what happened and the investigation was continuing. It was established however, that Mr. McPherson was driving in an easterly direction toward Niagara Falls behind a truck in charge of Clifford DeWitt, of Fruitland. Mr. McPherson, it was said, was passing or about to pass the truck when the latter made a left hand turn.

Whether the truck sideswiped the car causing it to go out of control or whether Mr. McPherson swerved sharply to the left to avoid a crash and struck the girls, has not been established. The children, Constable Dixon stated, were standing back clear of the highway when they were struck.

THESE TIRES ARE DIFFERENT...
THEY OUTWEAR PRE-WAR TIRES!

They're rugged and road-right. They outwear and outdistance the finest pre-war tires. They're the New Silvertowns . . . the greatest tires that B. F. Goodrich leadership in rubber research and engineering has ever produced.

A new kind of rubber is used—developed by B. F. Goodrich and once guarded as a close military secret. A new kind of cotton cord is used—also developed by B. F. Goodrich. The result is a tire with a body 35% stronger—a tire that runs cooler, has more resistance to bruises—and gives more mileage than you have ever had before.

The new longer mileage Silvertowns are made in different types of tread design . . . including the famous Life-Saver Tread that wipes wet pavements dry . . . and the Road-Level Tread that puts a wider, flatter rubber surface on the road to share the burden.

Gen. Chisholm Gives up Post For New Office

Ottawa, July 25 — (CP)—Resignation of Maj.-Gen. G. Brock Chisholm, 48, as deputy minister of health was announced Wetinesday by Acting Prime Minister St. Laurent. He is being succeeded in the health post by Dr. G. D. W. Cameron, director of health services.

Mr. St. Laurent made the announcement in the Commons when he tabled a document concerning the establishment of the international health organization of which Maj.-Gen. Chisholm has become executive-secretary.

Before becoming deputy-minister Maj.-Gen. Chisholm was director general of medical services in the Canadian army. Public addresses which he gave concerning the training of children recently aroused widespread controversy.

Mr. St. Laurent said if time permitted at the present session a resolution would be introduced to provide for Canadian approval of the constitution of the new international health organization.

Maj.-Gen. Chisholm acted as rapporteur of the technical preparatory committee which drafted the constitution of the new organization and also was chairman of a committee on administration and finance.

"The great value of his services in connection with the conference has been recognized by his election as executive secretary of the interim commission of the new organization which will be charged with the task of setting up the new organization," Mr. St. Laurent said.

"This has necessitated his resignation as deputy minister of health, which has been accepted and Dr. G. D. W. Cameron has been appointed in his place. Dr. Cameron saw service in the last war, graduated in medicine from Queen's University, holds the diploma of public health and has been director of health services of the department."

A-BOMB

White Dome of Water Rises

When the world's fifth atomic bomb was set off by remote radio controls, an almost incredible white dome of water rose and glowed momentarily. Then it spread, at first wide and flat, to perhaps a mile in breadth. Suddenly it shot upward with lightning speed.

At the top of the dome, the water spread in a great wide column with a rounded top. In two seconds the top widened like a grotesque mushroom, whose thick stem by that time was nearly half a mile wide at the base, which in turn was boiling upward.

Spreads Half Mile Wide

The air mushroom spread out to more than a mile wide. All this time the entire display was dazzling white.

Then from the widening edges of the mushroom umbrella pure white points of water, v-shaped, began streaming down toward the ships. Many of these sprays were far larger than any of the big battleships.

At this moment must have been occurring one of the almost incredible phenomena of atomic energy. Water thrown against the Saratoga crushed her massive stack, knocking half of it to the flight deck.

A series of waves spread from the spot where the bomb was detonated. They raced out toward the ships outside the lagoon and some poured over a small island off Bikini's shore. The main island was not inundated. Admiral Blandy estimated the wave was seven to 10 feet high at Bikini Island—lower than had been expected.

Hot Force of Concussion Felt

Ships rocked. The hot force of the bomb's concussion was felt by some observers outside the lagoon. Parts of target ships' equipment, mattresses and the like, undulated on the waves.

Slowly the mist began to clear. Some of the target ships became visible again.

Men who had expected many of the ships to be gone were amazed to see them floating where they last had seen them.

But all efforts to find the Arkansas, a concrete yard oiler, a tank landing ship and the medium landing ship over the bomb, were futile. They simply had disappeared.

Col. Stafford Warren, the radiological safety chief, said that six target ships on the outer rim of the array were free of contamination when patrol teams got there. He said it might by several days before the ships near the centre of the fleet could be boarded safely.

Fission Particles Rain on Lagoon

Col. Warren said that a rain of death-dealing fission particles came down in the lagoon immediately after the millions of tons of lagoon water skyrocketed upward.

Later, clouds along a 30-mile front became contaminated with fissionable products. This cloud bank drifted to the northwest. It was tracked by airplanes.

Col. Warren pointed out that rain from clouds of this nature could be deadly.

Home Economist tells why the New Swift's Cleanser is Quicker, Safer!

Martha Logan SAYS:

"HERE'S HOW I TESTED OUR NEW SWIFT'S CLEANSER IN MY KITCHEN"

Here's a first-hand report from the Director of Home Economics of Swift Canadian Co. Limited. She was asked to test the new Swift's Cleanser from the homemaker's point of view. She used the cleanser in her test kitchens—part of Swift's Research Laboratories. This is what Martha Logan says:

"Our research scientists told me that their technical tests proved this new Swift's Cleanser was Canada's finest, but I wouldn't believe it until I'd proved it to myself—in my own kitchen. So here's what I did. (Maybe you'll want to try a few of these tests yourself.)

Pure White . . . Scatters Evenly

"First, I took plates and poured out samples of Swift's Cleanser and other popular cleansers to see what differences were apparent. As I poured, I noticed "pourability"—how freely and easily Swift's Cleanser came out of the can. Then I looked at the colour—how fluffy-white Swift's was in comparison to some of the others!

Smooth . . . Won't Scratch

"Then I dampened my finger and rubbed the cleansers against the plates. I was impressed with the smoothness of the new Swift's Cleanser. Certainly this cleanser would never scratch!

An Invitation . . .

"But how would it clean? Well, I compared it in sections on the porcelain sink —I compared it on greasy pots and pans— and frankly, no other cleanser cleaned as fast, or as thoroughly, as the new Swift's Cleanser. It didn't leave any gritty, powdery sediment, either. I'm convinced the new Swift's Cleanser is Canada's finest. I recommend it to you sincerely. Won't you try it and write me how you like it?"

(Signed)

Martha Logan
Director of Home Economics

AMATEUR BASEBALL

By The Canadian Press

Powerful hitting featured Ontario amateur baseball yesterday with Stratford Nationals blasting 20 hits to romp to a 12-1 victory over Guelph Maple Leafs in the Senior Intercounty League.

In other Intercounty circuit tilts, Galt Terriers defeated Waterloo Tigers 9-7 and London Majors downed Kitchener Panthers 7-1. Niagara District senior games saw Niagara Falls Houcks beat Marritton-Thorold Thormers 4-0, Hamilton Consumers upset Niagara Falls (N.Y.) Kimberley Clarkes 4-2, and St. Catharines Saints scored a ninth inning run to give them a 2-2 tie with Niagara Falls (N. Y.) Wolkes.

The Nationals were merciless to the luckless and overworked Bill Leader on the Guelph mound. Leader was touched for two triples and three doubles while nine Guelph batters were left on base.

It was Kitchener's eighth defeat in nine starts as Tommy White pitched the majors to victory. He scattered seven hits and fanned five. A total of 25 base hits were registered in the Waterloo-Galt slugfest, with Galt scoring six runs in the first inning.

Credit for Houcks' shutout went to Johnny Worrall on the hill while first baseman Boyd Slemon collected three hits and batted in three runs.

Youthful Len Parisi still of juvenile age, hurled steady ball for Hamilton and held the league-leading Kimberley Clark nine to four hits. With St. Catharines trailing the Wolkes in the ninth inning short stop Jack Hookings' homer with two out and two strikes, tripled to deep center to score the tying run.

In the Junior Intercounty circuit Stratford beat Waterloo 6-1.

Player Aces In Golf Contest With Plane as Prize

Spokane, Wash., July 25 (AP)—A second golfer scored an ace yesterday in the Spokane Athletic round table's rich hole-in-one contest to lead the field competing for a second airplane offered as first prize.

Hitting his sixth ball on the 130-yard hole, Gordon Van Dusen lodged the ball between the edge of the cup and the pin. When officials lifted the pin the ball rolled in for the second ace so far in the benefit contest.

Curt Bolton, who scored the first hole-in-one early in the contest, won the first airplane offered. The round table promptly offered a second.

Swimming Aids Chest Development

Of all exercises, swimming is one of the most beneficial. It offers the element of play that is lacking in the dull routine of calisthenics. It stimulates the digestive organs, the lungs, the tissue structures, and even the skin. It is a helpful means of overcoming some defects of figure, such as the flattened chest and undeveloped bust. Continued, season after season, it tends to normalize the figure that has taken on too abundant curves.

They enjoy a sense of refreshment and well-being

It is to the credit of the sisterhood that many members have learned to swim. Time was—and one does not have to be the oldest inhabitant on the face of the earth to remember it—when there was more beach strutting than swimming. One went there to loll upon the sands and took only an occasional dip.

The movements made while swimming ventilate the lungs, drawing the air to the lowest cells. The results will show in a fuller chest and a complexion of good coloring. Many women are shallow breathers. Because of this habit they are pale of skin, often are lacking in energy. Let them swim. They will find that their spirits will be lifted. They will have a sense of refreshment and well-being.

Swimming is a strenuous exercise and must not be overdone. Since it is one of the delights and compensations of torrid weather, one is likely to overindulge, in this most excellent of outdoor sports. To go into the water soon after eating, and to remain there some time, is to invite temporary congestion of the internal organs, with a possible retarding of their functions that may cause trouble of a serious nature.

It behooves the desk worker to join the mermaids. She will have precisely the kind of exercise she needs to retain the youthful shape which oftimes assumes a spread amidships as the years pile up. As she cuts through the waves, many muscles that have become relaxed because of having no work to do will respond, become stronger, more resilient.

Enter the water quickly, dip under. A complete immersion tends to equalize the circulation and hasten reaction. Don't go in if your skin is moist with perspiration. Rest awhile. You can put in your time profitably by applying sun-tan oil to complexion, neck, shoulders and arms.

And now for a few Don'ts. Don't go where there is no life guard and don't go in alone. It is not wise to go beyond one's depth. Even the best swimmers get cramps.

Fashion Flashes

EXCITING NEW FUR fashions are being readied, such as a greatcoat of lustrous black Persian lamb, cut on Regency lines, with a band of tiny mirror sequins outlining the small collar, the broad, high-peaked lapels, the turn-back cuffs, the pocket flaps and the Tuxedo front.

There's no argument anent the idea that the off-the-face hat is more youthful than the forward-tilted model. The former line is used for a new hat, made of pink felt, with two rows of black grosgrain to indicate a double-brim effect. A cluster of uncurled ostrich plumes makes an effective trim.

It's amazing to see the variations and combinations used for slacks and shirt costumes. One nifty ensemble has tailored slacks of lightweight black woollen, a white crepe shirt with black fringe trim on the drop shoulder, and black string tie. A wide, crushed-leather belt in red has black fringe trim at the side fastening.

We know it's difficult to keep white looking spotless, but when it is fresh it is tops in beauty and charm. Such is a bolero suit of dazzling white sharkskin, with side-wrap skirt, worn with a red and white block-print blouse in pure silk.

It has no peer for smart beauty, the well-handled black silk suit. Pure black silk matalasse makes an exquisite suit cut on slim lines that are offset by stand-out pockets and curved, rising collar on the jacket. Skirt is slit at either side and is of street length.

The Stairway to Social Grace Is Up and Down the Stairs

A figure of poised charm is Barbara Stanwyck descending a staircase

By HELEN FOLLETT

MOUNTING and descending a stairway with grace and charm is the hardest thing the young actress has to do. Or one of the hardest. Most of us scuttle down stairs any old way, bend over when going up.

We push out our knees, form ugly lines. Doubt that? All right. Watch yourself just for fun. Do you or do you not make a pretty picture?

Here you are, going down. Pull up your backbone, flatten your tummy, lift your chest. Let the arms hang easily at your sides. Keep the legs fairly rigid with just enough knee movement to progress easily and comfortably. Use a springy step. Don't throw the head forward.

Assume Same Pose

Now to ascend. Assume the same body to pose. Place the left hand on the hip, fingers pointing toward the back. Keep the right hand lowered, the arm relaxed. See how gracefully you can move. Point toes straight ahead.

There will, naturally, be more knee action than you use when descending, but endeavor to keep the body tall and erect. There will be an impulse to throw the upper portion of the torso forward, but don't do it.

Ten minutes of these exercises every day will bring improvement of posture, grace of motion. You will have a feeling of well-being. Graceful movement must begin in the mind, you know. You must feel grace and beauty in order to possess them.

Hard Training

Budding starlets in Hollywood go through a tough course of training. They are taught how to stand beautifully. Then how to walk, how to sink into a chair, how to lift the body out of it. We all are inclined to do these things mechanically without a thought of appearance. That's wrong. To be body conscious is to become expert in posture and movement.

Graceful movement is an important factor in feminine charm. It makes that little $9.98 model look like something that was made to order, bought at a good price. It gives one style and manner.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Duties of Best Man

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am to be best man next month at the wedding of a very good friend of mine. I am uncertain about the following questions. (1) Who buys the bride's flowers? (2) Who buys the maid of honor's flowers? (3) Besides giving the couple a gift, what other financial duties do I have (unless you tell me that the flowers mentioned above are my responsibility?)

Doubtful

(1.) It is the bridegroom who customarily pays for the bride's bouquet. (2.) The bride's family provides the flowers for the bride's attendants. (3.) The best man provides the attire he is to wear at the wedding, and sends the bride-to-be a wedding gift. Those are his only financial responsibilites.

Groom's Mother Should Not Leave Reception Too Soon

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a very delicate problem concerning my son's wedding next month. He is to marry a Spanish girl, who has been to our home several times. I have met her family only once, and I just cannot understand what they are saying when they are speaking to me. Of course, after the ceremony in the church, I will attend the reception, but due to the fact that I have four young children to care for, I would like to leave the reception as soon as possible. How soon do you think I could leave without causing any hard feelings as far as the bride's family are concerned?

S.N.

Aren't you making your young children an excuse for leaving the reception early, rather than acknowledging that the real reason is that you are sure you will feel uncomfortable talking with your son's in-laws? Please don't do anything to sidestep your obligation to your son and his bride and her family. Certainly, for such an important occasion, some kind and trustworthy neighbor or friend will be delighted to stay with your children for as long as you wish to have her . . . and you should stay at the reception until the couple leave for their wedding trip, or at least long enough so that the bride's parents, the hosts of the reception, will not feel disappointed or hurt at your too-early departure. At the wedding and reception, you are the woman guest of honor, and therefore you have a definite social obligation to be a most gracious and co-operative guest.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Distracted Young Man Finds Himself Very Involved

Social timidity and self-consciousness are traitors.

They trap us into doing wild and hasty things that we think will be the answer to our problem and bring us happiness. Then, all of a sudden, we wake up and find ourselves with far worse trouble on our hands than we had in the beginning.

Because a young man was too shy with girls his own age, he sought company of older women whose response to his attentions made him feel more confident and self-assured. Now he's frantically anxious to be rid of them and doesn't know how to go about it.

Here's what he says:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am a man of 27, and have been seeing quite a bit of two women a few years my senior—I should say about 15 years. I have gone out with girls my own age, but I cannot say I have enjoyed myself. I do not smoke or drink, and find it hard to enjoy myself with people my own age.

"Both these women have been nice to me, remembering me on Christmas, Easter and birthdays, but in return I have showered them with gifts, giving one a diamond ring and the other a beautiful watch for the lapel. It took the one with the ring months, and I had to fight all the time, in order to get her to wear it. The one with the watch, wears it on what she calls special occasions. They have loaned me money, and now it seems all we do is quarrel.

"Would it be wrong for me to ask for all I have given them back, and find someone my own age, or just what should I do? They are making me very nervous, almost crazy, you might say.

"Lonely"

Ther are three things you've learned from this experience, I hope.

First, that it is rarely wise for a young man to make an intimate friend of a woman so much older than himself—and it's hardly necessary to add that when he tries the same thing with two women at the same time, it's just twice as unwise.

Second, you're not going to give women expensive presents again unless it's some young woman you hope to marry.

And third, you're never again going to permit women to lend you money. For when a man borrows money from a woman, that's the exact point from which trouble is sure to start, even though it may not become evident right away.

So now, having made all three of these bad mistakes, how are you going to get out of the mess they've made of your life?

It seems to me the best thing you can do is to follow the lead of those amateurs who've gambled with their luck in the money market instead of the love market, and that is, take your losses and get out. Let the girls keep the presents you were foolish enough to give them, and charge the expense off to experience. Or did you buy these gifts with money they lent you?

Of course, if you still owe them money, it's not likely you can get them out of your life entirely until you've paid them off. But can't you make some sort of agreement with them to pay so much a month, then send the money to them regularly without fail and have no other dealings with them? If you can prove you're consistently repaying them, in however small amounts, they can't make trouble for you.

And stop telling yourself you can't enjoy girls your own age. You can certainly find congenial companionship if you go about it intelligently. Do you want to write me again, giving me your name and address, and let me give you some suggestions?

MONTREAL "IN;" OTHERS VIA FOR PLAYOFF SPOTS

Chiefs Hop Balthmore to Land in Second Place; Bears Claw Leafs in First Game, but Drop Second

By The Associated Press

With Montreal's Royals virtually assured of their second consecutive international league pennant, interest in the league continues to rest on the four team scrap for the three remaining playoff berths.

Only two games separate the fifth-place Newark Bears from the runner-up Syracuse Chiefs today while the Royals are steamrolling along with a 13-game margin.

The Chiefs moved over Baltimore Orioles into second place by half a game last night by nosing out the Royals 3-2 while the Orioles divided a twin bill with Rochester Red Wings.

Southpaw Jim Prendergast went the route for the Chiefs and gained his 12th victory of the season. After losing 4-3 to the Red Wings in the opener, the Orioles came back with the aid of home runs by Sherman Lollar, Joe Melendick and Howie Moss to take the nightcap 7-6.

The Bears dropped into the second division by splitting a double header with Toronto Maple Leafs while Buffalo Bisons swept a doubleheader engagement from Jersey City Giants 5-2 and 3-1, to move into fourth place.

After Herb Karpel had whitewashed the Leafs, 4-0 in two hits in the opener, the Leafs came back behind the four hit tossing of Herman Besse to win the finale, 4-1.

Rookie Denny Horton scattered eight Jersey City safeties to win the opener for the Bisons and Veteran Hal Mandes came back with a three-hitter in the afterpiece to give Buffalo a clean sweep of their three-game series.

Henley Under Way With 600 Oarsmen Entered For Titles

St. Catharines, July 25. (CP)—Under ideal weather conditions the 64th annual Royal Canadian Henley Regatta got under way today, with more than 600 senior scullers and oarsmen and 15 or more high school clubs ready for the water jamboree which winds up Saturday night.

Single scullers, doubles, four and eights, in the various weight classifications, and the high school crews, were set for the greatest Canadian Henley. The pick of United States oarsmen were here to contest the titles against a large entry of Canada's best.

Clear and cooler weather was the forecast for the opening day with a high temperature this afternoon of around 77 degrees. The wind was from the north and was not expected to be more than a mild breeze during the late afternoon after blowing stronger in the morning.

The Henley course along a stretch of water at nearby Port Dalhousie, provides as good a rowing stretch as the upper reaches of the historic Thames itself.

And it's over this water, churned by great paddlers of the past, that today's oarsmen meet. The Toronto Argonaut Rowing Club is sending 36 talented oarsmen. Ottawa Rowing Club has 24 entries and there are 16 from Lachine, a large entry from McGill University and from Brockville, and no fewer than 51 from Hamilton Leanders. St. Catharines has 30 entered.

The big United States contingent includes 52 from Detroit Boat Club, which rowed away all the honors in the United States National Regatta; 62 from Buffalo Westsides, and powerful entries from Ecorse, Mich., Wyandotte, Mich., Philadelphia, New Jersey and New York.

Amazing Mackens In Quarter Finals For Tennis Title

By ANDY ROSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 25. (CP)—It seems that almost anywhere you look at the Canadian Tennis championships you see a Macken.

And, small wonder, for no less than three youthful members of the racket-winging Montreal family have reached the quarter-finals in singles and all but one still are in the running in all doubles divisions.

The healthy progeny of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Macken—who left their native Ireland a quarter-century ago with no apparent intention of staging such an invasion of the courts—are Brendan, Jimmy and Patricia. All three hold tennis scholarships at William and Mary University of Williamsburg, Virginia.

Product of the Westmount Park Municipal Courts in Montreal, Brendan, now 23, first went south in 1944 and they liked him so well at Williamsburg that Jimmy, 20 and 19-year-old Pat joined him last year. All are members of the University Tennis team, Brendan and Pat holding second rankings and Jimmy, sixth.

Blonde Brendan, member of Canada's Davis Cup team, is ranked fourth in the present tournament, while dark-haired Jimmy is rated sixth and the pair are fourth-favored combination in men's doubles. So far they have lived up to the seeding, with both boys coming through tough fourth-round singles matches in fine style yesterday.

All three Mackens face a heavy schedule today when tourney officials, given a break in the weather after two days of intermittent rain, hope to run off enough matches to bring all title divisions to semi-finals by nightfall.

So far pat is the only one of the trio to be eliminated from an event—she and her partner bowed in the opening round of the women's doubles—and with men's and women's singles and men's and mixed doubles to keep them busy, it should be hectic getting from one court to another.

Brooklyn Delights Flatbush Fans as They Whip Cubs And Regain Perch at Top of Loop

Giants, Card Nemesis, Shove Birds Behind "Bums" by Winning 3-1; Red Sox Maintain Big Lead by Downing White Sox; Yanks Dunk the Browns

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Those who have started to count Brooklyn Dodgers out of the National League pennant race because of their recent near-disastrous road trip, have done so without taking into account Brooklyn's amazing home record of Ebbets' Field where they still have 38 games to play this season.

Forced to share the National League's top berth with St. Louis Cardinals for four days after leading the parade for more than two months, the Dodgers wasted little time upon their return home yesterday to regain undisputed possession by notching their 30th victory in 39 home games.

With an after-dark crowd of 30,677 fans on hand the Dodgers eked out a brilliant 2-1 triumph over Chicago Cubs, principally on the fine hurling of southpaw Joe Hatten. A first-inning outburst, highlighted by Eddie Stevens' double, produced both Dodger tallies.

New York Giants, nemesis of the Red Birds all season, shoved the St. Louis aggregation one game behind the Brooks when they beat the Cards for the ninth time in 14 meetings this season 3-1, on the strength of Johnny Mize's 20th home run in the ninth inning with one on.

In the American League, the pace setting Boston Red Sox maintained their 11 1-2 game margin over the runner-up New York Yankees by taking advantage of a pair of miscues to defeat Chicago White Sox 4-1. It was Tex Hughson's 11th mound triumph.

Cleveland's Bobby Feller racked up his 18th win and seventh shutout in pitching the Indians to a 1-0 triumph over Bob Savage and Philadelphia Athletics. The Tribe fireballer fanned nine to raise his season strikeout total to 220. Hank Edwards accounted for the only run of the game by cracking his seventh homer.

A pair of former American leaguers collaborated to give Philadelphia Phillies a 2-0 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates. Veteran righthander Schoolboy Rowe limited the Bucs to seven safeties to notch his 10th victory. Jim Tabor accounted for both Philly runs by hitting his sixth home run in the third inning.

OUT OF SPORT?

Leo Goyer, starry hockey and softball player who, it is feared, will be permanently out of sport due to an injury received to a knee during a recent softball game. Leo starred with the Belleville Redmen hockey squad last winter and was one of the heavier sluggers of the Army and Navy Flashes softball team when the injury jinx caught up with him.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Leo Goyer, veteran of five years' participation in the grimmest game of all, and star hockey and diamond athlete may be lost to sport permanently, it was learned today. Goyer tore ligaments in a knee during a recent softball game and medical reports are that it is doubtful if he will ever participate in sport again.

Goyer was playing with the Army and Navy Veterans Flashes softball squad when the injury occurred. It was not thought serious at first but later developments were such that he has been advised to retire from active sports competition.

His loss will be a severe blow to both diamond and hockey squads, as the starry Goyer scintillated at whatever sport he happened to be taking part in. Last winter he was the ace playmaker on the first line of the Belleville Redmen hockey squad and his sudden forays flanked by such stars as Walt Gerow, Jr., and Timmy Williams resulted in many a goal. He was a "punch" player, the type that instils fighting spirit into a squad that is down a couple of goals. His "Let's go get 'em" advice in hockey dressing room last winter often pepped up the boys and inspired by his play, they went out there and fought harder than ever for the will-o-the-wisp called Victory.

Goyer never quit, even when the going was toughest. He was a fine example to the younger members of the club and even the hockey-hardened veterans felt a decided uplift to drooping spirits after Leo finished with his dressing room advice.

Like any other athlete, he liked to win. But he could take the punch of defeat on the chin without batting an eyelash. He was in there fighting till the last ditch and on one or two occasions his hockey courage and skill plus his determination to see the game through to the last whistle, changed defeat into victory.

On the softball diamond he was an outstanding hitter and outfielder. Overseas he was a member of the Canadian Artillery team that won the Italian softball championship. His loss will be keenly felt by his mates of the Flashes, those of the Redmen, and hockey fans in general.

On Labor Day, his fellow members of the Flashes Softball squad are staging a special benefit game for the injured player. Present plans call for the bringing here of a topflight Toronto softball squad which will play the Flashes or an all-star team from the Belleville Softball Association. Manager Frank Sedore stated today that arrangements were already under way and news of a definite nature regarding the proposed game will be forthcoming in the near future.

Minus "Lefty" Whitman and Walt Gerow, Jr., of the SWACOS squad, who were unable to get away, the Trenton Flyers embussed this morning for Toronto where they meet the Toronto Mahers tonight at 7 o'clock in the first round of the Congress Baseball Tournament. League "enemies" of the Belleville Baseball Association are pulling for the Moose Matthews gang to come through with not only a win tonight, but the tournament title as well.

Goodman's Juniors and Frank Sedor's Flashes battled to an eleven-inning tie at the Fair Grounds last night to twine another knot in the league schedule. SACOS will play the youngsters on Friday night after which arrangements will be made to play off the two remaining tie games of the schedule. A winner must be declared by the first of the week in order that a city league champion can be declared before the OASA playdowns occur.

The Juniors had the game practically in the bag, but a dropped infield fly in the sixth by shortstop Jerry Moher enabled the Maroon and Yellow to score three runs and get back into the pastime. The usually reliable Jerry fumbled the low pop and before the side was retired three Flashes had crossed the plate. The kids played good ball behind Don Boyle and but for the sixth inning bobble would have pulled out with a win.

The Softball Association must declare winners by Aug. 15 and as the Fair Grounds is available only on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays some skilful manipulating of dates must be done. The Belleville Baseball League has the option on the ground on Tuesdays and Thursdays, otherwise the softball play-offs could be taken in stride.

It might be such a thing that the first and third and second and fourth squads will play sudden death games to decide finalists. The final series, of course, will be two out of three at least.

"Aintcha scared of that guy, mister?" queried a young wrestling fan of Jim "Goon" Henry who tangles with Lee Friday night at the Hume Arena. "Son" philosophized the big Oklahoman, "there-all ain't nuthin' on this earth but what you'll find sumthin' better. Now take Henning, he's all right as a wrestler—but there's better—and that's me." Quaint, isn't it—but the big guy from Oklahoma wasn't fooling. He fully intends to disassemble La Henning here—and prove to the fans that he can be beaten. Of course Henning has ideas too, and some of them are good ones. But better see the bouts Friday for yourself. Then too, there's Warren "The Bock" Bockwinkle who licked Henning last week but tried to throw the referee in for good measure and was disqualified. He'll meet Karl Krippler Davis, while Bunny Dunlop exchanges holds with Pat Flanagan.

Don't blister, mister, when a good lead rule backfires on you. Could be you used the wrong rule in that spot. Or maybe you did not pick out the correct branch of that rule.

One of the good rules for leads is: Lead up to weakness in the dummy hand. A branch of it is: Unless your partner has given you a signal to lead a different suit.

That rule has another branch. It is: Unless you can gain more by leading up to dummy strength. In other words, there are times to lead straight into the jaws of a seeming loss.

Take a case where declarer is in no-trump and clubs are thus:

NORTH
♣K 10 9

WEST
♣8 5

EAST
♣A Q 6 4 2

SOUTH
♣J 7 3

Your partner in the west started off with a diamond lead that you won in east. If you have card combinations oozing out of all your pores, you will now lead back your club four. That you will.

At first glance, this may look like a palooka play. From where you sit it looks like a deliberate suicide dive into dummy tenace. Or like throwing a trick to the dummy king.

However, you get a different answer when you count the cards in a suit. Even if your partner held the jack and led it, dummy is sure of one trick. No play by your side can stop it. Figure it out.

If west plays the jack, dummy goes with the king. Your ace wins. Thereafter, the dummy ten will force your queen and the nine is good.

So give dummy that first trick right now, and fast. A lead to such dummy strength is not without reason. Partner will know it is a tip to have him lead you that suit when he can.

If partner gets the lead to do this soon enough, you can see the happing ending for your side. You are over dummy for a total of four club tricks. You can club the declarer to death.

Try that on the buzzards.

Hollywood Column

By HOWARD C. HEYN

Hollywood, July 25. (AP) — Bob Hope marched into the death cell at San Quentin. And Warden Clinton Duffy was on hand to see that the proceedings were authentic.

Mr. Duffy was invited by Paramount to supervise prison sequences in 'My Favorite Brunette' It was his first trip to a movie studio, although he has advised many companies on such scenes.

The middle-aged warden was intensely interested in the photographic proceedings and more than willing to report on the movie situation in his prison.

"We show our 4,000 inmates movies on Saturday," he reported. "There are three showings: noon, 3 p.m., and 7 p.m.

"Movies are big events for the prisoners," he said, "and they stay on their good behavior lest they lose their privilege cards, for without those cards they see no movies.

"Their favorite types of films are, in order, drama, comedy, musicals and westerns."

No crime pictures are shown, and the Westerns are not the "shoot-em-up" variety.

I asked whether he would sanction the Hope picture for the inmates, since it depicts the prison and death-row.

"The men have asked to see it," he said. "And Bob Hope suggests that it be premiered at the prison. I think it will be O.K."

In case you have any notions about moving to San Quentin just for the movies, forget it. Warden Duffy has a housing problem too. The number of inmates is nearly double the designed capacity.

Now thatBetty Hutton is vice president of her husband's camera company, Dotty Lamour tells us she has a similar title in her hubby's automobile-farm equipment agency. Such versatile actresses! . . . Technical perfection note: The assistant director who handles a lengthy church sequence in "A Miracle Can Happen" is named Joe Depew.

WILL PROSECUTE N. Y. PRODUCER

San Diego, Calif., July 25 —(AP)— Archie D. Orme, Deputy District Attorney, said yesterday the District Attorney's Office would prosecute George White, 52, New York and Hollywood producer, on three felony charges although a coroner's jury did not name him as driver of an automobile which killed a newlywed couple.

The jury of seven men and one woman further reported there was not sufficient evidence at its hearing to prove the driver of the car criminally negligent.

Claude McLester Lee, 42, and Leona Ann Osborne Lee, 18, of Santa Ana, Calif., were married Saturday at Tijuana, Mex., and that night were killed when struck by a car on a highway north of here.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today was Nora's day off, and pop was starting to leave for his office and ma said, William, this would be a very convenient night to dine out. We haven't eaten at the Dee Looks resterant up on the Avenue for quite some time, and I hear it has changed management, she said.

That adds a touch of variety at least, pop said. Up to the present the only thing that establishment has changed has been waiters. It's never changed the menu or even the tablecloths. All right, we'll eat up at the Dee Looks, and do you know what will happen? he said, and ma said, Yes, we'll be pleasantly serprised.

I'm afraid not, pop said. One of the new waiters will bang the plates down with such violence that we'll finally be obliged to speak to the new manager and tell me that we'll never darken his tablecloths again unless we get better service, and the new manager will remind us that we're living in peculiar times and that he can get plenty of customers but practically no waiters, and that unless we apologize to the waiter he'll be obliged to add a 20 per cent nuisance tax to our bill, besides the new toothpick tax, pop said, and ma said, Oh well, all right.

You mean you'll manage to fix up a little 4 course snack at home? pop said, and ma said, I mean we'll eat at the caffeteria. I know you hate to wait on yourself, but at least in that case you'll know it's only your own fault if you fail to show yourself every consideration, she said.

The result being we ate at the Dee Looks resterant anyways, and the waiters had changed to waitresses and our waitress brought pop some things he didn't order and forgot to bring him some he did, but she was such a bewty looking waitress that pop made ma mad by not even mentioning it.

Dixon and Canford each got three goals for Mimico while Gaudaur, Smith and Goldham were best for Hamilton.

Post-war High Steel Output Made in U.S.

New York, July 25 —(AP)— A post-war high in operating rates was attained by the steel industry this week at a time when scrap shortages were causing dire predictions of sharp declines, the Iron Age, national metalworking paper, said yesterday.

Use of production short cuts learned during the war was credited by the publication with enabling steel companies to maintain relatively heavy scheduled for an ingot rate of 90.5 per cent of capacity.

The rise in output may not be reflected in better deliveries and shipments to steel consummers, the Iron Age said, because of a serious railroad car shortage.

Chinese Reds Release Seven U. S. Marines

Tientsin, July 25 — (AP) — Seven United States Marines who were captured July 13 by some 80 armed Chinese Communists were released last night to a truce team, the Marine commandant announced today. They were unharmed.

The Marines were seized by the Chinese at a small village 22 miles southwest of the port of Chinwangtao, where they had gone to obtain ice.

Marine headquarters for the first time described the captors as Communists.

Names of the Marines were not made public immediately.

Mrs. Smith is Back Where She Started

Reno, Nev., July 25 —(AP) Mrs. Ethel Greer Smith's marital adventures with twin brothers were back today where they began two years ago.

Her counsel, John Robb Clark, said Mrs. Smith's life with the Smith brothers started in 1944 when she was married to Elmer J. Smith, 33, in Hollywood. After that, Mr. Clarke said, Elmer joined the army and went to the South Pacific.

So. Mrs. Smith, 31, came to Reno, divorced Elmer and a year later married his identical twin, Henry V. Smith. She lived with Henry until he was sent to Barhein Island in the Persian Gulf as an oil company representative.

Yesterday she divorced Henry and married Elmer again.

CHAPTER 16.

"Annette came home last night", he said.

At the sound of her name the officer door was flung open and Annette came in, her eyes cold beneath the large picture hat, her face and arms becomingly tanned.

"Have you told her, Louis?"

Iris looked from one to the other.

"I was about to," he said.

Iris thought, "What now? Am I going to lose my job? Am I going to be accussed of being in love with Louis? Or is Annette going to try to humiliate me by telling Louis it was Mark who paid that money?.

"Annette," Louis said sharply, "hiring and discharging my secretary is my own affair. I'm capable of doing it. Will you wait in my office?" He lifted his head. "Will you wait in my office?" he repeated.

When she had gone, he said, "Next to telling a girl once that she couldn't live, this is the hardest thing I've had to do. For months Annette has been determined that you should go. My home life has been....well, you know what it's been. She says that either you go or she goes. The whole thing is preposterous. She resents my liking anything except my work."

"Please don't worry about it, Louis. It's been too fine a relationship..too splendid a friendship." But she could not look at him. "I don't want to make your home life more unpleasant. If I go, perhaps she'll...."

"I'll get you a job. I promise you—a good job."

"Louis, will you think I'm impudent if I ask to see Mrs. Tracy alone for a few minutes?"

"If you can get the last word or the last laugh, I congratulate you. I'll go into the hall for a smoke."

Without Louis, Annette was less confident. Secretary and wife faced each other—Iris, lovely in her white uniform, her tanned face slightly flushed; Annette dressed exquistely in afternoon clothes, the diamonds on her fingers made more brilliant by the sunburn.

Iris said, "You're not jealous of Louis and me. You're in love with some one else. But you knew I wouldn't hurt him by telling him that you're—you're unfaithful. You knew that. Then why do you want him to discharge me?"

"Because I want Camilla to have this job," said Annette.

"Camilla?" Iris said slowly.

"She needs the job," Annette answered. "She's got to support herself. Mark paid for her operation. It was very successful. Now she needs a job."

Iris thought, "I need my job, too. I wanted a nice trousseau, things for our apartment. I need every cent of my salary."

But those things, however important they were for the future, seemed less important than leaving the cheerful office, her desk, and the spotless white room where Louis worked. This had been a far pleasanter place than home had ever been. This hadn't been a job; it had been an inspiration to see the miracle of Louis's work and the sound gentle philosophy he gave to his patients.

Saying nothing to Annette, she got up and went to the dressing room. How terribly silly of her to think of this room as being peculiarly hers! Taking off the white uniform and the white slippers, she put on her street clothes. When she glanced in the mirror, her eyes were strange. She put her uniform and the white slippers in the old school bag she always used to carry clean uniforms to and from home in, and stepped in to the "white room."

It was difficult not to recall the things that had happened in this room. Suffering, yes. Pain and tears and physical anguish. But there had been joy in knowing in her work she had something to give—her steady hands, her smile, saying often, "It'll be only a minute. Beat it."

She was jerked back to the reality that after today she would probably never see this room again when Louis came in. He looked wretched.

"I sent Annette home," he said. "Iris, you've been more than an assistant and secretary. You've been a friend and a splendid helper. I feel like a cad to do this."

"But your home has got to be preserved first."

"I wonder if this will make any difference. I'm clinging to the wreckage of my marriage. This is my last effort. I pretend not to see certain things I see very clearly."

Iris squared her shoulders. He said, "Wait—just a minute," and he went to his desk, wrote a check, and handed it to her. "Don't look for a job for a month. By that time I'll have one for you. Don't worry about anything."

"Don't you." She smiled. "I—I'm going to miss you."

"And I'll lose half my patients when you aren't here to hold their hands under severe treatment."

Apparently, she thought, he didn't know that Camilla was going to take her place. There was no point in telling him now.

He put his hand under her chin. "No tears. No good-byes. I'm going to make this up to you."

After she had gone, he stood a long time before a wide window and smoked innumerable cigarets. Turning quickly, he went to his desk, looked through several letters, and read one—marked personal—slowly, frowning as he read. Then he called Mary North.

"Before you bawl me out," he said, "let me say first it might be a lucky break for her."

"What in the world are you talking about, you enigma?" she asked, laughing.

"I must let Iris go."

"Go? You fired her?"

"It was either Annette or Iris. Iris will tell you about it and give you a saner version. That's not why I called. I've got a letter from Mark here. Do you know where he is?"

"I have a strong suspicion he went to a certain colony in New Hampshire I told him about. I went there after Julian's death."

"That's precisely where he is. I want you to take Iris to him, Mary. Don't tell her he's there. Suggest a boat trip to Boston and from there go on to New Hampshire. She can manage with the month's salary in advance I gave her."

Mary laughed again, delightedly. "Why, that's a marvellous idea! Here I've been sizzling in the summer heat wondering where to go. Now you've turned matchmaker!"

"Perhaps between the two of us we can keep her from going through with this marriage to Joel. "You'll have to be tactful," he warned.

Mary said, "leave that to me. That's the most brilliant idea you've had, my dear, since you made up your mind to be a doctor."

Neither Mrs. Wade nor Tommy was home. Iris took off her hat and lay face downward across the bed.

At dinner she waited until desert had been served before she said. "I have some bad news, Mother. I lost my job today."

"You lost your job'" Mrs. Wade and Tommy cried in unison. Then Mrs. Wade demanded, "Why? Haven't you been satisfactory? I thought you and Dr. Tracy were friends. Oh, I see. He heard about that—that money."

Iris smiled." No. He knew about that. Mrs. Tracy wants Camilla Winters to have my job."

"That's nerve," said Tommy, "if ever I've seen it. I thought Dr. Tracy...."

"It's not his fault," said Iris wearily. "Don't blame him."

"But what are we going to do?" Mrs. Wade cried helplessly. "So many bills to meet and your getting married, Iris! I think it's mean and low to let you out at this time. You need every cent of your salary to get things you need. What is Joel going to say about this? He's very jealous of you, you know. He'll probably.."

"This is not a calamity," said Tommy. "Iris helped me out when I wasn't working. I'll see her through."

"That's sweet of you," said Iris. "It will work out some way."

She was sitting on the porch when she saw Joel a tall athletic figure in a white linen suit, walking down the street. "What do girls think about when they see the man they're going to marry coming toward them? I know. They feel as I'd feel if that were Mark. I feel toward Joel as I feel toward Tommy I love him, but it's a different kind of love...'

Hello! All alone?" He bent down and kissed her. "You're lovely," he said. "You don't have to tell me. I stopped at the office for you and Dr. Tracy said he'd let you go. I didn't question him, he looked so low. What was the idea?"

"Mrs. Tracy has a friend she wants to have my job."

"Oh! Is that it? Well, we aren't going to sit around worrying about it let's go to a movie."

"Does it worry you, Joel?"

"I've got plenty of my own to think about."

"The responsibility of taking unto yourself a wife?" she asked, smiling.

"Not that. Let's get the papers and find a cheerful show."

"Now I Can Enjoy My Meals Again, Thanks To Syntona"

Tells of Relief from Gas, Indigestion and Sour, Upset Stomach. Also Free of Dizzy Spells and Nervous Irritability.

"I shall be very glad to tell anyone of the fine experience I had through using a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound," said Mrs. Mae Englehart, well known resident of Dutton, Ontario, in a recent interview.

"For a long time my stomach was in a very badly disordered condition. If I ate one day, I would become sick and could not eat for the next two. Gas, indigestion and heartburn gave me awful pain and a burning feeling in my stomach. At times I would get dizzy, light-headed spells and my nerves would be all on edge.

"I had tried many different things without benefit, but when I began taking Syntona I got relief almost from the first few days. As I continued using it the indigestion, gas and heartburn cleared up and now I can enjoy all my meals again thanks to this fine medicine. I am also free of dizzy spells and my nerves are relaxed, so I get sound, refreshing sleep at night and I feel very much better than I did a few short weeks ago.

Why not let this grand herbal medicine help you as it has so many other people in this city and vicinity? Syntona acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels; aids in ridding the system of excess acids and impurities and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Will Widen Scope For Appeals On Tax Assessments

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 25 (CP)—The government intends to give further consideration to the machinery it plans to establish to hear appeals against tax assessments for 1946 and subsequent years, Acting Prime Minister Abbott told the Commons yesterday.

Replying to opposition criticism that a proposed appeal board would have too limited powers and would start to work too late to be of any use on assessments during the high taxation period, Mr. Abbott said he would study suggestions and probably make a statement when the bill establishing the board is introduced.

Mr. Abbott spoke during continued study of resolutions to bills which will bring into effect the income tax changes proposed in the budget brought down June 27 by Finance Minister Ilsley.

Debate on Resolutions

Debate on the resolutions brought these developments:

1. Progressive Conservative and Social Credit Party members urged that the taxpayer with children be given the choice of a $300 exemption per dependent or $100 plus family allowance payments.

2. Ludger Dionne (L-Beauce) moved a resolution that would increase income tax exemptions from $750 to $1,500 for single persons and from $1,500 to $3,000 for married persons, and make up for the loss of revenue through a 10 per cent retail sales tax.

3. Committee chairman W. H. Golding (L-Huron-Perth) ruled the resolution out of order on the grounds that only a government minister can move any legislation dealing with money matters.

4. Mr. Abbott stated that contributions to political party funds could not be deducted from income for taxation purposes.

5. Victor Quelch (SC-Acadia) said the government should grant tax-bonds rather than tax credits, so the bonds could be cashed in during periods when purchasing power is needed.

6. David Gourd (L — Chapleau) urged special tax consideration for gold and basic mining to prevent the closing of many mines, resultant unemployment and the subsequent loss of revenue for the Dominion.

Senate Debate on Name of July 1

Meantime, the Senate continued debate on a bill that would change the name of the July 1 holiday from Dominion Day to Canada Day. Senator Wishart Robertson, government leader, supported second reading of the bill after expressing the hope that after further study the name of the holiday would be changed to the National Holiday of Canada.

As discussion petered out in the Commons, members passed the resolution increasing exemptions from $600 to $750 for single persons and from $1,200 to $1,500 for married persons. In the same resolution was the provision setting a $300 exemption for dependents over 16 and a $100 exemption plush famoly allowances for dependents under 16.

CHURCHILL'S TRIBUTE TO PATTON

Third Army, in the Hamm cemetery by placing a wreath of red roses and white gladioli on the general's grave. Strife in China Likely to Halt Plan For Army

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, July 25 — (AP)— Mounting evidence of undeclared civil war in China seemed almost certain today to kill for this year U. S. plans to help develop a modern, 1,000,000-man Chinese army.

Congressional leaders agreed privately that legislation to authorize the United States to help organize, train and equip such an army has practically no chance of passage in the few days that remain before Congressional adjournment.

The military aid bill is one of the key pieces in the government's Chinese policy built on the assumption that Gen. Marshall, President Truman's special peace maker, would succeed in his efforts to unify the Nationalists and Communists forces.

American officials still are hopeful. But the flow of reports during the last 10 days or so telling of increasing military operations by both the Communist forces and those of Chiang Kai-Shek have started discussions among some authorities of what the United States might be able to do if unrestrained civil war should be declared.

At the moment, while United States policy remains unchanged, the talk seems to be along two major lines:

1. Whether the United States should continue to give its full support to Chiang Kai Shek, if worst comes to worst, or;

2. Whether it should adopt some other attitude, possibly involving recognition of the Communists as legitimate belligerents.

Already, under the specially prolonged authority of the otherwise expired lend-lease Act, assistance to Chiang has dropped off to tiny fraction of what it once was. What aid is continuing is based mainly on the theory that Chiang needs help in completing the repatriation of Japanese troops and in occupying the areas from which they have been removed.

Would-be Suicides And Show-offs Worry Guards

By HOWARD COWAN

New York, July 25 —(AP)— "Lady in a flowered dress with a little boy by the hand. Be up in the next car. Watch her."

It was the suicide alarm on the observatory roof of the Empire State Building, tallest in the world.

By telephone, well-concealed whisper, wink of the eye and nod of the head, the word spread to guides, guards, elevator operators and even the white-aproned man behind the world's highest bar.

The lady in the flowered dress seemed nervous as she bought the ticket for the observation tower. She talked strangely, the operator said. She would bear watching.

"But we can't let her know we're watching her," said Frank Powell, observatory manager, as he waited calmly at the 86th floor. This is the roof. The tip of the observatory tower is 102 stories high.

More than 6,000,000 people have been on top of the 1,200-foot skyscraper since it opened for business May 1, 1931. As many as 12,000 have been there in a single day.

Four have climbed over the four-foot, 100-inch guard wall and jumped.

"Rarely a day goes by we don't have one," said Powell, referring to the anti-suicide workout just finished.

"We've taken several off the ledge. But not all were going to jump. Some were just show-offs, or dumb."

He told about a British merchant seaman who used the ledge to show a companion how agile he was on a ship's mast. A middle-aged gent posed, standing on the wall, while his wife focused a camera on him.

CHARGES 22 NAZIS GUILTY 12 MILLION MURDERS

Montreal Man Surrenders After Fatal Shooting

Bercowitz Claims Self Defence in Davis Killing

Montreal, July 26. (CP)—Captain Detective William Fitzpatrick of the Montreal police homicide squad said this morning that Louis Bercowitz had surrendered himself to a representative of the Montreal Herald and had admitted having shot Harry Davis, bigtime Montreal gambling operator, Thursday night.

Capt. Fitzpatrick said Bercowitz, taken into custody about 8.30 a.m., at the Herald offices, claimed self-defence in the killing that set off reports of gangland warfare and personal feuds among the higher-ups among Montreal's gambling operators.

The shooting took place in a betting establishment on West-Central Stanley street in one of the busiest sections of the city.

Three Shots Fired

Davis, who died in hospital, was shot in the "lounge room" of his three-room betting house by an assassin who fired three bullets into his body and walked calmly out of the building while others in the premises fled through a rear entrance.

The Montreal Herald said in a copyright story that Bercowitz gave himself up to Sean Edwin, Herald columnist, after making a telephone appointment. The paper said he dictated a statement to members of the Herald staff in a west end apartment.

"He claimed he drew his own gun when Davis reached for a gun in his waistband after threatening him. He stated he grabbed Davis' gun with his left hand while drawing his own with his right, that he heard shots—he could not say how many—then found himself standing over Davis with Davis' gun in his left hand and his own in his right...

Says he Was Driven by Fear

"Bercowitz, according to his own story, was a man driven by fear and suspicion. For days he had heard rumors and threats—rumors that he and his 'friend' were the perpetrators of the Mansfield Street bombing; rumors that Harry Davis was importing American gunmen to kill him.

(Early last Friday morning a home-made bomb was tossed at the roof of a Mansfield Street house where a gambling game was reported to have been in full swing. The bomb struck the roof of an adjoining restaurant, tore a hole through the roof causing damage estimated at $100. No arrests have been reported in this case.)

Tells of Arming Self

"He had armed himself because of these threats, he said. On Thursday morning after finishing his work as boxman at an east end 'Balbo,' he went home, in Outremont locked and chained his door, bolted the winodw and sank into dream-haunted sleep...

"'I suddenly decided that all the rumors I had heard might be false and had just started and been spread by scandalmongers,' said Bercowwitz, 'and decided to go in and see Davis himself, whom I have known for a great many years, thinking that, if I told him the truth of the matter, he might put my mind at ease and I would not have to walk around armed or in fear...

"Davis led him into the second room, and they sat down in two arm chairs, at right angles to each other, which were the only furniture, except for a counter, in the room...

"Bercowitz said that he asked Davis if he had heard the rumors concerning his friend and himself.

"After further questioning concerning the rumors, Davis, according to Bercowitz, refused to deny the story that he was hiring gunmen to 'have my friend and myself bumped off.' . . .

"Davis reached for his waistband and drew a gun. Bercowitz said he (Bercowitz) tried to grab his hand, seized the barrel of his gun. He drew his own gun with his right hand. He heard shots. He found himself standing over Davis with his own gun in his right hand and Davis' gun in his left.

"He walked out of the establishment, jamming the guns in his pockets.

1,500 Delegates Of 21 Nations To Attend Opening

By ROBERT C. WILSON

Paris, July 26 (AP)—Upward of 1,500 delegates are expected to attend the general European Peace Conference opening in Luxembourg Palace next Monday.

Officials busy with arrangements said nearly all the 21 countries had swelled their delegations to double the 750 persons which first were expected.

Russia, it appears, will have the largest mission—about 300. The United States delegation will number about 200, the French said, while Yugoslavia will bring 170 delegates and Czechoslovakia 60.

The French have tentatively set the opening of the conference for 3 p.m. Monday when 17 countries will be given the opportunity to be heard on the draft treaties prepared by the United States, Russia, Britain and France.

Among immediate subjects of discussion will be to decide if and when former enemy countries—Italy, Romania, Hungary, Finland and Bulgaria—will be invited to the conference. The requests of other countries for participation—Turkey, Mexico, Egypt, Albania and Luxembourg—also will be taken up.

French sources said they expected a bitter fight to develop over whether a two-thirds majority or a simple majority vote shall govern conference decisions.

Motorists Unhurt Though Train Cuts Auto in Two

Toronto, July 26 (CP)— Two persons from Lake Orion, Mich., stepped out of their auto, groggy but uninjured, after it was cut in two today by a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train at a level crossing at nearby Cooksville.

The two—Betty Jean Thomas and Edward Hinton—were visiting at the home of Hinton's father, George, and were taking a sick dog to R. J. Pinkney of Coksville for treatment. Miss Thomas was driving the car. She stopped at the crossing, right at the veterinary's property, to let a freight pass and then drove right into the path of the speeding Chicago-Toronto passenger train.

Wreckage of the car was thrown 100 feet and the engine was ripped from the chassis and tossed some distance away.

CHANGES HINTED IN CO-OPERATIVES TAX SCHEDULE

Opposition and Liberal Members Protesting Against Proposals In Budget Draft

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL

Ottawa, July 26 (CP)— Some of the most contentious budget resolutions are scheduled to come up for discussions in the Commons today when study is resumed of proposed income tax changes for the current fiscal year.

Resolutions dealing with the taxation of co-operatives and with mining operations were left standing yesterday and Acting Finance Minister Abbott said they likely would be called today.

He made the statement while reports spread that the government has planned to make some changes in original provisions for the taxation of co-operatives. The budget disclosed that co-operatives would be subject to taxes on the same basis as other business firms, but patronage dividends would be deductible for taxation purposes.

All opposition parties have protested against the budget proposal as now drafted and it was learned that Liberal members in caucus have also objected. In the light of this the government is believed to have some changes, so far undisclosed.

Changes are also believed to have been made in resolutions covering mining operations. These changes are understood to have been made in the light of the adverse affect the lifting of the Canadian dollar to parity with the United States dollar has had on gold mining.

Left standing for "overnight consideration" were resolutions dealing with the taxation of servicemen, firefighters, auxiliary services, farmers and fishermen.

Subject to Income Tax.

Mr. Abbott said that all permanent force personnel will be made subject to ordinary income tax on their pay and allowances at the new permanent force rates, whether in Canada or overseas, starting from the inauguration of the new rates of pay in 1946 which will probably be somewhere about September or October.

"All other service personnel in Canada and the Western Hemisphere outside Canada will be subject to full civilian tax from the beginning of 1947 while the overseas exemption will be continued only for the non-permanent force, a group rapidly diminishing in numbers, and the interim force," said Mr. Abbott.

"Exemption for six months after returning to Canada will not be applicable to personnel receiving the new permanent force pay prior to return to Canada, and the exemption now given for subsistence allowance up to $1.70 a day will be repealed from the beginning of 1947.

DOMESTIC WHEAT PRICE

Ottawa, July 26 — (CP) — Trade Minister MacKinnon said today in the Commons he expects to make an announcement next Tuesday on the domestic wheat price and the initial price to be paid wheat producers in the 1946-47 crop year.

Itinerary Worker Sets Earning Record as Fastest Fruit Picker

By GORDON G. MACNAB

Hood River, Ore., July 26 — (AP) — The pickin'est migrant worker in the west — maybe in the world — drew his pay cheque today and headed for California and another harvest.

Henry Wooten, one-time Kentuckian, heard the other day that nobody ever picked a ton of cherries in a day. So he picked a ton.

It took him 12 hours to strip 2,168 pounds off the trees in the Webster orchards. It gave him the record: also $75.84.

"He's about the best man we've ever had," said Roy Webster with magnificent understatement. "In six consecutive days last week he earned an average of $56 a day at 3½ cents a pound."

Pickers generally average $8 to $14 a day.

Last year Wooten averaged 1,000 pounds of cherries a day for 13 consecutive days, Webster said.

Wooten, 32, has been following the fruit harvesters from California to Canada for 10 years. He says he once studied for the ministry, and fellow-pickers say he's a college graduate.

Wooten is no one-crop specialist. He sets records wherever he goes. Last year at Chelan, Wash., he picked 360 boxes of apples in one day, setting a new mark. The county agent's office here said it heard he held the record for picking peaches in California.

No one doubts it, least of all Webster.

"The man's a bundle of nervous energy," he said. "He never makes a false motion and the only time he ever pauses is to light a four-inch cigaret."

Between seasons he works, too — pounding out stories for the pulp magazines.

But he's not a record - holder there. Sometimes, he says, once in about 60 tries, he makes a sale.

Deck Personnel Could Not Have Survived Underwater A-Blast States U. S. Admiral

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

Aboard the U.S.S. Appalachian, July 26 (AP)—The atomic bomb, which has twice proved conclusively it is sure death to ships of all categories within half-a-mile radius, probably would have killed all men on decks had crews manned the target vessels in Bikini Lagoon for yesterday's underwater test.

That is the calm, careful judgment of Vice-Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, commander of "operation crossroads."

"It is probable that personnel on deck would have been goners, if not immediately, at least later on," he said today in a post-blast assessment of the weapon which yesterday:

Sank the 26,100-ton battleship Arkansas and the 33,000-ton carrier Saratoga; so grievously wounded the Japanese battleship Navato that she still is developing a list; left the destroyer Hughes in imminent danger of sinking; sank some lighter craft; and spread so much radio-activity that 24 hours later 36 square miles of water are contaminated.

Admiral Blandy also observed: The unmanned drone airplane 6,000 feet directly over the bomb burst was damaged even though this explosion had to travel through a cushion of water to reach the air.

The bomb was about equal to others of the Nagasaki type. (This refers to the atom bomb which wrecked one-third of that Japanese city during the war.)

Transports and other lightweight ships failed to sink in any numbers because they were farther away from the centre of the explosion than the Arkansas and Saratoga.

The animals, now isolated by radioactive waters from attention, have a 10-day supply of food and water on the target ships—if they are alive.

There was more of a blast in the air than had been expected. The reason for this was unexplained. It probably means the depth of the water over the bomb did not confine this nuclear giant as well as had been calculated.

Admiral Blandy emphasized that the power of bomb-created waves is not to be minimized.

One landing ship at Bikini beach was swamped by one or more of the 20 waves that rolled ashore despite the fact that these waves were reported as less than 10 feet high.

Critic of WAC Tells Of Serviceable Goods Being Destroyed

Ottawa, July 26—(CP)—Dr. J. J. Brown of Penhold, Alta., and Toronto, physicist and writer on scientific and technical subjects, during the war a radar expert with Research Enterprises Limited, yesterday testified before the Commons war Expenditures Committee which had called him to back up articles he had written charging War Assets Corporation with wanton destruction.

Testimony concerned an article Dr. Brown had had published in the Winnipeg Free Press under the pen name of Dr. Boris Sherashevski, which described destruction and scrapping of aircraft and other batteries which would have been useful to civilian purchasers.

The article had touched off an Air Force investigation and Wing Cmdr. E. G. Mahoney had visited Dr. Brown to examine scrap batteries and other equipment he had bought from scrap dealers and was using in his home and in his car.

2,000 in Pile.

Dr. Brown described the pile of scrap batteries he had seen at a Toronto junk yard (Solway's) as being about 14 feet in length and width and 8 feet high. He estimated it had contained 2,000 batteries.

"I saw two trucks unloading separately and it must have taken several truckloads to make the pile," he said.

"You say in your article that some of the batteries were still crated and the Air Force denies this," said Alistair Stewart (CCF, Winnipeg North.)

"With all respect to the Air Force, their report reads like an attempt to whitewash," Dr. Brown replied. "All the more so since in the minutes of these meetings the Air Force has admitted to similar destruction at other points."

20 Radio Earphones.

He added that he had 20 radio earphones in his cellar, many in perfect shape. The others had required some tinkering to make them work.

"At the time Wing-Cmdr. Mahoney was in my house, Mrs. Brown was out in our car, which was running on one of the reclaimed batteries I had and it had been used in the car for six months."

Robert H. McGregor (PC, York East) pointed out that Mahoney had stated Brown had said the batteries were not suitable for cars. The witness denied this and corrected the statement for the committee.

"The battery in question was not bought for the purposes of the article, but because it was brand new and I had a use for it," he said. "The filler cap was smashed, but it could easily be fixed."

Mr. Stewart asked if the cap could have been broken accidentally.

"It is most unlikely. The heavy bakelite protecting cap would have to be pulled off first and then the filler cap underneath it."

Useful on Farm

"Could they have been of any use on a farm?" asked E. G. McCullough (CCF, Assiniboia).

"They would be useful on a farm and are superior to most batteries used on farms," Dr. Brown said.

He provided the committee with exhibits of scrap tags taken from batteries which idenitified their type and use. Some were for those used in trucks and cars. All came from the Toronto junk dealer's yard. The only destruction to the batteries had been the broken filler caps.

Thomas Reid (L., New Westminster) asked if he would bring the battery in question to show the committee.

Dr. Brown suggested a deputation of the committee go to his home to see "several tons of equipment in my cellar, garage and yard."

"You are lucky to have got tons. Other people have been waiting for months to get any," Mr. Reid said.

From Mount Hope

"I don't try to get it from War Assets any more. I get it from junk dealers," Dr. Brown said.

He added that as far as he knew 173 batteries at the junk yard had come from Mount Hope, a reserve landing field near Hamilton, Ont. and that most of the remainder had come from No. 1 Equipment Depot in Toronto.

"Surely you don't mean that these batteries were from the equipment depot, where they had come new from the manufacturers, to the junk yard?" asked Mr. McGregor.

"Not being in the Air Force I can only go by what is on the tags," Dr. Brown said.

Sees Danger Of Interference With Press Liberty

London, July 26 (CP)— The Newspaper World, a trade publication, said today that if the British government proceeds with a Royal Commission inquiry into the British press, "the conclusion will be that the temptation of gaining some political advantage has been too strong to resist."

"In that case the danger of government interference with press freedom will be a real one" said the editorial.

The magazine said there is every possibility the government will announce before the parliamentary recess Aug. 2 the outcome of cabinet deliberations on whether a press inquiry should be undertaken.

JET PLANE, FLIER IN GOOD HEALTH DESPITE HARDSHIP

McKenzie Finds Way Out of Bush After 26 Days Isolation In Wilderness

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 26 —(CP)— The first pilot to "ditch" a jet-propelled plane successfully took 26 days to get back to where he could tell about it but his first appraisal for his big boss was "she ditched wonderfully." His foot on the step into an ambulance, Flt. Lt. William H. McKenzie gave that answer last night to Air Marshal Robert Leckie, chief of the air staff, shortly after his arrival here to tell of an ordeal that saw him go without food for 23 days.

The 25-year-old combat veteran from Winnipeg found his way back to another human being early yesterday morning at a point just three miles from the spot where his Gloster Meteor pancaked into Little Helenbar Lake in the midst of an Ontario wilderness June 29.

His crash came about an hour outside Kapuskasing on the last stages of a flight from Edmonton to Toronto. The plane sank in two minutes in the little lake some 200 miles west of the course he was following, and just three miles east of Flack Lake where he finally stumbled out, bearded and thinned, to the motorboat of an American tourist.

McKenzie was taken to an R.C.A.F. hospital at Rockcliffe air station and early today was visited by his wife and mother, Mrs. J. S. Taylor, who flew from their home at St. Vital. Although most R.C.A.F. officials had given up hope of finding the airman alive, his wife said she had held steadfastly to the belief he was still living.

Men who remembered him as somewhat stout fellow of some 200 pounds were amazed at the 160-odd pounder who climbed out of the Grumhan amphibian that flew him in from Flack Lake.

As a plane there was nothing wrong with the meteor, McKenzie told reporters.

Flying at 20,000 feet to avoid a storm as he left Kapusgasing, his oxygen equipment had broken down. Things had grown "very vague" and when he came out of it "I didn't know where I was or what had happened"—a not unusual reaction in such cases.

Then he had realized his gasoline was low, had turned on the emergency tank and found it didn't work. He came down low, tried for an emergency field, didn't make it and finally hit the lake.

Air force men are advised to stick beside crashed planes and for 23 days McKenzie stuck — without food. Raspberries and blueberries were there but they were green. Only on the 24th day were they ripe and he began to eat them.

On the third day he got a fire going with his lighter and kept it going 24 hours a day for 10 days. Then he tried to get out but it was no use and when he came back the fire was out. On the 17th day he got it going again and kept it going for a week.

Several times he saw planes but none of them saw him. Then one day a Dakota—one of the search planes—flew directly over the lake at about 1,000 feet.

Gordon Says 10-cent Wage Boost Would Lead to Inflationary Prices

Ottawa, July 26 (CP)—General wage increase of 10 cents-an-hour would place "practically unbearable" pressure on price ceilings Donald Gordon, Prices Board chairman said today in evidence before the Commons Industrial Relations Committee. He had previously told the committee increases granted workers in the basic steel industry would eventually apply generally.

He said he was agraid establishment of a 10-cent pattern would be "the beginning of the end" though there was still "a fighting chance" of holding controls.

Mr. Gordon appeared before the committee in its investigation of industrial unrest. The committee has centred its attention first on the steel strike in which 15,000 workers are involved at Dominion Steel and Coal Corp., Sydney, N.S., Steel Co. of Canada, Hamilton, and Algoma Steel Corp., Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Mr. Gordon said in considering the increase in the selling price of steel—finally set April 1 at $5-a-ton—the Prices Board had taken into consideration various cost factors including the assumption that some adjustment would be made in wages. Speaking particularly of the Steel Co. of Canada Mr. Gordon said it was well understood that the price increased the company would be in a position to make wage increases.

The Prices Board chairman told Clarence Gillies (CCF-Cape Breton South he did not know where "the 10-cent formula" came from. The company had

Accuses Leaders Of 'Total And Totalitarian War'

Says Prisoners Directed Attempt to Destroy Races

Nuernberg, July 26 — (CP) — Sir Hartley Shawcross, Chief British Justice on the international military tribunal trying 22 Nazi leaders on war crimes charges, declared today the German captives were guilty of "12,000,000 murders."

Justice Shawcross spoke after Justice Robert H. Jackson, chief United States prosecutor, opened the prosecution's summation for the Allied countries against Hermann Goering and his 21 co-defendants after eight months of testimony and debate.

Justice Shawcross declared the Germans participated in and directed "the cold, calculated, deliberate attempt to destroy nations and races, to disintegrate the traditions, the institutions and the very existence of free and ancient states through murder conducted like some mass production industry in the gas chambers and the ovens" of death camps.

Rudolf Hess, No. 3 Nazi before he parachuted into Scotland and started his incredible insanity hoax, was the only defendant missing beside Martin Bormann, tried in absentia but often termed dead.

At one point, paunchy Hermann Goering and Grand Admiral Erich Raeder started a heated argument that military police had to break up.

Justice Shawcross, starting a summation that will require perhaps eight hours, declared the guilt of the German captives "is not in doubt." He read the British case from a manuscript as thick as a novel.

Crime of War Itself

He accused the defendants of the crime of war itself—"total and totalitarian war, waged in defiance of solemn undertakings and in breach of treaties." He recalled the "great war aims set forth and emphasized by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to establish loosing or an aggressive war as an international crime and to set up legal machinery to deal with the men accused of commiting it."

In opening the prosecution's summation, Justice Jackson said:

Opening the prosecution's summation for the Allied Nations against Hermann Goering and his 21 co-defendants after eight months of testimony and debate, Justice Jackson declared:

"Adolf Hitler's acts are their acts. His guilt is the guilt of the whole dock and every man in it."

Goering "Half Militarist Gangster

Goering, "half militarist and half gangster," was, "next to Hitler, the man who tied the activities of all the defendants together in a common effort," Justice Jackson said, adding:

"The parts played by the other defendants, although less comprehensive, less spectacular than than of the Reichsmarshal, were nevertheless integral and necessary contributions to the joint undertaking."

From the moment the Nazis came to power in 1933, "everyone of the defendants worked like beavers" to prepare for war which they knew would be a war of German aggression.

Dismissing the "almost unanimous" defence of the group that "nobody knew anything about what was going on," the chief American prosecutor said "they all speak with a Nazi double talk."

"They have been given the kind of trial which they, in the days of their pomp and power, never gave to any man," he noted.

The supreme court justice limited his summation to the charge of conspiracy, thus leaving it to the French, British and Russian prosecutors to deal with these other counts of the indictment: Crimes against peace, war crimes, and crimes against humanity.

Of the 24 Nazi leaders indicted last fall, Martin Bormann, Hitler's Deputy Fuehrer, is missing and was tried in absentia. Robert Ley hanged himself in prison, and the trial of Gustav Krupp Von Bohlen, the Ruhr industrialist, was postponed indefinitely because of his mental illness.

Role of Each Recited

Tracing in detail Hitler's plan to dominate Europe, Justice Jackson recited one by one the role played by each of the group on trial.

"Each part of the plan fitted into every other," he said. "The slave-labor program meshed with the needs of industry and agriculture, and these in turn synchronized with the military machine.

"The elaborate propaganda apparatus geared with the program to dominate the people and incite them to a war their sons would have to fight. The armament industries were fed by the concentration camps. The concentration camps were fed by the Gestapo. The Gestapo was fed by the spy system of the Nazi party."

Tension Mounts At Gates of Plant At Hamilton

Hamilton, July 26 (CP)—Tension continued to mount today at main gates of the Hamilton works of Steel Company of Canada as augmented picket lines of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) remained on the alert for any new attempt to take raw materials or supplies into the plant, where some 2,700 employees remain at work.

A company move yesterday to take a train load of scrap iron and limestone into the plant property failed when a Canadian National Railways crew declined to take the train through a plant entrance protected by more than 100 city police.

zEamon Park, union publicity director in Hamilton, charged that use of Hamilton police at the strike scene yesterday was "a display of armed force arranged solely and wholly upon the side of the company."

Meanwhile, Magistrate H. A. Burbride convisted William Lewis 59, of suburban Burlington Beach, of intimidating Mrs. Murray McMaster by making threats against her husband and her three small children. Lewis is a striking steelworker and McMaster, a neighbor, who continued to work in the Stelco plant.

TRUCK OCCUPANTS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Two occupants of a truck hauling aeroplane parts miraculously escaped serious injury during the early hours Friday when their vehicle went out of control south of Marysville and overturned in the ditch along No. 2 Highway. Although the tractor upset in the ditch the trailer to which it was attached in some way remained righted and followed down the ditch.

Mayor Offers Cheddar Cheese For Contest Prize

Mayor Frank S. Follwell, youthful good-looking chief magistrate of this city has not only accepted the challenge to athletic didos flung down by various mayors of the Dominion, but today came forth with a double-decked challenge of his own.

A brother of Jim Follwell, former Western U. star halfback, the mayor has issued a challenge to any mayor in Canada to meet him in putting the shot or drop-kicking a football. The prizes, a Belleville cheddar cheese against any prize the challengers, if any, want to put up.

Mayor Follwell has formally accepted the challenge of Mayor Aaron Horowitz, of Cornwall, to meet any Dominion mayor in the 100-yard dash. But, the Belleville official has offered to put up a cheddar cheese against a pair of nylon stockings.

Being an eligible bachelor, some mystery surrounds his choice of nylons as his opponent's "purse".

The events will be staged at the Cornwall Old Home Week celebrations in August.

"Some of the old grey mayors ain't what they used to be", quipped Hizzoner today, "and here's a chance to prove that they are."

Mayor Camillien Houde, Montreal, has challenged any mayor to outspeed him in an ice-skating exhibition, with the provisos they must be at least as old and as heavy as he is. He is 56. His weight? Ask him.

Mayor of London has issued a "defi" to other city heads to beat him in the broad jump. Mayor Follwell has "jumped" at that challenge.

He is to be found nightly in running shorts and shoes getting into condition for the Cornwall Olympics.

Simpson Given 3-Month Term On Theft Charge

Pleading guilty to a charge of stealing a carton of cigarettes from the Canadian National Railways freight shed last May, Frank Simpson, formerly of this city, was sentenced to three months in the county jail when he appeared in Magistrate's Court before Magistrate T. Y. Wills on Friday morning.

According to the C.N.R. investigator who gave testimony at the hearing, Simpson was observed by railroad employees taking a carton of cigarettes and a chase ensued during which the accused escaped. A warrant for Simpson's arrest was later taken out, the accused being arrested July 19th on his return to the city.

Simpson told the court he had returned to Belleville expecting to be arrested on the cigarette theft charge.

6 Months for Bigamy.

Clarence Baker, formerly of Tamworth, but living recently in Belleville, was given six months in the Ontario Reformatory following his plea of guilty to a charge of bigamy. Evidence presented in court showed Baker had been married in 1938 and following his discharge from active service had gone through a form of marriage with another woman in 1945.

Baker told the court that he had married in 1945 when he had been told his first wife had died during the time he was in the service. He had later learned his first wife was still living.

Legally Divorced Wife Wife is Seeking Jewish Divorce

Los Angeles, July 26 — (AP)—Her ex-husband is "unfair," says Frances Sobel, because he won't give her a divorce, so she's picketing him.

Miss Sobel, who retains her maiden name, told reporters she came all the way from New York City to ask Meyer Zeitlin to join her in getting a Jewish divorce but he refused. Although they were legally divorced two years ago, she said, she cannot remarry until her church also recognizes severance of their marital ties.

That's why, explained Miss Sobel, she is walking the sidewalk outside Zeitlin's grocery, wearing a "sandwich sign" which says, in part:

"All I want is a Jewish divorce."

Zeitlin could not be reached for comment.

Wild Duck and Brood Hold Up Traffic as They Parade Along Road

American and Canadian automobiles screeched as hurriedly applied brakes pulled them to a stop on Highway No. 2 near Brighton yesterday.

Cars were strung along the road for a considerable distance on both east and west of a certain point.

Occupants hurriedly got out of their vehicles to see what caused the holdup in traffic. Perhaps an accident—or somebody struck by a speeding car.

Gathered around the point of delay, small knots of delayed motorists stood in little knots and laughed at what they saw. Americans especially were amused, because the sight was a rare one—never seen in cities or large towns.

Slowly, almost majestically, along the highway waddled a wild black duck. Behind her in single file paraded nine fluffy little fellows.

A Belleville motorist who happened to be one of the spectators, relating the incident, remarked that "It was the funniest sight I ever saw. I have seen mother skunks parade with their young, but this duck dowager has anything beat along that line."

"She slowly waddled down the road, perfectly oblivious to the interest she was causing. She showed no fear of humans, nor did she look right or left. After a while she turned and went into a shallow ditch and headed for a marsh. Her family, as oblivious to their surroundings as their mother, followed her without breaking line."

'Sense of Fear Shaping, Warping' Soviet Policy'

New York, July 26 (AP)—John Fischer, who spent nearly three months in Russia as a member of a United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration mission, says that "a sense of fear quite plainly is one of the dominating facts" of the Soviet Union and "it is shaping—or warping—the entire Soviet foreign policy."

"There is only one way... to cure the Russians of their fear of foreign attack," he writes in the August issue of Harper's Magazine. "That is for the United States to pull through the next 15 years without a major depression and without going 'Fascist.'"

Fischer, a member of Harper's editorial staff, went to Russia with a mission to supervise relief distribution in Ukraine. An editorial note with his article says the members "were granted exceptional freedom of movement, observation and conversation with Russians (with their own American interpreter)."

"The most obvious symptom of this pervading fear," Fischer writes, "was the Red Army—still mobilized 4,500,000 strong in spite of Russia's desperate need for manpower."

The important point, in the author's estimation, is that "even if the atom bomb never had been invented, the Soviet Union today and for some years to come cannot begin to match the military and industrial potential of the United States. And to the men of the Kremlin this fact is profoundly alarming."

British Commons Approves Canada's Request on B.N.A.

London, July 26. (CP Cable)—The House of Commons today required only eight minutes to pass the British North America Bill of Reditsribution of representation in the Canadian House of Commones, although Canadian-born Beverly Baxter, Conservative member for Wood Green, said it was "anachronism" that the Imperial Parliament should pass such legislation.

He said the Canadian Parliament should be able to make its own constitution changes.

Anthony Eden, deputy Conservative leader in the House, backed a request by solicitor-general Sir Frank Soskice that the Canadian Parliament's request for redistribution be observed and that legislation, already passed by the Lords, be approved quickly by the Commons.

Sir Frank said the bill dealt with a matter primarily within the discretion and judgment of the Canadian Parliament, which had decided on the change. He said he hoped the House would pass the Bill through all its stages today.

Mr. Baxter said the procedure to be followed was set out in the statute of Westminster and he felt that he Canadian request should be approved "automatically". The fact remained that the British House was passing something affecting Canada's constitution.

the Herald Staff and at least one other member of the staff was always within earshot, the paper said.

"Bercowitz answered questions freely and talked of his wife and his family. He mentioned friends and spoke of several known criminals and underworld characters by name.

"He referred to the fact that Davis had been recently married and voiced sympathy for his widow.

"'But I would rather it was her than my wife,' he said."

Bercowitz made persistent attempts to reach the Herald columnist before finally getting the appointment "within an hour of the slaying," the paper said.

"About seven the city editor at the Herald answered a phone call.

"'I want to speak to Sean Edwin,' came a calm voice over the wire.

"Informed that Sean Edwin was not in, he voiced disappointment.

"'I want to get hold of him right away. This is the biggest thing that ever happened for the Herald,' the voice declared.

"The unknown said he would call back.

"He did. At 15 minute intervals, until 8.30, he called with the same demand, apparently becoming more eager with each call.

Learns of Calls

"At 8.30, Sean Edwin learned of the calls — the first of which had been made when he was actually at the scene of the killing checking up on the story, and hurried back to the office.

"Bercowitz was in communication with him a few minutes later and the appointment was made.

"While Bercowitz was making his phone calls, homicide squad detectives and police were combing the city for the slayer of Davis. They had descriptions of the gunman from persons who had seen him leave the Stanley Street address and are believed to have been looking for a particular suspect.

"Bercowitz declared in his statement that he decided to surrender to Sean Edwin because he 'knew the underworld had never been able to buy off either him or the Herald.'

"Taken to a flat in the west end, Bercowitz expressed eagerness to tell the whole story of the events leading up to the shooting. Talking calmly and choosing his words carefully, he dictated a lengthy statement. He at no time displayed excitement. He smoked cigarettes and drank coffee while talking."

Bercowitz was quoted in the statement as saying Davis told him: "You can be taken care of just as easily as Feigenbaum."

Max Feigenbaum was arrested with Davis in 1933 when police broke up a $1,500,000 drug-smuggling ring. Feigenbaum turned King's evidence and was released. Davis was sentenced to 14 years imprisonment with lashes. In August, 1934, Feigenbaum was riddled with six bullets while driving with a son on Esplanade Avenue. The shooting is listed in police files as unsolved.

Between 1926 and 1933 Davis had 11 drug convictions recorded against him in Procincial Police files, being sentenced on the last one to seven years in penitentiary and fined $1,000.

Present Scale of Operation.

Law enforcement sources have expressed belief that organized gambling activities in Montreal at present were not on the scale of last winter and early spring, when police raids were being carried out with intensive regularity.

Reliable sources said that only "four or five" balbo games and about 20 bookmaking establishments now were operating.

The police drive of several months ago and presentation of a petition in Superior Court on behalf of the Citizens' Vigilance League last December seeking a judicial inquiry into the administration of the police department apparently led to a tightening of precautions by gambling operators.

Police are reported to have been finding difficulty in getting their men into gambling premises or, once they had entered, in having their bets placed.

Law enforcement sources said that, in order for police to make a case, not only must a bet be placed but it must be corroborated by a second officer.

GORDON SAYS

estimated what a 10-cent increase would cost. The board had asked for similar estimates ranging from five to 25-cen wage increases so it would have "both extremes." The board in deciding on the $5 increase had no particular figure in mind for labor.

"I do say most emphatically that wage increase of the magnitude suggested by the union (19½ cents-an-hour) is bound to have effects on costs all through our economy," r. Gordon said.

"The effect would be such that I question very much if it would be worthwhile for the Prices Board to struggle any longer."

Any increase in either wages or prices was inflationary but there was a point to which a chance could be taken on cost increases with a reasonable hope of maintaining control. Increased production would in some cases offset cost increases such as higher wages.

Mr. Gordon said he felt there was no great danger of uncontrollable inflation as long as there was an abundance of goods.

"Every day that goes by with production lessened increases the inflationary danger," he said.

He was questioned by Ralph Maybank (L-Winnipeg South Centre) on how far wage increases could be granted before breaking point was reached. The figure would differ in various industries.

Mr. Maybank persued his questioning and Mr. Gordon said if he was pressed he would make an estimate.

"I wish you would," Mr. Maybank said.

Ottawa, July 26 (CP)— A group of 35 members of parliament are likely to get a chance to cross-examine Donald Gordon, Prices Board Chairman, today on the relation of prices and wages.

Mr. Gordon appeared briefly before the Commons Industrial Relations Committee Thursday. Before the Committee adjourned until today he had said that wage increases granted in the steel strike at Hamilton, Sydney and Sault Ste. Marie would set a general pattern and if they amounted to the 19 1-2 cents set by the union they would lead to inflationary price rises.

The Prices Board Chairman told the committee that when his Board authorized an increase of $5 a ton in basic steel April 1 it determined the amount of the increase by what it was thought the Canadian economy would stand without seriously damaging price control. He was not prepared to say how much the three companies could advance wages.

In reply to questions by J. J. Robinette, committee counsel, Mr. Gordon said he did not consider a proposal by the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) for co-ordination of price and wage control in a single board practical.

"It would be impossible for the Price Board to operate on a basis where it would be drawn into wage disputes," he said.

Careful consideration had been given to the question of whether prices should be increased before wage discussions were completed, he added. It had finally been decided to raise prices first and Mr. Gordon said he considered that decision had been correct. It had been confirmed by correspondence with H. G. Hilton, President of the Steel Co. of Canada who said he could not discuss wages with his employees until he knew what his selling prices were going to be.

Before hearing Mr. Gordon the Committee completed questioning of Mr. Justice W. D Roach, commissioner in the steel dispute. The commissioner said action of union leaders in "sniping" at him immediately after his appointment had confirmed his belief that he was "doomed to failure" before he started.

Questioned by committee members he re-affirmed the view he had expressed in a report placed before the committee earlier in the day recommending a vote under government auspices in individual plants affected by the strike to determine whether the workers were prepared to accept settlements. He proposed work be resumed and a 60-day "cooling off" period allowed before the vote was taken.

Tales of Horror In Nanking Attack Told in Court

Tokyo, July 25. (AP)— Six weeks of rape, bayonet attacks and burning of gasoline-covered Chinese after the Japanese seized Nanking Dec. 12, 1937, were described today by a prosecution witness in Tokyo's war crimes trial.

"A man came to the hospital with a bullet in the jaw and two-thirds of his body burned," said Dr. Robert O. Wilson, surgeon at Nanking's University hospital.

"He had been seized by Japanese soldiers, shot, covered with gasoline and set afire. He died two days later. Another man, severely burned about the head and shoulders, was the only survivor of a large group bound together, drenched with gasoline and set afire."

His testimony marked the first prosecution move to bring atrocities into the case against Hideki Tojo and 26 other accused war criminals.

Fight Tsetse Fly In South Africa

Capetown (CP)—Government measures to combat nagana, native name for a cattle disease caused by the tsetse fly, have been announced by Agriculture Minister Strauss.

The measures include the clearing of wide belts of bush country to prevent the fly from spreading from the infected game reserves in Zululand, the import of 100,000 doses of the new anti-nagana drug, an aerial survey which will help officials choose the best areas for clearing and spraying, a larger veterinary field staff, and experiments with insect-destroying smoke screens released from aircraft.

Mr. Strauss said: "The spread of the disease is serious, and can probably be compared with the last epidemic several years ago. It has extended to the extreme limits of the area of potential infestation."

K. Kluge, nagana research officer, will visit the Tanganyika tsetse fly research laboratory to study the latest methods of control.

300,000 YOUNGSTERS HOMELESS IN POLAND

Warsaw, July 25 (CP) — Poland's child population has dropped from 15,000,000 in 1939 to 8,000,000 or 8,500,000,, of which 200,000 are war orphans and 1,500,000 half orphans, the Polish Ministry of Education has disclosed.

The ministry said a considerable number of children who lost parents were being cared for by relatives, but there were 300,000 for whom places must be found in foster families or in children's homes, supported by the treasury or by public welfare.

PICTON

American Visitors In Shorts Arouse Town Controversy

Picton, July 25—A mild controversy has arisen as a result of a member of the local police force advising two visitors to the town that they could not go about the streets in 'shorts'. The two young ladies were from Rochester and had come to Picton on the family yacht. They walked up the town hill where they were spotted by the chief of police, and his advise they believed to be a joke, but an additional warning proved the law meant what he said, and the ladies retired indignantly to the yacht.

Acting Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon said, 'It is all very silly. If there is any antiquated by-law on the books that prohibits anyone walking on Main street in summertime shorts, it is time it was repealed.'

Chief Bert Biddle insisted that there was a by-law which forbids the wearing of shorts on Main street, but the solicitor and town clerk, F. L. Ward, K.C., said emphatically that there is no such by-law on the books.

Lieut. T. Farrell Is Convicted Of Branding

Boston, July 25—(AP)—Lieut. Thomas Farrell today awaited sentence after being convicted of branding 18-year-old Helen Stavrou with lighted cigarets and a razor blade during a 17-hour orgy in a Boston hotel room last March.

Farrell, United States Army veteran of 35 Pacific air missions, was free on $10,000 bail, awaiting sentence next Monday by Judge Edward Voke.

The flier displayed no outward emotion as the all-male Superior Court jury yesterday announced its verdict, and then walked out smoking a cigaret. Miss Stavrou, former airfield typist who bared her breasts during the five weeks trial, was not in the court room.

Farrell was convicted specifically on three counts of assault and battery with cigaret and razor blade with intent to "maim, cripple and disfigure." He was acquitted on the other counts, indecent assault and committing unnatural acts.

Defence Counsel Herbert F. Callahan, who made a plea for leniency for Farrell on grounds that Miss Stavrou "collaborated" in any acts that might have been committed, said he would file a motion for a new trial.

A "substantial state prison" sentence for the pilot was demanded by Assistant District Attorney Edward M. Sullivan, who directed the prosecution.

Farrell admitted intimacies with Miss Stavrou, but denied branding her. Miss Stavrou, who was on the stand five days during the trial, testified that Farrell had burned his initials on her breasts with lighted cigarets and had slashed her thighs with a razor blade.

No Queues Down in Mexico

Nogales, Mexico (CP)—Mexico is a land of plenty —if you have plenty of money.

In fact, there isn't a shortage of much of anything in this city of 25,000, just across the international border from Arizona.

Beef is piled high in market show cases or on blocks. But it doesn't look too tempting with flies swarming in the warm afternoon sun.

Stores advertise nylons by size, gauge and make. There are no lines. The price is about $2.95 a pair.

Markets are loaded with sugar. It isn't as highly refined as the American product, but just as sweet. A visitor can take five pounds back across the border without worrying about a ration stamp. Camera film is advertised by most merchants, and almost every size is on hand, but the cost is about double that in the States.

Mexican urchins roam the streets selling popular brands of cigarets at a quarter a package. A tourist can bring $100 worth of Mexican goods into the United States duty free. There is a steady two-way procession across the border these days. Americans are stocking up on scarce items. Mexicans buy armloads of groceries in Arizona stores.

Indian, Eskimo Health Service Calls for Nurses

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 25 — (CP)—Any girl with a nurse's diploma and a yen for adventure is sure of a warm welcome at the Health Department's Indian and Eskimo health service headquarters here — especially if she has had experience with tuberculosis.

The health service, headed by Dr. P. E. Moore, is out to treat the deadly respiratory diseases and is campaigning for 100 more nurses in addition to the 115 they already have. Twenty more doctors will soon be enlisted in the fight.

The girls will staff the present 434 Indian hospitals, new ones to be opened, and nursing stations in outlying regions. The service already has 29 full time and 700 part-time physicians. In addition, Mounties' wives and other "field matrons" with some medical training, help out in remote regions.

Not all the nurses will visit their patients on dog sled by the flicker of the northern lights. Most hospitals now are in the settled, southern parts of the country, with Canada's 118,316 Indians scattered between Eskasoni Reserve on Cape Breton Island and the Coqualeetza hospital at Sardis, B.C. Stations in Eskimo lands are in the blue print stage but are not expected to be completed this year.

The white man's diseases have hit the Eskimos in some sections hard.

"We have much to do to protect them, as well as take care of them when they are ill," said Dr. Moore. "Our nursing service has to be a sort of welfare service, too, to teach Indian and Eskimo mothers care of babies, proper nutrition and clean and healthy ways of living."

Tuberculosis is far and away the top Indian killer with 708.2 deaths per 100,000 compared to only 41.6 among whites. Heart diseases, which heads the white list, at 244.8 per 100,000, comes fifth on the Indian list with 137.9 deaths.

Other causes of Indian deaths in order of importance are pneumonia, influenza, infant diseases, Heart diseases, accidents — including winter freezings and summer drownings — diarrhea cancer, whooping cough and measles.

New hospitals to be opened this year are the Charles Campbell Hospital at Edmonton and one at Prince Rupert, B.C.

Five more nursing stations are being opened at the Eskasoni Reserve on Cape Breton Island, Fort George, Que.; St. Regis Reserve, Que.; Bersemis, Que., and Gypsumville in northern Manitoba.

More Lumber Seen, U. S. Firms to Re-open Mills in Ontario

Ottawa, July 25 — (CP)—Timber control officials said yesterday operation of additional Canadian lumber mills would increase lumber available to the Canadian market as well as exports.

T. L. Kennedy, Ontario agriculture minister, said United States mills were re-opening Ontario mills which have not been operating for years and exports of lumber to the United States had reached enormous proportions.

Timber control officials said export quotas were determined entirely by the number of feet produced and mills were required to place two carloads of lumber on the Canadian market for every carload exported.

Sir Frederick Grant Banting—A Tribute. By W. E. Robinson.

+ + + An Achievement—and an Inspiration + + +

May 16th, 1921, he stood in a small, dingy room in the Medical Building of the University of Toronto, a self-appointed seeker, untitled, unpaid, but sustained by a conviction that he was on the track of a great discovery.

His name was Frederick Grant Banting, Canadian Surgeon, and he had sold his office furniture and instruments to provide funds for his living costs.

He believed he had the key to the dread riddle of diabetes, a disease that had baffled medical science since the dawn of history. Medical opinion was skeptical, but physiologists and biochemists added their efforts and soon the rumour was whispered in hospitals and stricken homes "Banting of Toronto has discovered a treatment for diabetes".

From all over the continent, haggard, doomed diabetics came to Toronto, hoping against hope, their very lives at stake in Banting's grim race to perfect Insulin in time.

The rest is history, as is the fact that Sir Frederick Grant Banting died as he had lived—in the service of his country and of humanity. Today, 25 years after his discovery, his work has saved uncounted thousands of lives, and the story of his achievements has become a glowing example and an inspiration to all Canadians . . . giving us an assurance of an ever-increasing measure of health and prosperity in the Canada Unlimited of the future.

Biggest Wheat Crop

Canada's agreement with Britain by which Britain will buy 600,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat in the next four years is the biggest transaction of the kind in Canada's history.

The announcement in the British Commons by the Food Minister brought cheers and a news report stated that the cheers grew louder as Mr. Strachey said, "This agreement is of the greatest importance to us and to our Canadian friends—and what friends they have been!"

British appreciation of Canada sinks deep into the hearts of Canadians who know what the gratitude of Britain has meant and means and what friends Britons have been to Canada and the rest of the Empire and to the peoples of the world. Mr. Strachey's words which followed show what it means to Britain. "It has an enormous bearing on our determination never to get back into the difficult position facing us today."

Suggested Fusion of Zones

Mr. Byrnes' proposal for the economic fusion of the American zone with any one or more of the other zones in Germany is now before the Allied Control Council in Berlin in the form of a concrete invitation to the United Kingdom, Russian and French representatives on the Council to join with the American authorities in preventing the economic paralysis of Germany.

When the U.S.A. representative, General McArney, presented this invitation recently to the Council, he emphasized, as Mr. Byrnes had done in Paris, that the proposal was put forward temporarily pending a quadripartite agreement to apply the Potsdam decision to treat all Germany as an economic unit.

The American invitation being addressed equally to Britain, Russia and France, it is just as open, for example to Russia, to adhere and Britain to stand out as for Britain to join and Russia to abstain.

The United Kingdom, Russian and French representatives on the Allied Control Council were not in a position to make a statement of policy. All three simply announced they would refer the American invitation to their governments.

In the British case, no time was lost. General Sir Brian Robertson, Deputy Governor of the British zone, and Sir William Strang, Political Adviser to the Governor, flew recently to London for consultations with the United Kingdom Government. They saw Mr. Bevin. These consultations will in addition embrace the problem of which notice was given by Mr. Bevin in Paris, of raising the level of production in the British zone to enable exports to pay for imports and to relieve the British taxpayer of the burden of subsidizing German subsistence in the British zone.

Pending the result of these consultations, the United Kingdom Government is reserving its decision regarding the U.S.A. government's invitation.

It may again be pointed out that there would be no need even to discuss the practicability of organizing the economic unity of two or three zones if Russia had agreed to implement the Potsdam decision in favor of the economic unity of all four zones. And it will also be noted that the technical study of the ways and means of giving eventual effect to the American proposal does not prejudice the reversal of Russian policy which is keenly desired by the United Kingdom and U.S.A. governments. It is desired, not only because nothing short of a Four-Power agreement to establish German economic unity can furnish an effective remedy for the German economic problem, but also because it would mark an important forward step in Four Power co-operation in solving the main problem of peace. What the Western Powers hope for is to break down, not to heighten, the barriers between the Eastern and Western zones.

General McArney, in his statement on Saturday before the Allied Control Council, spoke of the creeping economic paralysis in Germany. All reliable first-hand reports go to show that the most acute economic distress is found in the British zone because it contains the greatest industrial agglomerations and the smallest area of farmland. In this connection, the London Daily Herald, at the conclusion of a documentary article listing what the British authorities are doing to re-educate the Germans in the British zone (thirteen thousand schools opened, the training of fifteen thousand additional teachers, the introduction of new text books, courses for fifty thousand adults, etc.,) says "The longer want and despair continue, the more we are in danger of losing our chance to re-educate this nation and of wasting all the fine foundations we have built. That undoubtedly is one of the reasons why Mr. Bevin fought at the Big Four meetings in Paris for a unified economic policy in Germany and why Mr. Byrnes' suggestion of a merging of the zones is now receiving urgent Cabinet attention."

Rebuilt Commons to Save Tradition

Following its third destruction, as after each of the previous fires of 1512 and 1834, the House of Commons "in the King's Palace of Westminster" is to be rebuilt. Compromises with progress are to be made in the new House. Air conditioning will do something for the familiar atmospheric stuffiness. A special elevator to a private box for H.R.H. The Princess Elizabeth is to be installed. And it is to be hoped that something will be done about the abominable acoustics, says Montreal Gazette.

But basic structural changes in the new Chamber are neither likely nor desirable. The grand Victorian Gothic of Sir Charles Barry (who rebuilt the Palace, as the modern world knows, from 1840 to 1867) is to be maintained externally. Within, the House will measure the same inadequate 70 feet, still have no more than half enough seats for its members; its walls will be panelled with centuries-old English oak from the historic Warwickshire Forest of Arden; and its procedures will be those time-tested democratic methods that are established British tradition in the parliamentary sphere.

British law, in the new House of Commons as in the old, will be rooted in ancient British tradition, flourishing in democracy, and building toward freedom.

End of the Normandie

The great liner Normandie has apparently reached the end of her troubled road. Mr. Truman is to be asked to authorize the scrapping of the big ship, which fire, flood and the march of events have conspired to make virtually useless in the grimmer world which has followed the war.

Americans must be a little embarrassed by the Normandie's fate. After she was swept by the flames at her New York pier and capsized, the herculean task of righting her was well done. Moreover, that job was used to train divers and workers who later did so much to clear wrecked ports and keep the maritime supply lines open.

The United States has agreed to pay $13,500,000 to France for the ship. The French are said to be planning to use this sum in part payment for several Liberty ships—which will be, in all probability, more useful than the Normandie in the present state of Europe's merchant marine. Despite all this, however, the United States is in the awkward position of the householder who borrows his neighbor's best china for a party and then smashes it.

JUST FOLKS

SILENT SPEECH

There are so many forms of speech!
The nose can pass a thought along.
Just turn it up and it will screech
That something in the room is wrong.

What one is thinking, sneers portray.
The sudden movement of a hand—
Disgust's or pleasure's terms can say,
In speech that all can understand.

The eyes have language of their own;
With eloquence their words they phrase.
The eyes make love and hatred known,
Although the tongue in silence stays.

Words may be used for cunning lies.
Not always are they chosen well.
But shoulders, lips and hands and eyes
Always and only truth will tell.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What percent of births are twins?

The exact proportion of multiple to single births seems to vary considerably in different parts of the world and at different periods, but statistical information is inadequate at present to make satisfactory comparisons of the frequency of multiple births in different countries or to determine whether the percentage of such births is increasing, decreasing or remaining about constant.

Nature appears to have contemplated that the human mother should bear and nurse two children at a time, but for some reason the great majority of births are single.

Birth registrations in leading countries indicate an average of one pair of twins to about every ninety births.

In the United States the average is one pair of twins to about 88 births.

About a third are twin boys, a third twin girls, and a third twin boys and girls.

Twins are of the same sex in about five cases out of eight.

Triplets occur once in about 8,800 births, quadruplets once in about 700,000, and quintuplets are so rare that only a few cases occur throughout the world in a century. One investigator estimated that the chances of a mother giving birth to quintuplets is only about one to 41,800,000.

There are about 4,000,000 people in the United States who were born twins.

There is some evidence that the percentage of multiple births is slightly greater in Canada than in the United States and among American Indians than among whites.

Many primitive peoples believe that twins possess magical powers over nature, such as the ability to control the rain and weather.

Among some of the native tribes of Australia it used to be a practice when twins were born to kill one of them—usually the smaller and weaker one.

Uncompromising Attitude of Reds Delays A-Control

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The full extent of the damage done by the under-water atomic bomb in Bikini Lagoon hasn't yet been determined because death-dealing radio-activity still hangs about, but there's plenty to confirm that we have to do with a giant of awful might.

Atomic energy is the greatest force on which puny man ever has succeeded in putting his halter. It is capable of unlimited destruction or can be made to work wonders.

The method of developing and controlling this new-found might is the world's No. 1 problem of the moment. And yet even as the experts were detonating the under-water bomb at Bikini, in New York the highly explosive question of atomic control was being used for a football at the conference of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission.

The proposal of the United States for global supervision of atomic energy once more was up for consideration. This is the wholly altruistic offer of the United States to destroy its store of atomic bombs and share its atomic secrets for peaceful use if the world will set up adequate safeguards to make sure this terrible weapon never can be used as an instrument of war.

This involves surrender of the veto power by the five major countries on all matters pertaining to atomic development. It provides for the creation of an international atomic development authority with absolute power over atomic raw materials and production. It calls for the adoption of an international law "with teeth," providing for severe punishment of violators, and endowing the international atomic development authority with the right of investigation in any country.

Gromyko Rejects Plan

On June 19 Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet delegate to the U. N. and representative to the Atomic Energy Commission, rejected the United States plan to abolish the veto on atomic matters and presented his own atomic control plan which would put the whole system of control under the security council and the United Nations set-up.

Only July 12 the United States presented a further memorandum amplifying and explaining its proposal. Yesterday Mr. Gromyko exploded his own atomic bomb by flatly rejecting the American proposals once more.

At first glance it might appear that the Soviet suspects United States of hiding trickery under its cloak of benefaction. But the United States has the whole bag of atomic tricks in its hands already, so why—if it were up to mischief—would Americans be offering to give away the greatest power man ever has possessed?

The Moscow plan, proposing to keep the whole control within the United Nations machinery, clings tenaciously to the veto power. Observers note that under this arrangement the U. N. control couldn't institute an investigation within the borders of any country possessing the veto power. In short, Russia apparently isn't willing to lessen her sovereignty to the extent of granting the atomic control agency the blanket right of investigation within the Soviet Union. She demands the privilege of vetoing investigation.

So the question of atomic control is about back where it started.

TOO MANY HANDICAPPED PEOPLE

My husband lost most of his teeth on Okinawa (writes a reader) and he refuses to get new teeth because he thinks his gums are too tender. He has lost noticeably in weight since he got home...

(Mrs. W.L.D.)

My son (writes a soldier's mother) entered the army 2 1-2 years ago and had perfect teeth. When he came back his teeth were in bad condition. Dentist wants to pull them all. He is only 23 years old. I hate to see him lose...(Mrs. J.E.)

My husband was told by our dentist that he has pus in his gums and should have all his teeth pulled (writes another). I made him consult our physician and he said he would let no dentist pull them all at once, and now my husband is more confused... (Mrs. C.B.)

I am under the care of a dentist (writes another reader) who advises that they should all come advises that they shoulld all come out, and be replaced with upper and lower plates...(C.H.H.)

In these letters and hundreds more like them I discern a deplorable tendency on the part of even intelligent or well educated people to accept handicaps which they should overcome or correct or at least try to overcome.

Mrs. W.L.D. does not say whether her husband lost most of his teeth on Okinawa from decay of the teeth or from a wound. However it happened he is unwise to try to get along without new teeth, on the pretext that his gums are too tender. His loss of weight is probably just one sign of the malnutrition that inevitable results from loss of many teeth, if the defect is not promptly remedied by installation of suitable dentures.

Occasionally a fairly healthy person may limp along for months or even years minus several teeth, before his or her health shows serious impairment.

Mrs. J. E. does not say whether her soldier son's teeth which were perfect 2 1-2 years ago are in bad condition now from decay or from some other cause. It is conceivable that the boy's teeth may have decayed beyond repair in 2 1-2 years, though I doubt it—not in the armed forces of the U.S.A. The boy may have suffered from insufficient food as a prisoner of war. Before he submits to removal of all of his teeth he should have the benefit of medical advice—(let his doctor and his dentist consult about it and see) whether proper medical and dental treatment will not save some of his teeth.

Mrs. C. B.'s husband would be foolish indeed to give up any, not to say all of his teeth just because he has pus in his gums. If that means the man has pyorrhea, extraction of all the teeth is as imperative and as effective as amputation of the foot is for bunion.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Glandular Obesity

I'd like to have your pamphlet on reducing glandular obesity? Is saccharin fattening? Several friends use it and I notice they are quite stout. (Mrs. K.D.G.)

Answer—If you believe yours is gladular obesity send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope for booklet "Rules for Reducing." If it is simple nutritional obesity (from eating too much) and stamped self addressed envelope for pamphlet How to Lose Weight. Saccharin has no food value, is a chemical substance that gives a sweet taste, and so is used in place of sugar—a quarter grain tablet in coffee etc., has a sweetening effect equivalent to about a teaspoonful of sugar. Any one may use up to five grains a day with impunity.

No Diet

Please send me a salt-free diet. I am pregnant and too stout.

(Mrs. K.J.E.)

Answer—Don't be reckless, Ma'am. Follow your physician's advice about your diet. Send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope for booklet "Preparing for Maternity."

CHINESE FEDERALS PENETRATE 50 MILES INTO RED AREAS

Nanking, July 26 (AP)—Chinese government troops were conceded by the Communists to have penetrated 50 miles into Communist areas north of the Yangtze River in Kiangsu Province — north of the great cities of Nanking and Shanghai.

The Communists, contending that 500,000 government soldiers were involved and that 20,000 had been lost in the operation to date, said this was a "full-scale" offensive by the government along a 130-mile front.

British Commons Cheers New Wheat Agreement

London, July 26 — (CP Cable) —There were cheers in the House yesterday when Food Minister Strachey announced the signing of the new wheat agreement with Canada.

The cheers grew louder when he announced:

"This agreement is of the greatest importance to ourselves and to our Canadian friends — and what friends they have been to us.

"It has an enormous bearing on our determination never to get back into the difficult position facing us today."

'Of Mutual Interest'

Ottawa, July 26—Trade Minister MacKinnon in announcing the signing of the pact said: "The contract is based upon commercial considerations of mutual interest. It ensures to the United Kingdom substantial quantities of wheat during the expected period of shortage at prices below those which would be payable were there to be a free market at the present time. This is the commercial alvantage which the United Kingdom secures.

"In the later period of the contract Canada receives the advantages of a guaranteed market, though for a diminished quantity and of the assurance of at least the stated minimum prices. In determining the actual price in the last two years regard will be had to the extent to which the agreed price for the first two years falls below the world price for that period.

"Our farmers are therefore protected from crippling losses should there be a world slump in wheat prices. This is the commercial advantage which Canada secures."

The prices are fixed on the basis of No. 1 Manitoba Northern, in store at Fort William, Port Arthur, Vancouver or Port Churchill.

The prices to be paid for grades other than No. 1 Manitoba Northern to be delivered under the agreement will be determined yearly by consultation between the two governments.

The rate and place of deliveries of wheat and flour will be determined from time to time by mutual agreement and payment will be made in full in Canadian funds at par Winnipeg by the United Kingdom payments office.

The agreement, which was announced simultaneously in London was signed here yesterday by Mr. MacKinnon for the Canadian government and Sir Alexander Clutterbuck, British High Commissioner for the United Kingdom government.

At a press conference which preceded his announcement in the Commons, Mr. MacKinnon said the agreement, by far the largest individual food contract ever signed by Canada, would mean $1,000,000,000 for the Dominion over the four-year period.

He added that there were no negotiations under way with other countries for the sale of Canadian wheat but expressed confidence that Canada, even after the large-scale shipments to Britain, would have enough left to supply her traditional customers.

Mr. MacKinnon said that the contract would mean that the wheat futures division of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange would not function during the next four years.

Shaw Treats 90th Birthday As Any Day

London, July 26 (CP)— The literary world honored George Bernard Shaw on his 90th birthday today, but the famed Irish playwright chose to ignore the calendar and to treat the day as any other.

He planned to receive a few friends in his London flat, where he is staying temporarily, and to follow his daily routine of reading, walking and doing a bit of writing.

Shaw never has paid attention to birthdays, mocking them as human foibles. And although he avowedly is ready to prepare for death, his friends say that his stamina is remarkable.

Not long ago, Shaw was asked if he had changed his mind about not wanting to live to be 100. He replied:

"A lady aged 102, when I asked her what life was like at her age, said 'nothing but buttoning and unbottoning.' Not much to look forward to, is it?"

Shaw has abandoned work on a play which he began about a year ago, and will give no promises about any other new play. He plans to revise his "Saint Joan" for the movies, however, and he carried on a voluminous correspondence.

His birthday was marked by the appearance of "GBS 90" books of essays and messages by notables; the reprinting of 1,000,000 copies of his works, in a 10-volume set; and the publication of a revised issue of "Back to Methuselah". Shaw Societies throughout Britain and in other countries held special meetings.

One plane normally will be used by the King, another by the Queen. "As a precautionary measure it is considered inadvisable that both will carry ground crews and the fourth will be fitted as a flying workshop.

Russians Are Reported Operating German War Plants in Red Zone

By EDWIN SHANKE

Berlin, July 26. (AP)—Reliable reports from the Russian zone of Germany indicated today that former German war plants there are producing arms material despite the Potsdam agreement which calls for demilitarization and destruction of the German war potential.

American and British authorities have been receiving such evidence from beyond the zonal frontier for months. They have had no opportunity to confirm it.

They expressed no alarm, however, at what they termed a contravention of Allied agreements.

Responsible sources said it was significant that the Russians so far have refused to allow any quadripartite economic mission to enter their zone to see how far demilitarization has proceeded. One informant said:

"We take these reports that former Nazi plants now are forging war goods for the Russians as a sign of how seriously the war must have affected Russian economy and how weak the Russians must feel in relation to the west, particularly because we have the atom bomb.

ARMY OFFICER CONVICTED

Boston, July 26 (AP)— Lieut. Thomas Farrell was convicted by a Suffolk Superior Court jury yesterday on three counts of assault with cigarets and a razor blade on Miss Helen Stavrou, 18-year-old typist. He was acquitted of charges of indecent assault and committing unnatural acts. The state immediately moved for sentence.

CHANGES

"All other allowances paid under the new permanent force rates will be taxable income with the exception of separation allowances under the law and will continue to be exempt."

These changes also include repeal of the provision under which merchant seamen were given special exemptions on war risk bonuses and the value of board and lodging.

Many opposition and some Liberal members have urged that fire-fighters and auxiliary service personnel be given the same income tax privileges while overseas as members of the armed forces.

They contended that Maj. Gen. Leo LaFleche, now Canadian Ambassador to Greece and former Deputy Minister of War Services, had promised firefighters they would not have to pay income tax on earnings overseas. Mr. Abbott said no such promise had been made.

Other Developments

Other developments during the day were:

1. Trade Minister MacKinnon announced the signing of a four-year wheat contract under which Britain will buy 600,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat at guaranteed prices, effective Aug. 1.

2. Air Minister Gibson announced that Flt. Lt. Bill McKenzie of Winnipeg, pilot of a jet-propelled plane missing from June 29, had been reported safe.

3. Acting Prime Minister St. Laurent announced that 4,000 single veterans of the Polish army will be brought from the United Kingdom to Canada to work on farms.

4. Mr. St. Laurent announced the arrival of Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery by ship at Halifax for a trans-Canada tour was tentatively set for Aug. 24.

5. The House voted 111-55 to uphold a ruling by Speaker Gaspard Fauteux that questions dealing with specific matters before House committees could not be placed on the order paper.

6. The House adopted a bill covering interim supply of $136,598,972 to cover government expenditures for the coming month.

7. First reading was given to a bill putting into statutory form regulations made by Order-in-Council with respect to the trial of war criminals.

8. Mr. Abbott offered to take under consideration suggestions that farmers and fishermen be given five years rather than three in which to average their income for income tax purposes.

JULY

I love the July weather,
The month the poets scorn,
I love the morning quiet
When the day is newly born,
The fragrant clover meadow,
The summer-shadowed shore—
With every fleeting summer
I love them more and more.

The little bare-foot urchin
Happy at work and play,
The busy birds a-winging
From morn till twilight gray,
The tourist seeking quiet
In the calm countryside,
With a deep peace within the heart
To linger and abide.

Even in the heat of noon-day
When nature seems at rest;
When earth's wild timid creatures
Cease from their endless quest,
I joy with fervid feeling
In the fifts the summer brings,
For soon, too soon, the moments
Slip by on flashing wings.

Gladly I greet the dawning
Of each glowing July day,
Glad that the snows of winter
Are far, so far away;
Thankful to Him, the Giver
Of each pink-petalled rose,
Who o'er the fields of harvest
His golden mantle throws.

Many Positions Are Open For Professional Women

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 26. (CP)—Dietitians and shorthand teachers, nurses and librarians are on the "Female Help Wanted" list at Executive and Professional Division, National Employment Service.

Professional men and women in the higher income brackets have their own employment agency in the special division opened a year ago, and now flourishing throughout Canada.

Through the co-operation of the regional centres in Moncton, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, and Vancouver, vacancies in any part of the Dominion may be filled by persons from outside points, making it possible for a dietitian in Nova Scotia to obtain through the service a job in British Columbia, if she wishes to go that far afield.

The service is "confidential", emphasized J. L. Jackson, Ontario regional supervisor. "It is also open to employed persons seeking to better themselves as well as to those unemployed and on the lookout for jobs."

In the women's section, the executive and professional division deals with persons who can earn at least $1,800 a year. Former service personnel are given the preference where possible.

Canadian linguists will come into their own some time in September when "Canada will need a great range of personnel for its share of the United Nations permanent staff," said Mr. Jackson.

"There are few professional women nowadays who cannot find suitable employment," he added.

Mr. Jackson deplored the attitude of so many employers in refusing to hire older persons no matters their qualifications.

"Often when a woman is more than 35 and a man between the ages of 40-45 it becomes more difficult to find them employment," he said. "Employers should be made to see that these older persons with the years of experience they have behind them are valuable assets to any organization. . .what is to become of them if they can't find work? It's a situation which must be remedied."

At present among the women, hospital dietitians are most in demand in Ontario. But positions listed for women with the bureau include everything from a $75-a-week job as a designer to a $3,000-a-year announcer-editor position where a university education and a knowledge of Flemish and Norwegian are the necessary qualifications.

TRENTON

Rotary Speaker Deplores Lack Of Town Hospital

Trenton — Keen disappointment that a start has not been made before this on the long-projected Trenton Memorial Hospital was expressed by Captain Harry Miller of the Anglican Church Army, addressing the Rotary Club Monday night. The captain, who has been engaged in army work in Manitoba, recently returned to his home in Trenton for a visit. Referring to the Rotary Club, he said that he saw a need for secular and church life where men can get together to enjoy each other's fellowship.

Captain Miller said that he had noted with pleasure the proposal to erect a hospital in Trenton to take care of the needs of a growing town and district, but frankly, the fact that no start had been made was a big disappointment. To him it seemed a crime after what he had seen in the matter of life saving in the Canadian West. In Elkhorn, Manitoba, a town of 500 population, where he had been stationed, a small hospital with ten beds was being successfully operated by a local doctor. It was a converted house but was well equipped and carrying on a very fine piece of work. The hospital, he said, was a financial success. There is a staff of three, the doctor, a qualified nurse and an assistant.

Major operations are taken care of in the neighboring town of Virden, where there is a modern hospital. Captain Miller said, "If the hospital at Elkhorn can show a profit with ten beds, surely in a town of ten thousand people, situated as Trenton is, a hospital can be successfully operated." He expressed the hope that the directors would not be discouraged in their efforts but would work towards getting an early start made. He linked the work of a hospital with that of youth welfare — the saving of life, of the body and soul, those who are sick and those who are coming up in life to take their places in this Canada of ours.

Business Block Seen Ready

Trenton's newest and most modern place of business will soon be ready for occupancy. This business block is being built by Gus Scaletta and Roly Whitley and Sons on Dundas Street East. Upstairs will be eight bowling alleys, the latest thing in this type of recreation. The building has a 60-foot frontage and 120-ft. depth. Two stores, probably in the clothing trade, will occupy the ground floor. In connection with the bowling alley, Mr. Scaletta plans an up-to-date snack bar and unusually fine decorative furnishings. If equipment is obtainable, it will be air-conditioned. Heating is by hot water.

Rotary Activities

Twenty boxes of food for Britain were shipped by the Trenton Rotary Club last week. The money to send them monthly is being contributed by the individual Rotarians at the weekly luncheons. First shipment represents an expenditure of $140.00. The Rotary Clubs to which they are addressed will see that they are placed where they are most needed.

Rotarion R. F. McInnes, in his report said that the boxes contained shortening, condensed milk, two tins of meat spread, gingerbread mix, concentrated orange juice, salmon, jello, and candy.

Reporting on the recent clothing drive for Europe's needy people, sponsored by the Club, Chairman Norman Banfield said that the total contributed was 14,090 pounds or a total of 34,090 pounds for the two drives. The chairman said that the record was a very creditable one, and expressed his thanks and appreciation to the various chairmen and workers in the drive who had labored long and well to make the drive a success. His thanks also went to those who had contributed clothing in Trenton, Batawa, Frankford and the RCAF station.

No Funds for Equipment

Prices for complete life saving equipment are expected to be in the hands of the Town Council shortly.

The clerk was instructed to secure the price of a suitable boat to be owned by the town, following a discussion at the last meeting, during which this was considered advisable. The type of boat was not specified, nor was its location, if purchased, determined.

While appreciating very much the kind offer of Mr. J. E. Kerr, of Hotel Gilbert, owner of a fast motor launch, to allow same to be used in the event of an emergency, the feeling was that this would not be quite satisfactory as Mr. Kerr might have the boat out when it was required.

The Council now has on hand prices for certain standard equipment from a Toronto firm. The assistant clerk, Mr. Blight, informed council that he had written to the city of Toronto inquiring what equipment was used there and had not received a reply.

Unless the council holds a special meeting when complete prices have been received, it hardly seems possible that any purchase action will be taken this year. The mayor has already stated that there are no funds available fo rthe uprcre funds available for the purchase of life saving equipment.

Almighty Dollar Means Headaches In Modern Sport

Charlie Querrie, "Old Fox" of Early Lacrosse Recalls Palmy Days at Turn of the Century

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 26 (CP) — To colorful Charlie Querrie, who once pyramided $400 in "easy-come" money into a $50,000 interest in a hockey team, the seven years spanned by that transaction saw the dollar sign clamp a strangle-hold on Canadian sport—and squeeze some of the fun out of it.

That doesn't mean the soft-spoken, quietly-dressed theatre manager, whom sport veterans remember as the rollicking "old fox" of lusty field lacrosse or the manager of Stanley Cup hockey champions, thinks either game any less exciting to watch.

"The commercial pressure may even make them look better from the sidelines but it's the insiders I'm talking about," he said. "Your hockey or lacrosse player now is a serious young man who can't afford to let up even in the off season; the average manager is a jittery worrier who hits the bicarbonate early."

For this reason, Charlie says his "smartest deal" was when he and his co-owners sold out the old Toronto St. Patricks to the present National Hockey League Maple Leafs in 1925. His end came to $50,000 for a 1918 investment of $400 that he admits having had to be "talked into."

That transaction ended the active sports trail for the slim, tricky stickhandler who won his first lacrosse title in 1899 with his native Markham, Ont. The trail led to London with the 1902 Torontos to play before King Edward VII and 20,000 lacrosse fans at Lord's; eight times to the west coast in search of Canadian lacrosse crowns and twice to Stanley Cup hockey victories as manager.

There are mementoes of these and other triumphs decorating the office of the Palace Theatre he opened 25 years ago as manager, but among them an incongruous note is struck by a small, later-day box lacrosse stick. Charlie reveals that it was a present from the veteran Joe Lally of Cornwall, Ont.

Handy at First Base

"Joe thought it might come in handy when he heard I was playing first base in an executive-city council baseball benefit about five years ago," he said. "The councillors couldn't find anything in the rule book against it so I was spearing those wild throws pretty neatly."

From his pocket comes another souvenir with a story—a heavy gold watch that has kept perfect time since it was presented to him by that 1899 Markham team. On a watch fob is an inscribed locket, a strange tribute from a Montreal Nationales team whose games with Charlie's Toronto Tecumsehs usually drew blood.

"That was for earning an assist on their 1906 championship," Charlie explained. "We were out of it that year and Montreal A.A.A. could pass the Nationales by beating us in the final game. They were betting around Montreal we would throw the match because the triple As were an English team. We didn't.

"Shortly after, I'm in Montreal. Four big guys push into my hotel room, hand me the locket and walk out."

Although he concedes the boxla version an edge over the 12-man field game in sustained speed, Charlie thinks the lighter stick has made stick-handling a lost art. So he goes back to the old-timers for this all-time star.

"Some pick Henry Hoobin, the Montreal Shamrocks speedster; others like the more recent Lionel Conacher; some of my friends even pump me," he says. "For my money, nobody could touch Billy Fitzgerald, dad of the later-day St. Catharines star."

"It cost Vancouver $5,000 in salary for one year to woo him west from Toronto and in those days that was money."

Price and Rent Controls in U.S. Again in Effect

(By The Associated Press)
By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

Washington, July 26. (AP) — Price and rent controls in the United States are back in effect. And the office of Price Administration is out today to make up lost time.

Stripped of many of its powers under revival bill which President Truman "reluctantly" signed into law late yesterday, the agency nevertheless made ready to issue 142 pricing orders as it rolled back into business.

But none of these orders, due today, could touch any of these major items: meat, dairy products, eggs, poultry, grains, tobacco and petroleum. The new law exempts these commodities from price ceilings at least until after Aug. 20.

Mr. Truman, in a message to Congress last night explaining why he had signed the revival measure "with reluctance", cautioned that it "by no means guarantees that inflation can be avoided". Hence, he added, if it does fail in that respect he will call a special session to strengthen it and possibly hike taxes.

President Robert R. Wason of the National Association of manufacturers said in a statement in New York "N.A.M. still opposes O.P.A. . . . Because it restricts the freedom of the American people and substitutes the price judgments of a few super-bureaucrats for the judgments of 40,000,000 American housewives who have given us a four-week demonstration of their own ability to control prices."

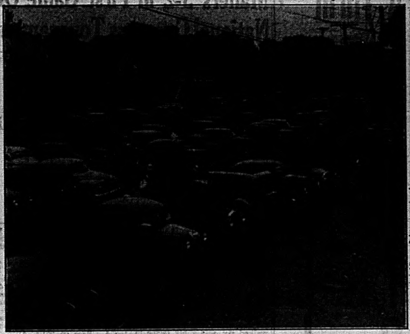
The C.I.O. United Auto Workers announced in Detroit they will continue their O.P.A.-holiday buyers' strike because, as U.A.W. President Walter P. Reuther put it in a statement —"This bill only pretends to restore price control."

The Bill restores temporarily all ceilings which were in effect June 30 except those on commodities specifically exempted. It also automatically re-establishes previous rent controls in 520 areas.

Mr. Truman singled out for specific criticism provisions of the bill which he said will make "clothing prices in particular. . . difficult to hold at reasonable levels."

O.P.A. officials estimated privately that a new formula set up for pricing cotton and woollen textiles may force clothing costs up as much as 15 to 20 per cent.

Junior Board of Trade Inaugurates Supervised Parking



This is the way that the vacant lots to the rear of Front Street stores looked last Saturday when under the direction of the local Junior Board of Trade, supervised parking was given a trial to assist in alleviating crowded conditions on Front Street. Cars were parked in an orderly, instead of haphazard manner, permitting freer entry and exit as well as enabling additional cars to be parked.

Encouraged by the success of their initial effort, the Junior Board of Trade in the near future will inaugurate a permanent program for supervision of parking to the rear of Front Street stores. Supervised parking will be held on Saturday and executive members will decide whether daily supervision is necessary, or if this service will be given only on market days.

In 1793 Sir Alexander Mackenzie blazed the first overland trail to the Pacific, thus opening up the great North West for settlement and trade. Member of the Canadian Legislature, famed explorer; builder of a fur trading empire ;;; this leader of men extended Canada's horizons from sea to sea. Well may it be said of Mackenzie ;;; there was a man of vision, a clear-headed Canadian;

Enlarged the New World

CALVERT, famous English statesman and Secretary of State to King James I, expanded the New World over three hundred years ago by establishing pioneer colonies in Newfoundland and Maryland.

In 1622 Calvert counselled his early settlers to "preserve unity and promote public benefit." Well may Calvert have foreseen Canada's great promise of nationhood when he said, "I see the future ;.. it is a good country."

Man of vision far back in the 17th century, Calvert's ideals of unity have been shared by all men of vision since Calvert's time; Today ;;; all Canadians can be men of vision ;;; can by their own efforts help to preserve unity and widen Canada's horizons.

Trenton Fliers Edge Toronto Mahers 3-2 in First Game Of National Congress Tournament

Maple Leaf Stadium—Trenton RCAF squeezed across an eighth-inning run on two errors by Mahers last night to oust the 1945 champions 3-2 from the Toronto district playdowns of the 5th annual Congress Baseball tournament. Peterboro Marines lost to Riverdale Grads in the second game 9-2 last night.

The tourney champion will travel to London for the Canadian championships the week of Aug. 5.

Tied 2-2 in the eighth-inning, Mahers of the West Toronto Senior League, lost to the permanent air force team from Trenton, when Bronty Garbas, second baseman for the Fliers, reached first on a hit, went to second on a hit by Bram White, to third on an error by Shortstop Jack Withey and scored on Pitcher Allen's wild throw to third.

Mahers scored singles in the second and third innings and appeared to be on the way to victory until the Fliers tied the count with a two-run outburst in the fifth. The losers outhit the Fliers, 8-5.

Southpaw Lefty Garton of Trenton, who struck out seven and walked six, was a big factor in winning his own game. His double to centre in the fifth scored the veteran Moose Matthews and Joe Whitman.

The opening run of the game, in the second inning, came when Jack Withey of Mahers stretched a single into a double, scoring Ted Shea from second ahead of him. The other Maher run came when, with two out, footballer Joe Krol, who played a great game in left field, smashed out a single, scoring Dick McDowell.

Trenton will meet Earlscourt Juniors tonight while Riverdale is slated against Columbus Grads in the latter half of the bill. The winners of these tilts will meet Saturday for the Toronto district championship, and the right to move to London, Ont., in the week of August 5, for the National Sandlot Congress Championship of Canada.

Tommy Carruthers and Doug Green will tee off on the Bay of Quinte Country Club links in the near bye-and-bye for the club championship title. Both lads won their semi-final links jousts, Carruthers eliminating Murray McIntosh, defending champion 4 and 2, and Green disposing of Mike Acquafredde one up after a close battle.

Green's fine work on the last hole netted him the right to enter the finals round with the consistent Tommy. His tee shot made a perfect one-point landing in a sand trap, but his next shot blasted the pill to the green, and with a neat putt, Douglas made the hole in par to win one-up.

A pair of Jacks will contest the consolation round. They are Jack McIntosh and John Funnell, two sturdy golfers who will battle to the last ditch for the honors. In August, club officials stated today, a district tournament will be held. Plans are now being laid to make this event one of the outstanding links attractions of the season.

Hook, Mallory Reinstated

The following was taken from an account of a softball game between the DVA squad and the Legion team of the Kingston City Softball League. It speaks for itself:

"The eventual winners had the Legionnaires blanked until the final innings as their two outcasts Steve Hook and Roger Mallory who were reinstated by the OASA on Monday night when the Belleville officials withdrew their protest, returned to play a leading part in the victory. Hook hurled a masterful game as he silenced the Legion "boom-boom" bats with only five hits and causing nine of them to whiff the ozone."

Senior and Intermediate playdowns will start August 31. Secretary W. J. Snyder of the Ontario Amateur Baseball Association announced today. The OBA accepted the following applications, Trenton Fliers, Latia, Thornbury, Napanee, Lindsay, Batawa, and Prince Edward County in the Intermediate A and B series; Lakeshore, Belleville and Kingston in Junior "A" series. Napanee will also have a Juvenile "B" team in the playdowns.

* * *

The announcement did not state which teams were playing in A and which in B insofar as this district is concerned. Efforts to contact the OBA secretary yesterday proved futile, but it is expected more definite information will be received via the mail.

* * *

In any event, four teams of the Belleville Baseball Association have had their affiliations accepted, and it is quite likely some of them will enter the playdowns against each other. In the junior loop, there is a strong possibility that the Kiwanis Juniors will be paired with Kingston in the first round with the Lakeshore champions being the next foe for the winners.

Sacos and Goodman Juniors will clash in an important Belleville Softball Association tilt at the Fair Grounds tonight. The game will have an important bearing on the final standing and both squads need the win. Juniors who tied Flashes and should have won the game, on Wednesday night can tie Mountain View for the fourth playoff slot, if they defeat SACOS and turn back Flashes in the tie playoff. Game starts at 6:45.

Playful Lads, Wat

It is probably a long while since a number of mayors of various cities in the Dominion were fillies in the athletic field, but according to some of the latest reports a number of them still fancy themselves as gladiators of the sports arena as well as dignified chief magistrates.

* * *

It seems Mayor Aaron Horowitz of Cornwall started the challenge fad that caused a number of the municipality Number one boys to test out creaking joints, tiring muscles, and search fading memories for athletic exploits of the past.

* * *

Mayor Horowitz apparently fancies himself a Percy Williams or a municipal Charlie Paddock, for he has flung out a defi to any mayor anywhere to run the 100 dash against him. Our up-and-coming Chief Mag. Frank Follwell, not only accepted that challenge but offered to put up a five-pound Cheddar cheese against a pair of nylons, that he can kick Cornwall dust in the optics of Hizzoner of that city. Nylons, eh. Hmmm.

* * *

The athletic bug has bitten deeply into the mayoral epidermis. Mayor Saunders, Toronto has challenged all and sundry who wear the chain of office of a mayor to a foot-race. Mayor Camillien Houde, 58, Montreal, weight unknown, but he can easily qualify for the heavies, wants to race any mayor, on ice skates. London's mayor, fancies himself as a broad-jumper and defies any bloke of his municipal position to beat him.

* * *

Hizzoner Mayor Follwell of this ambitious hamlet, delving not too deeply in the recesses of his athletic past, remembered that in his younger days he was quite a shot-putter and could drop-kick a football a little better than the average pigskin punter of that era. So not to be outdone by his brothers of the gown and chain, he flung forth a double-jointed defi today, daring any mayor of anywhere to top him at putting the shot (put, that is, not foot) or to outkick him, using the playful pigskin.

* * *

And furthermore, Hizzoner added, "I'll put up a five-pound Belleville Cheddar against any prize any takers may care to donate." All these athletic high jinks will take place at the Cornwall Old Home Week in August, and at the present rate of progress the Cornwall Mayor's Limpics bid fair to outshine the top attraction.

There'll probably be a lot of fun when the chief magistrates joust in the athletic arena, but no doubt a number of the old grey mayors will discover that they "ain't what they used to be."

* * *

The City Hall underground has it that Alderman McDougall and Pringle will likely accompany Mayor Follwell to the joustings. The former will likely be squire to ye iodine bottle, while the Industrial Commission head will be in charge of the crutches and bandage division.

Toronto, July 26 (CP)—What baseball big-leaguer wouldn't like a .500 batting average?

Twelve-year-old Paul Boncardo of suburban Mount Dennis has it, despite the lack of a left hand since birth.

Paul played baseball for two years with the Lady of Victory Pee-Wee team in the Catholic Youth Organization League and Jack Tracey, manager of the team, credits him with a .500 batting average and plenty of steam as a pitcher. Frequently Paul's battery-mate has trouble holding Paul's fast one.

Paul is by no means confined to the mound. He fields well and plays any position except those of catcher and first baseman without difficulty.

He also is active in other sports. He swims and plays rugby with the gang and is an excellent defenceman on the hockey rink. He intends to play minor bantam hockey with the Lady of Victory team this winter.

Even a strike and an iron-clad picket line can't stop some racing enthusiasts from laying a couple of bucks on a favorite nag and that's how it is with at least one worker at Hamilton.

This worker inside the picketed plant of Steel Company of Canada 24 hours a day, figured a way to place his bets. He had $2 in his pocket when he went into the plant but after he hooked up with a bookie by telephone from the plant he ran it up to $6 by canny bets on the Rockingham track. Last Sunday he told a Canadian Press reporter who visited the plant that he was down to his original two-spot but he had hopes that he would be in the money by the time the strike ended.

The Stelco workers have started their own sports program for off-shift hours. First someone got the idea of pitching horseshoes, using old horseshoes from the plant scrap pile. But the supreme triumph came when the Stelco men opened a nine-hole golf course, laid out on the pump-house lawn. They claim the course "commands a magnificent view of Hamilton Bay."

New York, July 26 (AP)—Czech southpaw Jaroslaw Drobny and French southpaw Marcel Bernard tangle for the French tennis championship Sunday... And can any of the boys and girls who are up on such things tell us the last time two lefties got together for a major net tile?... Incidentally, American tennis promoters are keeping their fingers crossed hoping Drobny will come over here for our championships...Figure the way he walloped the Americans in Wimbledon and Paris he'd be as good box office as Dorothy Lamour...Has anyone noticed how Stan Musial's kid brother Ed, who was given the old brush-off by the Cardinals and Braves, is plastering that potato at a fancy 350 for Chicago Cubs' Fayetteville (N.C.) farm?

Middleweight champ Tony Zale isn't a superstitious guy ordinarily—but last Friday he broke his shaving mirrors at his Pompton Lake training camp...And the next day came down with the crick in the back that did him out of his title clambake with Rocky Graziano and pay cheque that figured to be within whistling distance of $100,000...And Joe Gooter of Paterson (N.J.) Evening News wants to know if the postponement made Mike Jacobs ring up "no Zale" on the cash register.

Bounding Around

A sports writer who's been banging at what he calls "coolie wagee" the Giants paid their hired hands caused club president Horace Stoneham to ask National League boss Ford Frick for a comparison of the Giant's payroll with the rest of the loop ...and Ford wired that the Giants' average was the second highest in the league...With only the Cubs in front...in all this talk about an international horse race bringing Airborne from England and Prince Chevalier from France, how come nobody mentioned inviting Bernborough, the great Australian gee-ge...

Speak for yourself, John. Lay off that stuff about the rules stifling your initiative. They act as a basis from which you are able to make better decisions. They help you use better judgment.

Discard a six or higher to say you like that suit. A discard of your lowest card says you have no interest in the continuation of that suit. These signals are generally understood.

At times your signals are obviously untrue. Yet they will make sense to your partner. As would be the case in this deal:

NORTH
♠A K 6 5
♥J 10
♦8 6 2
♣K J 9 5

WEST
♠7 4 2
♥K Q 6
♦10 7 5 4
♣6 3 2

EAST
♠3
♥A 9 8 7 5 2
♦J 9 3
♣A Q 10

SOUTH
♠Q J 10 9 8
♥4 3
♦A K Q
♣8 7 4

South became the declarer at a contract of four spades. You had stuck in a heart bid from the east seat. So your partner in the west started out with an opening lead of his heart king.

Dummy plays small. You drop the deuce on it. And partner keeps the trick. Partner thus knows you have the heart ace. Since you like the heart suit, you could have discarded high.

From this he knows you have deliberately avoided showing your liking for a continuance of hearts. In that case, you must want him to lead some other suit. His judgment would tell him so.

South bid spades. Dummy has powerful help in it. So, you would not be anxious for a trump lead. Nor is it likely that you want a diamond lead through such weakness in dummy.

By this process of elimination can he come to a sound decision. You must be saying that you want him to lead through dummy clubs while he still has the chance.

When you simmer it all down, such decisions are really rules. Or spring from rules. Some players think they look better if they say they use their heads.

Some of them do not look good even as hatracks.

WEBB WINS ANOTHER

New York, July 26 (CP)—Danny Webb, Montreal's negro featherweight, added another victory to his string which includes a decision over world flyweight champion Jackie Patterson, by scoring a unanimous decision over Joey Dolan, Spokane, Wash., in the eight round main event in Brooklyn's Fort Hamilton arena last night.

Webb, who is showing signs of growing into a full-fledged lightweight, weighed 130, two pounds more than his opponent.

Hollywood Column

By HOWARD C. HEYN

Hollywood, July 26 —(AP)—Gene Kelly, one of the most natural and unassuming guys who ever hit the screen, is back on the production line.

I saw the war veteran during his first day's work in "Life's for the Loving," and it's a pleasure to report that he's in A-1 shape.

"I put on 18 pounds in the navy," he said, "and I really feel fine."

His face is much fuller than it appeared in "Anchors Aweigh," the film in which he worked 16-hour shifts and completed only the day before he left for boot camp.

Like any other veteran, Gene is bustling around, getting back into the swing of civilian and cinematic life. He has just purchased a house and is settling his family in it. MGM has mapped an ambitious program for him, and is impatiently nudging him into it.

In the early days of filmland, when it was smart and profitable to be eccentric, Jack McDermott was the daffiest of them all. Jack died the other night, by his own hand police said, alone and jobless, almost forgotten in the town that gave him a fortune.

He made a business of being a screwball and 20 years ago, it paid off in jobs of writing, directing and acting. Jack built a house on a hilltop, which was entered through a tunnel terminating in a manhole, with a steel cover, in his living room.

As pets he had pigeons but they were different, too—dyed assorted bright colors.

Jack had many elaborate gags, but his favorite was a Model T Ford in which he took folks riding at breakneck clip on mountain roads. When his passenger complained about the danger, as was inevitable, Jack's calmly lift the steering wheel off its post and hand it to the passenger. (The car was rigged up with a foot-steering device.)

Hollywood today, by comparison with the days of McDermott, is businesslike and sometimes staid.

KIWANIS SPOTS LATTA 7 RUNS BUT LOSE 7-5

Winners Lead 7-0 End of Second but Kids Fail in Spirited Attempt to Retrieve Lost Ground

Trailing seven runs at the end of the second innings the Kiwanis Juniors just failed in a fighting uphill struggle to get in the ball game and were defeated 7-5 by the Empson-led Latta squad at the Fair Grounds last night. The ball game was actually all over as far as the kids were concerned in the first innings when the Latta gang, taking advantage of everything that came their way, sent five runners clattering across the platter. They scored two more in the second—and after that they were served up with large juicy duck eggs by Allen Kelleher, Kiwanis lefthander.

Kelleher couldn't locate his control in that first heat. He issued two bases on balls, hit two batters and uncorked a wild pitch. These, coupled with two timely hits by Keon and Jarrell, were responsible for the quintet of markers.

Latta nicked him for two hits for two runs in the second, but after that the big fella had the visitors hogtied. He held them to two hits, struck out six and walked three.

Hall, Latta lefthander, was touched for ten safeties, four of them coming in the 4th and another quartet in the fifth. He struck out six and walked three.

Juniors drove out four safeties in the fourth when they rallied strongly in an attempt to at least cut down the lead. They scored four times in this chukker and came right back in the next innings when they sent over a brace of tallies. Hall tightened up however, and held them scoreless for the balance of the game.

"Huck" Reeves was again the batting champ for the kids. He whammed out three solid socks for four. Jarrell, Goyer, Weeks and Keon were the only Latta batters to connect safely off the Kelleher slants.

BISONS STRETCH VICTORY STRING TO 6 STRAIGHT

Win 9 Out of 11 and Move Closer to Third-Place Orioles; Leafs Win Two From Giants

(By The Associated Press)

Rookie outfielder Earl Rapp was one of the standouts of Buffalo Bisons' spring training camp at Winter Haven, Fla., and since he was recalled by the International League club from Williamsport of the Eastern League a little over a week ago, he has been "rapping" the ball in torrid fashion for the up-and-coming Bisons.

Last night, the 25-year-old war veteran who spent over 500 days in combat during which he was awarded the American Silver Star for gallantry in action in Germany, batted in two runs to aid the Bisons into defeating Newark Bears 5-3.

The win stretched Buffalo's unbeaten skein to six and it was the Bisons' ninth triumph in their last 11 decisions, moving them within half a game of the third-place Baltimore Orioles, who along with Montreal Royals were idle.

Southpaw Ted Gray went the route for Buffalo scattering nine hits including four-baggers by Milt Byrnes and Ford Garrison that accounted for all of Newark's tallies.

The runner-up Syracuse Chiefs increased their advantage over the Orioles to a full game by nosing out Rochester Red Wings 6-5.

Toronto's Maple Leafs captured both ends of a double header from the last-place Jersey City Giants, winning the opening and the nightcap 9-4.

Luke Hamlin set down the Giants on four hits in the first contest and Joe Coleman spaced nine in the aftermath in which the Giants pulled the circuit's second triple play of the season in the ninth inning.

'There's Strange Things Done;' "Bums" Warble Giant Praises

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sport Writer

For the first time in the memory of the modern day baseball fan, followers of Brooklyn Dodgers today actually were singing the praises of New York Giants.

For if it hadn't been for those same Giants, the Dodgers might not be perched at the top of the National League today.

True, the Dodgers whipped Chicago Cubs 4-1 for the second straight time yesterday, but had St. Louis Cardinals swept the three-game series with the Giants, including yesterday's twin-bill, the Redbirds and not the Brooks would be occupying first place.

Instead, the Giants by dividing the two games, gained the series two games to one to enable the Brooks to build up a 1 1-2-game lead over Eddie Dyer's challengers.

After Howie Pollet, the willowy lefthander from New Orleans, had gained his 12th mound victory for the Cards with a nine-hit 2-1 triumph, the Giants threw their southpaw freshman ace, Monte Kennedy, against the Birds, and the 21-year-old North Carolinian clipped the Cardinals' wings with three hits as the Giants won 6-1.

In losing, the Cubs saw their third-place lead over Cincinnati narrow to 3 1-2 games as the Reds eked out a 1-0 decision over Boston Braves.

The clearing of the entire Pittsburgh Pirates bench except for the regular lineup by Umpire George Magerkurth highlighted the twin bill between the Bucs and Philadelphia Phillies. Magerkurth's action came after the Pirates booed a third called strike on Chuck Workman.

The Pirates, behind the seven-hit pitching of Johnny Lanning, won the opener 2-1, but the Phils came back to rip Truett Sewell apart 9-2 in the nightcap.

The American League, Boston's pace-setting Red Sox dropped a 3-1 verdict to Chicago White Sox which cut their lead over the idle New York Yankees to 11 games.

With Mickey Vernon having a perfect four-for-four at the plate to wrest the league's individual batting leadership from Williams by one point, Washington Senators tanned Detroit's Tigers 8-3 in the rubber game of their three-game set.

Smashing out 19 hits, their greatest total of the season, Cleveland's Indians outslugged Philadelphia Athletics 9-8.

The Yankees and St. Louis Browns had an off day.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Rudolph Horvath, Windsor, Ont., last surviving participant outside the United States, yesterday fell by the wayside in the National Public Links golf tournament at Denver when he was defeated by Ralph Evans of Santa Monica, Calif., two and one. The ex-member of the RCAF was all-square with the Californian on the first nine holes but faded in the last half.

Smiley Quick of Los Angeles flashed into the semi-final round on a rain-swept course with a seven-and-five victory over Peter J. Mazur of Buffalo while William E. Doll of Louisville defeated D. C. Vicini of Ottawa, Ill., on the 19th hole. Quick will meet Robert Gajda of Detroit today while Doll plays Louis Stafford of Portland, Ore.

Although President Ford Frick of the National League said he knew nothing about any pact, it was reported yesterday at Minneapolis an agreement will shortly be arranged between the Mexican Baseball League and the U.S. major circuits.

The featured $12,000 National Stake for three-year-old trotters went to Chestertown, William Cane's bay son of Volomite, at Old Orchard Beach, Me., yesterday. The fastest heat was 2:03¼.

Grads Dunk Petes 9-2

Maple Leaf Stadium, July 26—Toronto Riverdale Grads walloped Peterborough Marines, 9-2, in the nightcap of a Toronto District Canadian Baseball Congress elimination series before some 1,100 fans under the floodlights last night. four-run outburst in the sixth and three more in the eighth provided the victory margin.

FAITHFUL

CHAPTER 17

It was after ten when they got back. Mrs. Wade came to the screen door and said, "Mary North has been trying to get you all evening, Iris. It must be important. She's calling again."

Joel said, "Don't talk to her all night."

"Iris," said Mary's excited voice, "don't stop me until I finish. Louis called me and told me the whole miserable story. That set my weary brain to working. I've been dying to get out of this hot city but I couldn't think of a place I wanted to go to alone. Now you can go with me! Now wait. I know the loveliest place in the world. A colony in New Hampshire, quite exclusive, with exquisite mountain scenery, a mountain lake to swim in, and private cottages. Perfect outdoor life and the people who go there are charming. We'll take a boat to Boston and from there. . . ."

Iris laughed. "Let me get my breath, please. This is so sudden."

"I can't let you get your breath because you'll find a thousand excuses. This is just the thing you need—a fling before you settle down to married life. You'll forget about Camilla and Annette and all the other things that have made you unhappy. And you'll come back radiant from the life up there. I won't take no for an answer." She laughed again. "I can't take no because I've already bought the tickets. I rushed down immediately and bought them. We're sailing in a week."

Whatever protests Mrs. Wade might have voiced were quickly subdued when Mary appeared the next morning before Iris was up, bringing several dresses suitable for Eve.

Mary went into Iris's room and sat on her bed.

"I haven't been so excited for years. What did Joel say to my proposal?"

Iris ran her fingers through her hair and sat up in bed.

"What could he say after you'd bought the tickets?"

"He was probably thinking of the good-looking men who will be on the boat and a summer moon shining on the water."

"Mary's eyes had secret delight in them. "Poor Iris! Dear infant," she thought. "I am taking you to Mark who will be as surprised as you. Heaven help me when you know of this conspiracy. Will it bring you together? I don't know. But up there in that perfect place you can't be angry with each other."

"There isn't one obstacle, is there?" Mary asked.

Iris shrugged. "Clothes, but I can make my wardrobe do. Last year's things are still wearable. I've been spending all I could spare for crystal and table linens and china. You know, this.. this takes away the sting of yesterday—leaving Louis and the office." She hugged her knees with her arms "Annette wants my job for Camilla."

"Oh, she does! He'll never give it to her. Husbands are the last people to know when their wives are having flirtations. Everybody knows that Annette has been out with Ronnie Jameson." She picked up her purse from the bed." Well, I've got to run along. I've lots of shopping to do. You don't need fancy clothes at Eaton Forest. Sport things, sturdy shoes, slacks, sweaters, a bathing suit, and a couple evening frocks in case of emergency. There's a big pavillion for dancing and a large dining hall. I wired for reservations."

"I owe you some money, Mary."

"We'll straighten that out later."

About noon a department store delivery service brought a heavy white sport coat, a pair of brown linen slacks, and a woolly white sweater. Though there was no card enclosed, Iris knew that Mary had sent them.

The day of the sailing was cool and clear. Iris opened her eyes that morning and lay there a long time, enjoying anticipation. Such a frantic week it had been! Dresses, freshly laundered, hung from every conceivable hanging place in the room, old dresses to which had been added new touches. On a chair was a pair of sturdy brown walking shoes next to a pair of frivolous tall heeled white sandals.

That afternoon she had dressed in the tailored white linen suit for traveling and was carefully putting the last dress in the suitcase when Mrs. Wade came in.

"I'm sorry I can't go to the boat to see you off," she said, "but it's too much excitement for me."

"You're not opposed to my going, are you?"

"Not with Mary. Besides," said Selina with a solemn sigh, you'll be married a long time. I guess I'll just have to resign myself to this marriage. It's not what I wanted for you, Iris. I did want you to make a brilliant marriage."

"Eve will make everything possible for you, I hope," said Iris.

"Well, I married your father against the wishes of my family. They thought I ought to have done much better. So I don't guess I've a right to say anything to you."

When the telephone rang beside the bed, Iris said, "That's probably Mary, wanting to know if I'm ready."

Selina picked up the telephone. "It's a man's voice."

And it was Louis who said, "Iris?"

"Did you call to wish bon voyage? You know, I've never really been anywhere in my life and one would think I was going to Siberia with all the baggage I have."

"What times does the boat sail?"

"At six."

"Could you leave a little sooner and stop at the office?"

Her voice was quite gay. "And take dictation? I'll bet my neat desk isn't neat any longer and half the things you work with aren't sterilized. Of course I'll come. I'll leave right away."

When she was in the cab, she raised her hand in farewell to Mrs. Wade who was standing on the porch. Iris's face was radiant with excitement, but she was thinking. "There still must be some way to give her what she wants. All her life she's wanted to be important. How little self-importance means to me!"

People on the elevator at the Medical Arts Building looked twice at the girl in white with a white coat over her arm—looked first at the fine clear loveliness of her, and second at the air of joyous anticipation about her.

Louis was not in the waiting room. Iris put her coat down and walked through to the white room. He was standing by the window, one hand dug deeply in the pocket of his white coat, the other holding his pipe. He looked, she thought with a sudden shock, old.

"How lovely you look, Iris."

"I'm sorry I was so flippant when you called. You aren't flippant, Louis. Something— something's happened."

"Quite a lot has happened," he said, putting his pipe between his teeth. "I loathed myself for letting you go to humor Annette. Everything went to pieces last night, Iris. Busy men are blind fools where their homes are concerned. Last night I discovered it was Camilla whom she wanted for your job. You knew it, didn't you?"

"She told me."

"That was a final insult to you. But that wasn't all. We lost our tempers, Annette and I. She told me about this young Jameson fellow. He followed her to Rhode Island and back. I went to a hotel last night. I'm going to let her divorce me in Reno." He paused and then said, "You and I have seen a lot of broken faith, haven't we?"

"But nothing is as bad as a broken marriage. I'm so sorry, Louis. If you need me to stay, I won't go. Mary will understand. I don't want to leave you. . . ."

"In the sad remains of my marriage?" He smiled. "That's absurd. Of course you're going."

"I'm not much of a comforter, I'm afraid."

"You're mistaken, Iris. Last night I thought of you and how magnificently you acted when things were smashing around you." He patted her shoulder. "It's selfish of me to take away all the brightness that was in your face when you came in."

"Write to me at Eaton Forest."

"And tell you about the new secretary I haven't found yet? Heaven help her. She's going to hate hearing your name. What time is it? Time enough to make the boat and stop at the florist to buy you red roses."

• • •

Mary, surrounded by well wishing friends, was in the cabin. Tommy, smiling shyly, was there, too.

"Is this Iris?" Mary cried. "I don't see you darling, for the floral tribute."

"Are you looking for some one, Iris?" Louis asked. "You seem to be."

"Joel. He promised to be there."

"Won't we do?" Tommy asked.

"Of course. My favorite and only brother and my erstwhile slave-driver. Here's a red rose for each of you." Her face was pensive when she turned to Louis. "Red roses for courage, dear. Once I send red roses."

"At this minute," he said, "Annette's suspicions are almost right."

When the boat was pulling away. Iris looked as long as she could see the familiar figures of Louis and Tommy. Why had not Joel come? He had promised. But his was not the only missing face. Where was Mark? She was leaving behind the havoc and the end of Louis's marriage, and many questions unexplained. When this boat came in the harbor bringing her back, it would mark the end of her freedom and the fulfillment of what had bebun two springtimes before.

Night had cast dark shadows on the water. The city skyline had vanished.

"Iris," said Mary, "you've been out here a long time, dear. Time to dress for dinner. Everybody's getting acquainted and you must put on your most dashing dress. I've been told that lots of women take off their engagement and wedding rings. There's something mad and romantic about a boat, a little world of its own with its own king."

Iris' lashes were low. Her profile was clear and fine.

"I'll try not to be solemn — I promise. I've watched the city vanish to a few mere spires and steeples and I've been thinking of myself going and coming along those streets all these years." She put her arm through Mary's. "Let's go in. I'll paint my mouth and eyes and wear the very modest dress that Mother thinks is so daring. You called it my last fling, Mary."

"Which you won't take advantage of. Ship romances are fun but they aren't to be taken seriously at all."

"This," said a masculine voice at Iris's shoulder, "won't do at all. Won't you come in and dance? I'm Barton Boone and I've looked the boat over for you since I saw you at dinner. Looking the boat over added considerably to my neglected education but. . . ."

Iris turned, seeing a smiling young man with pleasant brown eyes, a crooked smiling mouth, and fair hair.

"Don't think me a villain," he said. "Ships make one bold. Just one big happy family, you know, Miss. . . ."

"Wade. Iris Wade."

"Now we cease to be strangers." He smiled again. "Dance—or look at the moon?"

"I'm afraid I'd be too solemn a moon gazer. Let's dance. I wonder where Mary. . . ."

"Mary? Was that Mary at dinner with you? On my tour, I saw her at the bar. I haven't missed much. There are two honeymooning couples trying to look as if they were seasoned married people in spite of the fact they fairly drip rice whenever they move. There's a mother with two hideous daughters; a decrepit old chap with a flirtatious young wife whom he watches closely, and a lean angular Englishman named Clive Leader."

"Who is he?" Iris asked.

"You don't read the papers either. He's had something to do with treaty negotiations and he has some sort of diplomatic job in China now. He's visiting the States for the first time. We had a smoke before dinner."

Iris smiled. "And did you ask him everything from how he liked New York subways to his opinion of the American woman?"

"I'll tell you a secret. He doesn't like painted fingernails."

"Married?"

"A lone bachelor. A rolling stone that gathers plenty of moss." He stopped still and laughed. "Am I a press agent for Clive Leader? Let him do his own press agenting. I didn't want to take this trip but you can never tell when you're going to meet girls who wear green dresses."

Iris said, "Before we go in to dance there's something I want to tell Mary." She walked away from him and looked back, smiling. "I want to tell her to take off the vivid nail polish."

Trees were uprooted, hydro and telephone lines broken and the roof of the Ontario Box Company's plant was ripped off and thrown on top of four autos which were seriously damaged. None was injured. The rain was the heaviest seen here in years and so dense that it obscured vision.

Vancouver Paper Issues Editions For Four Days

Vancouver, July 26 (CP)—The Vancouver Daily Province put out a 16-page edition yesterday, the fourth consecutive day it has published after failing to appear for 46 days because of a printers' strike. There were no pickets or demonstrations at the newspaper building yesterday.

The editions Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday were 12 pages. On all four days type set by linotype machines was used. Only one edition has been released each day, compared with five daily before the strike began early in June.

Fifteen persons are awaiting preliminary hearings on charges in connection with demonstrations when the newspaper appeared Tuesday and Wednesday.

Composing room employees, members of the International Typographical Union (AFL) walked out demanding that all Southam newspapers in Canada sign agreements recognizing I.T.U. rules.

The Daily Province reported yesterday that for the first time since June 8 the newspaper was delivered to all city distribution depots yesterday and most home subscribers received copies. The Daily Province said carrier boys and vendors handled more than 70,000 newspapers yesterday and people queued on the street to buy them with one downtown vendor selling 700 Daily Provinces in an hour.

American Federation of Labor Unions in Vancouver said today they are prepared to wage a long fight in supoprt of the I.T.U. and as their first move will place a "permanent picket line" around the newspaper plant day and night.

Weekly Livestock Review

Toronto, July 26 (CP)— Cattle prices dropped 50 cents cwt. on steers and heifers but were stronger on cows and bulls, in trade on the livestock market here this week. The change in the price ceiling structure for beef did not, as sellers anticipated, bring a deadlock. After a slow opening cattle moved freely and a fairly good cleanup was made by the close. Offerings were approximately 1,000 head lower than for the previous week while the general quality was lower.

Veal calves gained 50 cents cwt. while lambs lost the same amount. Hogs were steady to 25 cents cwt. lower and sheep were unchanged.

In cattle trade weighty steers sold at $11 to $13.50 with choice lots at $14. Butcher steers were $10 to $13.10 and heifers $10 to $12.75. Boning steers and heifers sold at $8.50 to $9.50. Butcher cows were $8.25 to $11 with canners downward to $5.50. Bulls sold from $8.50 to $11.25. Fed yearlings were $12 to $14. Included in the cattle supply were 1,400 stockers, most of which were sold at steady prices. Good breed stockers were $11.50 to $12 with others downward to $8.50. Ordinary milkers and springers sold at $85 to $125 each.

Veal calves closed at $15-15.50 for choice with good at $14-$14.50 and plain downward to $10. Grassers were mostly $9 to $9.50 cwt.

Lambs showed a liberal run, good ewes and wethers closing $16.50 to $17 with bucks at $15.50 to $16. Culls were $12 to $13. Sheep were $3 to $9 cwt.

Buyers tried to cut hog prices 75 cents cwt. with the market unsettled for some days. They succeeded in getting 25 cents cwt. off in spots. Grade A hogs closed at $21 cwt. with Grade B1 $20.60 and sows mostly $18.50, dressed.

Elliott Family Enjoys Reunion At Oak Lake

A very pleasant time was spent at Bird's Beach, Oak Lake, on Wednesday afternoon when over fifty members of the Elliott family met and organized for their first family reunion. Perfect weather prevailed for the occasion and shortly after the noon hour all had gathered prepared to do justice to the well-laden table of appetising food which had been prepared.

History of Family Given

Registration of names took place following dinner with A. Townsend, oldest member present, giving the history and lineage of names of ancestors and generations from the time James Elliott and Lucinda Bird came from Ireland to Canada to homestead on the 1st concession of Huntingdon township. Here James Elliott cleared the land and built his home, a home which since has been kept in the Elliott name.

The original homestead is now occupied by Everett Elliott, a member of the fourth generation, and Olive Elliott, their children being the 5th generation.

All present members of the Elliotts are descendants of one ancestor, Simon Elliott and Mary Kelly, son of the first Elliott to come to Canada. Six sons and one daughter were born to this union, one now deceased. Twenty-two grandchildren and eleven great grandchildren are living.

Election of officers took place with the following being chosen to act for one year:

Thos. Elliott President

President, Thomas Elliott; secretary, A. Townsend; treasurer, Clifford Elliott; Chairman of sports, Sam Elliott; with Mrs. Harry Morrow, Mrs. Walter Warren, Mrs. Gardiner Welsh, Mrs. Art Emerson, Mrs. Ben Ackers and Mrs. George Sine to act on the sports committee. A. Townsend was named as press secretary.

Short addresses were heard from President T. Elliott, Annie Warren, Hazel Welsh, Harry Morrow and Mrs. Robt. Elliott, following which discussion took place as to the time and place of the next reunion. Decision on the matter was left in the hands of the president and committee chairmen.

Race Winners

Running races, boys and girls five and under—Allyn Warren, Linda Ann Morrow and Connie Elliott; six to ten years—Arnold Thompson, Freddie Elliott, Murray Elliott, Billie Elliott and Tootsie Tinney; boys ten to 14 years—Victor Mills and Reggie Elliott; girls ten to 14—Shirley Elliott and Mary Elliott.

Women's race—Mrs. Art Emerson and Mrs. Harry Morrow; men's race—George Sine and Walter Warren; three legged race—Bernard Hunt and James Smith and Mr. and Mrs. George Sine; wheelbarrow race—Mr. and Mrs. George Sine and Glenn Elliott and Shirley Elliott; shoe scramble race—Mrs. George Sine and James Smith; needle threading race, Bernard Hunt and Shirley Elliott and Mary Elliott and Glen Elliott; all-day sucker race by four brothers, Samuel Elliott, Clifford Elliott, Thos and Fred Elliott; ice cream race by four sisters-in-law — Mrs. Clifford Elliott, Mrs. Sam Elliott, Mrs. Fred Elliott and Mrs. Thos. Elliott.

Oldest couple with the largest family on the grounds was Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Elliott while the two youngest babies were Merlene Rosellee Carson, age seven months, daughter of Mrs. Amos Carson and the late Amos Carson, and Carol Anne Sine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Sine, age seven and one-half months. Youngest bride and groom were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Elliott.

At the conclusion of the sports program many enjoyed a swim in Oak Lake, while others enjoyed a social chat. Several families remained for supper, all departing feeling that it had been a pleasant get-together and looking forward to their annual family reunion each year.

CHINCHILLA FARMS ON WAY IN CANADA

But a Pair of the Little Animals With the Fabulous Fur Costs $1,650

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Soft, luxurious chinchilla—the fur that is rarer than diamonds, more precious than gold—will one day come into its own in Canada where the two-year-old chinchilla-breeding industry is attracting fur farmers.

The romance of the delicate, grey-blue chinchilla, a mountain rodent which boasts the Andes as its homeland, reads like an epic from the land of moviedom. On the entire North American continent there are only approximately 25 genuine chinchilla coats worth up to $50,000 each.

Since 1923 when the first six dozen chinchillas were brought to the United States, in an attempt to breed in captivity the animals which were fast becoming extinct in their own land, chinchilla ranches have sprung up in all parts of the continent. Now there are more than 20,000 of the animals.

In Canada the Canadian Chinchilla Company, with head offices in Toronto has opened the new industry and, with its ranches throughout southwestern Ontario and the Niagara Peninsula, sells pairs of chinchillas to would-be fur farmers throughout the Dominion.

Demand for Breeding

"The United States and now Canada are the only countries in the world with chinchilla industries," said Mrs. Cecily Brown of the Canadian Chinchilla Company. She predicted there would be no fur market to speak of in the fur for at least five years because the demand for breeding is so great.

Mrs., Brown, who was in the fur-farming industry herself for 14 years, said women in several parts of Canada are raising chinchillas. She said she believed more of them would eventually go into it.

"A woman is gentle when handling animals, she grows to love them and when she takes on a job she goes into it heart and soul."

It costs $1,650 for one pair of chinchillas, but as they breed at least twice a year the farmer should be more than repaid within two years.

The animals are clean, with no odor, and are vegetarians. They are not hard to look after but Mrs. Brown said new farmers should spend several days around the company ranches, learning how to care for their animals, before taking them out.

Two years ago there weren't more than two persons in Canada raising chinchillas but today there are more than 500, most of them in Quebec and Ontario.

U.S. Movie Capital Not Play-Conscious

By GENE HANDSAKER

Hollywood, (CP) — Raymond Massey, who has been an actor for half of his 50 years, finds that this town, the movie capital, is just about the worst place in America in which to put on a stage drama.

Compared with other cities, audiences are apathetic and small. His "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" ran a year in New York and ten months on tour a few seasons back. Everywhere else it grossed $25,000 or more a week; here, about $12,000 in each of two weeks.

The Canadian's slender, 6-foot-2 frame sat folded obliquely next to me on a divan in the stately lobby of the Beverly Hills Hotel, where he is stopping. His long, creased face somehow suggested a melancholy, hungry hound; he seemed both awkward and shy.

He is probably the busiest actor today, however, in three fields—stage, screen and radio. After six months on Broadway in "Pygmalion", he arrived recently to do a movie, "The Secret", with Joan Crawford. Meanwhile on Sundays, from an NBC booth in Hollywood, he continues as master of ceremonies of a program, "Harvest of Stars", whose other performers are in New York.

Massey seems to regard himself as homelier than he is. He didn't expect to reach his peak as an actor—and didn't reach it—until he was 40 and old enough for character parts, the choicest of which so far has been his Abraham Lincoln. After 25 years and more than 150 roles his stage fright is worse than ever; "first nights are an agony". A movie camera or a radio microphone scares him, too, but he thinks an actor should feel frightened to do his best.

He thinks movie studies are missing a bet by not putting their idle contract players into stage productions, for "idleness atrophies an actor". Such a program, too, he says, might make the cinema citadel more play-conscious.

Politics Concern Of Every Citizen

Aberdeen, Scotland (CP)—Sir William H. Fyfe, principal and vice-chancellor of Aberdeen University and former principal of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., told students at a summer graduation, ceremony that politics is the concern of every citizen.

People who said politics was a dirty business condemned themselves. "They should not, either from timidity or from complacency, avert their attention from the urgent and complex political problems caused by the military uses of nuclear energy," he said.

BOY OF 14 MONTHS 'MOST UNUSUAL PET'

Peacedale, R. I., July 25 (AP)—There was some growling and a few catcalls at the blue ribbon winner of the Neighborhood Guild's pet show. Passing scrubbed pups and trimmed kittens, judges gave the "most unusual pet" award to a 14-month-old boy, Billy Bouchard. Billy was the entry of his cousin, Betty Gadrow.

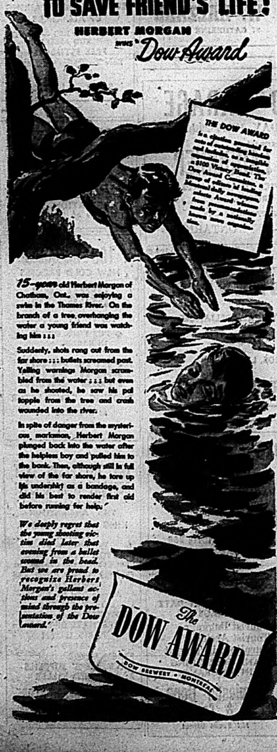
BOY RISKS BULLETS
MAKES GALLANT EFFORT TO SAVE FRIEND'S LIFE!
HERBERT MORGAN wins "Dow Award"



15-year old Herbert Morgan of Chatham, Ont., was enjoying a swim in the Thames River. On the branch of a tree, overhanging the water a young friend was watching him : : :

Suddenly, shots rang out from the far shore : : : bullets screamed past. Yelling warnings Morgan scrambled from the water : : : but even as he shouted, he saw his pal topple from the tree and crash wounded into the river.

In spite of danger from the mysterious marksman, Herbert Morgan plunged back into the water after the helpless boy and pulled him to the bank. Then, although still in full view of the far shore, he tore up his undershirt as a bandage, and did his best to render first aid before running for help.

We deeply regret that the young shooting victim died later that evening from a bullet wound in the head. But we are proud to recognize Herbert Morgan's gallant actions and presence of mind through the presentation of the Dow award.

Singapore Fights Inflation Trend

Singapore, (CP)— The crown colony of Singapore is meeting the challenge of black markets and inflation by opening a chain of restaurants which serve simple but nourishing meals for the equivalent of 17 cents.

Called "the People's Restaurants", their menus include rice, meat and vegetables. The first already has opened in downtown Singapore with a capacity of 2,000 persons.

Along the line of British government restaurants in the United Kingdom, the eating places are expected to force prices down in private establishments. At present the cost of subsistence in Singapore is estimated at five times pre-war.

An investigation by the Wages and Cost of Living Committee of the colony led to the restaurants' introduction. They are operated by the government Social Welfare Department.

War Veterans Urged To Save Gratuities

Wellington, N.Z. (CP)— Over 72 per cent of war veterans in New Zealand have left their war gratuities on deposit in government savings banks instead of drawing them for immediate use When all claims have been investigated about $52,000,000 worth of gratuities will have been deposited to the credit of war veterans, but at the present rate of drawing the great majority will not want to operate on their accounts.

To encourage veterans to leave their gratuities on deposit and to avoid inflation, the government is offering 7 1-2 per cent interest, which is much higher than can be obtained on the open money market.

Water From Thames For Atomic Tests

London (CP)—Subject to conditions imposed by the Thames Conservators, Britain's new research laboratory at Harwell, Berkshire, is to be allowed to use water from the river for its atomic experiments.

The laboratory is being permitted to withdraw 1,000,000 gallons daily from the river, whose average dry weather flow at the point is 40,000,000 gallons.

However, the water can be taken only during a specified 10-hour period. Water returning to the river must be purified and all radio-active elements, which might be dangerous, removed.

The laboratory will be required to pay the conservators $562.50 every six months if the average extraction is less than 500,000 gallons and $1,125 should it exceed that volume.

In 1945, the province of Ontario recorded 15,225 gold-mining claims. In the previous year $25,000,000—salaries and wages—went to the 10,000 people engaged in the province's gold-mining industry and $30,000,000 in nickel-copper. During the war the mines of the Sudbury basin supplied the United Nations with all the nickel and platinum metals required for victory, yielding 1,800,000,000 pounds of nickel, 2,000,000,000 pounds of copper, 15,250,000 ounces of silver and 1,750,000 ounces of platinum metals.

Palestine Proposed As Federation Of Two Provinces

Plan Has Been Accepted As Basis For Negotiation

London, July 27 — (CP)—The Foreign Office today announced British acceptance, as a basis for negotiation, of a proposal to divide Palestine into Jewish and Arab provinces under a federal government.

Negotiations on the plan for federation, a spokesman said, would be conducted with Arabs and Jews in London with a view to completing them before the meeting of the United Nations Assembly in September.

The proposal is the outcome of discussions by members of a British-American cabinet committee on Palestine, which the Foreign Office said completed work yesterday.

British government sources said Prime Minister Attlee probably will disclose the details of the plan during debate in the House of Commons next Wednesday.

A Foreign Office spokesman said it was incorrect to describe the proposal as calling for a partition of Palestine, since use of that word implied the setting up of two sovereign states.

Paris, July 27 (AP)—An authority said yesterday that Jewish and Arab representatives, in direct negotiation, have formulated a provisional program for settlement of the Palestine problem calling for creation of two independent states, Jewish and Arabic.

This authority, who said he had read a draft of the plan, said it called for both states to be declared permanently neutral under the United Nations.

The plan, the informant added, has been submitted to London and Washington for study.

(The Arab office in London, a semi-official body which represents Arab interests, said in a statement: "It is to be hoped nobody is under the delusion such a plan would be acceptable either to the Arab people or to any of the Arab governments."

News Leakage Thought Cause For Rise in Golds

Toronto, July 27 — (CP) — The Globe and Mail said in a newspage story today that a quick upturn in values of gold stocks yesterday took place, according to some mining men, "because there had been a leakage as to government intentions" in helping the Canadian mining industry to overcome effects of the recent revaluation of the Canadian dollar.

The front page story by Wellington Jeffers, Globe and Mail financial editor, said:

"Several (mining men) found themselves unable to decide what the net effect of the new suggestions would be. At first hearing some thought a good deal of help was being given. It was even stated that the quick turn upward in market valuations of gold stock yesterday was because there had been a leakage as to government intentions. Certainly stocks had been going in recent days to lower and lower levels for 1946 and the turn came yesterday."

False Bomb Alarm Starts New Panic In Palestine

Jerusalem, July 26 (CP)—Panic spread Friday in the heart of jittery Jerusalem following a false bomb alarm as British police continued measures against alleged terrorists and rounded up more than 200 Jews.

Rumors abounded that police headquarters was to be blown up in a few minutes. Someone shouted the Hebrew word for "bomb" and the busy streets were emptied.

The tension increased with the sudden arrival of police reinforcements in armored cars. The excitement eased with the announcement the alarm was false.

Meanwhile 1,000,000 Moslem Arabs observed this Mohammedan Sabbath as a day of mourning for Arab victims of Monday's King David Hotel explosion, and prepared for a more rigid boycott of Jewish goods.

'No Foundation for Quotation'

Ottawa, July 27 — (CP) — Percy Black (PC — Cumberland) and M. E. McGarry (L — Inverness-Richmond) last night in the Commons quoted letters from Msgr. M. M. Coady, director of the extension department of St. Francis Xavier University, saying he had been misquoted by The Canadian Press in a report dealing with the taxation of co-operatives.

Msgr. Coady said in the letter that he was quoted as being thoroughly satisfied with the budget proposals covering the taxation of co-operatives, but there was "no foundation for such a quotation."

Bercowitz Types Second Statement On Gun-Slaying

Montreal, July 27 — (CP) — Dressed in a white sport shirt and light brown summer trousers, 38-year-old Louis Bercowitz calmly took over the homicide squad's typewriter Friday and wrote his second and official confession to the gun-slaying of gambler Harry Davis Thursday night in Davis' betting place on Stanley St.

Detective Sergeant William Fitzpatrick had been typing Bercowitz' confession when the latter turned to him and said: "I guess you must be tired working on that machine. Let me take over and I'll type the confession myself."

$2,500,000 CBC Headquarters Being Considered

Ottawa, July 27 (CP)— The CBC has an option on a site on Cote St. Catherine Rd., in Outremont, Que., and proposals are being considered for erection of a $2,500,000 radio headquarters, it was disclosed today at a lengthy session of the Commons Radio Committee.

The disclosure, on what a member described as a sort of junior Radio City, was made by Dr. Augustin Frigon, CBC general manager, when he offered the corporation's reasons for turning back to the City of Montreal a site near St. Denis and St. Catherine Sts.

The corporation had acquired an option on a more beautiful site opposite the Jesuit College in Outremont on the northwest slopes of Mount Royal and was considering the possibility of building there. Before final decision could be made, however, the corporation would have to seek approval of Parliament.

E. C. Hansell (SC, MacLeod) liked the idea of a Radio City and thought that the CBC should choose the most suitable site for facilities which would be a credit to the national radio service.

LABOR'S DEMANDS SEEN AS THREAT TO STABILIZATION

WPTB Chairman Says Labor Must Decide If it Wants Price Controls to Continue

Ottawa, July 27 (CP)—Labor's demands for higher wages are a threat to the whole stabilization program and labor must decide whether or not it wants price controls to continue, Donald Gordon, Prices Board Chairman, said yesterday at a meeting of the Commons Industrial Relations Committee.

The committee had spent the day questioning Mr. Gordon and he was still in the witness chair when it adjourned for the weekend. He will be on hand when the committee resumes its study of industrial unrest Monday.

Questioning of the Prices Board Chairman was directed particularly at conditions in the steel industry where some 15,000 workers are affected in strikes at Algoma Steel Corp., Sault Ste. Marie, Steel Co. of Canada at Hamilton and Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. at Sydney. It also broadened into the whole field of stabilization and its relation to industrial unrest in which a total of some 50,000 Canadian workers are idle.

Steel to Establish Pattern

Mr. Gordon, while he declined to suggest the figure at which the steel strike should be settled, said steel would establish the general pattern of wage increases and if the increases were much in excess of 10 cents he would find it impossible to carry on in trying to control prices.

He was questioned repeatedly on what the breaking point was —how far wages could be advanced without destroying the stabilization controls. He said any increases in wages or other production costs were inflationary and it was impossible to say at what point they would be disastrous.

"My considered judgment is if we can settle at somewhat not over 10 cents I would be willing to try it," he said. "Those with me would be willing to try it and I think the government would be willing to try it. If it was sustantially more than that it would be my duty to say to the government 'it is no use.'

"If the workers are not willing to go along they will have to learn. I am not willing to carry on and fool the people into believing we can accomplish the impossible."

He said the one thing most essential to the welfare of labor was a high rate of employment and it could best guarantee that by keeping prices down. If costs were allowed to rise Canada would lose her competitive advantage in relation to other countries.

PLANS BIG WHISKY PARTY

Tulsa, Okla., July 27 —(AP)— Sheriff A. Garland Marrs, defeated in a runoff primary, plans to throw a $50,000 whisky "party" before his successor, W. V. Caffey, takes over Jan. 1 The sheriff explained his party wouldn't be the cocktail variety. For under Oklahoma law he must destroy the 10,000 pints of seized liquor now in his custody. "I have held on to it a long time, in hope some day the legislature would enact a law permitting sale of this liquor so that funds could be returned to the taxpayers," said the sheriff ruefully.

Eccentric Brothers Live Lonely Life in Decaying Mansion in N. Y.

New York, July 27 —(AP)— The doors of a barricaded brownstone mansion in Harlem creaked ajar yesterday and aging Langley Collyer made one of his rare excursions into a world forsaken decades ago to live in solitude with his blind, paralyzed brother.

Wearing an ancient blue serge suit, a shirt wrong side out, old-fashioned gaiters and a black ribbon tie knotted in a huge bow, he boarded a subway and rode downtown to court.

He swore out a complaint against a Negro youth accused of ransacking another house formerly owned by Collyer.

"Homer's eyesight is improving," he told reporters, taking a hitch in the huge bundle of newspapers under his arm. "I'm saving these for him to read. I have them back to 1925."

Homer's eyes began to dim in 1933. Spurning medical aid the brothers locked themselves inside the old house with 17 pianos and a medical library of 15,000 volumes. Their father, long dead, was a physician.

The last outsider known to have seen Homer was a police sergeant, Jim Collins, who entered the dusty, decaying mansion four years ago to investigate reports that Langley was living with his brother's unburied corpse.

"The room was dark as pitch," Collins said. "I turned on my flashlight and there was Homer sitting up like a mummy on a cot.

"'I am Homer L. Collyer, lawyer,' the old man said. 'I want the number of your shield and your name. I'm not dead. I'm paralyzed and blind.'"

Langley cautioned the officer, as he prepared to go, not to trip over the beer cans, nailed on the stairs and through the dark halls —a homemade burglar alarm.

'These Are Guilty Men' Says British Prosecutor Of 22 Nazi Defendants

By G. K. HODENFIELD

Nuernberg, July 27 (AP) — British prosecutor Sir Hartley Shawcross today concluded his summation against 22 ranking Nazis on trial on war crimes charges with a plea for "retribution to these guilty men."

Winding up his eight-hour speech, which began at Friday's session of the international militray tribunal, Sir Hartley named each defendant, from Hermann Goering to the absent Martin Bormann and then declared: "These are guilty men."

"On their fate great issues must still depend. This trial must form a milestone in the history of civilization, not only bringing retribution to these guilty men.. but also that the ordinary people of the world—and I make no distinction between friend and foe—are now determined that the individual must transcend the state."

Again and again the British prosecutor hammered home his thesis that a careful campaign of deception, treachery, intimidation, murder and blitzkrieg had been planned deliberately by the men in the dock.

As he ticked off the defendants, one by one, he called the name of Julius Streicher, the Nazi's No. 1 Jew baiter, and demanded his execution.

"It is long since he has forfeited all right to live," Sir Hartley declared.

When he had finished the tribunal adjourned until Monday when it will hear the summation of French Prosecutor Charles Dubost, after which the Russian summation will be heard.

3 AMENDMENTS MADE IN TAXATION OF CO-OPERATIVES

Abbott Says Govt. Could Not Make Special Exemptions for Co-ops Generally

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 27 —(CP)— Changes in original budget resolutions covering the taxation of co-operatives as well as steps to assist the gold mining industry to overcome the financial handicaps arising from the recent adjustment of the Canadian dollar to parity with that of the United States were announced in the Commons Friday by Acting Finance Minister Abbott.

Disclosing that steps had been taken to meet requests for changes in the proposed taxation of co-operatives, Mr. Abbott announced these three amendments:

1. For taxation purposes, co-operative organizations will be allowed 12 months instead of six months, as proposed in the resolutions, to pay patronage dividends.

2. The provision that money expended by an organization in the purchase of the interest of members would be exempted only if that interest had been acquired after 1941 will be removed.

3. Provision will be made whereby a co-operative which wishes to pay patronage dividends only to members or at a lower rate to non-members will be able to treat such patronage dividends as a deduction from taxable income, provided they pay tax on income arising from non-member business.

There was no immediate debate on the changes, but CCF members complained that the concessions to co-operatives did not go far enough. They urged that the government re-consider and leave co-operatives tax exempt.

Progressive Conservative members expressed belief that the amendments met their main objections to the proposals for the taxation of Co-operatives.

Mr. Abbott also announced he had received from representatives of the Alberta and Saskatchewan wheat pools a counter-proposal for settlement of government tax claims on the pools and said these suggestions now were under consideration.

"I simply want to say," he added, "that a settlement will be arrived at which will be satisfactory to all concerned but which, I must emphasize, must be fair to all those who are interested. Other than that I do not wish to say anything more at the moment."

He said the government could not accept the suggestions that special exemptions be granted to Co-operatives generally. The amendments made arose out of representations which the government could accept without a major change of policy.

He disclosed that a member of a Co-operative could give written instructions to have his dividends left in the organization's funds for more than a year. However, a vote of a Co-operative annual meeting was not sufficient authority to retain the dividends in the funds indefinitely.

A primate business concern could award patronage dividends on the same basis as Co-operatives but it would have to indicate beforehand that known customers could expect payment of such dividends.

U.S. ACCUSES REDS OF IMPOVERISHING HUNGARY

Ambassador Smith Wants Removal of Food Industrial Goods Stopped

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, July 27 (AP)— A sharp conflict already is shaping up for the Paris Peace Conference between State Secretary Byrnes of the United States and Russia's Foreign Minister Molotov over Soviet reparation demands on Hungary.

The United States is insisting that a new economic deal in Hungary is essential to establishment of a firm peace in Europe. It has protested strongly Red Army seizures of Hungarian foodstuffs and Soviet removals of Hungarian factories as well as current industrial production, contending the result is economic chaos in the Balkan country.

The protest, made public by the State Department last night, highlights the difficulties confronting the 21-power conference, opening Monday, which will write peace treaties for the former enemy states of Hungary, Italy, Bulgaria, Romania and Finland.

Mr. Byrnes, reviewing some of his Paris projects at a press conference, said he plans to confer Monday with the three American members of a joint Anglo-American committee on Palestine. The aim is to fix United States policy on the committee's proposal for partitioning Palestine between Jews and Arabs in connection with the plan for immigration of 100,000 Jews.

On most major issues, Mr. Byrnes made clear, the United States already is committed to act with the other great powers—Russia, Britain and France—as a result of compromise agreements made in the recent Foreign Minister Conferences. However, on issues on which no final commitment has been made the United States will have the right to fight for its own solution. This may mean conflict with Russia on several points of Balkan's policy, particularly such matters as free navigation of the Danube.

The State Department released the text of a letter delivered by Ambassador W. Bedell Smith to Molotov last Tuesday.

Mr. Smith told Mr. Molotov that Russia's reparations and occupation policies are wrecking Hungary's economy and insisted once more that Mr. Molotov instruct his representative on the Allied Control Commission at Budapest to join American and British members in helping stabilize conditions for Hungary's rehabilitation and "its early reintegration with the general economy of Europe."

In a long list of accusations, Mr. Smith declared the Russians are taking half of Hungary's current manufacturing production, 80 to 90 per cent of her heavy industry output, millions of tons of grains and other foodstuffs and have removed $124,000,000 worth of industrial equipment.

Danish Countess Recuperates Among Beauties of Gatineau

Ottawa, July 27 — (CP)—The beauty of the Gatineau countryside is helping 19-year-old Countess Alexandra of Rosenborg forget some of the horrors of the German occupation of her native Denmark.

Daughter of Prince Eric, the blond, brown-eyed, vivacious Countess is living with her grandmother, Mrs. J. F. Booth at her island home opposite the Seignory Club and she is lavish in her praise of Canada and Canadians.

MURDER CHARGE LAID AGAINST LOUIS BERCOWITZ

Accused Has Twice Made Statements Admitting Shooting Of Harry Davis

Montreal, July 27 (CP)— Outward quiet reigned in the Montreal underworld today following arraignment here yesterday of Louis Bercowitz on a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of Harry Davis, big-time gambler, fatally shot Thursday night in his west-central Stanley Street betting establishment.

Bercowitz, held criminally responsible by a coroner's jury, was remanded for three days to detective headquarters and preliminary hearing was set for Aug. 1.

A gaming house employee who formerly operated betting establishments of his own, Bercowitz twice made statements admitting the shooting, first to Sean Edwin, colmnist of the Montreal Herald, (G. E. "Ted" McCormick, editor-in-chief of the newspaper), whom he telephoned and with whom he arranged a meeting following the slaying and later to Detective Sergeant William Fitzpatrick.

Bercowitz was turned over to police after spending the night in the Herald editorial office and telling of his movements before and after the shooting, how Davis was shot and of how he had been threatened with death by Davis.

Meanwhile, funeral of Davis, felled by three bullets in the body, has been set for 3 p.m. Sunday from a funeral home.

Bercowitz said he had visited Davis on hearing reports that he (Bercowitz) would be "bumped off" by American gunmen and that Davis threatened him by saying there would be no need "to wait for anyone from New York."

Davis, according to Bercowitz, then made a grab for his waistband and he grabbed Davis' hand.

"By this time his gun was clear ....I was drawing my own gun with my right hand and was half raised when I got the gun clear and points it at him. The next thing I knew there were several shots and he was down and I remained standing holding my own gun in my right hand and his gun by the barrel in my left."

Bercowitz said he then walked out but later decided it would be best to surrender "as I was foolish for having left the scene of the shooting."

Drive on to Collect 'Many Millions' In Income Taxes

Washington, July 27 (AP) — The United States government has launched a drive to collect "many millions" in income taxes it claims to be due from several top-ranking Hollywood movie producers, stars and directors.

An official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue woh told a reporter about the campaign named no names. But he did disclose that one unnamed big-time producer has been ordered to pay up.

This tax official said the movie executives and actors had avoided payment of the income taxes by setting up and taking stock in "corporations" to produce single pictures, liquidating the companies and then collecting "liquidating dividends."

Govt. Takes Steps To Assist Gold Mining Industry

Three Measures To Offset Loss Thru Dollar Parity

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 27. (CP)—Government plans to help Canada's gold mining industry overcome the effects of the recent revaluation of the Canadian dollar were announced unexpectedly to the Commons last night by Acting Finance Minister Abbott.

Making the announcement at a time when financial markets were closed, Mr. Abbott disclosed this three-fold proposal:

1. The budget proposal that new mines coming into production after next Jan. 1 pay only half rate corporation income tax on profits for the first three years of production will be changed to allow them complete exemption for that period.

2. The government's formula for determination of depletion allowances in respect to gold mining companies will be modified temporarily to assure a minimum depletion allowance of $2 per ounce of gold produced.

3. The charge made by the mint for the handling and marketing of gold will be reduced from 25 to 20 cents an ounce.

These measures are aimed at offsetting financial losses resulting from the adjustment of the Canadian dollar to par with the United States dollar, which had the effect of reducing from $33.30 to $35 an ounce the price Canadian gold mines receive for their product.

Explanation of Depletion Allowance

Explaining the depletion allowance proposal, Mr. Abbot said:

"A company engaged in the mining of gold will in respect of its first two fiscal years ending after June 30, 1946, be allowed the option of accepting as depletion either 33 1-3 per cent of net profits or $2 per ounce of gold produced, whichever is the greater.

"This will be of assistance to the Martinal mines which really need assistance, but will not benefit the highly profitable mines which already do well on the present depletion formula."

Corporation Tax Exemption

On corporation tax exemption for three years for new mines, he said:

"This should give further encouragement to prospecting for and development of new properties and tend to offset to some extent the effect in this connection of the lowered proceeds on export sales of gold and other metals."

Mr. Abbott said the government had been forced to reject suggestions that it permit the free export of gold to permit Canadian producers and perhaps others in Canada to sell gold to other countries at prices above $35 an ounce, the standard price for gold for monetary purposes.

He added that government inquiries had indicated the "vision" of export markets at high prices were largely a "will-'o-the-wisp" and that no "significant amount of Canadian gold could be legally sold abroad at premium prices unless payment were taken in an inconvertible local currency, which would be of no use to the Canadian producer."

Lombardo Brothers of Sweet Music Fame Have New Project Underway

New York, July 27 —(CP)— Guy Lombardo, whose super-smooth syncopations—some say he's corny—have kept him near the top of the radio heap for years, and whose propensity for risking his heavily-insured neck in motorboats driven by rockets has endeared him to local students of the eccentric, has a new project.

The London, Ont., leader of the famed Royal Canadians, and his accomplice-brothers—who collectively anaesthetize air-fare addicts with what they modestly call "the sweetest music this side of heaven"—have formed another partnership, an airline with which to ferry Broadway and Hollywood notables to beaches in the more inaccessible parts of Long Island.

Launched within the last few days, the Long Island Airlines consists at the moment of several tiny Grumman Widgeon planes, a patch of the East River just off 23rd Street and various other aqueous holdings from here to Montauk Point, about 110-air miles northeast.

The miniature Grummans make the Montauk flight in about 50 minutes—compared to a jolting 4½ hours by train—and the Lombardos hope to trim the time to a mere nothing when they obtain larger, faster planes.

Those who've made the trip to the beaches along the more distant coasts of Long Island say the sand there is just as pleasant to sit on as at Malibu Beach and other famous summer spots for show people—and so far, ever so much quieter. Early patrons of the Lombardo sun-for-stars scheme have included Gary Cooper, Cary Grant and Fred Allen. Press agents for the Lombardos say Bing Crosby and Bob Hope will hit the road to Montauk before the summer is over.

It's all splendid advertising for the Royal Canadians—and since Lombardo Bros, are a firm of profound and proven business acumen, it is apt to turn into a well-paying economic venture.

Calgary Police Press Search For Boy Slayer

Calgary, July 27—(CP)—Police today continued an all-out search for the slayer and the weapon believed used in the killing of six-year-old Donnie Goss, whose wounded and beaten body was found in the bushes on St. George's Island Thursday.

The city of Calgary offered a $1,000 reward for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the slayer and two private citizens added $125. Eight men held for questioning were remanded without bail yesterday.

Dr. Lola McLatchie, pathologist, who performed the autopsy on the body Thursday night said the actual cause of death was difficult to determine as there were so many contributing factors.

Although she said she had not yet finished her investigations, deep wounds — inflicted by a "knife or some other sharp instrument" — were found on the upper part of the body as well as several smaller "scratches."

The body was so badly bruised and beaten the pathologist said it was difficult to tell what caused the death.

No definite time has yet been set for the inquest as tests are being made on the clothing of the child and on four splotches of what is believed to be blood on soil scooped up by police near the scene of the murder.

Allan Barker, 25, Instantly Killed Near Trenton

Trenton, July 27 (Special)— Allan Barker, 25, of Carrying Place, Ont., was instantly killed Friday evening when he was catapulted from the pilion seat of a motorcycle into the windshield of a passing automobile.

Barker was a passenger on the motorcycle driven by Joseph Perro, Dominion Street, Trenton, which was proceeding toward home when the fatality occurred about one mile south of this town. Perro received a broken leg in the crash.

According to reports from the scene of the fatality, two automobiles were proceeding toward Trenton on No. 33 Highway. One car attempted to pass the other forcing the motorcycle into guard-rails adjacent to a railway track.

The force of the impact hurled Barker into the windshield of a car which was following closely, driven by Ronald A. Lowery, 255 Dufferin Street, Trenton. The crash smashed the windshield to pieces causing facial injuries to two RCAF W.D.'s, passengers in the Lowery car.

Medical aid was rushed to the scene of the accident but Barker died before it reached him.

Belleville Woman Injured in Crash

Whitby, July 27 — (CP)—One man was killed and seven other persons suffered a shaking up and injuries last night when a Collacutt Coach Lines express bus swerved to avoid the man and went off the road.

Leonard Robinson of Whitby was killed by the bus after he tried to flag it down, evidently believing it was a local vehicle instead of an express. Kenneth Downs of Kingston told police the man stepped into the path of his bus despite his precautions and he couldn't avoid hitting him.

Admitted to Oshawa hospital with undetermined injuries were Mrs. Bernice Volender, New York City; Mrs. R. Robertson, Belleville, and Mrs. Frances Longhurst, Toronto. Shaken up but able to proceed to their homes were Mrs. John Fraser of Toronto and her two children and a Mr. and Mrs. Lambert of Toronto.

City and District News

TWO R.C.A.F. MEMBERS ON THE AQUITANIA

Two Belleville district members of the RCAF are scheduled to arrive back in Canada from overseas on the liner Aquitania which is due to dock at Halifax today (Saturday). The two Air Force personnel expected to arrive back in Canada are Cpl. R. A. Baker, R.R. 2 Trenton, and Sgt. R. B. Thompson, R.R. 7 Belleville.

Two Youths Cling To Upset Canoe For Over an Hour

The lights of the city twinkled in the distance. Headlights of automobiles threw beams of yellow light in the darkness ahead as they crossed the Bay Bridge.

And the two youths clinging desperately to an overturned canoe in the middle of the bay about 9.30 Friday night, wondered if they could negotiate the distance nearly a quarter-mile, between them and safety.

They were Don O'Brien and Jack Fleming, two youths who had started across the bay in a canoe to get themselves "hot-dogs" at a Rossmore stand.

On the return journey, no one appears to know what happened exactly, the canoe suddenly capsized throwing them into the water. They managed to reach the upturned craft and for upwards of an hour and a half they paddled with their hands in the general direction of the government dock.

They attempted several times to right the canoe, but their efforts proved futile until they neared the dock. Then they managed to turn it over and they reached safety with seven inches of water in the bottom of the craft.

Outside of a prolonged immersion they were none the worse for their experience.

Farm Worker Dies While Stacking Hay at Bonarlaw

Stricken while working on a haystack on the farm of Ronald A. Brown, Bonarlaw, a Peterborough itinerant farm worker, William E. Bromley, age about 55 years, died suddenly just before quitting time Friday evening.

The man is believed to have suffered a sudden heart attack while he was working on the haystack and died almost instantly. Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson of Belleville stated there would be no inquest as the man had apparently died as result of heart seizure.

Nothing is known of the deceased man except that he came to the Brown farm Thursday noon seeking work in the harvest. The registration card which he carried indicated he was William Bromley and gave as his address 417 Stewart Street, Peterboro. Further information regarding the man's relatives would be appreciated by Provincial Police at Belleville.

Flying Club Plans Membership Drive

With the arrival of aircraft and the beginning of flying operations at their newly acquired landing field north of the agricultural park, the Belleville Flying Club will immediately commence a membership drive in the city and district.

This was the decision arrived at Friday evening at a special meeting of club members held in the Y.M.C.A. when the club's charter was outlined by President Charles Cawker, and members were appointed to round out membership, property and operating committees.

Few life memberships in the flying club will be sold in the future, as memberships are to be sold on yearly basis with annual fees.

With the first Tiger Moth aircraft arriving in the city on Wednesday the plane has been kept fairly busy giving transient riders ten-minute "flips" over the city, it was reported by President Cawker. Principal function of the flying club, however, was to give instruction to members with the view of their obtaining their private pilot's licence.

Flying instruction would commence, he said, as soon as a sufficient number of members indicated the desire to start. Chief instructor for the club is "Scottie" Cameron, who has been at the controls of the club's Tiger Moth since its arrival in the city.

Necessity of shelter for planes at the club's landing strip, was stressed at the meeting. For the time being overnight hangar space has been secured at the Trenton Air Station. The plane is being hangared at Trenton for the night and picked up next morning.

Flying activities at the new landing strip would continue over the weekend, it was stated at the meeting with the possibility of a second plane being brought in to assist in handling the numbers who will wish to go for a "flip" over the city.

Denies Visitors Are Not Granted Travel Rights

London, July 27 (AP) — The Moscow radio presented last night what it termed a "sufficiently convincing denial" of a statement by President Truman that the United States—although it had "royally" entertained guests from Russia—had been unable to get American visitors travel rights anywhere in the Soviet Union.

"Facts testify," said the broadcast, quoting a Tass report, "that representatives of American Science and Culture, as well as of other countries, were and are given full and many-sided opportunities of acquainting themselves with the life of the Soviet Union and with questions of the cultural and economic state system of the U.S.S.R. they are interested in," the broadcast said.

The comment by the Soviet News Agency was in response to a statement made by President Truman May 27 in a letter to Sen. Owen Brewster (Rep.-Me.) in which the President replied to a suggestion made by Portland, Me., Y.M.C.A. directors that mutual relations between the United States and Russia would be stimulated by exchanges of visits by American and Russian government officials and students.

Mr. Truman's letter, released by Sen. Brewster said: "We have been unable to get either newspaper publishers or professors from this country and travel rights anywhere in Russia. The members of our Embassy staff are not allowed to go anywhere without being accompanied.

The Moscow broadcast declared that in recent times alone, the Soviet Union has been visited by a number of American public figures, press representatives and persons prominent in the cultural world."

POLICE BLOTTER

Two Young Girls Complain of Being Molested

Two young girls visiting at their grandmother's home on Geddes Street complained of being molested by a young man of approximately 30 years of age. Description of the man was given to police by the two young girls.

Theft of a 1930 Ford coach, owned by Mr. Milton Crawford, R.R. 3, Belleville, was reported to the local police station early Saturday morning. According to Mr. Crawford, the car had been parked on Pinnacle Street near the post office and was missing when the owner returned to go home.

A certain American tourist from New Jersey complained of missing a platinum necklace following her visit to Canada. Local police received a long distance call from the woman stating she had stayed at a city tourist home, overnight and she believed the necklace had been left there. Inquiry by local police failed to turn up the missing necklace.

Busy Days at Moira Lake Camp For Boys

Increased attendance and good leadership make for interesting, instructive activities at Belleville Boys' Camp. Improved campus and accommodation through the help of Belleville Rotary Club, the McFarland Construction bulldozer and numerous citizens are being taken full advantage of. The wiring provided by the Y's Men's Club of the Y.M.C.A., is a boon compared to the old coal oil lantern, while it also permits of moving pictures for education and entertainment.

The schedule for the day is a fairly full one. Group and individual honors are awarded on the basis of participation — attainment — behaviour and attitude. Instruction in swimming, canoeing, camp craft and music appreciation is fitted into the program.

Special events since the opening of the present period include a boat trip and dinner out, paper chase, drama night, aquatic exhibition, sham battle and observation hikes. Camp fire is conducted each night with sing-song, stunts and contests.

The boys are all in good health and wearing a fine coat of tan.

Russia to Seek Showdown on A-Energy Control

By MAX HARRELSON

New York, July 27 — (AP) — Soviet Russia, in the face of overwhelming opposition, prepared to seek a showdown on her proposal for an international convention outlawing the production and use of atomic weapons.

Soviet delegate Gromyko, who two days ago rejected the key points of the United States atomic control plan, was scheduled to open debate on his own proposal before a committee of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission.

The Russian plan already has been discussed both formally and informally by the 12 delegates including Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, of Canada, and so far has been supported only by Poland. It appeared, therefore, that the proposal had little or no chance of approval.

A majority of the delegates, led by the United States, have taken the position that a strong system of controls must be established before the United States could be expected to give up her advantage as the only nation known to have atomic bombs.

A United States spokesman, emphasizing that the American delegation had in no way changed its position as a result of Mr. Gromyko's opposition to the Baruch plan, said: "We will now let Gromyko carry the ball for a while and listen to what all the delegates have to say about his proposals."

New Guinea Islanders Seek Wartime Wage

By JACK HOLDSWORTH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, July —(CP)—An economic and social revolution is in progress in the Australian mandated territory of New Guinea, north of Australia, where Australians, Americans and Japanese waged some of the most bitter struggles of the Pacific war.

It amounts to a struggle between the handful of white administrators, planters and traders trying to restore pre-war standards and 1,000,000 unorganized natives trying to retain the comparative luxury standards they had during the war when working for the armed forces.

The natives were paid about $6,000,000 during the war in wages and compensation money. They now are sitting back on this money and resisting calls for labor unless offered good wages.

Before the war, they were paid $1.25 a month. But, during the war, they were paid up to $2.50 a month, and want this rate continued. Some of the natives have gone even further and are demanding as much as $3.60 to $10.80 a day for contract and casual work.

During the war, they were fed on such European foods as tinned meat and fish, and developed a liking for them. Now they show no inclination to get back to their pre-war diet of sweet potatoes.

Before the war, they were issued with lap-laps, a wrap-round skirt, costing about five cents. During the war the Australian Army provided them with lap-laps of good English cloth costing up to one dollar. They now have the taste for good quality cloth and will not easily change back to the cheap pre-war quality. On top of this, the war gave them a taste for European clothes which they will not readily give up.

They also gained an exaggerated sense of money values which administrators are finding hard to break. American and Australian soldiers would often pay them up to one dollar each for a tropical fruit, for which they were lucky to get one cent before the war.

Unions to Send Delegation

Ottawa, July 27 — (CP)—Unions now on strike will be asked to send rank-and-file delegations to Ottawa Aug. 1 to put their position before the Commons Industrial Relations Committee, Alex McAuslane, acting chairman of the Canadian Congress of Labor Wage Co-ordinating Committee, announced yesterday.

Fisherman Goes Fishing, Returns With Tame Deer

Claresholm, Alta., July 27—(CP)—Leo Copeland, Claresholm fisherman, has reported the biggest catch of the season—but he didn't use a hook and line.

A full grown deer with an over-affectionate nature followed Copeland from the mountain stream, where he had been fishing, back to his camp and refused to leave. Later it jumped into the back of his truck, lay down and went to sleep.

Mr. Copeland drove to Claresholm and handed the animal over to the RCMP. The deer's next journey was in a crate to Calgary's St. George's Island zoo.

Sang for Troops Honored by King

Durban, July 27 (CP) — The story of how Durban's Lady in White once prevented an ugly situation from developing among 3,000 angry non-European troops was told recently at a little ceremony at Natal Command Headquarters. The Lady in White, Perla Siedle Gibson, received the certificate of commendation awarded to her by the King in recognition of her singing to all departing and arriving troops at Durban throughout the war.

Col. E. T. Stubbs, who presented the certificate said that some time ago about 3,000 non-European troops arrived at Durban from the Middle East in an angry mood because there had been a misunderstanding about home leave.

The authorities expected trouble when the troops landed. But when he arrived at the docks he found the Lady in White singing to delighted troops whose mood had completely changed by the time they landed.

The Lady in White is remembered by troops of all nations from all over the world who called at Durban during their wartime travels. Many thousands of them remember her rich, clear voice singing across Durban Bay the tunes of home and of South Africa, at any time of day or night, when a troopship happened to be arriving or leaving.

She always wore white, and numerous letters and mementos have arrived from all over the world from servicemen who, not knowing her name, addressed them simply to "The Lady in White who sang at Durban." They reached the right person.

On Last Lap Of 7-Year Journey

Toronto, July 27 — (CP) — On the last lap of a journey that started seven years ago, a group of 33 Jewish refugees stopped off here yesterday on the way to Montreal and told of an enforced stay in Shanghai, China, under Japanese occupation, and of gas chambers and crematorium furnaces from which the group was saved by the war's end.

When the Germans invaded Poland, spokesmen for the party said, they fled to Vilan, Lithuania, then in Russian hands, where they stayed until 1941 when, through the Canadian Jewish Congress, they obtained visas to Canada. They travelled across Russia but were interned in Shanghai when Japan entered the war.

They said that gas chambers and furnaces, found by the Allies, were installed by a German named "Meisinger" who later was captured by the Allies and charged as a war criminal for his "work" in Warsaw.

Columnist is 'Ted' McCormick

Montreal, July 27 — (CP) — Sean Edwin, columnist of the Montreal Herald to whom Louis Bercowitz surrendered Thursday night and confessed that he had shot Harry Davis, big-time gambler who died after three bullets were fired into his body at his own betting house earlier, is G. E. (Ted) McCormick.

McCormick, a veteran Montreal newspaperman, is editor-in-chief of the Herald and conducts a column in the paper.

He later turned Bercowitz over to municipal police.

J.C. Waddell Given Appointment As Postmaster

Acting postmaster since last April when Mr. J. V. C. Truaisch was granted six months leave of absence, Mr. J. C. Waddell, 133 Bridge Street, West, has received the appointment as postmaster at Belleville, according to advice received from the Director of Operations, Post Office Department at Ottawa.

The certificate authorizing Mr. Waddell's promotion to postmaster has been issued, appointment to become effective October 7th, following the expiration of Mr. Truaisch's retiring leave.

Entering the service of the local post office back in April, 1909, Mr. Waddell has made the post office his life's work, having served continuously since that time. The late D. R. Leavens was postmaster in Belleville in 1909, he being followed by Mr. Alfred Gillen who saw the inauguration of the postal carrier system in Belleville in 1913.

According to Mr. Waddell the postal service in Belleville has come quite a way during the period of nearly two decades in which he has been associated with the local office. Back in 1909 the postal staff was only approximately one half what it is today. Today's mail volume would be easily four to five times as heavy.

"In comparison with today, postal clerks working at the Belleville office had an easy time," stated Mr. Waddell.

Increased efficiency in the sorting system used and the automatic stampers have reduced the work of the post office staffs considerably, but still all mail has to be sorted by hand.

McKenzie Will Be Able to Leave Hospital in Week

Ottawa, July 27 (CP)— Prospects were today that Flt. Lt. William McKenzzie would be able to leave the R.C.A.F. Hospital at Rockcliffe air station within a week.

The jet pilot who lived for 26 days in the wilds of Ontario — 23 of them without food—sat up in bed for some time last night and chatted cheerfully with friends. Then shortly after midnight he was reunited with his wife and mother, flown in from Winnipeg.

Before seeing her husband, Mrs. McKenzie told reporters her first reaction to news of his safety was a scream, "Mom, he's alive."

She and McKenzie's mother, Mrs. J. S. Taylor will be guests at the R.C.A.F. (W.D.) barracks while the pilot remains in hospital.

Once he is discharged he is entitled to the traditional 30 days survivors leave that goes to men who crash.

R.C.A.F. officials said men would be sent to little Helenbar Lake, scene of the crash, to study the feasibility of lifing the plane from its bottom.

One of the Canadian flying experts on jet planes, McKenzie lost none of his faith in them through the crash. He was emphatic in telling reporters that, it was considered probable that he would continue that line of air work when he is again ready for duty.

Ceiling Increases Granted by OPA In Coal and Shoes

Washington, July 27 (AP) — Rolling into action under whittled-down authority, the United States office of price administration granted immediate increases over June 30 price ceilings on coal, shoes and many lesser items.

In the first use of pricing powers in 26 days, the agency also stripped controls from a number of consumer items, including several types of clocks and household television receiving sets.

All of these actions were pending when price and rent controls lapsed temporarily July 1.

Northern Outposts Shopper's Paradise

Regina, July 27 (CP) — City housewives can find many a "Shangri-La" in the remote trapping and fishing settlements of northern Saskatchewan.

But before you pack your bags, don't forget the air freight on perishable goods.

A city dweller who walks into a trading store in the settlements reached only by canoe and aircraft marvels at the rows of fruit and vegetable juices, asparagus tips and peanut butter.

Most of the fruit comes into the posts by air but some is shipped up in barges along the natural waterways of adjoining lakes and rivers which cover the northern part of the province.

At Buffalo Narrows, Sask., 200 miles northwest of Prince Albert, fish filleting plant workers pay 13 1-2 cents a pound air freight charges on all those supplies. The cost of freight rises with the distance north from the supply centres.

In the Buffalo Narrows fishing centre, cans of high quality British Columbia staid out on shelves. Life may be lonely in the northern outposts, but if you have the money it's a food-shopper's paradise.

NO APPLICATIONS YET FOR LUMBER PRICES

Ottawa, July 27—(CP)—Chairman Donald Gordon of the Prices Board said Friday he had received no application for an adjustment of price ceilings on lumber but would consider one if it was made.

Mr. Gordon was commenting on a Vancouver dispatch which said nearly 300 British sawmills were threatened with closure because fixed prices made it increasingly difficult for them to meet expenses.

Typhoid Outbreak Starts at Wedding Reception

Detroit, July 26 (AP)—An 11-year-old boy and 22 other persons are ill in a typhoid fever epidemic which started at a wedding reception in suburban Highland Park June 24, health officials said today.

Dr. Charles J. Barone, director of the Highland Park Health Department, said spread of the disease "almost certainly" has been traced to a woman who helped prepare food for the 210 guests.

"We think we have it pretty well under control now, however," the doctor said although one new case had been reported in the last two days.

William Goltry, 11, died of the disease last Saturday at a Traverse City hospital after being stricken at a nearby summer camp, Dr. Barone said. The boy's father is receiving treatment at the same hospital.

The bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kine, did not contract the disease.

The doctor said it was discovered that ingredients of a chicken salad had been handled by the suspected carrier after they were cooked.

A mild epidemic of typhoid broke out after the same elderly woman handled food in 1936 and again a year ago, when three persons became ill, the doctor said.

First Empire Country Ready To Absorb Poles

London, July 26 (CP Cable)—Government officials today welcomed the announcement by Justice Minister St. Laurent that Canada is willing to accept 4,000 Polish army veterans as agricultural workers.

Canada thus becomes the first Empire country to carry out a British suggestion that the Dominions help absorb Poles who do not want to return to their native land following establishment of a Russian-sponsored government there.

It was understood here that final agreement on some details still has not been reached by Canada and the United Kingdom, particularly in regard to certain conditions Canada wishes to oppose on Polish immigrants.

This informant said Canada wanted to reserve the right to send back Poles who were unwilling to continue work on the land after arrival in the Dominion.

New Dwellings Slowly Rising In Tornado Area

Windsor, July 27 (CP)— New dwellings are slowly rising out of the shattered areas of suburban Windsor and the 500 people left homeless by the tornado which struck June 17 are courageously working to re-establish themselves.

In the wake of the tornado, which killed 17 people and injured 100, came thousands of dollars from widely scattered points in Canada and the United States. The Windsor Star Tornado Relief Fund, administered by a committee headed by Col. D. M. Brodie a retired magistrate, now totals nearly $210,000.

Aim of the committee is to rebuild every home and supply all the essentials necessary for a new start. Some of the victims are now living in their partially rebuilt homes; others are taking advantage of building priorities to construct new ones.

The Star's relief fund was established the day after the disaster. Some of the donations were raised by other Canadian newspapers at the request of Mrs. W. F. Herman of the Star and many nationally known firms contributed.

20 Still in Hospital

At least 20 victims are still in hospital or receiving medical attention. Burial and medical expenses are being borne by the committee.

Many remarkable tales of damage and restoration have arisen out of the disaster and its aftermath. One home was lifted into the air leaving the gaping basement behind. Aided by neighbors, the family immediately set to work and now the rebuilt home is ready for flooring. The family has been living in the basement since the storm.

Throughout the countryside, countless objects have been found—letters, tax notices, insurance policies, money were all whipped from their resting places and scattered through a 60-mile radius. One farmer found a banknote and a small faded photograph.

Many people still gaze apprehensively at the sky when clouds darken.

Women 'Full-Fledged Competitors' With Men, Not Mere Substitutes

Chicago, July 27 (AP)— Women are "full-fledged competitors" with men, not merely substitutes for them, in industry, commerce and science, Dr. Richard G. Cox, President of Gulf Park College, Gulfport, Miss., said.

Dr. Cox, here to attend an editorial board meeting of the American Association of Junior Colleges, said in a statement that for several years the question of whether women would continue working in positions formerly held by men in various fields had been a subject of wide discussion.

"National surveys indicate they are definitely competitors, Dr. Cox said. "In my opinion, it is time for us to recognize, reward and respect the young women of this nation for the contributions they have made in the furtherance of commerce, industry and science."

Continued Foreign Aid Necessary For Greek People

Toronto, July 27 (CP)—With one-tenth of the population of Greece suffering from tuberculosis and the country devoid of transportation, a continuation of foreign aid is imperative, Dr. Leonidas G. Polymenakos, a member of the Board of Directors of the Greek Red Cross, said Friday.

Dr. Polymenakos is visiting Canada with Elias A. Alexandrakis, Greek Minister of Information.

The very existence of the Greeks was attributed to Canadian aid part of which is 15,000 tons of wheat a month and $1,000,000 worth of medical supplies a year.

"The most popular people in Greece today are the Canadians," said Mr. Alexandrakis.

SUN SPOTS DISRUPT

New York, July 27 —(AP)— International radio communications were disrupted for several hours Thursday with sun spots scrambling the airwaves. Dr. Athelston F. Spilhaus, professor of meteorology at New York University, explained that sun spot activity runs in cycles with short period variations. The present activity was not a major cycle of unusual intensity and should last no longer than 24 hours.

SAYS ENGLAND SHORTER OF FOOD THAN EVER

Winnipeg, July 27 —(CP)— England is shorter of food now than at any time in her history, A. E. Bryan, chief Canadian trade commissioner for Canada House in London, said in an interview here on his return to Canada after eight years in London. He added: "The bread is actually worse than anything served during the war.

Atomic Bomb Seen No Riddle But for Russia

San Francisco, July 26 — (AP) —The atomic bomb would not be the "international riddle of the day" if it were not for Russia, Sir Keith Arthur Murdoch, internationally known Australian newspaper publisher and world traveler, told the Associated Press in an interview today.

Homeward bound to Melbourne on a globe-circling plane trip which started at Sydney, Australia, last May, the publisher had these things to say of the post-war world:

"Russia is the riddle of the day. If it were not for Russia I do not believe the atomic bomb would be the riddle of the day. No one knows what Russia is up to . . "

"There is not the feeling in Europe that we are confronting a position that might rapidly bring war — the general feeling is one of optimism that on the whole Russia will settle down, that the disaster of the two-world position can be avoided. If we have, two worlds instead of one, nothing can prevent the armament race for the next war."

In the age of the atomic bomb "it is the duty of mankind to find a new way of life so that it can survive. That new way of life implies great tolerance of each other and an absolutely free press, so that all mankind may be equally informed and not be hoodwinked, bludgeoned and led to false ecstacies."

Yugoslavia Says Charges Are 'Old Accusations'

Belgrade, July 27 (AP)— The Yugoslav Ministry of Information asserted Friday reports that Premier Marshal Tito had launched a terroristic anti-Catholic policy of killing priests were "old accusations renewed to coincide with the Paris peace conference."

(A Vatican source said Wednesday that an estimate of more than 280 priests being executed in Yugoslavia since the end of the war was "not, according to Vatican information, exaggerated.")

A spokesman for the information ministry asserted:

"Certain circles abroad always have tried to spread propaganda that Tito advocates an anti-Catholic policy, and today they are timing their charges to coincide with the Paris peace conference in hopes of making the people believe there are disorders in Yugoslavia."

The spokesman said some priests have been executed since Tito took power, but asserted that "they were tried as war criminals, not as priests."

The ministry said many Catholic priests fought on the side of the Ustachi against Tito's partisans and that there were times after the puppet forces fled the scene of battle that the priests continued to fight.

"They were killed in battle," the spokesman said. "They were not the victims of religious persecution."

He asserted that a Catholic priest, Ivan Majstorovic, was formerly governor of an Ustachi concentration camp, at Jasenovac where he said 800,000 persons were killed by the "independent state of Croatia," a creation of the German occupation forces.

"Twenty days after the liberation of Zagreb, everyone in the Jasenovac camp was slaughtered and their bodies were dumped in the Sava River," the spokesman said. "There was no mystery about the death of Majstorovic. He was tried in Zagreb as a criminal, convicted and executed".

Ordeal in the Bush

Everyone thrills to the appeal of man's conquest over danger and obstacles. Another situation that grips man, woman and child in every age and in every clime, is the finding of the lost and missing. Many stories and songs have been written on these themes. These two situations were exemplified this week in the story of Flt. Lieutenant W. H. McKenzie, pilot of the jet plane which he successfully "ditched" in an Ontario "wilderness" on June 29. He had to go twenty-three days without food while he sought contact with the settled country.

Everything of the spirit of achievement, hazard, adventure, went into the saga of his experience, just such an array and sequence of circumstances as makes the perfect appeal to man's spirit.

Man loves to find the heroic soul conquering nature's obstacles and no age has in this respect more appeal than the present age. Man's victories over the forces of nature are seen in the progress of chemistry, in physics, in industry, in transportation, in so many inventions yet to be made whenever man comes to need them, and in the self-possession which enables man to conquer the air.

No finer example of this intrepidity of modern man is to be found than in the brave who form the vanguard of the hosts of people who will in the not distant future fill the skies as they travel by air from place to place.

Ancient exploration held a powerful attraction for man. Exploration still does in the storybooks and novels and will never lose that appeal.

There is plenty of romance in modern life. This story of the jet-pilot flier is proof enough. Such stories of man's victory over the forces, known and unknown, of nature, are thrilling to the landsman as to the airman. And the return of the dauntless navigator of the skies in the very nature of things satisfies a human craving for a successful end of man's adventurous undertakings.

Such another form of this same situation is the successful hunt by people in the case where a child becomes lost or a hunter strays in the thick forest. The heart's demand for the finding of the lost is so insistent that everyone who can in case of emergency will take his part in helping to find the missing or those in danger.

When that which has been lost or missing is found, there is a deep sense of satisfaction and gratitude felt. Man feels that heroic adventurer should come through. Men will risk everything to bring back such a heroic figure.

Second Bomb at Bikini

Man's sense of awe over the power wrapped up in the atom and as harnessed by man in the atomic bomb remains after the second test at Bikini. Only five atomic bombs in all have been exploded, one at the testing region in the United States, but of this only experts engaged in the work and leaders of state knew, two in Japan, expediting the end of the war, and the two exploded this month in the atoll in the Pacific under conditions which enable scientists to gain the maximum of knowledge of the strange nature of atomic energy.

All mankind recalls when the story first flashed on the world with the news of the use of the first A-bomb in warfare against Japan and when the news of man's harnessing of atomic energy was revealed, and later when the second bomb fell over Japan. The two bombs exploded for experimentation in the Pacific have brought no doubt a mass of information to those who have to do with the bomb's guardianship besides what the public knows from that which has been released to the people.

Man has gained the secret sought for long ages. Now he must aim to control this mysterious and titanic force so that it never may be used in warfare because he knows that it is essential that its use be limited to uses of human betterment.

Pictures of the two tests impress upon man this truth.

Today in the presence of this mysterious force of A-power man occupies something of the position of early man who lived in awe of the various aspects of nature, which he did not understand because science had not revealed the causes. Scientists know a great deal of this newly conquered force but still there is so much about it they do not know.

North Borneo a Crown Colony

The reign of the chartered company in British imperial affairs has closed with the formal proclamation of British North Borneo as a Crown Colony. The ceremony, attended by Mr. Malcolm Macdonald, Governor General of the British territories in South East Asia, took place at Jesselton on the north west coast. There were messages from the King and the Colonial Secretary. His Majesty paid tribute to the Chartered Company, whose administration he characterized as wise and just. The new colonial government, he said, would build on the foundations the company had laid so well. Mr. Hall said that the British North Borneo Company was the last of the great chartered corporations entrusted not only with the economic development, but with the political government of vast colonial territories. It had played the same romantic pioneering part as the East India Company and the Hudson's Bay Company. He added that the Colonial Office was fully aware of the present privations of the people of North Borneo, whose towns were as devastated as almost any in the world by bombing and shelling. Jesselton, Sandakan and other centres had been razed to the ground.

Thus over a quarter of a million people, of whom only three hundred and forty are Europeans, come directly under the Crown. It was in 1891 that Queen Victoria granted a royal charter to the British North Borneo Association Limited, to whom the original concessions had been made by the Sultan of Sulu; and it was from this association that the British North Borneo Company took over. The territory was then under British protection. The Governor was responsible (as throughout the history of the chartered companies) to the company's court of directors in London, but the appointment was approved by the Crown, which also has controlled foreign relations. Eleven months ago, the Colonial Secretary told the House of Commons that discussions were going on between his department and the company with a view to taking over direct responsibility.

At the same time, Labuan Island, off the north west coast, has also entered a new phase in its history, becoming part of the Colony of North Borneo. It is just a hundred years since the Island—then uninhabited—was ceded to Britain by the Sultan of Brunei. Incorporated in the Straits Settlements in 19007, it became a separate settlement in 1912.

Special greetings to the people of Labuan from the King and Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Hall, expressed the confidence that closer relationship with the Borneo mainland would be beneficial.

Preserving Warships

Instead of painting them with red lead and greasing every piece of machinery in sight when warships are laid up inactively, they are now scientifically "pickled" and kept in instant readiness, says Chemical and Engineering News.

By sealing their hulls against outside moisture and by installing electrodryers or automatically controlled drying machines which keep the humidity below 30 percent, at all times, corrosion of metals, mildew, mold, and general deterioration of vital parts can be completely stopped.

Whitehall Notebook

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 25—(CP)—Three peers, dissimilar in appearance and background but each entitled to wear the Distinguished Service Order for First Great War duty and united in political faith, are outstanding figures in the Liberal National party which now is considering reunion with the Liberal party.

However, the heavy-set Earl of Rosebery, 64, party president; thin Lord Teviot, 72, chairman, and short, alert Lord Hutchison of Montrose, 73, former chairman are unanimous in stating that first certain conditions must be met. The conditions might be summarized as "no truck with the Socialists."

Some rank and file Liberals of both groups have said reunion will take place regardless of conditions. Even if that happens the Liberals, who for long formed United Kingdom governments, would have only 25 members among the 640 in the House of Commons.

Lord Rosebery was wounded in the First Great War in which he won the Military Cross as well as the D.S.O. He is solid and deliberate in speech.

Slender Lord Teviot was a mining engineer in the '90s and now is a member of a firm of stock brokers. He was Lord High Commissioner of the Treasury and Chief Whip of his party just before the war.

Lord Hutchison, who was Maj.-Gen. Sir Robert Hutchison, was Director of Organization at the War Office just after the First Great War.

Warning: Commons members have learned that when Speaker Clifton Brown feels a member is talking more than his fair share of the time of the House of the House he resorts to softly drumming the arm of his chair with his fist.

A former Speaker, Whitehall tradition says, made stage-whisper remarks when a member spoke too long. When one long-winded member said, "And then I asked myself . . ." the Speaker was prompt to mutter: "And a silly answer you got."

Members' Day: An ordinary members' lament familiar in Ottawa has been taken up in Westminster. It is the back-benchers' plea for restoration of the right of private members to initiate debates one day a week. Labor members complain that without this privilege they cannot hope to bring to the nation's notice some of the problems of the communities they represent.

Two U. S. Veterans Given Divorces From Same Woman

Baltimore, July 26 (AP)— A navy and an army veteran received divorces in a Baltimore court today—from the same woman.

What's more, the two veterans testified they had learned their involuntarily shared wife since had married a third man. This marriage, they said, took place last Feb. 14—St. Valentine's Day.

The two are Herbert H. Malpass, 21, and William M. Effinger, 19, who told the court that the woman had concealed her entanglement from the men's families for a while by pretending visits to a "sick aunt."

Police are seeking the woman on a charge of bigamy.

MACKENZIE'S COLUMN

Russia Blocks Own Interests By Objections

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

When one takes the trouble to study the United States proposal for atomic energy control, which has been bluntly rejected by Soviet delegate Gromyko with one of his famous "No's," it appears likely that the portion to which Russia objects most would offer one of the best guarantees of world peace yet developed.

This is the provision for an international atomic development authority which would have absolute power over atomic raw materials and production and would be endowed with the right of investigation into every nook and cranny of any country. In order that there be no interference with this unprecedented power, America proposed that the right of veto — now held by the Big Five nations — be abolished for all matters relating to atomic energy.

What better single preventive of war could there be? Wars of aggression are prepared for secretly. Hitler built up his army secretly, and he made munitions in plants which were concealed.

Of course the American proposal means surrender of that degree of sovereignty necessary to permit such a development authority to carry out its investigations. But the whole concept of our new U. N. peace organization is based on the giving up of some measure of sovereignty for the general good.

An outstanding characteristic of present day Russia is an intense desire to shield herself from prying eyes. This applies not only to Russia proper but to those countries under Moscow's control. Russian zones of occupied countries in many instances are virtually sealed off from the other Allies.

One reason for this secretiveness would seem to lie in the fact that the Soviet government is very, very young. It was born out of bloody revolution less than a generation ago, and for long was maintained in the face of enemies at home and abroad who persistently tried to pull it down.

It's natural for the Soviet to be suspicious. There are other elements entering into the story, but suspicion is one of the main difficulties.

Capital Closeups

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 27 (CP)— One of the biggest stories in the capital this week was the billion-dollar, four-year wheat agreement with Britain and western members were especially interested in Trade Minister MacKinnon's announcement.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader from wheat-producing Saskatchewan, accepted the agreement with reservations but in an informal lobby discussion gave Maritimers some idea of how this perishable prairie pay-load affects the lives and fortunes of his constituents.

It was too bad, he said, that it took a war to bring the western farmer a certain amount of prosperity and he gave some illustrations.

A farmer found the going so tough he was unable to support his sons. However, enough money was found to pay for their trip to northern Ontario to start afresh. There was not enough for the father, and he remained behind in a bleak cloud of almost poverty.

The sons found the crops hard to win in the area they chose but they managed to eke out a meagre existence. They never did prosper but recently they have been able to get more money from their father.

His fortunes changed with the comeback of wheat and his farm is once more a paying proposition.

On speech-making: Patrick Ashby (C—Edmonton East) sombrero-wearing colorful-speaking and breezy hog-raiser, always gets an audience for his picturesque speeches.

The other day he was advocating the simple life for parliamentarians and came up with this: "I have learned why we come here and sit around month after month, accomplishing nothing.

"It is because whenever a problem is brought before us we immediately make up all the words we possibly can, assemble them into lengthy speeches and completely bury the problem under an avalanche of words. Then, when we can no longer see the problem before us. We go to the next one."

TONSILS

The entire medical profession (never mind, I have heard about them all being out of step but Johnny) seems confused in regard to healthy and unhealthy or normal and diseased tonsil tissue. As evidence of this I need only cite the familiar prattle of the self-qualified "surgeons" about "getting all of the tonsil" or "leaving no tonsil tissue in the throat."

When any one purporting to be a physician, surgeon or specialist utters any such sentiment in regard to treatment of tonsils (except in rare cases of cancer) the man betrays his ignorance and incompetence.

Here I wish to make it clear that I do not know that the tonsils and adenoid body or pharyngeal tonsil serve any useful purpose in childhood and youth. But I believe the lymphoid, adenoid, round-cell tissue composing tonsils, adenoids, lymph nodes and structures of the same tissues in several other parts of the body has a protective function (against infection which there is not room to discuss here. Suffice that lymphoid, adenoid or soft round-cell tissue is normally present in the throat (faucial or visible tonsils, pharyngeal tonsil or adenoid body out of sight in roof of pharynx (throat cavity) behind soft palate, lingual tonsil on the back of the tongue) is normally present and is in no sense pathological or injurious.

Speaking of "unnecesary operations in children who did not benefit from the removal of tonsils and adenoids" Dr. Kaiser says "statistical evidence suggests that in relatively" (relatively is as meaningless as definitely) "few instances are unhealthy tonsils and adenoids responsible for frequent colds. When they are responsible their removal offers the most satisfactory and quickest method of treatment."

Altogether, as it seems to me, the removal of tonsils and/or adenoids is only a gamble at best—I mean as far as prevention of frequent cri is concerned. Of tonsillectomy is always a gamble, as far as the patient's life is concerned. It is a major operation, and the so-called surgeon who tells you it is less serious than ordinary operations is simply deceiving you.

In young adults (says Dr. Kaiser) Smiley found that young men who had had operations on the nose and throat were more subject to respiratory infections than those who had not had such operations. Forsythe found more respiratory infections ("colds" to you, stu) in the course of a year in tonsillectomized students than in a group of non-tonsillectomized students of the same age.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Do people ever have a third set of natural teeth?

Cases of persons who have cut a third partial or complete set of natural teeth are often reported. The accuracy of these reports is generally doubted by dental scientists, who believe that most of them refer to teeth that really belong to the second set.

The theory is that these teeth failed to emerge at the normal time and remained imbeded in the gums until they appeared late in life when there was sufficient room and when the jaw had atrophied. This theory probably explains a great many of the cases of "third dentition" reported.

It is doubtful that a third complete set of natural teeth ever occurs in the strict sense of the term. If it does it must be exceedingly rare. The U. S. Naval Medical School says it knows of no authentic case of persons receiving a third complete set of natural teeth, and eminent dental authorities say that investigation invariably points to the conclusion that cases of so-called third dentition consist of one or more supernumerary teeth.

But there are those who believe there have been authentic cases of third dentition. In "Folklore of the Teeth" 1928), Dr. Leo Kenner gives the following summary of the subject.

"Speaking of the anomalies of eruption, we must mention further the belief that the cutting of the decidious teeth is followed occasionally by a third dentition which may appear in very old age. Third dentition, described quite often by the older writers on dentistry, was discredited for some time by Scheff and by Busch, who denied its occurrence emphatically and declared that whenever one had one or more teeth come through in older age it was delayed second dentition. But since in more modern times ontigle and Kerstig have been able to prove roentgenologically the rightfulness of the older authors' conception and have found at least two undoubted cases of third dentition, we have to believe in its existence."

V.O.N. News

As part of their Child Welfare program, the Victorian Order of Nurses endeavor to bring to mothers every advantage of their training and experience and there are special services designed particularly to start the new mother on an organized plan for the care of her baby. For instance in the early days of the baby's life, when the mother has just returned from the hospital, or in the case of a home confinement, when she feels that she no longer needs extra help in the house she is confronted with the problem of baby's first bath at home.

There is a regular technique which ensures the infant's comfort and proper care and in order to gain first hand knowledge of how to go about it, the mother may call on the V.O.N. for the Order's "Demonstration Bath" service.

This phase of V.O.N. work is exactly as it is named. . .the nurse shows the mother how to bath her baby quickly and efficiently. Moreover th enurse will prepare the day's formula and leave everything in readiness for the mother who is not yet familiar with the routine care of an infant.

The nurse's visit usually lasts for about one hour, early in the morning when it is most convenient for the mother. Then for several days, or for as long as the mother requires, the demonstration baths will be given, until the mother feels that she can get along "on her own".

HARVEST

Over the fields of Summer
A mantle of gold is thrown—
The wealth of a ripened harvest
Where early the seed was sown;
The sheaves of wheat like sentinels
Guard the enchanted ground,
Praise to the Lord of harvests
Whose glorious gifts abound!
O'er all the smiling countryside
Is spread His riches rare,
Oh! What in all the wide, wide world
Can with His gifts compare?
With grateful hearts and humble,
We voice the wondrous praise
Of Him, who blessed the sowing
And gave us harvest days,

—Helen B. Anderson.
Consecon, Ont.

Here in the vicinity of Wellington, the harvest fields are teeming with sheaves of golden grain. The hay and pea harvests which were heavy are now finished and binders are busy cutting the golden grain. Occasional showers have been beneficial to the corn and tomatoes, these late crops being a source of appreciated income in this county of canning factories.

The Farmers' Picnic in Wellington on Thursday attracted a large crowd—farmers with sunburnt and weather-beaten faces relaxing in a well deserved holiday. Late in the afternoon and following a program of speeches, a baseball game was enjoyed. Those attending the picnic from Melville vicinity included Mr. and Mrs. Fred Morton, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Morton and their guests Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Crippen, Hamilton; Mrs. James Morton and Mr. and Mrs. C. Kinnear.

Merchant Gets Surprise.

From Wellington comes the following story: A prosperous and genial merchant of that little lakeside town with lingering love of his boyhood on the farm, keeps a flock of hens. One morning early he went to gather the eggs and what was his consternation and surprise when he laid his hand on a live skunk that had been feeding on the eggs. Needless to say both the merchant and the intruder made a hasty exit.

BEAUTY DELAYED WORLD JAUNT TO FINISH STUDIES

"Miss Australia, 1945" Will Visit Canada and the United States This Autumn

Brisbane, Australia (CP) — Nineteen years old, blond Rhonda Kelly, who was recently chosen "Miss Australia, 1945" in a nation-wide quest for beauty-plus-brains, will visit Canada on her world tour this fall.

Niagara Falls, Toronto, Banff, Lake Louise and Vancouver are the Canadian points on her present itinerary. She now is touring the United Kingdom and later will visit the United States, then Canada and will go to San Francisco, Los Angeles and Hollywood before sailing for Australia.

The Brisbane girl is unusual among beauty contest winners. She postponed the world tour, which was her main prize, for six months so that she could complete her course in physiotherapy at the University of Queensland.

But then, this "Miss Australia" contest was something unusual in beauty competitions. There were 1,000 entrants and they were judged by what was perhaps the most comprehensive panel of judges ever to decide a beauty contest.

Representative Panel

Headed by two of Australia's best-known physicians, Dame Constance d'Arcy and Dr. Addie Walker, the judges included four artists, Will Ashton, Julian Rose, J. C. Bancks and Ray Lindsay; a sculptor, Lyndon Dedswell; physical culture experts, photographers and the chairman of directors of a Sydney theatre; also a judge, and obviously "playing hookey" was the New South Wales director of education, J. Mackenzie.

Education counted 12 points of the 67 which could be awarded. The girls were then chosen for their looks and personality.

Posture, ease in conversation, charm, smile, were all considered, and high marks were given for the way the girls tackled stiff questions on art, history and general topics. Sought particularly were a sound knowledge of Australian background, geography, politics, and history, and the ability to keep a conversation going.

Miss Kelly is only five feet 3 1-2 inches in height and although earlier in the competition she weighed 112 pounds, the excitement and travel reduced her weight by 12 pounds. Her measurements at the time of judging were bust and hips, 34 inches, and waist 25 inches.

Pint-Size Best-Dress

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THIS LITTLE GIRL is dressed for a party. She is also dressed to show you what California designers are doing for the baby set, of the dancing class and Sunday school picnic age.

The dress is made of turquoise blue washable fabric, and trimmed about a picture book yoke with pleated white net. The bodice fits becomingly, and the skirt flares out to accommodate the natural friskiness of tender years. Instead of a sash bow behind, the dress has a little bustle, for goodness sake, and the whole thing is mighty pretty.

Ask Yourself These Questions; Correct Answers Mean Beauty

Janice Grey, heroine of the radio, has beautiful carriage

By HELEN FOLLETT

HERE ARE some mean questions that every girl should ask herself, if she is to retain the svelte shape, display the nifty silhouette:

Do you walk or do you trundle along any old way? Do you sit in a slouchy manner, curving the spinal column outward at the waistline when it should have a neat nip in? Do you go into a huddle when you read or sew?

Like a Kitten

Do you curl up like a kitten when you sleep, with chest contracted so that breathing is light and constricted. If your answer is yes you had better wake up. You are doing no good by your figure that will not improve with the years.

If bad posture is a habit that has been going on for a long time, the business of acquiring pleasing lines is not easy. Muscles that haven't worked and have gone saggy must be trained to be substantial supports. Exercise is necessary to get in form again.

Even more necessary than exercise is keeping the spinal column fully extended at all times, the chest high, the abdomen in. If one is not mindful of these matters, the figure begins to look old, and that is no good looks bargain.

Soldier's Carriage

When walking, endeavor to maintain the carriage of the snappy looking soldier. Point toes straight ahead. Have a firm foothold; you won't if you clop-clop along on spiked heels. Yes, my children, that is your beauty editor's pet peeve.

Instill in your mind the desire to appear vibrant, splendid, wholly alive. You won't look that way if your feet drag, if the shoulders are thrown forward.

Correct posture has a vitalizing effect upon the health of mind and body. It is the attitude of courage, gives one courage to meet life's disappointments and vexing problems.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

In the melodramas the country girl was distinguished by her dowdy clothes

Attention Village Lovelies!

What does the small-town girl miss by not living in a big city? Not much that makes for health and pulchritude. She is deprived of theatres, museums and the like, but she has two wonderful advantages—fresh air and quiet. The girl who has never lived in a city cannot realize that these blessings are of paramount importance. She can get up in the morning, open the door and fill her lungs with clean air. Instead of the rattle of traffic she hears the birds singing.

She is breathing roses into her cheeks, sparkle into her eyes, fine coloring to her lips. She should take long, deep inhalations through the nostrils, draw in the abdominal muscles, lift the chest, exhale through the lips. Air is not just oxygen, it is an energy-giving force. Deep breathing does wonders in the way of soothing the nervous system. And remember, she is not breathing in dust and soot, as is the girl who lives in a house-packed street in the city.

The small-town girl has her beauty shops, receives exactly the same attentions as her city sisters, gets the latest hair-do just as quickly. Beauty shops extend from coast to coast like telegraph wires. Wasn't like that in grandma's young days.

Think of the advantages of outdoor life. Jump in the car and, in no time at all, you are out in the country, enjoying the fresh, lovely sights of nature—trees and wild flowers, shrubbery and streams. Think what such pleasures would mean to many city-bred girls whose feet seldom touch grass, always trip along on pavements. They must seek the parks.

In the old melodramas the country girl was distinguished by her dowdy home-made clothes. Now she is as chic and smart of attire as the next one. Women's magazines, newspapers and the radio tell her about the latest fashions. Her village shops carry the newest models. Truly the city girl hasn't got much that she hasn't got, and the city girl is likely to be dead tired much of the time because of the rush and hurry of her existence.

One thing that the small-town girl must keep in mind: she must give her complexion and hands fastidious attention, especially if she spends hours in the garden, as many girls and women do. She should have two creams, a thin one for defying strong sunlight and for removing make-up, and a heavier one to apply with friction at night.

Hands respond quickly to creamy manipulation. If the beauty overhead must be watched, substitute toilet lanoline or cocoabutter for cream. Thumb it in vigorously, let it remain on overnight.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Boy Friend is Afraid to Trust Girls

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 15, and very much in love with a boy of 17. His boy friend told me that he said he was in love with me, but he was hurt once before and is afraid that if he lets me know of the way he feels, I might change my mind and go out with someone else.

I can't get myself to go out with other boys because of the way I feel toward him. I think he knows how I feel, although I don't chase after him. I would be deeply grateful for any advice you could give me.

"Irish"

If you think this boy knows that you admire him and would like to be good friends with him, then I think the next move is up to him.

It is too bad that people have to get disappointed in others, as you say this boy has been in some girl, but one has to be big enough to realize that just because a few people are unreliable, it doesn't mean that everybody is. For the happy truth is that most people are trustworthy and mean to do the right thing.

When you are young, and have not yet had enough experience to understand this, it is always difficult to believe it. And so, until Time has had an opportunity to prove it, you have to be sporting enough to take another chance on someone else, even though you feel timid about doing so. Life wouldn't be much fun, and you wouldn't be a very courageous person, if, at 17, you shut yourself away from everybody because you were afraid of being hurt. Everybody gets hurt in life, from time to time, but they don't let it make hermits of them.

Perhaps, if you're patient, and always considerate with this boy, he'll finally confide in you and you'll get a chance to tell him some of these things.

He Suggests that She Forget Him — She Doesn't Want to

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 16 years old and go with a boy in his twenties, who was honorably discharged from the service the latter part of last year. We've been going together several months, and he often tells me he thinks a lot of me and would do anything in this world for me.

But it seems he isn't satisfied with me. A friend saw him with another girl and told me. Somehow he found out that I knew, and he told me that it was true but that he only went with her for what he got. This hurt me terribly, and I cried.

Then he said that he didn't realize I thought that much of him, and he told me I should not have learned to love him as he isn't worth it. He said he did no have sense enough to appreciate a nice girl. But still he comes and asks me to go with him as before, and since I love him, I can not refuse. Should I keep on going with him, or try to forget him, which would be hard to do?

A Heart-Broken Girl

I think you'd be a wise girl to accept this young man's estimate of himself—that he just doesn't have sense enough to appreciate a nice girl—and make up your mind to forget him. Of course it will be hard to do, but it won't be as hard now as it will later on, if you keep going with him in the hope that he'll change and find he doesn't.

Any young man who tells you frankly that he is going with another girl just for what he can get from her is surely not a type for you to pin any hopes on, for I'm afraid he'll only be likely to hurt you repeatedly. I would refuse to go out with him any more.

Tipping the Maid After a Visit

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have never visited in a home where there was a maid, but now I have been invited to spend a weekend at the home of a friend who has a maid (a general maid who is also the cook). Should I give her a tip when I leave? If so, about how much?

Clare

Yes, it is customary to give a tip to the maid before leaving. You should give her at least a dollar. . . two if you wish and can afford it. Give the tip to the maid at some time when the hostess is not present . . . and, as you give the tip, express your thanks.

Plans for a Lawn Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. A classmate and I are planning to give a lawn party, from four to eight o'clock. What would be proper for us to serve?

2. What kind of invitations should we send? And if we wish to have replies, how long before the date should these be sent?

Mary

1. The hours you have chosen make it somewhat difficult to plan a menu. For the usual hours for this kind of party. . . four to six, or four to seven o'clock. . . a simple tea-menu would be appropriate and ample: simple sandwiches, little cakes or cookies, a choice of hot or iced tea or coffee, or only some special cold drink, such as fruit punch or lemonade or limeade. But when you extend the hours to eight o'clock, then the suggestion is that you may be planning to serve a buffet meal.

2. For this kind of party, you may correctly invite the guests verbally or by telephone (then you could have your replies at once) or by notes sent about two weeks before the date of the party.

When Bride's Parents Are Divorced

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter, who since my divorce has lived with me, is to be married next month. Several years ago I remarried, but she has retained her father's name. And since her father is sharing the expense of the wedding reception, we are completely in doubt as to how the wedding invitation should read. Will you please advise us?

M.M.

Since, as I judge, your daughter is on friendly terms with her father, it would be best taste for the invitations to her wedding to go out only in your name. In other words, under these circumstances, the bride's stepfather's name would not be used. The form of invitation for a church wedding:

Mrs. John Paul Martin requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter
Elizabeth Lee Smith to
(the rest of the invitation as usual)

Although very often the reception invitations are sent in the names of the bride's mother and stepfather, in this case, since your ex-husband is paying for the reception, I suggest you use the following form on the reception cards:

Cool Refreshments for Summer

"Cold Comfort" is an expression often used with a suggestion of unpleasantness. In the heat of summer days when comfort depends largely on coolness, a frozen dessert or iced drink contributes greatly to the pleasure and comfort of living.

The idea of having syrup for cold drinks made in quantity is not new, but the Home Economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture say it is surprising how few people look ahead far enough to make this preparation. With the sugar dissolved it is a simple matter to make a cool fruit or milk drink on a moments notice.

Ice cream made with whipped cream is out of the question this summer, but with a custard base it is possible to make a smooth rich frozen dessert.

Syrup for Cold Drinks.

Add water to sugar in the proportion of 1 cup water to 1 cup sugar. bring to boiling point, skim and store in covered glass jar in refrigerator.

Summer Cooler.

6 tablespoons cocoa
½ cup sugar
Few grains salt
1 cup water
4 cups milk
6 drops peppermint extract or 3 drops oil of peppermint.

Combine cocoa, sugar and salt. Add water, bland until smooth. Boil 5 minutes, add milk and heat in top of double boiler until steaming. Chill and add peppermint. Pour over cracked ice. Garnish with sprigs of mint. Yield: 5 cups.

Blueberry Refresher.

½ cup blueberries
1 cup water
¼ cup sugar
1 egg well beaten
Few grains salt
Juice of ½ orange
Juice of 1 lemon
Cracked ice
Whole berries for garnishing.

Add water to blueberries and simmer slowly until tender. Press through a sieve, add sugar and stir well. Cool. Combine well beaten egg, salt and sieved fruit. Add orange and lemon juice. Beat or shake well. Pour into glasses half filled with cracked ice. Garnish with a few whole berries. Yield: 2 cups.

Basic Recipe for Ice Cream.

2 cups milk
2 tablespoons flour
1/3 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2 egg whites
2 tablespoons sugar

Scald milk in top of double boiler. Blend together the flour, sugar and salt. Gradually add to scalded milk stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Cook 10 minutes stirring occasionally. Blend a few spoonfuls of the hot mixture with the beaten egg yolks and return to first mixture. Cook 2-3 minutes longer. Pour into refrigerator tray and freeze to a mush. Empty into a bowl, beat slightly, add vanilla and fold in egge whites, which have been beaten with 2 tablespoons sugar until stiff. Pour into freezing tray and freeze until firm 2-3 hours with temperature control set at coldest point. Stir mixture with a fork two or three times during the freezing period to give a smooth consistency. Six servings.

Variations:

Chocolate Ice Cream: Melt 1½ squares of unsweetened chocolate and add to basic recipe just before cooling the custard mixture.

Peanut Butter Ice Cream: Blend 1/3 cup peanut butter and 1/3 cup milk until smooth. Add to the cooled custard mixture of the basic recipe. Reduce the vanilla to 1 teaspoon.

Banana Ice Cream: Reduce milk in basic receipt by 1/3 cup and add 1 cup mashed bananas to the cooled custard mixture.

Raspberry Ice Cream: Reduce milk in basic recipe by 1/3 cup and add 1 cup crushed raspberries to cooled custard mixture. More sugar may be required.

Bulk of the London holiday contingent comes from the building trades, where men downed tools and sought escape from the problems of construction demand and shortage of materials.

Fashion Flashes

A COOL HEAD, no matter how hot the day, is easily achieved with one of this season's crop of hats. Typical of the summer hat season is a model of very lightweight felt worked as a big brim below an open crowd. Brim is trimmed with flanges of chenille-dotted malines.

No end to the belt line-up. Latest for sprucing up summer cottons is a tailored belt in red and white, or blue or black and white checked gingham spattered with tiny rhinestones, which also stud the buckle.

The glove is an integral part of the formal wedding gown. With a long-sleeved white satin wedding gown, one bride chose matching white satin shorties with satin bow trim, and white jersey palms.

Come-backs, out of the fashion picture for some years, have a delightfully new look about them. Among the welcome revivals is the handbag with fine metal frame. For Autumn evening wear, we saw a pouch of untrimmed fine slipper satin, finely handsewn and shirred on a handsome antique-type gilt metal frame. Much nicer than all the sequins!

Right for town or for country club activities is a two-piece, softly tailored frock of pale pink chambray beautified with an all-over scroll design in self-cording.

Bigger than ever is the trade word anent suits for Fall. Made to complement a tailored suit is a semi-fedora in "white smoked felt", worn far back to reveal the forehead. It has a cushioned brim and is trimmed with a black and white quill.

Peplum Dress With Embroidered Banding

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

PINK ALWAYS a happy choice for summer garb, is the color used for this charming daytime dress of crepe. It is nice for town or resort wear. Embroidered banding, pink and green on black, is used to outline armholes, sleeves and peplum, the latter a very apron like affair, full and rippled. One large button fastens the bodice below the classic collar. The wide set-in belt buttons at one side of the wrap-around skirt.

Trenton Fliers Reach Finals Nat. Congress Tournament; Defeat Earlscourt Jrs. 7-4

"Moose" Matthews' Crew Spots City Squad 3 Runs in First Inning, but Their Bats Boom in 6th for Six Runs; Meet Columbus Grads in Tourney Finals This Afternoon

Toronto, July 27—Trenton R. C. A. F. Fliers entered the Toronto district finals of the National Baseball Congress by walloping Earlscourt Junior 7-4 in the first game of a doubleheader last night.

The Fliers will meet Columbus Grads in the finals this afternoon. The champions will advance into the Canadian finals at London the week of August 5.

Earlscourt, a big club and only junior entry in the Toronto tourney which opened last night, scored three runs in the opening inning and looked smart enough to win. Young Roy Tredgett pitched great ball for five innings, but the Fliers broke out with a six-run splurge in the sixth that sewed up the game.

Andy Gibbs, Toronto hurler, was yanked in the top half of the ninth when the Toronto Kids threatened, but Lefty Garton, who beat Mahers in the opener last night, allowed but one run and struck out pinch-hitter Howie Mallabonn to end the game.

The Fliers pushed across one marker in the third frame and turned on a power hitting display in the sixth, when five singles, doubles by Andy Gibbs and Moose Matthews, a walk and error accounted for six runs. Every man in the Airmen's lineup hit at least once.

New York, July 27 (AP) — Newark's Al Clerk remained on the sidelines during the last week but the injured Bear outfielder's .372 batting mark still was the best average in the International League among those players who has appeared 200 or more times at the plate.

Eddie Robinson of Baltimore dropped from .366 to .360 but he retained the runner-up spot according to figures that include games of Wednesday.

Montreal's brilliant negro second baseman, Jackie Robinson, ousted Danny Murtaugh of Rochester from third place as he increased his mark three points to .348. Murtaugh slumped to .340, five points ahead of Lew Riggs of the Royals, fifth with .335.

Robinson continues to lead the circuit in runs batted in with 79. The Oriole first baseman also has knocked out the most hits, 109.

Marv Rackley of Montreal added two more thefts to his stolen-base record to increase his pace-setting total to 51.

Howie Moss of Baltimore and Jack McHale of Buffalo are deadlocked at 22 apiece for the lead in home runs.

Alex Mustaikis, used by Newark in relief roles, still is unbeaten in six decisions. Cy Buker of Montreal has the best record of the regulars, a 10-3 mark, while Art Houtteman of Buffalo, and Jim Prendergast of Syracuse have won the highest number of games, 12.

Chips Off The Sports Block

Representatives of the Belleville Softball Association in Intermediate "A" have been named to Zone 4 of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association and grouped with teams from Kingston, Oshawa and Peterborough, a list of affiliations released by OASA Secretary Frank Feaver revealed today.

The 1946 list of affiliations, Feaver states, includes 145 softball associations and leagues and constitutes an all-time record. Previous high was the 1945 total of 115.

There are six Intermediate zones this year, two in Western Ontario; Toronto Lakeshore; Barrie; Owen Sound and Northern Ontario. Looks as if the champs will do plenty of travelling before also appear on the card.

To quote the press bloke again... "Eddie Lee's Bill Orr will be making his second ring start against Toronto's Butch McCallum. Tony Acerra stifiened McCallum in the local ring about three months ago, you'll remember but, according to reports, has progressed well since then. Orr didn't fare so well in his first start against "Fred Chard" last week but Lee is confident that he will be at his best Monday night."

• • •

We notice the P.B. mentions Fred Chard... Tsk, Tsk, Tsk, and we thought all the time it was an Oshawan named Al Knapp...Ho hum, that bout, like the rose, by any other name.

Titular Courts Battles End Today

Ottawa, July 27 — (CP) — A married couple from Huntsville, Alabama, Morey and Baba Lewis, may win a share in all five senior titles as the Canadian tennis championships conclude here today.

Morey, chunky 1939 Canadian champion, meets Ottawa's lanky Don McDiarmid, winner of the National title when it was last awarded in 1940, in the men's singles final, while his diminutive wife will match strokes with comely, 19-year-old Noreen Haney of Summit, N.J., in the women's final.

Lewis yesterday ousted the '46 Quebec provincial champion, Jean Marois, 13-11, 6-0, 3-6, 7-5, while McDiarmid had an easier time in winning a four-setter from Montreal's Davis Cupper, Henri Rochon.

Mrs. Lewis climbed into her final bracket by trouncing Mrs. Pat Adams of Ottawa in straight sets, while her finals opponent dumped Patricia Macken of Montreal in similar fashion.

The men's doubles semi-finals produced the first five-set struggle of the week, when Lewis and Edgar Murphy of Ottawa upset the favored Montreal team of Edgar Lanthier and Gordie McNeil in five sets. The other semi-final went in straight sets to the Montreal brother team of Brendan and Jimmy Macken over Rochon and Marois.

Mrs. Lewis kept pace with her husband by teaming with Miss Haney, who plays for McGill University, to enter the women's double final. They knocked out the Ottawa combination of Lillian Blockidge and Marjorie McInnis in two sets.

In the final they face a Montreal duo, Doris Kil and Enid Nicholls, who disposed of Toronto's Jean Burritt and Mrs. Louise Brown in a hard-fought 8-6, 6-4 semi-final.

Playing together in mixed doubles, the Lewises will play a semi-final and possibly a final today. If they win over Mrs. Vera Lewis and Art McKnight of Ottawa, their opponents in the final will be Miss Haney and Brendan Macken.

Windsor Golfer In Third Round U. S. Tournament

Denver, July 25 (CP)—Rudolph Horvath, 23-year-old former R.C.A.F. pilot from Windsor, advanced into the third round of the United States Public Links Golf Tournament today as the headliners of the qualifying roundsall had wilted under the pressure of match play in the unpredictable classic of golfdom's working class.

Horvath shot a two-under-par 69 for a two-up triumph over the defending champion, William Welch of Spokane, Wash., on Wellshire's tough municipal course. Today Horvath is scheduled to meet Ralph Evans, Santa Monica, Cal.

Medalist Jimmy Clark of Long Beach, Cal., was qualified with 134, lowest medal score ever shot in a United States Golf Association tournament, was knocked out in his first match by fellow townsman Marshall Holt. Also defeated were the next six lowest medal shooters.

Some of the first-round conquerors of the hotshots were beaten themselves in the second round and except in a few instances the 16-man third-round bracket was populated by a bunch of unknowns.

The third round and quarter-finals, both scheduled for 18 holes, will be played today. Semi-finals Friday and finals Saturday will be over the 36-hole route.

Sports Roundup

By SID FEDER

(Pinch-hitting for Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, July 27 — (AP) — The talk still goes 'round and 'round that the real reason Sam Breadon made his late unlamented trip to Mexico was to try to peddle the Cardinals to the Pasquel Brothers . . . they said no . . . They did offer, though, to loan Max Lanier to Sam for a month or so, to pitch the Cardinals out in front in the National League.

Tsk, Tsk

Movietown tub-thumpers tip you William Bendix, the film Flatbusher, will work out with the Dodgers before today's doubleheader with the Pirates . . . Which, for no reason at all, reminds you of the story about the horse who showed up at Ebbets Field one afternoon a couple of years ago, said he could do anything and asked Lippy Durocher for a tryout . . . He made good, too, clouting a couple out of the park, making the double play at second, whiffing Dixie Walker and Pete Reiser in a short pitching trick . . . Then Durocher told him to show his stuff running the bases . . . "Run", the amazed horse whinnied back. "If I could run, I'd be in the third at Belmont this afternoon."

Out of the Mail Bag

Word from Mexico is that the talk about a peace pact between the Mexican League and organized baseball here is so much hot tamale, sliced very thin . . . It's still every man for "theirself" . . . The Darby (Mont.) softballers had 24 runs scored against them in one inning and dropped a 44-12 decision to Pratt in the opener of a doubleheader the other day . . . Then came back to squeeze out the nightcap 32-9.

Iceland to Seek Membership

Reykjavik, Iceland, July 26 — (AP) — Iceland's Althing (parliament) last night voted to authorize the cabinet to apply for membership in the United Nations after prolonged debate on an amendment which would have made application for membership contingent on immediate withdrawal of United States forces.

Toronto, July 27 — (CP)—Six-foot George Gee, Chicago Black Hawks forward was runner-up to Edgar LaPrade for the rookie award in the National Hockey League last season, is in trouble with the professional baseball moguls.

The 23-year-old native of Stratford is a mighty good outfielder and was playing this season for the Kingston Ponies in the Border Baseball League. But a few days ago he turned his back on Kingston and headed for Cape Breton, reportedly to play in the Colliery League.

Mike Rodden, Kingston, says it is reported in the limestone city that a guarantee of $1,000 cash payment lured the baseball-playing hockey star to sever his connection with the Ponies suddenly and without warning.

The result is that Gee has been suspended by the Ponies and automatically barred from participation in professional ball as long as that suspension stands.

Mike suggests it may even affect Gee's hockey standing.

Football Notes:—

Football gossip is in the air earlier than ever this year and no wonder. The two major senior loops in Eastern Canada — the Interprovincial Rugby Union and the Ontario Rugby Football Union — swing into scheduled action earlier than ever. Both start Friday, Sept. 7.

The intercollegiate starts Oct. 5 and ends Nov. 9 but once again the college boys do not plan to challenge for the Grey Cup and the Canadian title.

The early start will bring an early start to pre-season drills as well. Coach Clifford Parsons of the Sarnia O.R.F.U. entry has called the first practice session for Aug. 7 and will dish out equipment Aug. 1-2.

Bumper Tenderfoot Crop Provides Problem For Prize Rookie Selectors

By JACK HAND

New York, July 25 — (AP) — Baseball's bumper crop of newcomers headed by such new stars as Del Ennis of the Phils, Grady Hatton of the Reds, Ralph Kiner of the Pirates, Gil Coan of the Senators and Hoot Evers of the Tigers — present quite a problem for the boys who must pick a "rookie of the year."

Ennis' supporters are legion in Philadelphia where he has taken his home town by storm. Although the 21-year-old outfielder dropped out of the 10 top National League hitters, for a time, he has regained his early stride.

Hatton gets the Cincinnati vote on his consistent hitting for a youngster who never played a game of professional ball before this season. The Reds paid Hatton, a third baseman, $25,000 for signing a contract although he came out of Texas University and the Army without professional experience.

The newest home run slugger of note is centrefielder Kiner of Pittsburgh whose 16 round trippers placed him second to Johnny Mize of New York in the National League.

Evers of the Detroit world champions probably ran into as discouraging a string of bad luck as any freshman in baseball history. Evers was hitting .400 when he broke his left ankle and right thumb in a Florida exhibition. Sidelined for two months, he was on his way up again when he broke his jaw in a collision with a teammate. Despite this run of misfortune, the young centrefielder is hovering around the .280 mark.

Gil Coan of Washington could not break into the starting lineup until the Senators traded Jeff Heath of St. Louis for Joe Grace. Once the speedboy got a regular chance in the outfield he started to bang the ball hard and moved well into the .300 class.

Young Hank Behrman of Brooklyn has the best pitching record of any of the newcomers with a 7-3 mark. Brooklyn is loaded with "boy wonders" in line with Branch Rickey's youth movement. The best of the bunch may be third baseman Bob Ramazzotti who has ousted Cookie Lavagetto from his job.

Chuck Stevens of the Browns, Steve Souchock of the Yankees, Jack Conway of the Indians, Bobby Adams of the Reds and Buddy Blattner of the Giants are other top notch newcomers playing regularly.

Saturday's $100,000 Hollywood Gold Cup race. The prospective favorite for the feature snoozed most of the way, it said.

New York Giants made two announcements yesterday. The club said it would do spring training in 1947 at Phoenix, Ariz. instead of Miami, Fla., and revealed the acquisition of southpaw Virgil Abernethy from Minneapolis in exchange for cash and two players.

Shortstop Marty Marion of St. Louis Cardinals came up yesterday with a comprehensive pension scheme for major-league ball players after they have reached the 45-year age limit, with benefits to 1956 following the building of a fund. Marion said that, through his plan, nearly $4,000,000 would be available in 10 years through equal contributions by clubs and players and receipts from all-star and other special games.

Marion would pay $50 per month for life to players who had performed for five years in major ball, up to a maximum of $100 a month to 10-year veterans.

Calumet Farm stable finally came through with a win in Arlington Park Stakes yesterday, after four unsuccessful tries at the current meeting, when Good Blood copped the $33,605 Matron Handicap. Jack's Jill and Athene were second and third.

Roberto Estallella, formerly with Philadelphia Athletics, and Roberto Ortiz, who quit Washington Senators, are the leading sluggers of the Mexican Baseball League with 14 home runs apiece.

After a lapse of eight years, the Federation Internationale de Football resumed operations yesterday at Luxembourg with the gathering of soccer delegates from 30 countries for its 26th Congress. Russia was listed as an absentee.

Eric Hollies of Warwickshire yesterday became the first cricket bowler of the English season to take all opponents in one innings. He took 10 Nottinghamshire wickets at a cost of 49 runs.

With four-under-par 68, David F. Clark of Galveston, Tex., yesterday led all pros in the final qualifying round at Chicago for the $50,000 all-American golf tournament which gets under way today. Far back with a 78 was James Johnstone of Toronto.

Tom Brown and Budge Patty of San Francisco eliminated the British pair, Derek Barton and E. J. Filby, in three sets yesterday to enter the semi-finals of the doubles in the French International tennis championships at Paris. Another surviving team was Francisco Segura of Ecuador and Enrique Mora of Argentina.

Primo Carnera, former world heavyweight boxing champion, reserved plane passage for the United States July 26, it was announced at Rome yesterday. He plans to settle in California and might take up wrestling.

The sprint race for $1,000 at Washington Aug. 21 between Gil Coan of the Senators and George Case of Cleveland Indians to decide the major-league speed title aroused Branch Rickey, Jr., of Brooklyn Dodgers to hurl a challenge in behalf of Pete Reiser for a $1,000 bet.

Don Boyle was on the mound for the Juniors. He allowed six hits, walked five and struck out one.

Goodmans had their only run scored in the last inning, while the SACOS tallied one in the first and fourth and two in the second and eighth. Twice the Juniors had the bases loaded, but failed to score either time. Bill Spafford hit a double in the ninth and brought in Harry Wardhaugh from second base.

In the fifth inning a hard hit ball by Sword went down past second base, Maurice Rollins made a dive through the air and snagged it with one hand for a nice bit of play.

SACOS: Wood, cf., Henn, 2b.; Reid, rf.; LaBonne, lf.; Blaker, 1b.; Sword, ss.; J. Wardhaugh, 3b.; Temple, c.; A. Adams, p.

Score by innings:
SACOS .. 120 100 002—6 9 3
Juniors .. 000 000 001—1 9 9

6-4, with Bob Thomson's two-run seventh inning four-bagger being the payoff blow.

Maine Chance Farm's Lord Boswell, which has been chasing Assault since Kentucky Derby day, is regarded as the champion's most dangerous challenger.

If your cards look sick, do you raise a kick? Do you broadcast your distress? By the peeve you show any wily foe may escape a losing guess.

Quite a load to carry is a bridge partner who shows signs of holding a worthless hand or suit. He tips off his mitt to declarer.

Of course, by signals do you tell partner of your weakness in a suit. It may be important for him to know. But an expert pair can frequently tell when to hide such information from a declarer.

South was declarer at a diamond grand slam in this deal:

NORTH
♠K 10 9
♥A
♦J 9 8 3 2
♣J 6 4 2

WEST
♠Q 7 6 2
♥J 10 9 6 3

EAST

SOUTH

♣A K Q 3

West led the heart To take all 13 tricks, declarer had only one worry. He did not know which way to finesse the spades. If he could learn who held spade queen, the rest would be easy.

So, he tried to find out. He led all his diamonds and clubs. His hope was that an opponent discard might tip off who held the spud dame. If east discards a spade, west must have queenie.

Anticipating what south was trying to learn, east kept letting go of nothing but hearts. By this time, west had thrown the spade deuce and all his hearts. East was noting this.

Having counted the hearts so far played, he knew declarer had no more hearts. So, instead of a spade on the tenth trick, east let go of his king of hearts.

If you were declarer, what would you have done? Would you not think that east must be protecting his queen of spades? What other excuse could east have for hanging onto spades?

At any rate, this declarer figured that way. He entered dummy by way of the spade king. He then led a spade from dummy and took a finesse through east. He is still using the crying towel.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Two of three Canadian entrants in Chicago's $45,600 all-American Open golf tournament were eliminated at the half-way mark yesterday as Herman Barron of White Plains, N.Y., surged to a one-stroke lead at 139 over Ellsworth Vines of former tennis fame. Bob Gray of Montreal, billed as the "masked marvel", continued in the fray with a 36-hole total of 150. Two other Montrealers, Stan Horne and Jules Huot, added up 158 and 157 respectively and were out.

Defending champion Byron Nelson was seven strokes off the pace with 146 while prize-fighter Joe Louis was way back for a 168.

Owner Sam Breadon of St. Louis Cardinals said yesterday he harbored no hard feelings toward baseball commissioner A. B. Chandler after it had been divulged during the day the sport czar had imposed a $5,000 fine on the Cards' president for refusing to report on his June visit to the Pasquel Brothers of the Mexican League. The penalty later was rescinded.

Two ex-servicemen are squared away today for the final of the 1946 Public Links Golf Tournament at Denver. In triumphs yesterday were Smiley Quick of Los Angeles, veteran of Pacific fighting, and Louis Stafford of Portland, Ore., former tank corps machine-gunner.

A field of 16, topped by Historian and Louis B. Mayer's Be Faithful and Honeymoon, was scheduled to start in today's 7th running of the $100,000 Hollywood Gold Cup at Inglewood, Calif. Net to the winner, if all 16 start, will be $79,900.

There were ructions in the Canadian-American League game at Schenectady, N.Y., last night when umpire Fred Ripley ordered all but nine Rome Colonels from the park for heckling. When the players continued to demonstrate from the grandstand, the arbiter awarded a 9-0 victory to the local nine.

After eliminating the United States pair, Tom Brown and Budge Patty, in yesterday's doubles semi-finals, Yvon Petra and Marcel Bernard of France today face Enrique Morea of Argentina and Francisco Segura of Ecuador in the final match of the French International tennis championships at Paris.

Derby Day, a comparatively unknown colt owned by D. W. Bostwick of New York, scored a two-heat victory yesterday in the $6,000 National Pacing Stake for two-year-olds in Grand Circuit racing at Old Orchard Beach, E. A six-event program today will end the three-week meet.

Marcel Bernard of France and Jaroslav Drobny of Yugoslavia yesterday became the finalists for the singles title in the French International tennis championships at Paris. Drobny disposed of the last American ,Tom Brown, while Bernard topped Yvon Petro of Brance both in five sets.

Herbert M. Woolf's five-year-old gelding, Historian, was flown from Chicago to Inglewood, California, yesterday to prepare for Saturday's $100,000 Hollywood Gold Cup race. The prospective favorite for the feature snoozed most of the way, it said.

Filby, in three sets yesterday to enter the semi-finals of the doubles in the French International tennis championships at Paris. Another surviving team was Francisco Segura of Ecuador and Enrique Mora of Argentina.

Primo Carnera, former world heavyweight boxing champion, reserved plane passage for the United States July 26, it was announced at Rome yesterday. He plans to settle in California and might take up wrestling.

The sprint race for $1,000 at Washington Aug. 21 between Gil Coan of the Senators and George Case of Cleveland Indians to decide the major-league speed title aroused Branch Rickey, Jr., of Brooklyn Dodgers to hurl a challenge in behalf of Pete Reiser for a $1,000 bet.

Bedlam Features Main Bout At Hume Arena

Merry bedlam reigned supreme at the Hume Arena last night when Lee "The Scowl" Henning refused to say "Uncle" to the ring capers of Big Jim Goon Henry and kept his undefeated record intact. The main bout ended with Henry tied up like a sick pretzel and big Toar Morgan, one of the semi-finalists, landing in the ring to lend his wrestling aid.

It was another of the ding-dong affairs with the villainous Henning using all his well-known tricks in an effort to separate the big Oklahoman from the better part of his anatomy. He again favored his old idea of picking up whatever was loose in the ring or around its immediate vicinity, apparently being willing to be chucked out of the ropes in order to get his nefarious piece of business in, and using whatever he picked up to massage the optics, tonsils and general facial picture of the foe.

But it wasn't exactly all Henning. The Goon swings a mean fist and did some heaving and hurling himself. He played on the Henning left flipper at times and had the "Scowl" grimacing for what looked like mercy.

The third fall ended in a near donnybrook with yelling, excited spectators milling around the ring looking for a lot of Henning blood and quite a quantity of that of Referee Fox.

Toar Morgan and Warren Bockwinkle staged a thrilling thirty-minute draw in the semi-final, with the decision leaning first one way and then the other. "The Bock" and Morgan are two of the best wrestlers seen here in many a moon and their display last night warrants them a return match at any time.

Astute "Bunny" Dunlop the "fox" of wrestledom, drew the ire of the crowd as did Referee Fox, in the preliminary when the Bun pinned popular Pat Flanagan after several minutes of punishing action.

The villainous Dunlop used the ropes to his own advantage and the crowd roared for his blood and that of the referee when the decision was handed out.

FANS RIOT IN BALTIMORE WHEN TEAM LOSES

Swarm on Field Throwing Stones and Bottles at Umpire, Injuring Policemen

By The Associated Press

For the second time in a month, International League baseball fans have staged a violent demonstration against an umpire.

The latest outbreak occurred in Baltimore last night following a 10-inning 10-9 victory by the pace-setting Montreal Royals over the home town Orioles.

Umpire J. E. (Gus) Winters, who incurred the wrath of spectators in the second game of a twin bill at Buffalo June 26, again was involved. He was showered with pop bottles and other missiles after the Baltimore game by approximately 2,000 of the 18,461 fans who witnessed the extra inning battle.

With the score deadlocked at 9-9 in the top of the 10th, winners called pinch runner Dixie Howell of Montreal safe at home with the winning run. At the completion of the game, the fans swarmed on the field and threw stones and bottles, injuring two escorting policemen slightly.

The fans then besieged the building and continued to hurl bottles and stones. Every window in the structure was broken.

Elsewhere around the loop, Newark Bears nosed out Buffalo Bisons 6-5 in 10 frames with Larry Berra's second homer of the contest deciding the issue.

Rochester Red Wings and Syracuse Chiefs divided a twin bill with the Wings taking the opener 4-3 and the Chiefs the nightcap, 11-3.

Jersey City defeated Toronto 6-4, with Bob Thomson's two-run seventh inning four-bagger being the payoff blow.

"Lefty" Ostermueller Proving One Of Best Hurlers in National Loop

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Regarded as washed up when he was waived out of the American League after failing to win a single game in 1941 and fast approaching his 40th birthday, Lefty Fritz Ostermuller is proving to be one of the finest pitchers in the National League this season.

Toiling for the last place Pittsburgh Pirates, the ever-smiling Dutchman has managed to shape up an 8-6 won and lost record. That tells only part of the story. Of Osty's half dozen defeats, four came by one run and twice his mates failed to score a single run for him.

The Quincy, Ill., veteran, now in his 13th year under the big top,, achieved his first shutout victory of the campaign last night. Fritz halted the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers with seven harmless hits in fashioning a 5-0 victory which atoned for his 3-0 loss to the Flatbush flock a week ago in Pittsburgh. A four-run fifth inning by the Bucs not only chased the little lefthander but doomed Brooklyn's six game winning streak.

The loss cut the Dodgers' first place lead over the idle St. Louis Cardinals to one game with the Pirates in position to dump the Brooks into second place by sweeping both ends of today's doubleheader.

The third place Chicago Cubs failed to take advantage of Brooklyn's lapse by losing to the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 when first baseman Frank McCormick singled with two out in the sixth inning to drive in both Philly runs.

Sox Retain Lead

The Boston Red Sox retained their 11-game lead over the New York Yankees in the American League by dumping the St. Louis Browns 8-5 as the Yankees were beating the Chicago White Sox 6-2.

Led by Rudy York, who drove in four runs with a pair of singles and a double, and Johnny Pesky, with four hits, the Red Sox smashed 15 hits as Dave Ferriss went the route for his 16th triumph against four losses.

The Yankees overcame a 2-0 deficit with four runs in the sixth inning as Floyd Bevens held the Chisox to five bingles for his 11th mound win.

Virgil (Fire) Trucks spotted the Philadelphia Athletics three runs in the first inning and then proceeded to pitch and bat the Detroit Tigers to a 4-3 win. Trucks won his own game in the sixth when he doubled home his battery mate, Paul Richards, with the deciding run.

League leading batter Jim Vernon, drove in two runs with his sixth home run and scored the winning run in the ninth innings as the Washington Senators shaded the Cleveland Indians 5-4.

In the National League's only day contest, New York Giants defeated Cincinnati Reds 3-2 when Billy Rigney climaxed a two-run ninth inning rally with a single that brought in Buddy Blattner from second with the deciding run. The victory went to six-foot-nine-inch Johnny Gee,, who recently returned from a two-year retirement following the development of a lame arm.

WORKERS TO RESORTS

London, Ont., July 27 — (CP) — An invasion of resort and holiday centres in Western Ontario started last night when thousands of London workers join an estimated 35,000 from this part of the province in their annual week long vacation.

Bulk of the London holiday contingent comes from the building trades, where men downed tools and sought escape from the problems of construction demand and shortage of materials.

PILOT DROWNED

Recently discharged from the R.C.A.F. with the rank of squadron leader, he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross while serving overseas.

CHAPTER 18

"I'll do better than that," said Barton cordially. "I'll take advantage of my short acquaintance with him and ask him to sit at my table and then take advantage of my short acquaintance with you and Mary and ask you to join me, too. I can see that things are going to be very difficult for Mr. Leader from now on. For me, too."

Mary was not at the bar. Iris found her playing bridge with "the mother with two hideous daughters."

"Having a good time, Iris? I looked out on deck and saw a tuxedo engaged in animated conversation with you. Naturally I came in. Please don't bother about me. Have a good time, dear."

Barton was waiting. Dancing with him, Iris closed her eyes at the excitement and madness that went through her. All her life would she grope for new things as Mary did to shut out the memory of Mark? How absurd it was, dancing with this pleasant young man to close her eyes and think. "This is Mark, holding me close. We've dropped the curtain on the past and we're sailing to a new future—our future together."

Barton said, "We're almost exhibition dancing. Everybody's either gone for a drink or a walk. I'd like a whiskey and soda so, so high."

When they were in the bar, he said, "Are you escaping the city heat or visiting relatives in New England?"

"My destination is still something of a mystery to me," said Iris.

"You're a mystery." He looked down at the ring on her left hand. "Running away from it or —to it?"

"Neither. I'm going to be married in October!"

"Too good to be true. I knew it. All the girls I like are either married or engaged. That ring is a good stop signal. "He called the waiter and ordered another whiskey and soda. "I'll be honest with you," he said to Iris. "The errant son is being shipped to relatives because he's in love with somebody else's wife. Mother thinks I'm bound to fall in love with somebody soon. Habit of mine. When I saw you at dinner, I thought, 'Well, old boy, this is it' and proceeded in my best manner to find you. Well, we can have fun, can't we? I'm going to have plenty of fun. When I finish Harvard next year, I'll be in a law office for the rest of my life."

It was midnight when they said good night.

To Iris' surprise Mary was not in bed. Undressing in the dark, she looked out, seeing the water rippling in the light, seeing grim looking freighters pass and then a magnificent liner.

The high flame of excitement dissolved in drowsy contentment. Iris stared in the feeble light of the cool room and visualized dreams that could never further approach reality. Playing, laughing, dancing, no matter what she did, actually she gave herself only half-heartedly. It would always be so. To be alone was to remember Mark and the thousand things he had given her to remember—too many things to weep secret tears over.

She saw Mary come in and take off her coat, and Mary, outlined in shadow, was the slim silhouette of a graceful child. Iris was not sleepy now. Too many thoughts like a swift current passed through her mind.

She saw Mary sit down at the little writing desk and put her hands to her face. Was she crying? Beneath her gayety was always that unhealed wound of the tragedy of Julian. Brave women, thought Iris, go off in small corners in dark rooms where the world can't see their tears.

"Are you asleep, Iris?"

"Can't sleep. Too much excitement, I guess."

The slim little figure in an evening dress went to the bed next to Iris's and kicked off her high heels.

"Something happened," said Mary, "something quite uncanny. I was taking a walk on deck for a breath of air and stopped for a minute to watch a boat pass. Suddenly a man came out of the darkness. He just stood next to me and didn't say anything. Then we started to talk. Not about ourselves but the water and the boats that passed." She caught her breath. "His voice was just like Julian's, Iris. It frightened me but I couldn't tear myself away. I didn't see him very well and I don't even know his name."

"What did he talk about?"

"This will amuse you. He was telling me about water transportation in China, about thousands of families who live on boats and the ghastly living conditions. It was really very strange."

"Not very strange, Mary." Iris sat up and smiled. "That was Clive Leader. He lives in China and is attached to the British diplomatic service."

"But how do you know all this?"

"Young Mr. Boone enlightened me. And that's not all. He doesn't like finger-nails painted red."

Mary laughed. "How ridiculous? Why should I care?"

"Because," said Iris, "he's going to sit at our table from now on."

"I suppose young Mr. Boone fixed that, too."

"He was most obliging."

Mary shrugged and was pensive again. "His voice—it was so familiar that when he left it seemed the natural thing for me to follow him, Iris, never get serious about anything that happens on a ship. It's a very temporary little world. In a few days we'll be at Eaton Forest, chopping wood for exercise. And Iris, you'll be closer to happiness than you've been for a long time."

"I ran away from happiness, Mary and....abused it. I wonder if I shall ever be able to tell him how sorry I am."

"I think he knows it. I'm dreadfully tired. I want to sleep now and tomorrow we'll have the glorious restfulness of a steamer chair and the beautifully illustrated magazines I bought." She laughed. "I'm getting old, Iris. I don't like dancing so much any more. I like to pour tea and gossip a little and think about the draperies I'm going to buy for my apartment in the fall."

"A steamer chair," said Iris smiling contentedly, "an illustrated magazine and—thou."

"You're a silly child," said Mary.

"The 'thou' is Clive Leader and he talks beautifully about China."

There was never a more surprised young man than Clive Leader the next morning when a girl in a yellow dress with a green kerchief tied about her throat and a small pretty little woman in white appeared at the table set for four. Iris's eyes met Barton Boone's in amusement. Clive's shyness was evident by the deep flush that came to his brown face.

But before breakfast was over there was no embarrassment and more genuine ripples of laughter and earnest talk came from their table than from any other. Mary, who had been everywhere except China, questioned Clive Leader eagerly.

Barton smiled at Iris. "Let Mrs. North catch up on her travel talk. We're going for a walk."

On deck the air was brisk and salty. The clouds were low and blue. After a long walk, Barton tucked Iris comfortably in a steamer chair.

The delightful peace of this—having left havoc and uncertainty behind her and going to a destination unknown! Mark had spoken of a yacht and the Mediterranean. Lazy days in the sunshine with Mark, tall and brown in white. Time would cease to exist. Wherever he was, had he forgotten?

Why had not Joel been at the pier when she sailed? To Eaton Forest he would write some vague excuse. It was nothing to worry about. Yet she could think of no reasonable excuse for his having failed to come. She had left Louis in the wreckage of his marriage—gallant to the end about it. There was nothing ahead for Louis except his work.

She saw Mary and Clive looking at the water. Mary was frowning in the wind as she held on to her hat. Her mouth had a childish sweetness. Clive Leader, some of his shyness gone in the company of this understanding woman, looked down on her in wonder as if never in his life in any of the far-off places his career had taken him had he seen anything comparable to her.

"You see what I see?" said Barton.

"If it is what you think you see," said Iris, "will she reject it?"

"Not if she's wise. He's a big person, reserved, quiet, and strong. He's what's left of a man when all the rough edges have been worn off. Life is still tossing me about."

Mary put on her prettiest frock for dinner, a pale green thing, which made her look no older than a girl at high school commencement. Iris wore a severe white dress.

That night while the music played Iris saw something begin with interest and envy. For many hours thereafter while the boat neared Boston she saw Clive falling in love with Mary and Mary obstinately turning her back on it.

The tall Englishman did not love her with a persuasive flow of words. The little things he did for her, his eyes looking at her across the table, his eyes looking down on her short dark curls while they danced spoke more than clumsy words could say.

Mary was studied and silent and, Iris knew, deeply troubled. In their dark room the first night she had said, "I'm not a romantic child. Since Julian's death I have met so many men. Some wanted to marry me but they would have been unworthy to take his place."

Iris did not ask, "Is Clive unworthy?" because she knew, as Mary knew, that he was not.

The next night Iris was in the room when Mary came in. Heavy clouds outside made the room gloomy and cold.

"He asked me to marry him tonight," said Mary, standing at the foot of Iris's bed. "What he said was beautiful because it was so simple and honest. Not a flowery speech. He said, 'I want to take you back to China with me as my wife. If I can't have all your heart, Mary, I shall be content with what you can give me. To be with you for the rest of my life is all I ask'."

"And what was your answer?"

"It was—no. This is such a sudden thing. I'm not an impulsive person, Iris. But I know now for certain that I can't let anyone share what was Julian's."

Iris said kindly, "But Julian is dead, Mary—He wouldn't want your life to be lonely and empty —nothing but parties and pretty clothes to fill in. He was a scientist. He loved a useful life."

"And mine has been such silly forth. I know that, but I can't. It's —it's being unfaithful."

"It was you who told me not to turn away from a great experience. I'm arguing for Clive, Mary. He—he's very much like Mark. You must not turn away from it. Your life will be emptier than ever."

Mackenzie, House Speaker Clash

Ottawa, July 27 (CP)—A tense situation developed in the Commons yesterday when Veterans Minister Mackenzie, acting government leader, momentarily refused to take his seat after being called to order by Speaker Gaspard Fauteux.

The incident, another in the series that have arisen on the Speaker's ruling with respect to questions on the order paper, occurred when Mr. Mackenzie arose on a question of privilege to explain why he had voted against a decision by Dr. Fauteux yesterday.

The Speaker called for order but Mr. Mackenzie remained standing and said:

"With all respect to you, sir, I am not going to be compelled to sit down in regard to any matter which as a private member for Vancouver Centre I am entitled to raise in this House. I insist on my question of privilege, and I am not going to be bound by any archaic rules of the 18th and 19th century."

Mr. Mackenzie then took his seat as the Speaker said:

"I would ask the minister to be kind enough to resume his seat. I am not questioning the right of the honorable gentleman to rise on a question of privilege. He may rise any time; that is the privilege of the honorable minister and of all other honorable members. But I wonder if I should permit the honorable gentleman or any other honorable member to discuss the ruling or to debate the ruling that was given yesterday."

The incident ended when Mr. Mackenzie replied:

"That is quite correct, Mr. Speaker, and with all respect I will not question your ruling at all. I was trying to explain the stand I had to take as a matter of conscientious duty as a member of this House."

In his opening remarks, Mr. Mackenzie said he was "profoundly convinced" that he was correct in voting against the ruling which said that questions dealing specifically with matters before a committee cannot be placed on the order paper.

The appeal against the ruling was voted down 111-55.

KINGSTON FORTS PLAYED BIG ROLE IN EARLY CANADA

Military History of Ontario City Colorful Background for Centennial Celebrations

Kingston, July 26 — (CP) — Fort Frontenac, which forms a part of the military backdrop for Kingston's centennial celebrations this year, was first built in 1673 at a cost of 10,000 francs, 15 guns and 25 overcoats. For the next 200 years, it continued as one of the most strategic fortified points in Canada's history.

It was from Fort Frontenac that La Salle made his preparations for his voyage of discovery to the Mississippi, and it was from the same fort that Canada's defenders made continuous sorties against the enemy throughout the country's whole war history. When Fort Frontenac fell to the English in 1758, the capture of all Canada was merely a matter of months.

Built for the three-fold purpose of holding back the Iroquois, checking English expedition, and serving as a base for the endless search for a route to China, Fort Frontenac became the centre of the struggle when inevitable expansion of both French and English colonies made conflicting interests a certainty. Oswego was built by the English as a counter defence and the two fortifications were the objectives of the respective enemies in the war 1758.

The Fort at Kingston was taken by General Bradstreet assisted by 3,000 men and a fleet of whale boats and batteaux. When the whole continent was then in the hands of one country the ruins of Fort Frontenac were left as ruins for the next 25 years.

It was the United Empire Loyalists who were responsible for the next phase in the development of present day Kingston. They had come here during the War of Independence, when the British government found it advisable to rebuild the fortifications and in keeping with their loyalty to the British Crown they first named the place Kingstown.

Military activity was renewed again when the war of 1812 was in the air. By the opening of the war the biggest shipyard in Canada was operating at Navy Bay, and Fort Frontenac on the west, and what now is Fort Henry on the east, were fully manned to protect the yards with effective cross-fire should the occasion arise.

The city was never attacked, however, but it was the starting point for many attacks on American points. As a city, it benefited considerably from the war activity.

By 1814 the community had 2,250 people, 450 dwellings of substantial construction, 3 churches, a government building, a theatre, a newspaper and a public library.

During periodic war-scares, additional barracks were built at Fort Frontenac, the major defense scheme centred about Fort Henry was undertaken, and the Rideau Canal was put under construction to give the city access to Montreal should travel by the St. Lawrence become too hazardous. The canal was finished in 1832.

As the western part of the continent opened up, Kingston lost much of her strategic importance, but her forts continued to play large parts in wartime. Fort Frontenac has been a military headquarters during war and peace, Fort Henry has served as an internment camp and the 3rd defence fort of Point Frederick has become a part of the Royal Military College.

SEEK TO DEVELOP OIL PRODUCTION IN SOUTH AFRICA

Synthetic Oil Industry at Ermelo in The Transvaal Has Bright Future

Capetown, (CP)— The likelihood of South Africa leading the world in producing oil from coal was suggested here recently by S. G. Menell, managing director of the Anglo-Transvaal Consolidated Investment Company.

Ermelo in the Transvaal has the only successful oil from shale industry in the world, he said, but producers are not satisfied with the present production and plan more enduring industrial development.

"We now can envisage a stage which may well revolutionize the production of synthetic oil from coal." Any development along this line would be an advantage because South Africa has limited reserves of natural oil.

Mr. Menell claimed that during the war South Africa had the only organization with complete knowledge of retorting outside Germany and Japan.

Everything possible is being done by the government to provide homes for the people, declared Prime Minister Jan C. Smuts during a recent press conference in which the latest details of the housing position were outlined by state officials.

Minister of Housing Dr. Henry Gluckman, said the government plans building houses of simpler designs than those being put up at present. Special attention will be paid to the housing needs of the group earning between £25 ($100) and £40 monthly. There is no country in the world where government assistance terms are so liberal, he told the conference.

In the last 21 months over 14,000 houses have been built with state assistance. Over 8,000 of these were for non-Europeans. P.V.G. van der Byl, minister of native affairs, said that natives soon may be able to get individual loans and build their own houses on a sub-economic basis.

Between October 1945 and May 1946 the government granted local authorities some £1,761,000 for native sub-economic housing schemes.

From Pretoria came the government announcement that the Union has accepted an invitation to the general peace conference in Paris but pressing business would keep Premier Smuts at home for the first few weeks.

Meanwhile, Maj.-Gen. Frank Theron, minister to Italy, will represent the Union at the conference.

Food Director J. H. Van Eck, has denied rumors that the government intends to drop the proposed coupon rationing scheme. He says the scheme will go into operation as soon as possible and the first commodities to be rationed will be bread and sugar.

Under the rationing plan South Africans will receive 2,900 calories daily. A survey of the country's food position was made recently and the figures obtained give a sound perspective on distribution problems.

Dr. Van Eck said that to anyone studying the figures it is clear that South Africans must eat cereals and sugar for their calorie content and meat for both calories and proteins.

Arrangements to make maximum quantities of these products available will be made, he said.

Eve's Tomb Hoax But Paid Builders

Jedda, Saudi Arabia, (CP)—The legend that Eve was buried in this Red Sea coast town is dying. A large "tomb" for Mother Eve has been demolished and the gates to the burial ground have been bricked up.

A European, who has lived here for 35 years and has become a Moslem, said research had brought out this story:

Jedda is the Red Sea gateway to the Moslem holy cities of Mecca and Medina. Pilgrims landed here, but didn't tarry.

The Jedda merchants pondered this untourist-like habit and decided something should be done.

"What we need here is a holy place," the merchants decided. Jed was Arabic for grandfather. The feminine form would be Jedda, and after all wasn't Eve the grandmother of the human race?

A tomb 360 feet long was constructed and the merchants sent their servants among the incoming pilgrims. The servants passed the word that the thing to do in Jedda was to visit the tomb of Mother Eve and offered to act as guides.

A cupola was built near the centre of the long tomb and into the cupola well the merchants' guides would drop a few gold coins. The pilgrims, seeing this, decided the tomb must be a very holy place, followed suit. The merchants collected the cash.

The Wahhabi, or Puritan Sect of Moslems, of which King Ibn Saud is a member, feel strongly against graven images and looked upon the visits to Eve's tomb as paganistic. In the 1920's, the Wahhabi holy man had the gates walled up, and later the tomb was torn down.

Now all that remains is a walled area with bricked up gates.

HANDWRITING THE SAME

Chicago, July 26 (AP)—State's Attorney William J. Tuohy said today the handwriting on the Suzanne Degnan ransom note and the lipstick message on the apartment wall of slain Frances Brown was that of William Heirens, 17-year-old university student.

Mr. Tuohy made his statement as he went before the grand jury to seek indictments charging the husky youth with the kidnap-slaying of six-year-old Suzanne, whose dismembered body was recovered from various sewers Jan. 7, and the killing of Miss Brown some three weeks earlier.

EXPOSING A $25,000,000.00 INCOME TAX SCANDAL

● Parliament is the centre of an attempt by a powerful pressure group to do the public treasury out of $25,000,000.00 of income and excess profits taxes.

The officials of the wealthy and politically powerful Pool Elevator Companies of Western Canada have descended on Parliament demanding that the Government abstain from applying the income tax laws to the Pools. These Pool officials are accompanied by the din of newspapers, which they own, and radio time which they have purchased, and are surrounded by a swarm of lawyers. In this manner the Pools, for 16 years, have successfully evaded paying income taxes.

It is almost unbelievable, isn't it? Particularly when you recall how you personally have been hounded and bled white by the Income Tax department for every cent of income taxes that you owe.

POLITICAL INTERFERENCE IN THE ADMINISTRATION OF INCOME TAX LAWS

As far back at 1941 the Department of Justice ruled the Pools were not entitled to income tax exemption. The Pools have refused to pay their income tax assessments and the question of their liability to pay is now before the courts.

In the 1946 Budget speech the Minister of Finance offered to settle with the pools for approximately one-half of the $25,000,000.00 which it is estimated they owe. The Minister indicated that if this compromise was not acceptable the courts must determine the legal position.

The Pools now seek complete escape from payment of income taxes, or the hearing of the cases in Court. Pool officials have been in Ottawa for weeks lobbying Members of Parliament to force the Department to withdraw the actions launched in Exchequer Court to collect income taxes levied against the Pools.

You, and every other Canadian, are entitled to demand the same income tax forgiveness as that proposed for the Wheat Pools.

Why should the Pools be permitted to escape paying $25,000,000.00 of income taxes when you pay every cent of taxes that you owe? You are not getting any tax relief this year.

The Wheat Pools have more than enough cash in their treasuries to pay their full income tax liability.

The Income Tax law is not a law to be applied only to you and to Companies who do not control votes. It is not a law to be flouted and evaded by politically powerful commercial groups.

MR. ELLIOTT MUST ACT

Mr. C. Fraser Elliott, the deputy minister of Income Tax, is responsible to the people of Canada for the administration, without fear or favor, of the Income Tax Act. Neither Parliament, nor the Cabinet, have authority to interfere with the administration of the law as it stands on the Statute Books of Canada.

If Parliament seeks to enact retroactive legislation to permit the Pools to escape their income tax liability then we will deal with such reprehensible legislation if, and when, it arises. No Government of Canada has yet enacted retroactive legislation to relieve a pressure group from paying its just taxes.

If there is any doubt about the law the Courts are available to interpret it insofar as the Wheat Pools are concerned. The Royal Commission on Co-operatives has so advised the Government.

Mr. Elliott's job is that of collecting income taxes owing to the Government. He has the machinery and the authority to act. He is the servant of the people of Canada.

Mr. Elliott must act.

29 LOSE LIVES IN ACCIDENTS OVER WEEKEND

Moslem League's Council Refuses British Proposals

Tells Committee to Evolve Moslem Independent State

Bombay, July 29 — (CP)—The Moslem League's policy forming council of action today withdrew its acceptance of the British Cabinet Mission's proposals for granting India independence in bitterly phrased instructions told the League's working committee to evolve a program of "direct action" to achieve an independent Moslem State (Parkistan).

The council of action declared in a resolution that "Moslem India has exhausted without success all avenues for peaceful settlement" of demands for safeguards in writing a constitution. It accused Britain and the Congress Party of collaboration in a 'breach of faith' to the League.

The second of two companion resolutions withdrawing acceptance of the British proposals and renewing demands for a separate Moslem state also called on all Moslems to surrender any titles they may have accepted from Britain.

Mahomed Ali Jinnah, president of the Moslem League, told the cheering assembly that events that had occurred since the League accepted the cabinet mission's proposals were a "blessing in disguise," because from them Moslems had learned "a bitter lesson."

Says Britain Betrayed League

The council's decision followed a three-day round of "speech making in which Moslem leaders — including Jinnah — told the council that Britain had "betrayed" the League by not insisting on adoption of the Mission's interim government plan despite Congress party opposition.

In turning down the cabinet mission's proposals the council adopted a resolution drafted by a working committee under Jinnah which expressed belief that "the attitude of the Congress clearly is such that conditions for satisfactory working of the constitution making machinery do not exist."

A second resolution asserted that conditions for satisfactory working of the constitution making machinery do not exist."

A second resolution asserted that "power politics, not justice" had become uppermost in Indian affairs and that the council is "convinced that now the time has come for the Moslem nation to resort to direct action to achieve Pakistan."

It termed this the only way for the Moslems "to get rid of British slavery and cast Hindu domination."

Ice Tongs and Anchor Used to Subdue 24-Pound Maskinonge

Midland, July 29 — (CP)—A pair of ice tongs and an anchor was the fishing equipment used by two Toronto women yesterday to catch a 25-pound maskinonge at nearby Triple Bay Park.

Mrs. Kay Henderson and Mrs. Chris Mark, taking a morning dip, saw the big fish lolling in weeds near shore. They attacked with the ice tongs and fought it to submission with repeated blows from a small anchor.

Fire Finally Halted at Town

Sudbury, Ont., July 29 —(CP)—A bush fire which threatened the nearby town of Falconbridge late Saturday was finally halted within 200 feet of the nearest house by a crew of 75 volunteers and men of the Ontario Lands Department Protective Service.

Officials reported Sunday that the blaze was virtually extinguished and the situation was "well in hand." Two other bush fires were blazing however in Neelon-Garson township and in Dryden township.

The blaze near Falconbridge was spotted Saturday afternoon when a stiff breeze sent it crackling through four acres of bush on the southwest edge of the town. Fire Chief William Light of Falconbridge directed the townsfolk and off-shift miners in fighting the flames with the Falconbridge mine fire truck and a hoseline connected to a town hydrant.

Neville G. C. Heath Faces Second Charge

London, July 29 — (CP) — Handsome Neville G. C. Heath today was charged formally with murdering pretty Doreen Marshall, whose horribly mutilated body was found three weeks ago in the fashionable seaside resort near Bournemouth, a playground of the peerage and royalty.

The former R. A. F. pilot already is accused of the mutilation murder of a London film extra, Mrs. Margery Gardner. Her nude and butchered body was found in a London hotel room.

The deaths of Miss Marshall and Mrs. Gardner were among the most gruesome in a series of 21 killings in Britain since the war.

London Writer Says Alexander Appointment Not Just Coincidence

Vancouver, July 29 —(CP)—Roland Wild, correspondent for a London weekly newspaper which featured a story in which he said Vancouver would be the "scene of the next world battlefield," told an interviewer last night that "I write a more-or-less facetious column."

He admitted, however, that several citizens of Vancouver had told him the coast city would be a world battlefield.

Wild also based his idea on other factors, and said that "for some time people have been telling me that Canada, as the centre of the world air map, is the Belgium of the next war."

Appointment of Field Marshal Viscount Alexander as Governor General and the visit of Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery is not just coincidence, he claimed, any more than Operation Murkox was "a pleasure outing."

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, July 29—(CP)—Synopsis at 7.30 a.m.; The weather was fine in Ontario yesterday, with afternoon temperatures ranging from 75 in northern sections to 85 in southern Ontario. SEVEN TO TWELVE PERSONS MISSING AS BOATS COLLIDE

Five or Six Motor Vehicles Plunged Into River With Occupants As Ferry Capsizes

Caruthersville, Mo., July 29 (AP)—Mississippi River men estimated that between seven and 12 persons were missing today in the wake of a mid-channel collision between ferry boat and two heavily-loaded oil barges. One was known dead.

The craft collided about 50 yards from the Missouri shore at 9:20 p.m. last night, and either five or six motor vehicles were plunged into the river with their occupants as the ferry capsized.

The two oil barges, linked together and pushed by two linked tugs in a single river train, picked up 11 persons from the swirling waters shortly after the accident.

Two others reached shore but one of those died, and Ed Hendricks, veteran ferry pilot, was quoted as estimating that there were between 20 and 25 in the vehicles on the boat his tug was pushing from the Tennessee to the Missouri boot heel shore when the tragedy occurred.

Other estimates of the number of persons on the ferry ran as high as 30.

Rivermen said the warer near the scene of the crash was 70 feet deep.

Coast guard personnel with diving apparatus were expected to start searching the bottom for victims.

Known dead were Jerry Cickers, five, who died after he was brought to shore by his mother, Mrs. Claude Vickers, Jr., of Caruthersville.

The two barges were carrying 48,000 barrels of oil upstream from Jennings, La., bound for Mount Vernon, Ind.

E. W. Rogers, Vicksburg, Miss., the pilot on duty on the tugs pushing the barge at the time of the collision, said he gave blinker signals that he was going to pass upstream on the left or Missouri side. He said he saw no answer and that when he saw how close the boats were approaching it was too late to stop.

Rogers said he held his barge against the ferry for a few moments after the collision hoping that some of its occupants would leap to his craft, but that in their panic those on the ferry were too excited to take advantage of the chance before their boat overturned.

Guelph, July 29 — (CP) — Mrs. Emma Haney, 73, mother of Wilfred P. Haney, former member of the Ontario Legislature for Lambton West, died yesterday at the home of her son-in-law, Russell A. Daly. Widow of William H. Haney, former Sarnia veterinarian and harness racer, Mrs. Haney resided at Sarnia for many years.

Reap 100,000 Bushels of Wheat From Handful For Famine Lands

Cleveland, July 29 (AP) — A handful of wheat grains, sowed to demonstrate a biblical phophecy, this week will yield 100,000 bushels for world famine relief.

A harvest celebration next Thursday at the Adrian, Mich., fairgrounds will climax the demonstration inspired six years ago by Rev. Clifton J. Robinson, 28-year-old director of the Cleveland Bible College.

In September 1940, Mr. Robinson, then a senior bible student at the college, was assigned to preach one Sunday at the Tecumseh, Mich., Friends Church. His sermon was titled "The Death Route to Life," and its text was from the book of John, 12:24, which reads:

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit."

A Tecumseh miller, Perry Hayden, invited the student minister to his home after the service, and asked how the text might be demonstrated.

"Why not a cubic inch of wheat, tithed and replanted for six years," suggested Mr. Robinson.

Four days later the miller planted a cubic inch of wheat—360 kernels—on a patch of ground measuring four by eight feet, on ground owned by Henry Ford near his home.

The first harvest was tithed, one tenth going to the church, and Hayden replanted nine-tenths of the crop on a 24-by-60 plot on Mr. Ford's experimental farm. The third year the crop covered an acre, the fourth 16 acres, and last year 230 acres were planted.

This year, 266 farmers in Michigan and Northern Ohio took part in the final planting of the biblical wheat over 2,666 acres.

It was estimated the biblical wheat would cover an area the size of the United States by 1950 and the world by 1953 if replanting were continued.

The expected 100,000-bushel yield will be distributed for world famine relief through the American Friends Service Committeee. Mr. Robinson expected to leave for India as a missionary of of the Friends Church soon.

'Long Suffering People Of World Look to You,' Peace Delegates Told

Paris, July 29—(AP)—The 21-power peace conference convened in Luxembourg Palace this afternoon to consider peace treatics for three Balkan nations, Italy and Finland.

Premier Georges Bidault of France formally opened the conference.

Addressing the 1,500 delegates of the victorious Allies on behalf of the host nation, M. Bidault pleaded:

World Looks to Delegates

"The long suffering people of the world today look to you. If we cannot get complete peace solutions, I hope thatat least we will get reasonable ones."

In an apparent reference to the United States and Russia, M. Bodault said that whatever blame could be attached to the failure to keep the peace after the First Great War, a "fundamental cause of that failure was that the two great powers who had taken a decided part in the conquest of arms remained on the sidelines during the solution of peace."

For more than 36 hours the deputy foreign ministers of the four principal powers—Britain, France, Russia and the United States—had argues before agreeing even upon publication of the five treaty drafts prepared by the four powers for submission to the conference.

It finally was agreed to release the five treaty texts, along with statements on disagreements, at 11 p.m. Greenwich mean time Tuesday.

Favors Wide Open Negotiations.

The 1,500 delegates assembled for the conference were confronted by United States disclosure that State Secretary Byrnes would urge that all negotiations be wide open to the press of the world.

Mr. Byrnes was disclosed to favor a "goldfish bowl" policy at the peace conference. If his proposal for open meetings is turned down, the American informant said, Mr. Byrnes will propose that representatives of various commissions of the conference be appointed to keep newspaper reporters informed of what goes on at closed meetings.

The deputies of the Big Four foreign ministers gave up hope yesterday of reaching an agreement on publication after a day-long argument. The United States and French deputies were understood to favor publication of all or any part of each treaty. Britain was reported insisting that only those parts of the treaties on which the Big Four had unanimously agreed be published. The Russians announced they stood for publication of all or of nothing.

It was known, however, that the proposed treaties would change the map of Europe, list reparations which the five defeated countries must pay, and outlaw militarism.

Attlee Arrives

State Secretary Byrnes of the United States disclosed he would urge the delegates to allow former enemy states, as well as any other interested country, to present their cases to the conference.

He said he would stand firm on all agreements he made with his colleagues at the recent meetings of the Ministers in Paris, but that he reserved the right of complete freedom of action on questions on which no agreement was reached.

The conference is not scheduled to consider the future of Germany or Japan, or to take up such matters as atomic energy.

An American source said, however, that although the Big Four were committed to confining the discussion to the five peace treaties, the other 17 countries could bring up additional subjects if they chose.

Countries attending the conference are:

English -speaking — Canada, Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, United States.

Slavic—White Russia, U.S.S.R., Czechoslovakia, Poland, Ukraine, Yugoslavia.

Other European — Belgium, France, The Netherlands, Norway, Greece.

Asiatic—China, India.

Other—Brazil, Ethiopia.

UNION WORRIED ABOUT LAGGING PRODUCTION

Reuther, CIO Head, Invites Auto Industry Executives to Conference

Detroit, July 29 (CP) — The United Automobile Workers, world's largest labor union and an aggressive force in the United States motor-car industry, is worried about lagging production. Coincidentally, it plans no new wage drives this year.

In a weekend statement issued by President Walter P. Reuther, the big C.I.O. affiliate invited top executives of the automobile industry to confer with union heads over the problems of lagging car production. Mr. Reuther, saying the union was "extremely disturbed," suggested the conference be held here Friday. There was no immediate comment from the industry.

A short time later, an authoritative labor source disclosed that the U.A.W. plans no new wage drives in 1946 such as featured the union's activity late in 1945 and early this year. He declared: "Nothing short of inflation will induce the U.A.W.-C.I.O. to rip open existing wage contracts."

Purpose of the proposed production conference would be, Mr. Reuther said in a letter to manufacturers, to determine the exact obstacles to full production and methods to overcome them.

Only a few union-organized plants are on strike yet the industry is producing only at 40 to 50 per cent of 1941 volume, said the union president.

Reliable sources said the question of general wage increases was discussed at the C.I.O. executive council meeting in Washington 10 days ago and that sentiment seemed to favor holding the line on wages in the hope of finding another means to drive prices down.

MORE MEN ENTER PLANT FOR WORK SAYS STELCO

Employees of Four Dairies Refuse to Handle Milk for Plant

Hamilton, Ont., July 29 (CP)—The Steel Company of Canada said today that "increasing numbers of men" are entering its picketed Hamilton works to return to their jobs as the basic steel strike entered its third week.

Spokesmen for the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) reported that four Hamilton dairies with union contracts have refused to deliver further supplies of milk to the nearby Mounthope airport. They said the milk was being flown from there into the plant to supply the more than 2,000 men the company claims are at work.

Partial production has been maintained at the Hamilton works since the union called the strike to enforce its demands for a $33.60 minimum for a 40-hour week. Production is at a standstill at the Algoma Steel Corporation Plant at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation plant at Sydney, N.S.

Stelco President H. G. Hilton reported today in a telegram to F. B. Kilborn of Montreal, government-appointed controller of basic steel, that coke production increased 10 per cent during the second full week of the strike and was expected to reach normal shortly. Pig iron production was about 80 per cent of pre-strike output and ingot production amounted to 11,000 tons.

Eamon Park, publicity director for the union in Hamilton, said the first information on the flying of milk from the airport came from R.C.A.F. men there. He said employees of the four union dairies—Silverwoods, Royal, Oak, Fairfield Modern and Co-operative—asked their employees not to make further shipments and the request was granted. The Steel Company declined comment.

BRITAIN ACCEPTS U.S. PROPOSALS TO UNIFY ZONES

France Will Likely Accept and Russia Refuse Plan For German Areas

Washington, July 29 (AP)—The State Department announced today Britain has accepted "in principle" the United States government's proposal to unify occupation zones in Germany.

The Department's announcement reiterated the hope that Russia and France likewise will accept.

Despite this hope, the expectation among diplomats here is that the United States and Britain at once will work out details for unifying their own zones economically, that France probably will join promptly and that Russia will refuse to co-operate.

The announcement which may mark a step in the hardening of the Great Power split in Germany came as State Secretary Byrnes, Prime Minister Attlee and Foreign Ministers Molotov and Bibault met in the first day of the Paris peace conference.

R.R. Maintenance Of Way Employees Seek Wage Boost

Ottawa, July 29. (CP)—The Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees (A.F.L.) today announced notice has been served on the Railway Association of Canada for a wage increase of 20 cents an hour for some 25,000 railway workers.

The brotherhood made a similar application last year, first to the Association and then to the National War Labor Board. The Board allowed an increase of two cents for a majority of the employees and up to five cents for others. George Clifford, secretary of the Brotherhood's Central Committee who made today's announcement, said the Board's award was "grossly inadequate".

"At mass meetings of our group demands have become insistent for substantial relief from the sub-standard conditions under which they are forced to exist. As a result of his grossly inadequate award, as representatives of these employees, we are forced again to present demands to Canadian Railways for relief from these conditions.

Today's announcement by the maintenance of Way employees recalled action of the National War Labor Board in recently returning to other railway unions applications for wage increases with the suggestion that they should negotiate first with the railways and then seek approval from the board of increases decided on.

Revival in South Africa's Diamond Trade Brought by Fear of Inflation

By GEORGE ASCHMAN

Capetown, July 29. (AP)—Fear of inflation, and news of the lapse of price controls in the United States, has brought a strong revival of the fabulous diamond trade of South Africa.

Thousands of pounds are being paid daily for single gems as the public seeks a safe investment for its money.

Diamond dealers contrast the present activity with the depression days of 1929-32 when Kimberley became a town of the dead, and dust settled thickly on unwanted diamond stocks which the public wouldn't buy at any price.

Diamonds sold here recently included a blue-white 5 1-2-carat stone for £3,300 ($13,200) (pure blue-whites are most eagerly sought of all); a single silver cape 12-carat stone for £1,200 ($4,800); a pure five-carat stone for £1.270 ($5,080); and a cornflower-blue three-carat stone for £1,000 ($4,000).

Many flawless stones are going overseas where the public, unable to buy diamonds during the war, is paying enormous prices. Dealers from Europe and the United States pay high prices for stones available in Capetown.

Apart from those buying diamonds as an investmeint, many buyers are believed to be getting rid of "hot" money—that is, money made illegally in the black market.

Holiday visitors from the Belgian Congo have spent thousands of pounds here on diamonds. In addition, refugees, returning to their homes in Europe and Far East and unable to take much money out of South Africa, are buying high-priced stones.

32-lb. 'LUNGE CAUGHT IN MOIRA R.

Earl Hinchcliffe, his wife and daughter hied themselves to the cooling water of the Moira River near O'Brien's Bridge on Sunday to do a spot of fishing and have a picnic supper on the shore. Before leaving home he manufactured a trolling spoon thinking that probably a big 'lunge might be lurking in the shaded spots of the river.

After getting a couple of bass and a nice pickerel he decided to use his manufactured spoon and after trolling for a short time he got his strike and after three-quarters of an hour in a finish fight he had landed in the boat a 32-pound beauty. This is the largest 'lunge that has been caught in this district this summer and it is now up to the local anglers to top that mark. The fish was well developed and put up a game fight before being hauled into the boat.

It was decided to hold the picnic the 4th Wednesday in July, 1947, at the same place and the following officers were elected: President, Mr. O. E. FAMILY OF SIX SOUGHT FREE RIDE

One hitch-hiker on Sunday apparently had faith in the generosity of his fellows who drive motorcars. He stood at the eastern entrance to the city with his wife and four children— plus baggage for all. He patiently "thumbed" at passing vehicles for at least an hour—then disappeared.

POLICE BLOTTER

Although it was a quiet weekend in the city insofar as criminal activities or motor accidents were concerned, bicycles had a rather rough time of it with two "bikes" being involved in collisions with autos, and the third reported as being stolen.

Joseph Raftis, 381½ Front St., was riding his bicycle south on Pinnacle St. when he was in collision with an auto emerging from the post office gangway, while a second bicycle came to grief in the same manner at the intersection of West Bridge and Coleman Streets.

Victor Legros, 4 West Moira St., compained to police that his bicycle was stolen from in front of a local grocery store on Saturday. To make the loss more severe, the irate shopper claimed that his wife's purse containing some $45 and the family ration books, disappeared with the bicycle.

A Rossmore resident stated to police that he had lost his wallet containing approximately $100 in cash, his registration card and other personal papers and cards.

On Saturday some person's pet dog ran out from the curbside on St. Paul St., and beneath the wheels of a truck owned by a local lumber company. Severely injured, the dog was put out of its misery by a shot from a police service revolver.

TRENTON

Escapee From Quelph Reformatory Captured

Trenton (Special.) —Constable Walter Youmans and Constable R. J. Rutherford, of the Trenton Police Department, were trying doors at three o'clock this morning when they noticed a man around the cars in a parking lot. One of the officers shouted for the man to stop but he ran to the rear of the parking lot. They chased him several blocks; he kept hiding in back yard. Officers were scouring the neighborhood when the barking of a dog gave them a clue. The man had came out on No. 2 Highway again and was apprehended by police. He gave his name as Douglas Wood, of Ottawa, age 19 years. Then in a statement to police he said that he had escaped from the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph on Saturday, where he was serving a term of two years less a day for car theft. He had already served eight months of his term. He had hitch-hiked from Guelph to Acton on No. 7 Highway when he stopped at a farm house for a drink of water. Finding no one at home he stole a shirt and trousers and discarded his reformatory clothes. He told police his intention were to go to his home in Ottawa. Not having any luck getting a ride in Trenton, he decided to steal a car when police intervened. Wood will be charged with attempted car theft.

Wellington Thresher Swamped With Orders

With present indications pointing to a bumper yield of grain in various sections of the district and a reported shortage of threshing equipment in this area, threshermen are being faced with a more or less serious problem.

George Baitley, Wellington thresher, who has two complete outfits "on the road" has been swamped with orders from various parts of Prince Edward County — orders that he cannot fill.

On Saturday he completed threshing 105 acres of seed peas for the Canadian Canners Ltd. farms which yielded over 2,000 bushels. This week his machines start on the yield of 150 acres of peas grown by the United Canners near Wellington.

"It is absolutely impossible for me to handle all the orders I have received," Baitley said. "My two threshing outfits will be going at capacity from now until the end of the season on orders already in, and farmers from other sections are contacting me daily for work."

Reason for the situation? A lot of former threshing equipment is worn out and difficult to replace, and some veteran threshers have decided not to operate this year.

Strike for Low Dragging and Fice Cent Sodas

Camden, N.J., July 29 — (AP) — A group of self-styled "skating jitterbugs" is picketing the Camden Skateland because "we want low dragging" and "five cent sodas."

Low dragging is a form of jitterbug dancing on skates.

Nicholas Mekosh, operator of Skateland, ejected 20 couples Thursday night for "low dragging." He called it improper and immoral."

Additionally, the pickets carried signs saying Mekosh charged a dime for nickel sodas. Mekosh declined comment.

A-Energy May be Available For Warships in Five Years

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Aboard U.S.S. Appalachian, Bikini, July 29 —(AP)— The United States Navy's top ship designer said today that warships run by atomic energy might put to sea within five years and their hulls would be toughened to withstand better the power of the A-bomb.

Admiral Edward L. Cochrane, construction chief of the Navy's Bureau of Ships, told a press conference that with changes in design "we can produce vessels very much more resistant to these bombs."

Admiral Cochrane's prediction of an early use of atomic energy on the warships was made as he assessed the destruction caused by Thursday's underwater bomb, which sank or damaged one-fifth of the target array of 75 ships.

Will Finish Off Nagato.

The Japanese battleship Nagato, part of her main deck nearly awash, was again listed as perhaps mortally stricken. Plans were made to tow her to sea and sink her with gunfire.

The target area in Bikini lagoon still was dangerously "hot" with radioactivity, making it impossible to board ships and obtain further details of the atomic havoc.

The latest tally was: Sunk, the battleship Arkansas, the carrier Saratoga, a yard oiler and the landing ship from which the bomb was suspended.

Badly damaged, the Nagato.

Damaged: Destroyer Hughes, transport Fallon, cruisers Salt Lake City and Pensacola, the battleship Pennsylvania, the submarine Dentuda.

Probably damaged, the submarine Apogan, Skipjack, Searaven and Pilotfish.

Admiral Cochrane said he was "highly gratified at the resistance of ships showed."

"It is notable," he continued, "that our later ships are more resistant to these bombs than older ships."

The Admiral said the Saratoga was upright on the bottom of the lagoon "sitting on most of the evidence that is wanted." He expressed doubt whether everything that happend to her ever would be learned.

Admiral Cochrane disclosed that the depth at which the Bikini bomb was exploded — the exact depth was not given — was based on the average depth of harbors of the world to determine what damages might be expected in most ports.

Permission, Given To Erect Monument

There is a possibility that the proposed monument to be erected in this city in commemoration of late Sir Mackenzie Bowell, former Canadian Prime Minister, may be raised on the Armouries lawn, according to a communication received by W. C. Mikel, K. C., from the Department of National Defence.

At its June session, the Hastings County Council gave permission for the monument to be placed on the lawns of the County Courthouse, facing Pinnacle Street.

The final decision as to the locale of the monument rests with the Historic Sites and Memorials Commission, Ottawa, which may select a place other than the Armouries and the Court House lawns.

In the communication received by Mr. Mikel, the Department of National Defence states that "this matter has been considered by the responsible officers of this department, and it is considered that the erection of this monument on the grounds of the Armouries would not interfere with their use for military purposes. On consequence therefore, there is no objection by this Department to the erection of the monument on the grounds of the Armoury, should that site be chosen."

10 Commandments For Nazi Workers

Munich, July 29 — (CP) — Many thousands of former Nazi party members today are shouldering pickax and shovel to help clear away rubble in Germany's bomb-torn cities.

Disgruntled over the moodiness of his fellow-shovelers and disappointed with the sloppiness, one former Nazi decided to cheer up work-squads by composing "10 commandments for rubble removers." He posted them on telegraph poles and trees in the Munich suburb of Milbertshoften. They included:

"Do not forget that the Hitler salute has been buried, thus you can work with both hands."

"Do not forget that during the past 12 years you have been taught to denounce people. Thou shalt throw this black mark overboard."

"If there is an inspection of the site it is no longer desired that you turn around and stand at attention."

"Should a non-party member watch you at work who was known to have been a good Nazi, take a big rock and throw him (the rock) — onto the wheelbarrow. The spectator undoubtedly has a clean slate."

"After work take a bath if you have the fuel to heat the water. Gas chambers and other showers are not available."

The newspaper Sueddeutsche Zeitung reported that the idea already showed results in that workers no longer idled and had discarded that sad look.

Five-year Plan Laid Down For Russian Films

By ERIC DOWNTON

Moscow, July 29 (Reuters) — Russia's film industry, under the fourth five-year plan, has set out to make the world's biggest and best movies. Soviet producers, however, are not planning to compete with Hollywood in legshows, sophisticated drama and shootings. They intend to make the film one of the most important weapons in the Socialist State's arsenal for uplifting and instructing the masses of the people.

They admit they still have much to learn from the United States and Britain in the sphere of technique and mechanics, but they are evolving techniques and public tastes of their own.

The heart of the Soviet film industry is Moscow, where "Mosfilm" studios sprawl on the fringe of the Lenin hills, southwest of the capital. Leningrad also has large studios for the organization "Lenfilms."

One producer has estimated the present number of actors and technicians directly engaged in film work throughout the U.S.S.T. as "at least 50,000" with some 40 major films under production.

Three-dimensional filming is a sphere in which the Russians claim to have gone ahead rapidly and the first full-length three-dimensional production ever undertaken is in the finishing stages on location on the Black Sea coast. The film is "Robinson Crusoe," and a technician who saw some advance trial shots in Moscow declared: "You get the feeling that Crusoe's pet parrot is sitting on your shoulder while monkeys seem to dangle from branches right above your head."

Alexei Andrievsky has been producing the film which requires a special screen, developed by Sergei Ivanov, a pioneer in three-dimensional photography.

Productions of the state-controlled film industry are rigorously devoid of sex, sophistication and sensation. In the U.S.S.R., the main themes have been martial episodes from Russia's history, depictions of revolutionary heroes and incidents, industrial and agricultural expansion, social problems, and recently the Second Great War. The mission of such films is to inspire rather than to amuse.

De Gaulle Urges Anglo-British Alliance

Bar-Le-Duc, France, July 29 (AP)—Gen. Charles De Gaulle, in one of the frankest speeches of his career, warried yesterday of the possibility of a third world war if Germany is given a chance "to find again her grandeur in joining her ambition with that of someone else."

In his second political address since resigning as France's interim President last January, Gen. De Gaulle depicted France as a country dwarfed between two great powers and urged a rapid conclusion of an Anglo-French alliance as the keystone of an eventual bloc of Western European countries bound together for self-preservation in a world whose security depends upon "future relations of America and Russia.

Speaking at ceremonies honoring the memory of French civilians slain by the retreating Germans in 1944 Gen. De Gaulle said that "America and Russia—rich in men and resources, compact in territory, naturally protected, one by immense oceans, the other by her own expanse — are by virtue of their size drawn into an expansion that cloaks itself under the robes of doctrines, but which is, in the last analysis, an unfurling of power."

Declaring that Europe could provide the "understanding" needed when the destiny of each country and each individual depends upon the "future relations of America and Russia," Gen. De Gaulle said that "this needed harmony implies first an entente between London and Paris. Our country has sought that entente for a long time...."

"Considering the collapse of Germany and Japan and the weakening of Europe," Gen. De Gaulle said, "Soviet Russia and the United States of America alone occupy a front-rank place. One might say, the world's presiding spirit which in modern times has shifted a gind of preminence in turn to the Holy Roman Germanic empire, to Spain, to France, to Britain and to the German Reich, had now decided to divide it in two. By that, a rending factor is substituted in the universe for the equilibrium of the old."

200,000 Chinese Civilians Slain In Nanking Rape

Tokyo, July 27—(AP)—Rampant Japanese soldiers, seeking to terrify the conquered Chinese of Nanking in 1937, systematically marched hordes of civilians to the outskirts of the city and cut them down with machineguns, the international war crimes tribunal heard today.

Three Chinese described scenes of wholesale murder and rape in the trial of Hideki Tojo and 26 other alleged warmongers.

More than 200,000 civilians were slaughtered in the "rape of Nanking," Dr. Su Chuan-Ying, University of Illinois-educated Nanking professor, estimated.

"It would be impossible to tell the number of women and girls raped, the number of persons injured and the buildings ruthlessly destroyed," said Dr. Hsu.

King's Men, Vintners and Dyers, Carry Out 500-Year-Old Custom Of Upping Swans in Thames Valley

By BARBARA WACE

Richmond, Surrey, England, July 25 —(AP)— It's fine swan-upping weather in the Thames Valley.

Up the turbid Thames, the King's men and the men of the Worshipful Company of Vintners and the Worshipful Company of Dyers will travel in six rowing skiffs the next three weeks, just as they have once a year for five centuries, to divide the swans of England amongst them.

The little procession of beflagged rowing boats will go from Southwark to Oxford, marking those swans which belong to the Vinters or the Dyers, throwing the King's swans back into the river untouched.

"The King once owned all the swans in England" explained Fred Turk, the King's swankeeper who directs the "upping." He takes his two brothers with him, Richard as governor for the Vintners' company swans, Herbert for the Dyers'. Like so many ancient crafts in England, swan-upping is a family business.

But back in the reign of Edward IV "there were a lot of wars, and well, you know wars take money" he said.

"The King borrowed money from the rich city companies. And in return they got a share of the swans, and can have swan pie at their banquets."

John Yallop, who has been the only amateur for the last 15 years came up. He is a London East End metal worker and swan ups for fun not money. He wore the scarlet jersey and beret of the King's men.

"This is okay this year" he whispered confidentially. "We've got our bottle of whisky this year. Last year we couldn't get it. But we'll drink the King's health when we get to Windsor like we've always done."

He turned to a smiling boy in the green-and-white striped sweater and old fashioned night-cap-type sailor's knitted cap of the Dyers company. "And you'll see another fine tradition no doubt as the day goes along. We always duck the new boys in the river."

About 600 adult birds, as well as all the cygnets, will be marked this year. And the Vintner's and the Dyers' company will be able to serve swan at their banquets if they wish.

Alberta Farmer Has Flair For Fine Wood Carvings From Juniper Roots

Drumheller, Alta. (CP)— Almost everyone has a hobby but few have attained fame such as W. Gustang Hodgson who farms at Dorothy, 30 miles north of Drumheller. He carves beauty into old juniper roots and his work has been described by the great Spanish artist Maszuita as "the first new thing in wood sculpture in 200 years."

Hodgson started his odd hobby back in the depression days of 1934, using homemade tools fashioned from odd bits of steel to carve Indian heads in the bark of cottonwood trees. The work became intriguing and he turned to whittling his curios in hardwood. But hardwood was hard to get.

One day he was thrown from his horse when its hoof caught in a root. Freeing the hoof he noticed the curious shape of the root. It was a juniper root, twisted and scrubby and in it he saw a form. He began carving the form he'd seen and that was the start of his real interest in carving.

It wasn't long before his work was displayed in many cities throughout the continent and abroad. Mr. Hodgson is proud today for such well-known people as Princess Alice, Lady Tweedsmuir and screen actress Greer Garson are among purchasers of his art.

No two of his carvings are alike and each has a different mood and shape. Carvings pronounced perfect by connoisseurs are mostly of nude women or feminine forms draped with long, swaying garments. He also has carved Indians, runners, and witches similar to those described in Shakespeare's "Macbeth" and one of his most treasured pieces is a figure of Mahatma Gandhi which is almost complete in detail and mood. Made of cottonwood, this carving is a true likeness of the great Indian leader.

Mr. Hodgson estimates he has made more than 1,000 figures since beginning his hobby and has received from $25 to $150 each for pieces of his work. Higher prices have been paid to dealers.

Youngish looking at 63, he has been a farmer in the Dorothy district for 35 years. He has done many things since he came to Canada from northern England at the turn of the century but none more interesting than his present hobby. At one time he was employed by the University of Toronto to find dinosaur bones and has looked for a porcupine flea for the Lord Rothschild collection.

It's possible Mr. Hodgson's unique work may bring him Hollywood fame as well. At present he's trying to save enough of his fast-selling carvings and make enough others for an "unusual occupations" picture to be made by a Hollywood film company..

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By the Ottawa Staff of the Canadian Press)

Ottawa, July 29 (CP) — Parliament Hill sees a dual National-Provincial purpose behind the announcement by Walter A. Tucker (L.- Rosthern) that he will stand for the Provincial leadership of the Liberal party at its Saskatchewan convention in Saskatoon early in August.

Original opponents of the proposals were believed to include Prime Minister Mackenzie King, but he, like others, bowed before the argument that the party's survival as a national voice requires a comeback on the Prairies.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner, the Prairie spokesman in the cabinet and in the Liberal ranks, is probably more aware than anyone else of that requirement. He and Mr. Tucker are the only Liberal members for a Saskatchewan that expresses itself Federally through a husky C.C.F. contingent.

If he does leave Ottawa, the Veterans Committee of the Commons will lose a chairman regarded as being without betters in his knowledge of ex-servicemen's legislation. The search would begin then for a successor and betting would probably concentrate on Leslie Mutch (L.-Winnipeg North Centre) and David Croll (L.-Toronto-Spadina.)

Even more important, departure would mean an opening for a new parliamentary assistant to Veterans' Minister Mackenzie.

LABOR: Expectations are that Provincial Labor Ministers will be invited to Ottawa early in September to discuss the future of labor relations legislation. Labor Minister Mitchell announced some time ago that he proposed holding such a conference and indications are it may be held within a few weeks.

Jurisdiction in labor relations is normally in the hands of the provinces but during the war it was taken over on a temporary basis by the Dominion. Under that authority a Federal labor code was introduced applicable to war industries with the provision that it might be applied generally by any province.

A wide variety of industries came under the definition of war plants, including for example automobile manufacturers, and the code is still in effect but the government feels the time has come to consider the future of such legislation.

One of the main points of the code is compulsory collective bargaining, requiring employers to bargain in good faith with recognized representatives of their employees. Unions can go before Labor Relations Boards for certification as representatives.

What the future of the legislation is to be is highly problematical.

AS SARAWAK BECOMES CROW N COLONY OF GREAT BRITAIN

Malcolm MacDonald, Governor-General of Malaya, is shown cutting the cake at a big party given in Kuching, Sarawak, to celebrate the erstwhile realm of the White Rajah's becoming a Crown Colony of Great Britain. Sarawak had been ruled by "white rajahs" of the English Brooke family since 1842, when an English seaman, James Brooke, aided Rajah Muda Hasim and was given part of the latter's domain as a gift. Sarawak was occupied by the Japanese during the war. The last white rajah was Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, direct descendant of James.

Alcoholics Club Means New Life to the Drink Addict

By JACK RUTLEDGE

Dallas (AP)—Two hundred veterans of the struggle against alcoholism leaned forward tensely. The auditorium was quiet as the weekly meeting of the Alcoholics Anonymous was called to order.

"Folks," said the speaker in a husky voice, "tonight we're celebrating two birthdays. Bill is two years old, and Mary is one."

The crowd broke into cheers. Bill and Mary stood up, beaming proudly. Bill hadn't taken a drink for two years, Mary for one.

"We'll hear from Judge Joe Hill, who handles drunks by the hundreds, later on," the speaker said. "But first we'll let Bill and Mary say a few words. Now, you don't have to give your last names unless you want to, he said.

The man spoke first. He was frank and unashamed. He gave his name and occupation. He told of the lives he'd wrecked, of the happiness he'd blasted, of the physical damage his drinking had caused.

"Preachers preached about me, my mother prayed, and my wife cried," he said. "I just couldn't stop drinking. I know now that it's a disease, just like diabetes. And Alholics Anonymous cured me.

"It's the most exclusive club in the world. Only reformed drunkards can join. It doesn't cost a cent to belong, but it costs a fortune to get in. I figure it cost me at least $50,000—money I've lost because of my drinking."

Then Mary spoke. She was a beauty parlor operator. She had lost most of her customers because, they just didn't like to have a drunken operator mauling over them. But now—

"I don't say I'm cured for keeps, I saw an alkie boast that he was on the wagon for life, that he'd never touch another drop. The next night he was drunk and in jail! I know that I'm just one drink away from being a drunkard. All I can say is that I'm sober tonight, that I have been for a year, and if I just stay sober a day at a time, and let each day take care of itself, I'll be okay."

"I used to think drunks were funny," Judge Hill said with a grin. "When I first sat on the bench, I handled a hundred or so drunks a day. After a while I began to learn things about drunkards—and alcoholics. There was the character who appeared time and time before me, and I finally lost patience and told him he just didn't have any will power.

"This fellow told me with a sort of pitying look that I didn't know what will power was. He said he had became so desperate for a drink that he got a pair of pliers and pulled the gold fillings from his teeth to trade for money, and drink.

"Judge, could you do that? You got that much will power?"

The judge went on say that of all the people he knew, he liked alcoholics best. They are the most honest men in the world, he said. While most people try to alibi for mistakes, an Alcoholic Anonymous member who has taken the pledge has, first of all, "got right" with himself and admitted he was an alcoholic and could not handle his liquor. Then, said the judge, they are the most sociable bunch in the world.

The A. A. program has 12 steps, but can be boiled down to five overall steps: Admission of alcoholism, personality analysis and catharsis, adjustment of personal relations, dependence upon some higher power, and working with other alcoholics. Just 11 years old, the organization has 27,000 members. And it's growing fast.

Need Beau Brummels For Dazzling Styles

Toronto (CP)—No man would deny that, the current shortage of white shirts is a headache in some respects, but he will probably admit that it provides him with an alibi. Because of it there is no legitimate reason why he should not indulge in shirts of dazzling colors.

The 1945 businessman now can kick over the conservative clothing traces—a hangover of Queen Victoria's day—and respond to man's age-old instinct to flaunt a flock of bright-hued colors. In fact, fashion decrees that he should.

"The instinct to splurge on highly colored finery was always dominant in the male right up to the days of Queen Victoria," Prof. C. M. Hart, University of Toronto sociologist says, "then during her reign people toned things down and tried to look respectable."

It's only now in 1946 that we're recovering from this submergence of natural instinct. "The way color is coming back into men's fashions, says Prof. Hart, "is an indication of the slow emergence of the western world from the shadow of Victorianism."

Fashion experts now are looking forward to a clothing renaissance possibly to a return of the regency period when men "strutted around like peacocks." And with this in mind manufacturers currently are producing men's trousers in soft shades of peach and blue. All that is needed now is a 20th century Beau Brummel to make the fashion click.

General Peace Conference

When the grimmest war in history was being waged in the years 1939-1945 humanity longed for the day afar off when the World Peace Conference would gather. It was a long and hard road the nations fought to the cessation of war and then time was to elapse to prepare for the momentous gathering opening in Paris. At last the general conference is meeting and in a city where not so long ago the tyrannous and aggressive Hun was in occupation. No more fitting place for that reason could be chosen for Paris represents the forces of the United Nations that smashed the Axis.

Humanity's hopes and prayers will be with the men who there meet to settle problems of the profoundest possible import for the human race. Twice Germany tore up peace and tried to enslave the world. Twice she has been beaten, her second defeat being of a kind which was devastating. After one war she came back to threaten mankind: now the world means that she shall never again launch war, never be allowed to have power to threaten peace and security of mankind.

This first general conference is not scheduled to take up the future of Germany and Japan, or atomic energy, but five treaties are to be discussed and other matters may be brought up.

The earnestness of the nations is seen in the vast delegations which will be present, Russia having possibly three hundred on the mission, United States two hundred.

The nations, great and small, have all the greatest stake in the settlement—their future and that of the world.

Another Wonder

The world today is one of wonders. Though people are so accustomed to motor cars that they may not call them wonders, yet such they are. Now to this modern vehicle is to be joined one of the great inventions of history, the telephone, which has worked its way into every home and into every phase of civilized life. It is changing the ways of living for the telephone can bridge gaps that mortal man himself could not bridge.

These two great inventions together will likely lead to further changes in the way of life of the people. Space matters nothing to the telephone and time does not trouble it, for it is swifter than an eagle's wings.

Now people enjoy the exhilaration of motoring with the thrill of speed and the pleasure of the eye in the passing panorama of nature speeding by. The hook-up will add an additional task and responsibility to the motorist, already occupied with watching the road and other cars, and watching the dashboard.

But the driver will become accustomed. Man is very keen for his agile mind has taken on in this age great new tasks and many of them at once. Besides he is so used to the telephone that he can take on this new responsibility. Man does things today which his grandparents could not have thought possible. So he will rise to the new responsibility. He will of course have the need of care and caution at all times before him.

At this season of the year when so many are distant from their hometowns on holidays a phone in a car would be an asset.

More Workers for British Industry

For the first time in seven years the number of workers employed in British civilian manufacture is up to the pre-war level. By the end of May 5,789,000 men and women were working in industries manufacturing for the home and export markets. This figure, a 30,000 increase on the preceding month, shows up well against the 5,174,000 recorded in June 1939. Still more encouraging are the figures of those employed in the manufacture for export. Here the labor force is now 1,266,000 strong —a 28% increase on the mid-1939 total of 90,000.

In all, industrial workers (including those employed in the basic industries, building and civil engineering, distributive trades, etc.) total close on 16,000,000. This is still 700,000 short of the last prewar figure, but the gap can be expected to be made good with continued demobilization. In the twelve months since V-E Day nearly six million men and women have left the forces and ceased to work in war factories. The vast majority have already been reabsorbed into peacetime industry, but at the end of May, 800,000 ex-forces personnel were still enjoying demobilization leave and had yet to return to civilian employment.

Labor being the key factor of the British productive drive, it is noteworthy that within the last twelve months civilian industry has gained 3,630,000 workers.

This increase in manpower has had an immediate effect on production — the weekly rate of yarn output during May was higher than in any month for over two years. The cloth output too was the highest for a long period.

The manpower shortage in the cotton industry is one after-effect of the war. When the industry was concentrated to minimum production, large numbers of operatives transferred to aircraft and other branches of war work. Today many of these people are unwilling to return to the mills, partly because wages are lower than in many other industries, partly because they prefer working in the more modern conditions of the aircraft factories, etc.

What is remarkable about any reluctance to return to the pre-war job is not that it exists — but that it has made itself felt on so small a scale. During the war years a million men and women in Britain changed their occupation, either by entering the forces and arms factories or taking up other forms of war work. A high percentage were uprooted from the old life. Since then these people have had new forms of work and new experiences which might well be expected to influence them against a return to normal working conditions. In addition, there are the hundreds of thousands of young people who entered the forces straight from school or college, thus missing a more or less routine entry into factory or workshop.

These factors have, nevertheless, failed to hinder the smoothness and rapidity of the switchover from war to peace employment. Today, only two and a half percent. of the entire working population of Great Britain is registered as unemployed. (This percentage, amounting to three hundred and seventy-six thousand, excludes, of course, the eight hundred thousand ex-service personnel still on demobilization leave.)

Eisenhower's Greatest Service

It seems to us that Gen. Eisenhower's greatest accomplishment was in welding the forces of two principal Allies and several others into an army that operated as a single team. Rarely has such an alliance of major powers accomplished its objective so smoothly.

And rarely has any commander won so complete a victory — the destruction of the entire military strength of a major power.

That makes most of the debating seem unnecessary.

—Chicago Daily News.

So Much for So Long for So Little

"Never," said Phrasemaker Churchill in the dark days when Britain and the R.A.F. fought its battle alone, "was so much owed by so many to so few."

Recently Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton triumphantly announced that Britain's own 2½ per cent, 21-year domestic loan of £415 million had been oversubscribed.

"Never before," said he, "have His Majesty's Government borrowed so much for so little for so long."

JUST FOLKS

THE CHILDREN

In a silent house I've dwelt
Much too long;
All the loneliness I've felt,
Missing song;
Missing every merry shout
Of the children round about,
Missing chatter sweet to own,
Sitting down to tea alone.

I have stared at empty chairs
Where I've sat.
All alone I've climbed the stairs,
Hating that.
Now I've learned no tone's so sweet
As the sound of children's feet,
And the house is dull without
Little ones to race about.

Do the children bother you
With their noise?
Do you think that much they do
Peace destroys?
Oh, be glad your house is filled
With a clamor never stilled,
For it's heartache when you own
Dismal silence, all alone!

Bevin's View On Austrian Situation

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
(A.P. Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain is one of Europe's most outspoken statesmen, as witness his blunt assertion during debate in the House of Commons that the Austrian situation "is very delicate at the present moment" and that he didn't know "whether eastern Austria may even be cut off."

This statement of course is interpreted as referring to the possibility that eastern Austria — which is occupied by Russia and contains the major portion of the country's industrial capacity — may be severed and become a unit in the permanent Soviet zone of influence. Startling as that may sound coming from a foreign minister in debate, it is no surprise to observers who long have noted that control of all Austria appeared to be one of Moscow's objectives.

Austrian independence is a matter of great concern to the western Allies in the rehabilitation of Europe, and the situation between Russia and the western powers has grown increasingly difficult.

One of the most striking indications of Russia's intentions came three weeks ago when, without consulting the other Allies, she announced that she had taken over ownership of most of Austria's industries and other property in the Soviet zone as German reparations.

Naturally Moscow can't draw all of Austria within the Soviet zone of influence so long as Britain, the United States and France continue to occupy their zones. There is small doubt, however, that withdrawal by the western Allies would see Russia move in. The western Allies are anxious to see an Austrian treaty signed so that all the powers can withdraw their troops.

When I was in Austria in March, Dr. Karl Renner, the president, gave me his view of this imbroglio. This was just at the time Winston Churchill made his sensational attack on Russia in his Missouri speech, and Dr. Renner referred to it:

"We have one main sorrow — just now aroused by the dispute between Churchill and Stalin. The unity of the world is our lifeblood and the end of unity would be the end of Austria."

New Zealand Seeks Nurses For Asylums

Wellington, N.Z., July 29 (CP) —New Zealand has begun its post war immigration program by advertising in Britain for 200 women for the mental hospital service and for 1,000 single men and women for essential industries.

Announcing this Prime Minister Peter Fraser said the lamentable shortage of nurses in mental hospitals and the acute lack of workers in so many New Zealand industries has made it necessary to seek immigrants.

The housing shortage made it unwise to arrange for the migration of families at present, but arrangements would have to begin for a progressively expanding scheme of immigration from Britain and from other United Nations countries within the next few years, when the housing scarcity would be overcome.

A fuller and more comprehensive scheme is expected to be announced after the recommendations of the parliamentary committee on population, which heard lengthy evidence recently, are presented to parliament in the present session.

Government policy has been to delay immigration until all servicemen have been rehabilitated. The Federation of Labor has also removed a source of hesitation by declaring at its annual conference that, subject to certain safeguards, the trade union movement is not opposed to immigration.

Aluminum Industry Advances in India

New Delhi, July 29 (CP) — Spectacular developments have taken place in India's aluminum industry, which made a substantial contribution to the Allied war effort. India now ranks among the world's leading producers of aluminum, although this metal was first produced in that country in 1943. Earlier, Indian manufacturers depended entirely on imports.

Extension to the existing factory in Travancore is taking place and soon an output of 5,000 tons of aluminum per month is expected. Another factory in Bihar, now nearing completion, will have an ultimate capacity of 40,000 tons a year.

During the war Indian aluminum factories produced sheet and components for the manufacture of aircraft parts, radios and field equipment, range finders, binoculars and field hospital equipment. Many thousand long-range fuel tanks were manufactured for use by fighter aircraft in the Burma campaign.

Immediate post-war developments include the manufacture of aluminum cable, paint and foil. A number of Indian technicians now are undergoing training in various plants in Canada.

Nonagenarian Tutor Strong on Classics

Fairford, England, July 29 — (CP) — Rev. Hubert Bancroft Allen, 90, "Tutor to the House of Lords," now lives alone with his collie dog in a Cotswold cottage in Gloucestershire surrounded by books in Greek and Latin.

One of few survivors of days when clerics were also teachers, he has taugh young aristocrats 70 years. With blindness overtaking him, however, he was forced recently to send away his last pupil.

Every week he gets letters with baronial crests. One of his former pupils is a woman—Lady Cynthia Asquith — whom he taught Greek.

Of the aristocracy Mr. Allen said: "They are the most decent people on earth. The really snobbish people are the working class."

Of the old school tie: "The English public school teaches boys to behave and leaves their minds ready to receive."

Of the Labor government: "I wish I could have taught some of them the classics. It might have been a more gentlemanly world today."

Britons' Drink Bill Outruns Fuel, Light

Blackpool, England, July 29 — (CP) — Britons spend annually on drink alone 12 times the total of their yearly fuel and light bills, a conference of electrical engineers here was told.

R. S. Thwaites, manager of Manchester's Electricity department, also said that tobacco cost the average British family ten times their fuel and light bills. National expenditure in Great Britain last year on fuel and light was £265,000,000 ($1,192,500,000) whereas £548,000,000 was paid out for tobacco and £685,000,000 for drink.

"You might find these figures useful when your customers complain their electricity bills are too high and say they can't afford them," he concluded.

HISTAMINE EVEN SOUNDS BAD

We are still at a loss to understand why poor Tom suffers the annual bout of hay fever while Dick and Harry have no allergic sensitivity at all — whether to pollen, goose feathers, horse dander, cat hair, shellfish, orris root, egg white or any other substance to which a child may be allergic.

As I explain in the pamphlet on Hay Fever (mailed on written request if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope) I believe (and remember, I'm no authority) but from a great many reports I have received from readers I believe allergic sensitivity in most instances is due to calcium deficiency — and if you want to know more about this, can you spare a dime—a clean dime, that is—and a stamped self addressed envelope for the pamphlet "The Calcium Shortage"?

Recent studies of the allergy mystery have led some investigators to infer that histamine is usually if not always implicated when allergy manifests itself in the form of asthma, eczema or hives or other acute skin reaction, hay fever, gastro-intestinal upsets etc.

Histamine, they tell me, is the amino acid, histidine with a molecule of carbon dioxide removed. Of course you and I can only leave our mouths open and say "Huh?" to that, but we do know that histidine is one of the amino acids our food must provide to maintain good nutrition.

There is a certain amount of histamine present in most of the body tissues and cells normally and the healthy body oxidizes or detoxifies it as fast as it is produced, before it can cause any poisonous symptoms. It is only when, for some reason, the normal detoxification process fails, that histamine intoxication occurs. The characteristic action of histamine which is not so destroyed includes:

(1) Flushing of the face
(2) Stimulation of salivary glands
(3) Stimulation of gastric secretion, especially of hydrochloric acid in the stomach.
(4) Secation of tears
(5) Excessive secretion of bronchial mucus
(6) Tendency to spasmodic contraction of muscle coat of bronchial tubes.
(7) Acceleration of peristalsis (muscle coat of stomach and intestine).

Theophylline (derived from tear, also made synthetically) in the remedy I suggest in the Hay Fever pamphlet, counteracts some of these effects of histamine. Ascorbic acid (vitamin C) if taken in sufficient doses, seems to neutralize the excess of histamine and so bring relief in severe hay fever and asthma.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Oxalic Acid in Foods

Please tell me what foods contain oxalic acid. I understand that foods containing oxalic acid are harmful to a person suffering with arthritis. (B.E.H.)

Answer—If I had arthritis or rheumatiz I'd never care whether the food contained little or much oxalic acid—scores of the best foods contain more or less oxalic acid. That is a quaint old notion which should not cramp your eating style at all.

Attack My Clavicle

When I was a reported it was the current fashion to say a person suffered a "heart attack" — until one copy desk man cracked down on us and insisted on heart "disease" — although the doctor or hospital may have called it a heart attack. (R.H.K.)

Answer—The copy desk man was right. There is of course no such thing as an "attack" of illness or disease. The extreme low in such language is "gas attack" an explanation of any acute or severe illness.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Was Edith Cavell shot as a spy?

Edith Louisa Cavell (1865-1915), the English nurse who was shot by the Germans during the First World War, was not charged with being a spy or receiving any reward for her acts.

In 1914 the Berkendael Medical Institute at Brussels where she was nursing was converted into a Red Cross hospital for the care of the wounded and Miss Cavell took care of Belgian, French, British and German wounded soldiers without discrimination.

Meanwhile, however, she participated in the operation of an "underground railroad" through which hundreds of Allied soldiers, after recovery from their wounds, were enabled to escape into Holland and ultimately rejoin their armies at the front, and through which many Belgians of military age were helped to reach the Belgian army in the field. Many of the Belgians were concealed in Prince Reginald de Croy's chateau near Mons and secretly conveyed to the houses of Miss Cavell and others in Brussels, where they were supplied with necessary funds and guided to the Dutch border under the direction of an architect named Philippe Baucq.

Miss Cavell's activities in behalf of the Allies were betrayed to the Germans by a Belgian, who a year later was found shot to death in a Brussels street. On August 5, 1915, Miss Cavell along with many others arrested on charges of aiding the enemy and placed in solitary confinement in the military prison at St. Gilles. The arrest was veiled in such secrecy that knowledge of it did not reach the public for some time. A Belgian lawyer named Said Kirschen was permitted to defend but not to confer with the English nurse at the court-martial, which took place October 7 and 8.

At the trial Miss Cavell frankly admitted that she had helped some 200 English, French and Belgian soldiers to reach the Dutch frontier and that she had aided Belgians of military age to join the army. Under the German military code the penalty for the latter offense was death.

Diplomatic representatives of the United States and other neutral countries interceded for her in vain. She, Baucq and three others were sentenced to face a firing squad at two o'clock in the morning of October 12. The three unnamed persons were reprieved. The only concessions the Germans would grant to the neutral diplomats was permission for the Rev. H. S. T. Gahan, chaplain of Christ Church in Brussels, to visit her and administer the last sacrament.

Miss Cavell was buried near the scene of her execution. On May 15, 1919, her body was removed to England and after memorial services in Westminster Abbey was reinterred in the Cathedral at Norwich. An impressive monument by Sir George Frampton was erected to her memory in London a year later. It bears her words: "Patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness for any one." Generally thought of as much younger, Edith Cavell was nearly 50 when she died.

With Canada's Naturalists:

Frogs May Live to Ripe Old Age of 35 if They Are Lucky

By The Canadian Press

Toronto, July 27 (CP)—A 30-year-old frog is no rarity. Toads are also noted for their longevity. There is an authentic record of a toad who lived 35 years.

Bullfrog tadpoles require two years at least before they are full-grown at which time they often reach a length of eight inches. Other species develop much more quickly with the tadpoles losing their tails and getting their legs in about two months. However, these types usually keep on growing—sometimes for three or four years.

Vegetable gardeners usually are happy whenever they see a toad because they have been known to eat 50 army worms at a single meal. For dessert, toads like to try a cutworm or two, all of which makes them an asset to any garden.

If you see a toad or frog sitting in a puddle don't disturb it. Naturalists tell us when amphibians want to drink they do not swallow water but prefer to let it soak through their skins. Puddle-sitting is the way they usually quench their thirst.

The amphibian is not stupid. Scientists claim their intelligence is much higher than is generally supposed and one piece of evidence in support of this tells the story of the toad who was stung by a bee it had caught. The toad steadfastly ignored all other bees—and there were plenty around—for a two-week period.

Nature has equipped bullfrogs with an effective defence against snakes. Whenever a hungry snake sidles up the bullfrog will take a great gulp of air and puff himself up. The idea behind this is that the snake thinking the frog too big a mouthful, will turn and go away quietly.

Wood frogs also have a practical defence. While leaping away from an enemy, this type of frog turns around in mid-air so it will land facing the foe.

And the number of their enemies need never worry frogs and toads for they are never in danger of extermination. Most prolific bullfrog lay as many as 20,000 eggs at one time.

When Tutankhamen ruled Egypt, around 1,300 B.C., wild roses grew in profusion upon the banks of the Nile. And in 1922 when the ruler's tomb was unearthed archeologists found among the treasures a beautifully-jewelled, gold box containing the remains of a mass of roses. Even after 3,000 years, there was still a faint perfume.

Observations made in ungrazed woodland test-plots in Canada and the United States, prove that in wooded areas from which cattle have been excluded, and which in consequence, have a dense undergrowth the bird population is more than double that of the grazed areas. It is in the protective brush that wood-warblers, ovenbirds, ruffed grouse, and many other species of beneficial birds, thrive. In one test it was found that 19 species of birds were plentiful in the ungrazed woods; only six in the grazed. And the ratio was even more pronounced in such forest 'helpers' as jumping mice, shews, wood-frogs, and salamanders.

Pilot Says Search Should Have Lasted a Month

Ottawa, July 27 (CP)— Survivos of 26 days in the wilds of Ontario, Flt. Lt. William McKenzie, 25, of Winnipeg, said yesterday he felt the search for him "should have lasted a month."

(R.C.A.F. officials said Thursday the search had been interrupted but not abandoned when McKenzie showed up at Flack Lake, Ont., just three miles from where his jet-propelled plane crashed into Helenbar Lake June 29.)

Talking to reporters from a hospital bed at Rockcliffe Air Station, McKenzie said "if a man is not killed when he comes down he can last at least a month." He estimated that he could have lasted another two weeks without food.

A reporter asked him "didn't you try to spare yourself?"

McKenzie said, "no. I didn't want to live that long. I didn't want to live until I was barely able to crawl. If I wasn't going to get out I wanted to get it over quickly. Therefore I made no particular effort to conserve my strength."

Beside McKenzie sat his wife, destined to be a mother in the fall. She and his mother arrived here early this morning.

The pilot said the reason he stayed at the scene of the crash was his finding of the embers of a campfire and a copy of a Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., newspaper.

"I figured that was probably a trail and that somebody would come along there again."

Armed White Men Ambush and Slay Four Negroes

Monroe, Ga., July 27 — (AP)— Sheriff E. S. Gordon said today a band of armed white men ambushed and shot to death four Negroes, two men and two women, in northeast Georgia late yesterday.

The sheriff said the four — Roger Malcolm and George Butler and their wives — were taken from Loy Harrison, a farmer, and slain with shotguns and pistols.

Harrison was reported to have testified at a coroner's jury hearing Thursday night but details of his statement were not immediately available.

Sheriff Gordon said Malcolm had been released from Walton county jail under $600 bond only a few hours previously on charges of stabbing his former employer, Barney Hester, July 14. Hester is under treatment in hospital here.

Sheriff Gordon said Harrison had brought Butler's and Malcolm's wives with him to Monroe to furnish bond for Malcolm, and was en route to his home when the mob waylaid his automobile.

The stabbing of Hester occurred, the sheriff said, when the farmer remonstrated with Malcolm for abusing his wife.

Eire's Decision To Join U.N. Seen At Good Omen

By DAVID FRIEDMAN

London, July 27 — (Reuters)— The net result of the decision of the Eire parliament to join the United Nations is that Eire has decided to abandon her policy of neutrality.

Thus Prime Minister De Valera's government is the first of the wartime neutrals to declare its willingness to accept the responsibilities implicit in membership in the United Nations—responsibilities which specifically rule out any reservations on neutrality in a war against an aggressor power.

Eire's decision is regarded by many as an omen of closer co-operation with the British Commonwealth. These observers have noted a trend in this direction also in recent trade discussions between Britain and Eire and the British purchase, of Irish foodstuffs.

Two Arrested After Discovery Of Cigarettes in Car

Toronto, July 27 (CP)—Two men are under arrest and a warrant has been issued for a third following discovery of 52,000 cigarets in an automobile at Fort Erie Thursday night. Police said they believed they had uncovered a large-scale smuggling of United States cigarets into Canada.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police said the cigarets were found in the lining of a car from which one man fled as a constable approached it. Edward Erash, described by police as the driver of the car, was charged with smuggling.

Forty cartons of cigarets were found in a Toronto house later police said. Harold Hamblin of Toronto was charged with selling smuggled goods and with being in possession of smuggled goods.

Police said the United States cigarets, bought for $1.25 a carton, can be sold in Canada for $2.50.

Indictments Charge Heirens With Degnan Murder

Chicago, July 27 — (AP) — Indictments were returned yesterday charging William Heirens with murder in the kidnap-slaying of Suzanne Degnan and the "lipstick killing" of Frances Brown, but his lawyers indicated the youth's defence might be based on a plea of insanity.

The two indictments contained a total of nine counts, charging the 17-year-old University student with strangling and dismembering Suzanne last Jan. 7, and with shooting and stabbing Frances Brown in her apartment Dec. 10, 1945.

Miss Brown's nude body was draped over her bathtub, and a message reading "For heaven's sake catch me before I kill more. I cannot control myself," was left in lipstick on the wall.

Today one of Heirens' lawyers said the youth would undergo a sanity test after he is arraigned on the two charges next week.

Millions With Negro Blood Pass as Whites in the U. S.

Between five and eight million people of the United States who have Negro blood are known as whites, and from 15,000 to 30,000 Negroes "pass over" to the white side each year, so that there is some basis for the theory that the American Negro—like the Negroes of England—will be ultimately absorbed by the whites.

This is revealed by Herbert Asbury, associate editor of Collier's, on the basis of studies of census figures and studies by laboratory scientists, in the current issue of the national weekly. The article also declares that, contrary to common belief, a man or woman of little Negro blood cannot have a child of obvious Negro blood.

Tale Has Flaw

Eminent American geneticists and anthropologists "agree that the tale of the white couple and the black baby has a fatal flaw," the Collier's article declares. "It could not possibly happen. If such a child should appear, there are three explanations: (1) a miracle; (2) 'a fracture of the Seventh Commandment'; (3) both parties were really Negroes.

"Here is what, barring divine revocation of genetic laws, will result from unions of whites, negroes and mixed-bloods," the article continues:

"1. If one of the partners to such a union is pure white, it is impossible for the child to be darker than the darker of its parents. The chances are very great that it will be lighter.

"2. If both parents have Negro blood, whether they know it or not, there may be some accentuation of Negro characteristics in the child. But this is not likely, and in any case will be slight. If the parents have been able to pass for white, the child can probably do so too.

"3. If both parents are mulattoes, quadroons or octoroons — the child may be darker than either. But in all likelihood it will not be black. Dr. Ernest A. Hooton (professor of anthropology at Harvard University) has stated his opinion that 'Negroid features seem to be attenuated, rather than intensified, by successive generations of inbreeding of mixed types. . . White features seem to gain on Negroid features."

The article declares that Negroes emphasize that they do not "pass" because they consider "the white man a superior being, but because of the obvious social and economical advantages to be gain !. . .And contrary to general belief, Negroes who attempt to pass are seldom exposed by other Negroes."

Hundreds of prominent American men and women, including physicians, scientists and public administrators, are said to live as whites but to be actually part Negro.

"Supporters of the theory of ultimate absorption point out that from an anthropological point of view, and in the social sense as well," the article says, "the Negro has already been absorbed in Mexico, and that the process is well under way in Brazil and other countries. And it is a historical fact that during the 17th century large numbers of Negroes were absorbed by the white population of England, and that no trace of them remains."

By an ironic working of the Jim Crow laws, it is reported that "many white Negroes are compelled to pass in the South, at least temporarily." For "it is not at all uncommon for a light-skinned Negro to be ordered out of the Jim Crow section of a railroad coach, bus or trolley car, and compelled to sit with the whites."

London Letter

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 25 —(CP)— A 30-year plan for easing the tremendous traffic load which jams the narrow streets of the City, London's ancient business centre, has been drawn up by a committee of experts for submission to City authorities.

The City, says the report, is a "heart or lung into which, and out of which, are pumped each working day 500,000 citizens and perhaps 50,000 vehicles." It is additionally congested by hundreds of vehicles which drive across it en route to other parts of London.

The experts propose new west-east and north-south roads across the City, the widening of other existing streets, a new square to permit circulation of traffic at the crowded junction of Queen Victoria and Cannon streets, and a terraced riverside walk from Blackfriars to London Bridge.

The reconstruction plan falls into two stages: the first to take from eight to 10 years, the whole covering up to 30 years. By that time, says the report, the road system should be ready to carry twice the pre-war load.

Into the hodge-podge of quaint old rows and alleys, the names of which are centuries old, the traffic experts would drive. As part of the first stage of their program, a new north-south route, most of which would pass through war-damaged areas, and so would entail little demolition.

The report said the new square at Cannon Street might be used for a fine memorial building since "some site may be required in addition to the open space and viewpoints around St. Paul's to commemorate enemy destruction, national sacrifice and victory."

Suggestions were also advanced for the zoning of the city in three main sections for offices, warehouses and mixed uses, and for special buildings, with shops and other ancillary buildings included in each zone.

Traffic which has no business in the humming city should be diverted, the report said.

Those who have drawn up the plan hope it will open up dark old byways which have been unchanged since the city was rebuilt after the great fire of of 1666, and result in the building of new and gracious offices and warehouses.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 26. (CP)— Presence of a Russian personal servant in the British Embassy residence has prompted some critical comments among extreme anti-Soviet people here but Ambassador Lord Inverchapel remains unconcerned.

When Lord Inverchapel came here, after a term as ambassador to Moscow, he brought 30-year-old Evgeni Yost as valet and general body servant.

Yost, a fair-haired, slight man of medium height, served more than five years in the British Embassy in Moscow, in the same capacity. He is a "Volga German" —a descendant of German people who settled along the Volga generations ago.

A story recently appeared in a weekly publication to the effect that Yost's presence in the Embassy household had aroused official criticism here and that the ambassador had resisted "pressure" for his dismissal.

Lord Inverchapel has not commented publicly on the story but let it be known that he had experienced neither pressure nor official curiosity in connection with Yost.

According to Lord Inverchapel the young Russian is a good household employee and that is something hard to get in Washington these days—even in embassies.

A month ago Washington grocery clerks leaned against empty meat and butter show cases and wearily said "no" to customers. This week those same cases were bulging and so were the prices while customers, inured to shortages, warily shopped for the best bargains or decided to go without a little longer until the temporarily uncontrolled prices came down a bit. The shoe was on the other foot.

The United States Senate, like the Canadian House of Commons, has made a ruling of interest to women. Recently local newspapers commented on news that Speaker Fauteaux of the House of Commons had ended a long-standing tradition that women could not enter the galleries without wearing hats or the equivalent. This week the Senate discovered there was no rule against women clerks to Senators and committees going on the floor of the Chamber to talk to their chiefs. So, for the first time in 160 years a woman, Mrs. Frances Dustin, chief clerk to Senator Owen Brewster (Rep.-Me.), went on the floor to talk to her boss.

Wacky Questions Make Switchboard Buzzing Madhouse

Telephone Operators for Prices Board Bombarded With Sticklers Ranging From Rentals to Reptiles

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 27 (CP) — Ask her what the ceiling is on an ice cream cone and she will tell you where to find the answer.

She may even venture a guess on the price of reptiles or where Mrs. McGillicuddy should go to have her landlord evicted.

This grownup "Quiz Kid" is Mrs. Molly Coleman, head of the telephone exchange at the Toronto office of the Prices Board. Her job may be one of the wackiest in Canada but throughout the war years and right into the present it has also been one of the busiest.

Just now the board is quiet—only 8,000 calls a day. "But this can't last," said Mrs. Coleman. "Wait until the new ration books come out in September then you'll see that total shoot up 'way past the 12,000 mark."

At any minute a chance news item may turn the switchboard into a buzzing madhouse. Mrs. Coleman said when the Office of Prices Administration folded in the United States hundreds of worried housewives and small dealers phoned to beg the Prices Board to keep operating.

Toronto has one of the two largest Prices Board exchanges in Canada—the other is in Montreal.

There are nine girls, including Mrs. Coleman, daily on duty. The switchboard has 50 lines to central and 250 inside lines which tie up with each of the 34 board administrations.

No Dull Moments.

When the green lights flicker and an operator plugs in she never knows what she'll hear—

There was the woman with the washing machine for sale.

"But is it a new or used machine?" asked the operator.

"Why new of course," said the woman. "I've only had it three years."

And there really was a man who phoned for the reptile department. It seems he had a crocodile for sale but didn't know the ceiling price.

Then there are the personal calls.

"One came today for Mr. Smith, 'the one who wears glasses'," sighed Mrs. Coleman. "There are only 13 Smiths working for the Toronto Prices Board—and all of them wear glasses!"

A woman requested the rentals section, said her landlord shared the same house and she wanted to get rid of him.

Mrs. Coleman agrees there's a gold-mine waiting for anyone interested in using the Price Board calls as a basis for the Canadian humor book of the year.

Woman is Builder In Northern Wilds

Regina, July 29 (CP) — To those who say the pioneering woman has disappeared, the answer is 22-year-old Beatrice Stene who is helping her husband build a trading post on an island in Wollaston Lake 200 miles northwest of Flin Flon, Man., the nearest railroad.

The couple are living in a caboose, which still rests on the sleigh on which it was dragged over the snow and ice from Flin Flon last winter. Now the only means of communication with the "outside" is by air.

While 25-year-old Casper Stene hews logs from the surrounding woods for the combined general store and home he is building, Mrs. Stene prepares his meals and makes arrangements for the arrival for their three-year-old son who is expected there soon by air.

Mrs. Stene, formerly a clerk at Shellbrook, Sask., flew to the remote island this spring to join her husband who is to establish a provincial government trading post there.

The post will be a centre for fishermen who will begin work there soon. Indians too are expected to move into the area to take part in the commercial fishing under the government plan.

There are no ration problems at Wollaston Lake, but Mrs. Stene is anxiously awaiting another shipment of powdered milk which will be an important item with the arrival of her son. It is first on the list of goods to be flown in from Flin Flon.

She finds the life lonely and says the only recreation she has had recently is shooting at tin cans with a .22 rifle. When she arrived the lake was still covered with ice and she was introduced to the pleasures of riding behind a team of husky sled dogs.

The books she brought in were read in a couple of weeks and "ruined" her eyes, she said. It will be many months before she has a chance to see an oculist.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Here's a Mother Who's Losing a Precious Opportunity

Many letters I receive from young girls asking for advice should have their answers directed to the mothers of these girls instead of the girls themselves. For in numerous cases, the problem that has arisen, and which has caused the girl to write to me, seems in large part directly due to negligence or a lack of understanding on the part of the mother.

Of course the mother is not always to blame. Just as often it's the girl who is at fault, and who fails to understand her mother, or the reasons why her mother acts as she does. But in such cases, one must always remember that it is pretty hard for a teen-ager who lacks maturity and experience to comprehend the whys and wherefores which make the world go round.

Some day she'll understand. Probably when she has daughters of her own who can't understand why their mother acts as she does! And so the world goes round and round.

But it's the mothers who won't take their daughters' interests and activities seriously with whom I'm concerned at the moment. The ones who think just because a girl is young, her ideas aren't important; who are so indifferent that they won't take the time and trouble to listen to what their children have to say.

Such mothers are losing a precious opportunity to win their children's confidence, respect and friendship, and if they lose it while their children are young, they're not likely to get another chance when the young people are older. By that time, the girls and boys will have acquired a firm conviction that their mothers aren't interested in anything they do or say, and they can scarcely be blamed if they act accordingly. A mother can hardly ignore her children in their early years and then expect she's suddenly going to be able to influence them. If she would not pay any attention to what they had to say when they were young, why should they pay any attention to what she has to say when they're older? Turn about is fair play, you know.

These are the things I would like to say to the mother of the girl writing this letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am a girl of 15, and live with my father, mother, sister and my mother's sister.

"My trouble is that whenever I want to speak to either my mother or aunt, they never pay any attention to me, and tell me to stop bothering them. Even when I'm in the middle of a conversation, they start talking between themselves.

"My father is very understanding and we get along fine. But I can't seem to understand why my mother and aunt never want to listen to me. Sometimes something important turns up about something I had tried to tell them about, and then they say: 'You never told me about that'. But I always do, and they just don't bother to listen.

"I hope you can solve this problem for me.

"A Sad Daughter"

It's fine that your father is so understanding, and I am sure he is a great help and comfort to you.

As far as the others are concerned, have you tried asking them very courteously for a few minutes of time when they can give you their full attention? Ask them to set the time themselves, when they're not too busy to listen, because you have something special you want to tell them. That should at least fasten in their minds the fact that you have tried to tell them something, if it accomplishes nothing else. And surely they'd have common politeness enough to give you a little of their time if you make a special point of asking for it.

Missionaries Back from China

Millar, Guelph, and Miss Evelyn Bicker, North Bay.

Wrinkled Brow to be Avoided

Start by tapping heavy cream into the face.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WRINKLES are a good-looks grief that a woman just doesn't foresee. They come to most women, in the course of time. When the fortieth milestone has been passed, conditions are perfect for the arrival of accordion pleats in the sacred complexion.

Tissues are likely to soften. The cutaneous coating is then too large, so falls into folds. Wrinkles should be fought before one gets them.

Facial Lines Avoided

Facial lines, aside from those caused by ill health, can be avoided. There's many a woman of sixty who has a smooth youthful skin. She has given thoughts to the art of living, avoiding emotional sprees, looking after nutrition, getting fresh air and exercise. She started early with the nightly skin tapping with a heavy cream.

Should it happen that you see signs of squint lines and frown furrows, take the matter in hand. Stop using hot water when washing your face; have the water just warm enough to fluff up a suds.

Pin your faith on cold water rinses and ice rubs. These treatments hustle up the blood streams that may have become lazy. The blood brings nourishment to the tissues. Properly nourished, they will remain firm and smooth.

Cold Water Rinse

After washing the face at bed time, rinsing with cold water, have a session with your massage cream, stroking it on, tapping and slapping the flesh.

If you continue to frown, those furrows will become stationary; you might as well not bother trying to erase them. These little irrigation ditches aren't just skin furrows. Because of the habit of pulling the eyebrows together the underlying fibres have become dented.

Once established, the only remedy will be found in plastic surgery which is expensive, almost impossible to have these days when many surgeons are taking care of invalided soldiers.

Keep cheerful. Don't do facial contortions. Give yourself cream-and-refrigerating treatments.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Elusive perfumes are romantic

When a woman fares forth, bent on buying perfume, she may come home with the belief that her nose is not exactly reliable. At least, it seems to have no staying qualities. After a sniff at the first offering at the counter it may register pleasure and esxcitement. After inhaling half a dozen samples, the nose appears incapable of judgment. Maybe it just feels all worn out, or is in a state of confusion. If yours cannot make a decision, do your perfume shopping another day. You must find the right scent, the one that fills your soul with joy and rapture. If a perfume does less than that, the chances are you will not be able to live with it.

When you do make a choice, purchase a small vial, so you can try it out. Perfumes are luxurious these days. These aristocratic smells make a dent in the checkbook. But they do something for one; they create a feeling of elegance. They are the final touch when prettying up for the big date.

Make sure that you match the scents of bath and cosmetic accessories

If you find a blend that you love and adore, stick to it. Adopt it for your very own. Your wardrobe will become impregnated with it. That won't happen if you mix floretted aromas.

Some scents are sweet and subtle, like demure girls. Some are vulgar and offensive, like loud-talking women. One must be careful when making a selection.

For the sake of economy and conservation, one should have an atomizer. Spray the chest soon after the bath. The warmth of the flesh will cause the alcoholic content to evaporate. Only the essential oils will remain.

Many perfumes come with a tiny glass rod attached to the stopper. Touch the rod behind your ears. If you are a reckless spendthrift, you might like to put a few drops of perfume on the hem of your evening frock. When you dance, you'll be sending out little waves of fragrance.

Should it happen that the beauty budget won't stand for liquid scents, fall back on sachets. Few women realize what fine products there are along these lines. They are marvelously lasting. Tuck them in handkerchief, hat and glove boxes. Place one in your coat pocket.

Eau de cologne, less expensive than perfume, is the perfect summer indulgence. It has a sweet freshness to it. One doesn't have to stint on its use.

When buying bath tonics, talcums and other bath accessories, it is a grand idea to see that all of them carry the same odor. They work together like trained soldiers.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

When You Make an Introduction, "Don't Give Orders"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other day I overheard one woman say to another, "The kind of introduction I dislike intensely is the one that 'gives orders'. Would you, from this one sentence I overheard, be able to tell me what she meant?

E. E. S.

I think I know what she meant. . . and I think she was referring to the kind of introduction I, too, "dislike intensely". It is the form of introduction that is a command to the person being introduced. For example, "meet. . ."; "meet my friend", or "meet my wife" (or 'husband')"; or "shake hands with ——"; "let me make you acquainted with ——"; "make the acquaintance of ——"; "let me introduce"; "let me present".

When Food is Dropped on Floor of Cafeteria

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please settled an argument by answering this question: If one drops some food on the floor of a cafeteria, should he or she try to remove it from the floor, or should it be entirely disregarded?

Kate and Jim

If you drop food on the floor of a cafeteria, you should certainly feel a responsibility about having it removed so that no one will step on it, or, most unfortunately, slip on it. If the food-item is something that can be easily handled, you yourself can pick it up. Or if the food dropped is of a kind not easily handled, you should call the attention of the person in charge of the dining room to the situation. He will not only relieve you of further responsibility about it, but will (or should, if he is efficient) appreciate your co-operation.

Hot Biscuits, May be Buttered Immediately

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other evening my husband and I were dining at the home of a couple whom we just recently met. The wife has a reputation of being an excellent cook, likes to talk about food, and apparently likes to have guests to dine. Toward the beginning of the dinner she said, as she passed the delicious-looking and quite small biscuits, "I hope you like my biscuits. . . .please take two, and butter them while they are hot." Was this a proper thing for her to do, and was it proper for us to follow her suggestion?

Barbara

Yes, this was a proper thing for her to do . . . and yes, it was indeed right for you to follow her suggestion. When we butter bread, we are taught to butter only the amount we are going to eat immediately . . but this rule doesn't necessarily hold true of hot biscuits. They may be broken in two and buttered at once. . . and if you did this, as your hostess requested, she undoubtedly felt that you were enthusiastic about this "specialty" of hers!

A Man and His Hat

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a man is accompanied by a girl and they enter a hotel where they have to pass through the lobby to go to the dining room, shouldn't the man remove his hat? I say he should take off his hat as soon as he enters the hotel, but my brother insists he doesn't need to take off his hat until he arrives at the coatroom outside the dining room door where he is to check it. Which of us is right?

Maidie

You are. . .if a man is accompanied by a girl, he should remove his hat as soon as he enters a hotel.

Fashion Flashes

The best tonic for a jaded midsummer wardrobe is a new hat. A fine choice might well be a pert derby of black felt, worn way back on the head. Against a broad black velvet crown band that ties in back is a huge pompom of clipped pink ostrich.

A change from the usual white formal for the Junior Miss is the dance dress in black. A model that manages to be smooth, yet girlish, is in black marquisette over nude satin. Black lace outlines the bust and extends from the outer edge of the shoulders in a deep V to the waistline in back. Extremely full skirt has gathers under the padding.

No end to the little coats and toppers that serve so many uses in summer—from teaming up with a bra-and-slacks outfit to escorting informal evening clothes. A neat little number in white woollen is double-breasted, with wide revers and big buttoned-up patch pockets. Side hem slashes.

For real service, plus enduring beauty, there's nothing to equal a well-cut suit of good silk. A beauty, cut on softly tailored lines, is of brocaded black satin, the jacket fastened with rhinestone—bordered jet buttons. Worn with an all-over shirred white silk chiffon blouse.

Coming back to popularity is the fine coat of colorful tweed. Beige and rose checked tweed, with an over-plaid in cocoa brown, makes a handsome go—anywhere coat cut with full belted back huge patch pockets and a softly rolled collar that narrows into tuxedo fronts.

Look out for more-luxurious furs than ever next season, [illegible] all dressed up and bejeweled, such as a lovely jacket of argentine nutria, made with extremely full bracelet sleeves, and studded all over with golden paillettes.

BASEBALL RULES

INTERPRETED by BILL GRAY

STOLEN BASE

If a base-runner advances to another base without the aid of a base hit, an error or a put-out, the runner shall be credited with a stolen base.

There are three exceptions to the above rule: (1)—In the event of an attempted double or triple steal. If one of the base runners is thrown out, the remaining base-runners shall not be credited with a stolen base; (2)—If a base-runner is tagged out, over running or over sliding the base; (3)—If the fielder drops the catcher's relay; when the base-runner would have been out if the fielder held the ball. The fielder shall be given an error, but the runner will not receive credit for a stolen base.

New York, July 29. (AP)—Smart-money guys tell you the real reason for the drop of some six or seven per cent in betting at New York tracks isn't that the interest in racing is dying out. . . . But because bettors are giving more and more business to the bookies to duck the 16 per cent bit by the state, tracks, city and county. . . . The boys have been having a lot of fun needling Ted Williams about his .080 batting average against the Yankees this year. . . But aren't they overlooking the fact the Red Sox fireman has belted the bomber flingers for a fancy .390 since he came up to the American League in '39 . . . Word from Mexico is the Pasquel brothers backed Miguel Aleman's winning presidential campaign to the tune of $250,000.

Phil Ruzzuto is almost ready to take over the Yankees shortstopping again after his beaning . . . but there's old Frankie Crosetti out there going along at a mere .340 since he's been filling in. . . They're being worn by the game in the third with Guelph ailments were phony when he called off his title clambake with RAocky Gaziano last week. And are finding out now that Tony really has pneumonia.

American Loop May Produce Two Thirty-game Winners This Year in Feller, Newhouser

Rapid Robert Has Won 19 and Peerless Hal Has 20 in the Bag

By JOE REICHLER

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Unless Cleveland's Bobby Feller or Detroit's Hal Newhouser hits unenexpected decline, there appears a good chance today that the American League will furnish two 30-game winners this season.

Not since 1912 when the immortal Walter Johnson and Smoky Joe Wood reached the 30-victory mark did two great pitchers come along with such peerless parallel permormances.

Following on the heels of Newhouser, who became the majors' first pitcher to win 20 games Saturday, Feller racked up his 19th traumph yesterday by shutting out Washington Senators, 2-0, in the opener of a doubleheader. The Indians also won the nightcap, 7-4, to advance within three games of the fourth-place Nats.

Newhouser, needing only five more victories to join Cy Young, Lefty Grove and Johnson as the only American League pitchers to win 25 or more three years in succession, was idle yesterday as the Tigers divided a doubleheader with Philadelphia Athletics before a capacity crowd of 51,116 which enabled the Bengals to climb over the 1,000,00u mark in home attendance.

Dizzy Trout went down to his third straight shutout defeat as Jesse Flores scattered seven Bengal bingles in pitching the A's to a 2-0 win in the opener. Frank (Stubby) Overmire spaced seven hits to defeat the Mackmen in the nightcap, 6-2.

Maintain 11-game Lead

The pace-setting Boston Red Sox maintained their 11-game lead over New York Yankees by gaining an even split with St. Louis Browns. After Denny Galehouse had stopped them, 3-2, in the first game, the Sox stripped six St. Louis chuckers for 13 hits and an 11-4 triumph in the afterpiece.

The Yankees also had to come from behind to break even. Held to six hits in the opener by Johnny Rigney who blanked them 2-0, the New Yorkers hopped on Ralph Hamner and two successors for 11 hits and an easy 7-1 win.

The second-place St. Louis Cardinals narrowed Brooklyn's National League leading margin to 1 1-2 games by blanking Boston Braves 2-0 while the Dodgers were being humbled by Pittsburg's Pirates 7-3.

The third-place Chicago Cubs advanced to within 6 1-2 games of first place by sweeping both ends of a twin bill from Philadelphia Phillies 11-3 and 3-1. Seven-run first frame helped Hank Borowy, returning to the mound after being knocked off the hill Saturday, to his fifth success.

Despite a pair of home runs by the Giants' Johnny Mize, which raised his league leading total to 22, Cincinnati Reds downed the New Yorkers twice 8-3 and 5-4.

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press

Bobby Feller, Indians—Won his 19th game by blanking the Senators 2-0, to help the Tribe sweep a twin bill.

Jesse Flores, Athletics—Shut out the Tigers 2-0, to enable the A's to split a doubleheader with Detroit.

Johnny Rigney, White Sox — Held the Yankees runless with six hits as the White Sox won the opener 2-0, to earn even split with New York.

Wally Judnich, Browns—Drove in what proved to be the deciding run as the Browns shaded the Red Sox 3-2, in even break with Boston.

Nick Strincevich, Pirates — Held the Dodgers to six hits and drove in two runs with a triple at Pittsburgh won 7-3.

Bill Nicholson, Cubs— Batted in six runs with a home run, double and single as the Bruins swept a twin bill from the Phillies 11-3 and 3-1.

Al Brazle, Cards, blanked the Braves with four hits in Cards' 2-0 victory.

Grady Hatton, Reds—His two-run homer helped beat the Giants 5-4 in the nightcap after the Reds won the opener 8-3.

WORTHLESS FARM REJUVENATED

London, July 27 (CP)—Six years ago, local farmers agreed that a 220-acre farm at nearby Dorchester "just wouldn't grow a thing." A few days ago, the owner of the farm refused an offer for $32,000 for the farm. The farmer, Valere Brabant, a Belgian-born Canadian, purchased it a few years ago and by judicious application of farming skill and fertilizer has made it one of the richest tobacco farms in the district.

NEW ATTENDANCE MARK PROBABLE AT BALTIMORE

Crowds at All International Parks Much Higher Than Last Year

(By The Associated Press)

With a new International League attendance record in the bag, Baltimore Orioles today had 21 more home dates in which to shoot for a high season total.

When 28,038 fans jammed Municipal Stadium yesterday to watch the Orioles split a doubleheader with the league-leading Montreal Royals, Baltimore's attendance for the season was boosted to 378,386, topping the previous mark of 378,525 set by Jersey City in 1939.

Montreal won the first game 3-2, on the five-hit pitching of Jean Pierre Roy. A six-run sixth inning, featured by home runs by Howie Moss and Bob Repass, gave the Orioles the nightcap, 10-8.

Other doubleheaders around the circuit also resulted in even breaks.

At Newark, Buffalo Bisons downed the Bears 4-3 in the opener as third baseman Don Savage walked 14 Newark batters but gave up only three hits, none of them after the third inning.

Duanne Pillette hurled three-hit ball in pitching the Bears to a 10-0 decision in the second game. Larry Berra's sixth-inning home run with the bases loaded was the big blow of the Newark attack.

Jersey City downed Toronto 4-1, in the first game at Jersey City as Dick Hoover outlasted Norman Brown in the pitching duel. The Leafs came back to take the nightcap 6-2, behind the eight-hit pitching of Cot Deal.

Rochester Red Wings nipped Syracuse 1-0 in the first game of the five-hit pitching of Glenn Gardner, the second game went 10 innings, with the Chiefs coming out on top 5-4.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

The Belleville Softball Association Executive issued a strong denial on Saturday to the rumored report that it had withdrawn the protest of the SACOS softball squad on the on the use of Pitcher Steve Hook by the flashes in a game played against them a few weeks ago. The governing body, members stated, had upheld the SACOS protest and barred him from playing here, in view of the fact that evidence revealed that Hook had played for a Kingston team as well.

• •

At that meeting, the executive also took up the case of Player Roger Mallory, of the Flashes, who had also played with the Kingston team. It referred the ultimate disposition of both players to the Ontario Amateur Softball Association.

• •

In an account of a softball game in Kingston, reported by a Kingston writer in his paper, he stated "Hook and Mallory appeared with the DVA team when Belleville withdrew its protest."

• •

Belleville executive members emphatically deny this report. "We have not held a meeting since the one which dealt with the protest and we have no idea of withdrawing it. It was upheld at the meeting and will stand, as far as we are concerned. The Kingston writer got no such information from any member of this executive," a member stated.

• •

Trenton indicated that it would be a strong contender for intermediate softball honors this year when it defeated the SACOS squad 4-3 in an exhibition tilt in that town on Saturday evening. The city squad used tall Jim Hunter for five innings, then sent Keith Baldwin to the pitching post. Reports state the game was a good one with the hometowners showing plenty of strength in all departments.

Softball Semi-Final Tonight

Tonight in two parks the semi-finals of the Belleville Softball Association championship get under way. Mountain View tangle with SACOS at the Fair Grounds and that game should be a honey. The air crew who have been grouped in Intermediate "C" are anxious to tack the city title to their belts and are out to make a strong bid for the honors. Their improvement during the past few weeks has been little short of sensational and they are liable to throw the well-known monkey wrench into the playoff dope machinery. Don't sell 'em short. SACOS, too, will be at full strength, and the tussle should draw a good crowd of the faithful.

Down at Ox Point, Phil Loft's Point Anners take on the Sedore Flashes and this joust, too, should be productive of some snappy football. These teams are bitter rivals and both will be out for the opposition's scalps. The first game, always the important one, will be the target for both teams, and no quarter will be spared when these squads hook up. Both games start at 6.45 sharp.

• •

There's baseball, too, this gloaming, for lovers of that game. Up at the Alemite field the Napanee squad will be out to break up that league duckegg at the expense of the Latta squad. And with the latter out to maintain their brief winning streak, the fans should get a neat eyeful. This tussle starts at 6.30, so better be on hand.

• • •

Attention of this desk has been drawn to the "automobile bleachers" up at the Alemite Field where some spectators view the game from the comfort of their cars out along the first base foul line, and are not fussy at all about kicking in with some coin of the realm for their evening's pastime. In fact, one team official stated that he "passed the hat" to the car bleachers and not one offered to dig down for as much as a postage stamp.

The greater majority of fans here, like the good sports they are, enter the field through the proper channels and pay their way in like ladies and gentlemen. The seats are not exactly the morris-chair or chesterfield type but they afford a good view of the proceedings and after all, that is all the interested fan needs. But that is not the point. These fans pay their way, and in this manner are not only getting a nice evening's entertainment, but helping baseball and the players.

It costs money to operate any kind of a ball club, whether it be at the top or the bottom of the loop. Baseballs don't grow on maple trees, nor batts on grapevines. Uniforms, if you can get 'em, don't come with a package of cereal. The majority of the teams here are running close to the financial line and need every shekel they can get through the box office.

And the motor-car bleachers aren't helping any. No doubt, some of them pay, but the majority don't. If this condition persists, the league executive should take measures to bar cars from parking in that particular spot, or at least have some arrangement whereby an admission fee is charged.

• •

The Belleville Softball Association late today announced that the game between Mt. View and SACOS scheduled for Friday night will be played at the Fair Grounds on Wednesday night instead. The Flashes-Point Anne game tabbed for Wednesday at the Fair Grounds will be played on Friday.

P.S.—Poppa Shappee will recover.

The Trenton Fliers baseball squadron returned from Operation Congress on Saturday, their ships grounded by the flashy Toronto Columbus Grads 3-0 in the National Congress Tournament finals, but their pennants afiutter, spirits high and the insignia of two enemy craft "downed in action" proudly borne on their figurative secutcheon.

• • •

The Flyers lost a close game in the finals with the Grads, with the foe scoring all their runs in the first two heats. Lefty Garton, Flyer hurler and youthful Bruce Ferguson, Grad chucker hooked up in a pitching duel for the balance of the game, but the Flyer bats could not gt clicking and failed to come through with the much-needed runs.

• • •

Flyers, however, proved themselves a credit to Eastern Ontario baseball in general and the Belleville Baseball Association in particular. They downed the powerful Toronto Mahers 3-2 in the first round and pushed aside the Earlscourt Juniors barrier 5-4 in the second heat. They played a fine brand of the pastime and were worthy carriers of the baseball banners of the East.

• • •

The boys received a wire from the executive of the Belleville League wishing them luck, and they showed plenty of appreciation by knocking off two of Toronto's best squads. Now they have their sights elevated for that Ontario title. And in their present form they are liable to step quite a piece down the long long trail to the championship.

AMATEUR BASEBALL

(By The Canadian Press)

The seven-hit hurling of 16-year-old Bob Hoffman of Galt Terriers featured weekend Ontario Amateur Baseball as the Terriers defeated Kitchener Panthers 10-5 and climbed into a third place tie with Kitchener in the Senior Intercounty League.

Waterloo Tigers beat Guelph Maple Leafs 7-4 in the other Intercounty tilt. In the Niagara District Senior League Niagara Falls Houck beat St. Catharines 2-0 and Merritton-Thorold Thormers edged out Niagara Falls, N.Y., Wolkes 4-3. Peterborough swamped Newcastle 16-6 in a Lakeshore League game.

Hoffman was touched for a homer, a triple and two doubles but his right-handed slants stopped the Panthers from bunching their hits. Waterloo rode to victory behind the relief pitching of Dave Bauer who entered the guys who hinted that Tony Zale's leading, a man on second and none out. He fanned the next three batters and yielded only one hit in the rest of the game.

It was the third victory for the Houcks with both runs coming in the eighth on an error and Jiggs Rufrano's tripe. Rufrano, on the mound for Niagara Falls, gave up only three hits to the Saints. Coach Lefty Coderre scored the winning run for Merritton-Thorod when he raced home in the seventh on Billyard's long fly to deep centre.

In the Intercounty Intermediate division London defeated Woodstock 15-8 and Galt downed Brantford 2-1. Stratford Juniors edged out Kitchener 5-4. Cobourg beat Whitby 7-5 in a Lakeshore Junior game.

HERMAN BARRON WINS $10,500 IN CHICAGO TOURNEY

Defeats Ellsworth Vines in Tam O'Shanter With Score of 280 for 72 Holes

Chicago, July 29 — (AP) — Herman Barron, of White Plains, N.Y., who won $10,500 on a week-long diet of orange juice, and golfdom generally agreed today that promoter George S. May's all-American fairways circus had lifted the sport into "big-time" business.

A crowd estimated by May at more than 52,000 — tops for any golf event — watched Barron squeeze out a 72-hole aggregate of 280 for a one-stroke victory over ex-tennis player Ellsworth Vines in the final of the all-American meet at Tam O'Shanter course yesterday.

By May's calculations, some 153,000 persons watched the all-American merry-go-round which led tournament manager Fred Corcoran of the Professional Golfers' Association to predict that tournament golf would attain a record of 1,000,000 paid attendance this year.

The 27-year-old Barron, whose $10,500 swipe broke the Byron Nelson monopoly at Tam O'Shanter, frankly admitted he was jittery throughout the tournament, which he led from the start with rounds of 67-71-69-72.

Three-way Tie for Seventh

Nelson who had won four of the five previous all-American meets, finished in a three-way tie for seventh place with a feeble 287, one-under-par.

In all, the zany three-ringed circus marked an uprising by golf's have-nots. Vines, who has yet to win a major tournament, grabbed the second-spot professional money of $4,325, and Sammy Byrd nosed out leading money winner Ben Hogan 284 to 285 for the third place swag of $3,500.

In the all-American amateur, George Hamer, fresh from the University of Georgia, where he won the 1946 United States collegiate title, upset such favorites as Toledo's Frank Stranahan and Earl Stewart, 1941 National Collegiate titlist from Dallas, Tex. Hamer posted 291, a stroke ahead of Stewart and two strokes in front of Stranahan whose closing four-under-par 68 came too late.

Favored Babe Didrickson Zaharias of Denver, Colo., took the all-American Women's Open with a 310 aggregate six over women's par, but still seven strokes ahead of runner-up Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Texas, who had 317.

Hogan still leads the 1946 money parade with some $27,500, and Nelson continues as runner - up with $20,200, closely pressed by Barron with $19,700.

Assault Beaten By Outsider In Arlington

(By The Canadian Press)

Baseball players have laid their cards on the table in outlining their demands for a new deal which are being placed before a special meeting in New York today between 26 player representatives and the presidents of the National and American Leagues. They have asked for a $5,000 minimum salary for recruits, additional expense money during exhibition games and elimination of the clause banning participation in other sports.

The recently-announced pension plan in which clubs and players would participate, as drawn up by shortstop Marty Marion of St. Louis Cardinals, has been widely approved by the ball-tossers.

In a North American pro soccer league fixture at Pittsburgh yesterday, Toronto Greenbacks registered a 4-3 victory over the local Indians in the presence of 3,445 fans.

Assault, three-year-old champion, finished last in a six-horse field in Saturday's Arlington classic at Chicago, the winner of the 376,850 first-place purse turning up in The Dude, owned by Mrs. Al Gaal of New Orleans. The Dude paid $15 for $2.

Smiley Quick of Los Angeles accounted for the title Saturday of the 21st annual National Public Golf Tournament when he defeated Louis Stafford of Portland, Ore., 3 and 2, on the Denver Municipal Course.

Marcel Bernard won the men's singles title for France Saturday in the French International Tennis Championships at Paris, defeating Jaroslav Drobny of Czechoslavakia in five sets. Winner of the women's crown was Margaret Osborne of San Francisco.

When bridge players become expert, they begin getting ideas. One such idea may be the special lead-directing discard. In some capable circles, this is an important addition.

Of course, all discards are more or less lead-directing tips. The customary signals are: A high discard asks partner to continue with that suit; a low discard says switch to some other suit.

The special lead-directing signal works like this: If it is a high discard, it asks partner to lead the highest ranking other suit; a low discard asks him to lead a lower ranking suit.

This requires an excellent memory for all ordeals. Not only of the bidding. Not only of the cards that' have already been played. But also an analysis of the possible unseen card holdings.

West leads the spade jack. Dummy in the north wins that trick with the queen. Ordinarily, east would play on it the spade deuce; a discouraging signal; saying not to lead that suit again.

But in a pair using the special lead-directing signals, the east play on that trick might be the eightspot. If it was, east asks west to lead a heart; the highest ranking other suit.

Ordinarily, the discard of the eightspot would encourage west to continue that suit. But west is able to see the dummy He knows that east does not care to have that suit led again.

Therefore, the eightspot discard can be for only one other cute purpose. It is the special lead-directing discard for saying that the next best suit to lead is hearts.

If you are that good should you use it? Not unless your partner is that good, too. Better stick to his language.

Hollywood Column

By HOWARD C. HEYN

Hollywood, July 29 (AP) — The way a star combs her hair or wears his tie will often set a national example. I doubt, however, whether their methods of remaining comfortable when the mercury climbs past 90 will cause more than a raised eyebrow.

Contrary to popular belief, the stars do not float in luxurious swimming pools on rubber elephants, sipping mint juleps. Nor do they sit in the shade of orange trees, fanning themselves with thousand-dollar bills. But their press agents will concoct some astounding ideas.

One press agent would have you believe that when things get too hot for Red Skelton, he retires to his private igloo. Red owns a frozen food business, and it is rumored that one of the lockers has been outfitted with furniture and a phone!

Laraine Day is said to have a wardrobe of summer dresses made of heat-resistant spun glass, which glistens like the surface of an ice-cube.

Lizabeth Scott, who always looks cool as a frosted soda, dresses up to fight the heat. "I like more clothes, rather than less, in this weather," he said. "Long sleeves, for instance. Anyway, I think heat is largely psychological."

The thermometer, which was pushing 90, didn't agree. And I noted (how could I help it?) that Liz was wearing a slinky black evening dress, low cut, practically backless—and with no sleeves whatever.

The simplest solution is offered by Lassie's trainer, Rudd Weatherwax. When the dog days arrive, he simply reaches for the clippers and keeps the actor in trim.

Getting a little warm in here, isn't it?

Trenton Fliers Shut Out 3-0 By Columbus Grads in Finals

Winners Score All Their Runs in First Two Innings Off Lefty Garton

By ALLAN NICKLESON

A big kid back from overseas service with the Canadian Army, 26-year-old Bruce Ferguson pitched Columbus Grads into the Ntional Baseball Congress of Canada championship tournament by blanking some fellow war veterans of the air force, Trenton RCAF Fliers, 3-0, at Maple Leaf Stalium Saturday.

Vevelling in the heat and sun, Ferguson allowed the Fliers just four hits and struck out seven in leading Grads to the Toronto and District Congress title. They will participate against crack amateur teams at London the week of Aug. 5 where a Canadian champion will be crowned to carry Dominion colors into the national championships at Wichita, Kas., later in August.

Crowd of 1,500

Some 1,500 sandlot fans—largest crowd in the fire year history of the district tourney here—saw Columbus fashion all the scoring in the first two innings off the air force ace, Lefty Garton. It was a well-played game between sandlot veterans with the Grads. leaders of the Earlscourt Senior League here, faster afield and quicker to take advantage of opportunities.

Ferguson, member of Major Conn Smythe's Sportsmen's Battery who came home last fall, was master all the way. Not a Flier navigated as far as third base and, to add insult to injury, Ferguson retired Trenton on three straight strikeouts in the third inning.

Hitting hero of the piece was Nick Staynor, Grad shortstop, whose single to centre in the first inning scored two runs as Jack Furlong, who had walked, and Jim Williams, who had singled, scampered home. Babe Gresko's double in the second—only extra-base hit of the tilt—accounted for the other Grad run. It scored Bob Kowalik who had singled.

Gresko's Lusty Clout.

Gresko's drive, which bounced off the left-field fence, was the hardest of the six-team tourney which opened Thursday night. Columbus reached the finals by eliminating Riverdale Grads Friday night after enjoying a first-night bye. The Trenton team, led by 39-year-old Moose Matthews —a sandlotter for 20 years or more — pulled an upset by edging Mahers of the West Toronto Senior League in the opening game Thursday and beating Earlscourt, only junior team in the competition, Friday night.

Lloyd Douglas, president of the National Baseball Congress of Canada, said that several strong teams will compete in the Canadian finals at London's Labatt Field. Columbus will find themselves in such stiff company as London Majors, last year's Canadian kings, Stratford Nationals, Petrolia, Brockville and Kingston.

No Toronto team has won the Canadian Congress title since Tip Tops turned the trick as the tourney made its debut in 1942. Mahers, last year's Toronto and district winners, failed to reach the finals.

Vines Places High Value on Dignity

Chicago, July 29 — (AP)—Ex-tennis star Ellsworth Vines places a high price on his dignity. At least, he considers it worth more than $675.

Vines, finishing second in the all-American Open golf tournament at Tam O'Shanter course yesterday collected only $4,325 instead of the advertised $5,000 second place money, simply because he refused to wear a number.

Promoter George S. May—not overlooking any detail that would add to the crowd's interest in the game — had ruled that entries who failed to wear identifying numbers would win 15 per cent less.

Vines explained his attitude:—"It was a case of dignity ahead of dough."

OVERCOME HOUSING SHORTAGE

Auckland, N.Z. (CP) — Legislation to give local authorities the power to enter empty houses and place tenants in them for limited periods will be introduced in the next session of the New Zealand parliament. This is an effort to overcome the housing shortage, which is acute in all parts of the Dominion.

Herman Barron of White Plains, N. Y., clouted a four-under-par 68 to take the first-round leadership yesterday in the Chicago $50,000 all-American golf tournament, two strokes ahead of Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va. Byron Nelson was well back with 74.

Hook Mallery, To Play For Kingston With Boyle, Halloran, Eligible For City Teams

The Ontario Amateur Softball Association at an executive meeting held in Hamilton on Saturday granted the transfer of Marty Halloran, SACOS hurler, from Toronto to Belleville, making that player eligible to play for the SACO squad.

Player Don Boyle, who signed with Point Anne, was declared by the executive to be the property of Belleville and must play with a Belleville team as Belleville is his nearest OASA centre.

The executive also declared that players Steve Hook and Roger Mallory who played several games with the Flashes squad here, the property of Kingston and were placed in good standing to play with Kingston veterans' teams.

Application for reinstatement of Bruce Fairley, manager of the Hamilton Charles junior team last year, who were defeated here by the Columbian Squires for the Ontario junior championship, was refused. Fairley had been previously suspended for using unsigned players in the game played here on Oct. 8, 1945. Fairley will remain out of softball until reinstated, and will not be allowed to act as the secretary of the Hamilton Softball Association.

Other business of the executive included the reclassification of the Junior "A" series. Under the new ruling the Hastings team will now play in Junior "B" instead of "A". That leaves Belleville, Oshawa and Peterborough to battle it out in the Junior "A" groupings.

Complete play-off dates of all series will be released in the next few dates. All other series outside of Senior "A" and Senior "B" will start playoffs on August 15.

MARRIED COUPLE TAKES FOUR OF 5 TENNIS CROWNS

Mr. and Mrs. Morley Lewis of Alabama Nearly Sweep Tennis Card at Ottawa

By ANDY ROSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 29 (CP)—King and queen of Canadian tennis for 1946 are a married couple—Morey and Baba Lewis—playing out of Huntsville, Alabama, who walked off with four of five senior titles at the Canadian championships concluded here Saturday.

Morey, 28-year-old native of Texarkana, Arkansas, who mixes tennis with an export-import business, trounced Ottawa's Don McDiarmid, 1940 champion and defending titlist for a second reign as men's singles champion. The chunky athlete, who took up tennis to cure a football knee injury, slipped across the border to Windsor, Ont., to win the crown in 1939.

After dropping the first set, 2-6 he clearly had the lanky civil servant's number and, waiting cautiously for openings, when roaring in at net for sharp, sure placements to finish off the match at 8-6, 6-4, 6-4.

His petite 26-year-old wife, the former Baba Madden of Boston whom he met at the United States Nationals in 1940, won the women's singles and shared in the women's and mixed doubles crowns. She was so superior in her division that a wag in the stanrs remarked that if they could have played men's doubles together, they probably would have won that too.

That title was saved from the wreckage by a Montreal brother team, Brendan and Jimmy Macken, who play for William and Mary University at Williamsburg, Virginia. Their sizzling volleys and fine team-work defeated Lewis and his Ottawa partner, veteran Edgar Murphy, by scores of 3-6, 6-1, 6-4, 7-5.

Ranked Eighth in Calif.

Mrs. Lewis, ranked eighth in California in 1945, trounced 19-year-old Noreen Haney, a Canadian citizen whose parents now live at Summit, N.J., 6-1, 6-3, and teamed with her to capture the women's doubles. They downed two Montreal girls, Enid Nicholls and Doris Ell, with the loss of only two games. In mixed doubles, the Lewises defeated Miss Haney and Brendan Macken 6-8, 6-2, 6-1.

For those who viewed with dismay the dismal showing of Canadian stars against the couple, the happy-go-lucky Lewis had a word of cheer.

"You've got a lot of good players up here," he said. "There isn't a thing wrong with Canadian tennis that more competition won't cure."

He had the utmost respect for the ability of McDiarmid, who like himself had long wartime lay-off from the courts.

"That boy is really good—I'd hate to meet him after he's been through two or three good tournaments."

Jean Marois, the 21-year-old current Quebec champion, who gave him a three-hour marathon battle in the semi-finals, he described as a "great competitor" who would develop fast if given the opportunity.

Incidentally, Marois, who plays goal for the Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, admitted a preference for the courts and said he hoped to make a swing through U.S. tennis circuits in March and April next year.

Upsets Mark Final Day of Henley As Hamilton Takes Point Total

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 29—(CP)—The 1946 Royal Canadian Henley Regatta—64th in the history of Canadian rowing — was a Henley of upsets. Perhaps the only certain victory in the odds-book was that of young Johnny Kelly, Jr., the Philadelphia sculling ace.

Kelly was considered a certainty to win the championship singles event after the way he swept through the junior, association and title singles in the Henley last year. But other odds-on favorites fell by the wayside, much to the delight of the huge crowd which had gathered to see a record more-than-600 entrants compete.

Oldtimers were willing to concede that the boiling sun may have had something to do with the unexpected results. But the lads who came in off the course on old Welland Canal knew it was sheer determination — determination that bested a broiling heat relieved only occasionally by a slight breeze.

Heat or not it was determination which brought Hamilton's red clad Leanders the 1946 point title with an overwhelming total of 188, some 35 points ahead of their closest rivals, West Sides of Buffalo. And Hamilton provided one of the greatest upsets of the three-day regatta by winning the Ned Hanlan Memorial Cup for the best senior eight.

Wound up Third

Detroit Nonpareils' Octet was favored to capture that event. But they wound up in third place. And the Hamilton victory was accomplished by one of the smallest margins in Henley history—a mere two feet. Buffalo's West Sides led from the gun to the last 300 yards yet the surge of power displayed by Walt Robinson's octuplet crew was thrilling and winning.

It was this event which saw the only accident of the meet. In the Ecorse Golden Boys' craft, Bob Vollmer rowing No. 5 position caught a crab at the last quarter. His sweep flew back and knocked him cold as his clubmates struggled home in last position behind the Hamilton No. 2 boat composed of the junior eight.

Leanders again were the upsetters in the senior 145-pound fours where they bested West Sides to the wire in the last 200 yards.

The Mountain City crew had to up their beat to 34 to provide the hustle and it provided the best finish of the Regatta.

The senior 155-pound eights saw West Sides shove St. Catharines out of the favored position, catching the cerise and blue octet at the mile mark and nudging ahead by a fraction.

The senior doubles went unexpectedly to Ecorse who were drawn for inside water and managed to score by half-length over the favored Toronto Argos' duo.

Another Upset

Another upset was provided by the St. Kitts 145-pound eight which slipped a win over four highly-regarded rivals in the senior event of that weight. Given a grim battle by Detroit, the Garden City boys rowed like vets to lead the Nonpareils, Ecorse, Wyandotte Ganders and Lachine Quebeckers to the finish.

Both singles events were thrill-giving. Kelly's effort in the championship race looked like a row-over as he came in three lengths ahead of Russ Reynolds of Ecorse after loafing for nearly three-quarters of a mile. But the young Vespers Club Philadelphian said he had had a tougher time of it last Saturday than he did after winning the Big Three singles events last year.

Losing finalist in the Diamond Sculls in England earlier this year, Kelly spurted into a lead in the first 20 yards and followed the tactics of all-time great, Bobby Pearce, letting the field take his wash.

Veteran sculler of Nereids, Belleville, N.J., Alf Walker, stroked a smart course to win the senior 145-pound singles by two open over Fred Tucker of Brockville, Ont., Rivers. Young Billy Couch, son of West Sides' coach, was third.

St. Catharines Third

St. Catharines, leaders after 2 days, wound up third in the point total with 134, while Toronto Argos had 97½.

Ecorse had 70, Detroit 49½, Ottawa Capitals 46, McGill University of Montreal 41, Lachine 35, Philadelphia Vespers 26 3/4, Nereids 24, Philadelphia Fairmounts 20½, New York Ravenswoods 14, Undines of Philadelphia 12, Wyandottes 10, Philadelphia Naval Base 8, Brockville and Penn Barge of Philadelphia five, Philadelphia Penn A.C. 4½ and New York Athletics 1.

In the last day events, Leander won four firsts, Ecorse and West Sides two, while Vesters, St. Kitts and Nereids scored in one each.

Clash Here On Morgan, Henning Friday Night

Wild and woolly doings in the main wrestling bout at the Arena last week set up quite a situation between Lee Henning and Toar Morgan. It seems that while Henning was lambasting the dickens out of Goon Henry, Toar Morgan sitting at the ringside was urged on by a number of fans to such a state that he finally decided to interfere in the rugged treatment that Henry was receiving. The result was one of the wildest scenes the old Arena has witnessed.

To bring things right up to date comes an announcement by Manager Walter Gerow, after listening to all the complaints that Henning and Morgan poured onto him, Gerow has done the smart thing and signed Henning and the fearless Toar to meet in the main bout here on Friday.

This Henning is the hottest wrestling figure to wrestle here in many a moon but Toar Morgan has improved so vastly that many a fan will figure Morgan can trim him.

Morgan is still hot over that leg-in-the-rope-hanging trick that Henning pulled on him (and many others) and he believes he has the right answer to give Lee. Certainly the way he tore into the Cornhusker last week showed how little fear he has of him. Morgan was actually very much in the wrong by interfering and the referee had no other recourse but to award the bout to Henning but Toar said afterwards that he had no regrets for the pile-driver he hung on Henning's jaw. Karl Krippler Davis will be in this Friday to tackle Warren Bockwinkle and Bunny Dunlop gets handsome tall Mike Sharpe.

Tom Carruthers Wins B of Q Golf Titles

Tom Carruthers and Doug Green matched their skill for the club championship at the Bay of Quinte Club on Saturday. Carruthers won the match eight up and six to go in a very close game ending at the thirtieth hole.

At the end of the first nine holes, Carruthers was ahead by three holes and coming in from the second nine, he held a lead of four. After twenty-seven holes he gained four more and was eight holes up.

Green won the first hole on the fourth round, tied the second and lost the third to end the match.

Last year's champion was Ken Reid, but he was defeated by Murray McIntosh earlier in this year's competition.

CHAPTER 19

Boston was seen through a veil of murky rain the next morning. As had been planned, Barton was to be their host at breakfast in Boston. It was his lively good humor and endless talk that relieved the embarrassing silence as the four of them left the ship and journeyed by cab to a restaurant.

As the rain washed against the windows, breakfast was a polite and solemn ritual. Clive's brown eyes were hurt. Mary's cherry-red mouth trembled a little. Iris could think of nothing except Mary's letting Clive go out of her life, finally and abruptly, when this painful meal was ended.

Barton said, "Well Iris, I'll send you a wedding present. Perhaps it'll be a miniature ship to remind you of me. Otherwise you'll forget. We have had fun, haven't we?"

"You've been lovely to me," said Iris.

Mary said tightly, "We really must go. We've got to get our bus."

In Iris's eyes was a message. "There's still time to change your mind. I can look after myself and get to Eaton Forest. There's still time for you to admit you love Clive."

But Mary looked away and her bright mouth was firm.

At the door of the restaurant they turned to say good-bye. For Iris it was a tense, sad moment. Mary murmured, "Good-bye, Barton. Good-bye, Clive. I'm sorry, so sorry, but I. . . ." and when her voice broke she hurried out like a runaway child to the waiting cab.

"I'm sorry, too," Iris said to Clive. "I did my best. . . ."

He smiled. "Perhaps if it had not been on shipboard she would have believed me."

"Oh, she does believe you!" Iris felt the grip of his hand. "She loves you. Won't you find her sometime and tell her again? China," said Iris, "isn't such a long way off—for Mary."

In the cab Mary was crying softly. Iris turned around, seeing the figures of Barton and Clive walking up the rain drenched street. "There goes an amusing playmate," she thought, "and the man Mary loves. I don't suppose I'll ever see them again."

It could not have been a more dismal day. The few passengers on the bus huddled down in their seats and either went jerkily to sleep or stared absently at the misty countryside. Delay seemed to meet them at every turn. There was a flat tire on a long lonely stretch of road and engine trouble in a quaint little village.

Mary, usually so cheerful, set her blue eyes on the changing lanscape, thinking of calm brown eyes in the restaurant that had secretly asked her again, and the tall rain-coated figure walking down the street, walking out of her life. Clive would go back to China to a lonely house and a bachelor's life in the fairly gay British colony.

Vainly she tried to find comfort in the thought that she was taking Iris to Mark. Perhaps in the tranquility of Eaton Forest they would find the happiness that Iris had proudly and stubbornly thrown away. That presented problems, too. Iris was innocent of Mark's presence at Eaton and perhaps when she saw him, she'd be angry at the deception. It was too all too much, too complicated for her tired puzzled mind.

She met Iris's eyes briefly. "Stop reproaching me with your silence, Iris. I haven't seen any of the places we've passed. I've been thinking of Clive's loneliness and my empty, useless life."

"He didn't want you to feel sorry for him. He wanted you to love him."

Mary lowered her lashes, tucked her chin in the collar of her sport coat.

"I do love him. I can't live with a memory. Julian told me that—that day." She looked away. "I can go on loving the memory of Julian. Nothing can change or alter that. Iris, I'm tired of being a butterfly. I want to live the kind of life a woman was meant to live. Home and husband and children. Women reach out for other things but they're restless, abnormal women."

"Perhaps he'll come back," said Iris.

"He'll never come back. I told him my answer was final." She smiled at Iris. "This was to be your trip, darling. It turned out to be my heartbreak. But your time is coming later."

"There was a silence, then Mary looked up and said, "You're not still angry with Mark?"

"I'm sorry I lost my temper that day. If only he had not paid that money!"

It seemed hours before the bus driver said, "Eaton Forest," and Iris and Mary found themselves standing in the middle of a road in a muddy pool with their luggage in hand. Finally, peering through the darkness and rain, they saw a small waiting station made of rough pine logs.

"Such an eerie night," said Mary. "We were supposed to get here hours ago, you know. They have a little bus that meets people here. It's probably been here and gone back."

But before long a dilapidated car appeared and a boy in a raincoat got out and took their baggage.

"I've been here three times," he said gloomily.

The ride to Eaton Forest was rough and winding indeed, but soon Iris saw several small lodges perched on high hills. In a clearing she saw a wide flat building with a large veranda circling it. The pavilion, probably. There was a still larger building enclosed with French windows. The dining room. Then the little car joggled further in the darkness and stopped before a small house.

"The office," said Mary, pulling up her coat collar. "I'll have to get the keys to our cottage." She was gone only a few minutes.

The old car stopped finally at a small cottage in a grove of pines. No other house was near it.

"This is it," said Mary. "I'll light the fire. Think of it— a fire here when at home it is impossible to exist without either an electric fan or a cooling system."

It wasn't a large room. It wasn't particularly cheerful. But it was comfortable and looked as if many people had found comfort in it. There was a day bed, several pillows, three chairs, a table, and a small radio. The chintz draperies at the windows were faded.

There was a screened-in sleeping porch with two cots, a bedroom with recently painted blue furniture, a tiny bath, and a still tinier kitchen.

"The kitchen is superfluous since they built the main dining room," said Mary, "except for mixing drinks and fixing midnight suppers."

They were quite gay while they unpacked. After that they put on dressing gowns and drew close to the fire again.

Iris wondered, "Is she thinking of Clive now? He's probably wandering aimlessly in Boston or sitting alone in some hotel room."

But Mary was thinking, "Mark is so close she could almost hear him if he'd call. The man in the office told me Mark had the house looking out over the bluff, the loveliest, loneliest house in the Forest. I won't plan for them to meet. I'll let it happen. Oh, Clive, I can't forget your eyes this morning. I can't forget your voice. In my mind I'll always follow you, from Boston perhaps to Quebec, because you'd always wanted to go there, and back to New York and then to China. I'll always follow you in my heart and mind."

It was quite late when Iris went to the sleeping porch and got between the thick warm blankets. The air was biting, invigorating. She could feel the mist of the rain against her face. "I'm so far away from everything. It's like jumping from one life to another. But Mark's face is quite near."

Mark could hear the swift current of the waterfalls as it tumbled over the jagged rocks. The light was faint in the living room of Bluff House and the fire burned low. Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow, he thought. The passing days did not take Iris away. But he did not think of the distressed girl in the blue dress and the white turban who had been in his apartment that day while the summer storm raged. No, he remembered her that night he had first seen her—Iris in a gold dress, saying, "Something to remember me by," and finding his eyes with hers. And the Iris who had come to the hospital that day and said, "I love you. That I'm sure of."

Iris awakened with the sun in her eyes. Mary, looking down at her, said, "It's nine o'clock, darling. We won't get any breakfast if we don't hurry and I feel as though I haven't eaten in days. Put on something warm."

The ground was muddy beneath the pine needles. Iris could see nothing but trees and blue sky above. As they walked, houses appeared.

Only the late sleepers were in the modern, well equipped dining room where black boys in white coats served.

Mary cried, "There are some people I know," and Iris followed her to a table where a man, wife, and three sunburned children sat.

They were, Iris discovered, the Wilson Henshaws and the little Henshaws. Mr. and Mrs. Henshaw had been coming to Eaton long before there had been any little Henshaws.

"Mary North, of all people!" cried Elise. "How perfectly delightful! You know Buddy and Babs, I think. Tuck is rather new. Oh, we're quite a family now. How do you like the Forest, Miss Wade?"

"Don't be discouraged," said her husband. "We have a golf course—it's too muddy for playing today—a lake for swimming if you don't mind icy water, and tennis courts. You can play bridge at the pavilion in the afternoon, if you're a bridge hound, and dance there at night to radio music. There are quite a few unattached males floating around."

Mary laughed. "Less conversation, please, and some food. We're famishing. Then we can take Iris on a tour of inspection."

All that morning Iris met strange friendly people. There were dowagers, divorcees, married couples, and sunburned sons and daughters. Life at Eaton Forest was informal, care free, and comfortable. The few rules were respected. Newcomers particularly attractive young women, were received with open arms, friendly doors were opened to them, and refreshing concoctions mixed for them.

Luncheon was always gay. At any meal except dinner you could appear in anything from soiled dungarees to a wet bathing suit. The glow of good health was on the faces of every one from people far past youth to the tiniest, chubbiest child.

The Henshaws gave a cocktail party that afternoon for Iris and Mary. At four o'clock from every direction people came, some bringing glasses to replenish the Henshaws' diminishing number, others with ice cubes from their own refrigerators. The tiny lodge was filled to overflowing.

"Everybody's here," said Wilson Henshaw, "except the hermit on the bluff."

Mary caught her breath and said a little prayer.

"Who is the hermit on the bluff?" Iris asked.

"It won't do you any good to know, my dear," said Wilson's wife. "He's very unsociable. He breakfasts before any of us and rarely appears in the dining room. Very good looking. And anyone who rents Bluff House must be rich. Not even a fake drowning by some of the girls who'd like to know him can pull him out of his solitude."

Wilson picked up his cocktail glass. "Let's drink to the hermit. I think he's a good fellow. At Eaton, you know, we're all supposed to have run away from something. Elise and I ran away from our neighbors who complained of the children having an orchestra of their own. I think the hermit ran away from women.'

Some one said, "Perhaps a woman."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the headlines and drinking his 2nd cup of coffee this morning, and ma said, Of course it takes all kinds of people to make a werld, William.

Especially this werld, by gollies, pop said, and ma said, Naturelly I consider most of our manners and customs superior to forriners, and yet I must say I was impressed last night by Blantch Hipple's brother from Europe. Of course he wasn't born in Europe, but he did most of his travelling there, and the way he bowed and kissed each lady's hand when he was introduced to her was really quite charming in the extreme. Naturelly the other men didn't think so highly of it, judging by their disgusted expressions, and I supopse you're no exception, she said.

How little you know me, pop said. As a matter of fact that fellow had such an effect on me that I've fully decided to take up hand kissing myself, and when that same buntch shows up here Thersday night, or whenever it was you invited them, I've got a pleasant serprise in store for the ladies, he said, and ma said, Now William you'll do nothing of the sort, the idea for land sakes.

Really, my dear, sometimes I dont believe you know what you want, pop said, and ma said, I dont want you making a monkey of yourself after all these years, I know that much. It would be different if you'd practically been brought up in France, like Blantch Hipple's brother, she said.

But I've read some French books, and we could even change our name from Potts to DeePotts pop said, and ma said, I can change my name to the former Mrs. Potts, and believe me I will if I hear another silly werd on the silly subject. I declare I almost believe you would, she said.

Oh, okay, here goes for the ferst and last time, pop said, and he folded up his paper and kissed ma's hand a loud kiss and left for his office.

Gertrude Stein Dies in Paris

Paris, July 29 (AP)— Gertrude Stein, 72, the beloved but puzzling American writer who opened her heart and her home to hundreds of American soldiers during the Second Great War, died Saturday night in the American hospital at Neuilly, a Paris suburb.

There had been no earlier reports that Miss Stein was ill and hospital officials declined to state the nature of her illness or how long she had been confined to hospital.

A native of Allegheny, Pa., Miss Stein began writing while a student of Radcliffe College and published more than 20 books and other works—most of them so abstruse as to verbiage and sentence structure as to leave even professional critics in a quandary.

Lived in France 40 Years

Such typical phrases as "a rose is a rose is a rose" and "pigeon on the grass alas" gained Miss Stein a worldwide—if headshaking—literary reputation.

Although Miss Stein lived in France for more than 40 years, she loved her native country and welcomed tourists to her home as warmly as the hundreds of famous figures of the arts whom she knew as friends. She never married.

Bevin May Go To Paris Conference At End of Week

London, July 29 —(CP)— Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin was reported by his wife today to be "very much improved" and perhaps will be able to attend the Paris peace conference by late in the week.

London newspapers had speculated earlier that the 65-year-old statesman's illness was more serious than merely the strain of overwork. Some suggested he might resign because he had said frankly he never wanted to be foreign secretary.

There was no official confirmation of any forthcoming Cabinet revision, and a Foreign Office source said that Mr. Bevin was recovering and might be able to go to Paris in a week or so to attend the 21-power peace conference. In his absence, his place is being taken by Prime Minister Attlee.

Nevertheless, a new crop of rumors were circulated that Mr. Bevin was fed up, and that he did not relish his much-publicized clashes with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov or the comment they provoked in this country.

Mentioned as possible successors to Bevin are Hugh Dalton, chancellor of the exchequer; A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty.

Mr. Bevin said during the Labor party's recent conference at Bournemouth that his job was no cinch and that anyone could have it who wanted it. As he made the remark, he looked humorously at Mr. Dalton, who is understood to have wanted the job when the Cabinet was formed a year ago.

German Roads Lanes of Barter And Pilgrimage

By HAL BOYLE

Nuernberg, July 29 (AP)— German highways today are lanes of barter and pilgrimage.

Farm wives and children stand by the roadside hawking produce, but they let you know at once that they are little interested in your Allied marks. Like their brethren in the bombed-out cities, they are looking for a straight trade for such items as chocolate, soap, cigarets or wearing apparel.

Sprightly among the bent figures that plod dully along the road shoulders are a new war-created class—the painted ladies of the autolanes.

They are wayward young German girls, who have modernized the world's oldest profession. Their beat, instead of a few city blocks, may stretch along 100 miles of highway.

Their worry are the soldier trucks and jeep drivers. Dressed provocatively, they stand far out in the highway and boldly try to thumb down any passing army vehicle which contains no officers.

To any soldier who picks them up they quickly make their purpose clear. They seek cigarets, candy or food—supplies which they can easily dispose of for fancy prices on the black market. If the driver isn't interested, the fraulein cheerily alights and flags down another prospect.

These "Macadam Magdalenes" are regarded by army authorities as one of their most serious problems in reducing venereal disease. Most are infected and they are difficult to catch. Soldiers rarely turn the girls in to constabulary police who patrol the highways and the fraulein themselves have learned to duck at sight of the well-marked patrol cars.

Another Search On for Bormann

Nuernberg, July 29. (AP)— United States intelligence officers reported today that Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy party leader who has been missing since the fall of Berlin, was seen in Munich only a week ago and that a house to house search for him is going on.

Bormann long was believed dead. He is being tried in absentia as one of the 22 Nazi defendants by the International Military Tribunal.

Intelligence chiefs said a disgruntled chauffeur of Bormann, fired in a disagreement over stolen garden vegetables, provided with a tip that started a new hunt for the Nazi party chieftian.

An army source said the chauffeur, Jakob Glas, longtime resident of Munich, informed intelligence chiefs he was "absolutely certain" the man he saw riding in an automobile in a main street of Munich a few days ago was the missing and long-sought Bormann.

Glas was Bormann's driver for years until the final year of the Hitler regime. Then, he said, he was dismissed after Bormann accused him of stealing vegetables from the deputy fuehrer's private garden.

Truman to Sign Bill to Streamline House Procedure

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 29 —(CP)— A stroke of President Truman's pen is expected to enact into law today a bill to streamline congressional procedure for the first time in 50 years, and incidentally to give Senators and members a hefty salary increase.

There is no doubt of presidential approval since most of the reforms have his support and the salary increase is only half the figure he recommended.

The bill does many things to make legislative procedure more efficient and is the result of the recommendations of a committee which worked several years after direction of Senator Bob LaFollette, Wisconsin Progressive, and Representative Mike Monroney, Oklahoma Democrat. These are the highlights:

1. Reduces Senate standing committees from 33 to 15.

2. Reduces House of Representatives committees from 48 to 19.

3. Creates single committees in Senate and House to handle affairs of the armed forces.

4. Puts the budget and the means of getting it in the hands of a joint Senate and House Committee.

5. Increases Congressional salaries from the present $10,000 a year to $12,500 with an extra $2,500 a year for expenses on which no tax is paid and for which no accounting is asked.

For years members of both Houses have resisted efforts at reform which would remove so many committee chairmanships and equally they have resisted the temptation to raise their own salaries even after President Truman recommended that they should be doubled.

The bill does something else that is an experiment — provides an opportunity for members to qualify for civil service pensions.

They are permitted to pay into the fund at the rate of six per cent of their basic salaries and to qualify for pension when defeated if they had served a minimum of 6 years in Congress and reached the age of 62.

Senators and House members always receive the same salaries. In 1850 the rate was fixed at $3,000 a year, in 1866 it was increased to $5,000. In 1907 they got a raise to $7,500, and in 1925 it was boosted to the present level — $10,000.

Gordon Expects Living Costs Will Continue to Rise

Ottawa, July 29 (CP)—Donald Gordon, Prices Board Chairman, said today he expected living costs will continue to rise in the next few months. Appearing before the Commons Industrial Relations Committee and elaborating on evidence he gave last week he said while he thought general wage increases of more than 10 cents would probably create an unmanageable situation in price control he did not presume to say the wage increase for the steel industry should be set at 10 cents.

Mr. Gordon had testified before the committee last week and members resumed questioning today. Attention centred on the steel situation in which some 15,000 workers are affected in strikes at Dominion Steel and Coal Corp., Sydney, N.S.; Steel Co. of Canada, Hamilton and Algoma Steel Corp., Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Mr. Gordon told Arthur Smith (PC—Calgary West) that increased wages could be absorbed by higher production but it did not always follow that as wages went up production increased also.

In reply to questions by David Croll (L—Toronto Spadina) Mr. Gordon said his suggestion that increases in excess of 10 cents an hour would be fatal to price control had been interpreted "too definitely."

Mr. Gordon told Arthur Smith (PC—Calgary West) that increased wages could be absorbed by higher production but it did not always follow that as wages went up production increased also.

In reply to questions by David Croll (L — Toronto Spadina) Mr. Gordon said his suggestion that increases in excess of 10 cents an hour would be fatal to price control had been interpreted "too definitely."

"I do not wish to be in the position of saying 10 cents can or cannot be absorbed," he said.

"If wage adjustments in this basic industry (steel) were made at 10 cents and spread to other industries I felt they would have an almost unbearable pressure but if increases were more than that you would get into such difficulties that it would be unmanageable."

Mr. Gordon said he did not mean to suggest the steel dispute should be settled at 10 cents. Settlement of wage disputes was not in his jurisdiction. If the increase went beyond 10 cents and applied to industry generally it would create a condition which the board did not have the machinery to handle.

Mr. Gordon said he could not agree that a 15-cent increase now represented what 10 cents would have meant April 1. Mr. Croll said workers feared if they were bound on wages for a year they would find in three months it was all gone in price increases.

"I can only say it would be much more likely to be gone if there was no price control," Mr. Gordon replied.

In the 19th century in Europe, it was the custom of fashionable persons to have portraits painted of their eyes and wear them in brooches, lockets, rings and snuff boxes.

Hastings County Jr. Farmers Hold Successful Field Day

500 Farm Boys and Girls Gather at Maynooth Fair Grounds for Softball Championships

A highly successful Field Day was held by the Hastings County Junior Farmers at the Maynooth Fair Grounds on Thursday, July 25th. Around 500 farm boys and girls were in attendance to see five girls' teams play off for the County Girls' Softball Championship and to see six Junior Farmer teams play off for the Hastings County Junior Farmer softball championship. An added feature this year and one which created a great deal of interest was the standard sports events.

The Maynooth Junior Farmers were hosts to the other Junior Farmer Associations in the county for the day and much credit was given to the Maynooth boys and girls for the splendid way in which they arranged and carried through the day's program of softball and sports events. A very succcessful dance brought the day to a close in the I.O.O.F. Hall, Maynooth, at night. Mr. H. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative, and Mr. Harry W. Burns, assistant agricultural representative, were in charge of the day's program. Messrs. Homer Townsend, Don Thomas and Ross Bailey, all of Belleville, were the official umpires. Much favorable comment was heard on the efficient way in which these umpires handled their games.

The Greenview girls' softball team, county winners of last year, repeated and took the girls' championship again this year. The Madoc boys' softball team won the boys' championship in a hard-fought game from Sidney, who were defending their title won in 1945.

Airhart Lumber Company Erects New Saw Mill

Marmora — Lumbering operations are going strong in this district. The firm of G. B. Airhart has again erected a sawmill on the former stave mill property. Several large piles of lumber have been cut in the past two weeks and it is expected that the mill will be busy for a couple of months on Airhart logs and custom sawing.

John Finnegan has been engaged to cut off a lot purchased some time ago from O'Connors by Donald Ross of Stirling. Mr. Ross is to erect a mill on ground rented from Bruce McInroy and expects to have his cut finished about the first of November. Recently Bernard Finnegan purchased a couple of lots on the west side of Burstall Street near its southern end erected a planing mill which is now ready for work. On Tuesday afternoon he ran about three thousand feet of lumber through the mill. He can now do planing, tongue and groove and make cove siding. As soon as equipment is available, he expects to make sash and doors and do other wood work.

Tom Pearce has started lumbering operations in Lake township with Charles Lummiss as foreman and he has a lot of good lumber to handle.

Marmora district seems to be doing its part to meet the urgent demand for lumber.

Moira Lake Camp News

The regular rounds of athletics, Bible Study, group games, aquatics, music application, camp craft, wood craft, hikes, etc., at the "Y" boys camp are so adjusted as to allow for special features that add spice and further enjoyment to the program.

On Saturday evening last a drama night was conducted in which each cabin group developed an original play—not to exceed fifteen minutes—wrote the dialogue and presented the play at evening camp fire.

Sunday was visitors day and many parents and friends visited with the campers. Monday afternoon the campers engaged in a shambattle in which one half of the camp attacked the camp while the other half defended. There was great excitement. In the evening the camp enjoyed a program provided by Miss Barbara Diment, Bill Navin and Ed. Shortt.

Tuesday afternoon the annual treasure hunt was held with the following successful in finding the hidden treasures Specials, Kenneth Sine and Wayne Fox, ordinary, Larry Woods, Howard Adamson, Warren Snell, Allen Waring, John Hagerman, Garry Schrieder, Gordon Cooke, Charlie Bateman, Ray Hermiston, J. Campbell and Doug Broadworth.

Of five non swimmers coming into camp on the 16th of July they are now swimming over twenty-five feet.

In the volleyball league the Siwash tribe are leading and the Sioux and Siwash are tied in softball league.

Wednesday is boat trip and shore dinner—Thursday athletic meet and Friday aquatic meet.

Campers all well and happy.

Diaper Cleaning Service Started By Vet at Wpg.

Winnipeg, July 29 (CP) —Babies are good business for 26-year-old Lloyd Farwell, formerly of Toronto, who has started Winnipeg's only diaper cleaning service. Forty-nine thankful mothers are on his list of regular customers, and he expected the number to rise to 70 in another month.

Farwell suffered a shrapnel wound while serving overseas with the Signal Corps, and followed that up with an attack of pleurisy which kept him in hospital for a year and a half.

After his recovery, he thought over his future and hit on the diaper idea after learning that babies' clothing service companies were doing well in the United States. He teamed up with his brother Fleetwood and set up shop in Winnipeg last February.

Average order runs to about 74 diapers, along with a few crib clothes and baby things. The cleaning process includes eleven operations: 7 rinses, two washes, one bleaching and a special softening bath.

Incidentally, both brothers admit to being bachelors. "We do like babies, though."

INDIAN POPULATION

New Delhi (CP) — The latest available information says the number of people rationed in India now totals 110,000,000 —about ten times the total population of Canada. The population of India is estimated at 400,000,000.

Experts Would Tab Antarctic Weather

Sydney, Australia, July 29 — (CP) — A group of scientists is urging the establishment of meteorological stations in the Antarctic to assist short-term, and possibly introduce, long-range weather forecasting in Australia.

The group includes an Australian geologist, Sir Douglas Mawson, discoverer of the south magnetic pole, and one of the foremost authorities on Antarctica.

Mawson has already experimented in this direction. Under his direction, a meteorological station was set up on Macquarie Island to carry out observations while an Antarctic expedition was in progress before the war. The project was later abandoned.

Mawson and other scientists say that Antarctic stations would enable meteorological services in Australia to extend forecasts to cover from a week possibly up to three years.

They say such a service would greatly benefit Australia as a primary producing nation. It would enable farmers, for instance, to forestall the periodic droughts which are their worst enemy.

Establishment of the stations, they add, would present no political difficulties because they could be set up in Australian-administered Antarctica. This area of 5,000,000 square miles represents about one-third of "the seventh continent's" total

Meteorologists knew that the impact of cold winds from the Antarctic on tropical moisture from the equator governs, in part, Australia's southern rainfall.

What they do not know is how far south the change begins. They believe it begins at the northern fringe of Antarctica, but present facilities do not permit a check.

The most southern weather station from which they can obtain information is Stewart Island, off the South Island of New Zealand, and this is not far enough south for their purpose.

CHINESE COMMUNISTS BATTLE U. S. MARINES

200,000 IN TEL AVIV UNDER VIRTUAL HOUSE ARREST

British Round Up Thousands to Find Blast Perpetrators

22-Hour-a-Day Curfew Clamped on Jewish City

Jerusalem, July 30 (CP)—British troops placed the 200,000 residents of the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv under virtual house arrest at dawn today as they opened a prolonged and deliberate roundup aimed at finding the persons who bombed the King David Hotel in Jerusalem last week.

The entire city was placed under a 22-hour-a-day curfew, with residents forbidden, under pain of being shot on sight, to leave their homes except during an authorized two-hours period for purchasing food and other supplies.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, British High Commissioner for the troubled Holy Land, said the British had "clear evidence of the existence of terrorists in Tel Aviv and that some if not all of those who took part in the Jerusalem crime came from that town."

87 Bodies Recovered

Eighty-seven bodies have been recovered from the bombed hotel and 24 persons are missing.

A high-ranking officer in Jerusalem said the world's only all-Jewish city probably would be under the rigid curfew for several days while soldiers and Palestine police carried on the steady house-to-house search, which officials predicted would result in the arrest of 2,000 to 3,000 men and women.

The searchers also were believed to be seeking arms caches and clandestine radio transmitters operated by such Jewish underground organizations as Irgun Zvai Leumi and the Stern Gang, whose members, an army officer said, were the principal objects of the roundup.

Turned Into Ghost Town

It was the second time in a month that the city had been placed under rigid curfew restrictions, turning the normally bustling city into a ghost town. A month ago Jewish institutions in Tel Aviv were occupied and searched and the residents of the city were held under curfew for 24 hours.

Under the terms of the present curfew the residents are not permitted to go near their windows nor on their balconies and must stay inside their homes despite the sweltering heat on the coastal plain. The Tel Aviv beach, usually teeming with thousands seeking relief from the heat, was deserted.

All curfew passes, such as those issued to newspapermen, were revoked, although the British army conducted a tour of the city for some two dozen foreign correspondents from Jerusalem. The imposition of the curfew meant that Palestine would be without Hebrew newspapers for some days and all telephone communications from Tel Aviv was stopped.

Roadblocks were set up at all the city's exits and no vessels of any kind were to be allowed to leave Tel Aviv's harbor during the period of the search. The principal objects of the roundup, officials said, are known and suspected members of Irgun Zvai Leumi and the Stern gang, Jewish underground organizations.

Palestine police announced earlier that a large quantity of machinery, a crudely constructed hand grenade and several detonator caps were seized in a road on a Tel Aviv workshop last night.

"It is suspected," the police announcement said, "that the premises were intended for large-scale manufacture of bombs."

In Jerusalem, British soldiers continued their steady task of sifting through the rubble of the King David Hotel after blasting away part of the bomb-wrecked building to remove weakened parts. A British officer said the blasting did more damage to the Y.M.C.A. building, across the street, than the original bombing of the hotel by extremists last week.

(In London, Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison was chosen as chief government speaker in the debate on Palestine, which opens in the House of Commons tomorrow. Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, spoke —off the record— for 40 minutes last night to members of parliament who met to discuss the situation.

'Dead' Rajah Claim To Indian Domain Is Upheld by P.C.

London, July 30 (CP)—The Privy Council upheld today a "dead" Rajah's claim to a vast Indian domain that had been contested in Indian courts for a quarter of a century.

Winner of the long legal battle was Ramendra Narayan Roy, second son of the Rajah of Bhowal, who claimed he was revived by a rain-storm ,and rescued from a funeral pyre in 1909.

The council's ruling dismissed the appeal of Ranee Bibhabati, who said she was the "widow" of the claimant. She asserted her husband died in Darjeeling in 1909 and was cremated.

The appeal was against a majority decision of the High Court of Calcutta granting title of the estates yielding $100,000 ($400,000) a year to the man who claimed to be Ramendra Narahan Roy.

The claimant said he was placed on a funeral pyre but that while the flames rose a torential rain drove his mourners to shelter, and the downpour revived him, and he was rescued by passing beggars with whom he lived for nearly 12 years while suffering amnesia.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, July 30—(CP)—Synopsis: Warm air covers most of the United States east of the Rockies, while a cooler air mass covers Ontario and the Great Lakes. Scattered showers and thunderstorms have been occurring in Wisconsin, Michigan and Ontario near the boundary between these air masses, but these have been reported at only a few places in Ontario. The cooler air mass is expected to remain over us on Wednesday, giving temperatures near normal with rather low humidity.

$1.55 WHEAT FOR CONTRACT COUNTRIES ONLY

MacKinnon Announces Also 10 Cent Boost For Wheat Effective To July 31, 1950

Ottawa, July 30 — (CP) — Trade Minister MacKinnon announced today in the Commons the removal of the pegged price of $1.55 a bushel for Canada's export wheat sales, except to Britain. Canada's "serious" effort will be made to sell at prices "roughly corresponding" to those of the United States.

The United States price for export wheat sales now is over the $2-a-bushel mark.

Mr. MacKinnon said the pegged price of $1.55 would remain in effect only for contract countries, such as Britain, which last week signed a four-year contract for 600,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat and wheat flour.

He said in his announcement:

"With regard to export prices, the supplies for the United Kingdom will obviously be sold within the terms of the contract.

"In sales to non-contract countries, a serious effort will be made to sell at prices roughly corresponding to those of the other principal supplier — now, the United States.

"To this end, order-in-council P.C. 6122 of Sept. 19, 1945, has been revoked.

"It will be remembered that through this order the government directed the Canadian Wheat Board for the time being not to exceed a sales price of $1.55 per bushel for No. 1 Northern in store at Fort William-Port Arthur or Vancouver in its export sales."

10c More for Wheat.

Ottawa —(CP)— An increase of 10 cents to $1.35 a bushel in the initial price to producers of Canadian wheat, retroactive to Aug. 1, 1945, and to continue in effect until July 31, 1950, was announced today in the Commons by Trade Minister MacKinnon.

Mr. MacKinnon said 1945-46 wheat deliveries, which were based on the old initial price of $1.25, will be brought up to a $1.35 basis by payment of a flat 10 cents a bushel on all grades.

The Minister also disclosed that the wheat participation payment on the 1944 wheat crop will be "upwards of" 16 cents a bushel.

After the 10-cent payment on the 1945 crop has been made, to bring the initial payment up to $1.35, the remaining surplus from that crop will be placed in a five-year pool with the succeeding four crops of 1946, 1947, 1948 and 1949.

Participation certificates will be issued in the usual way, but the payment on these certificates will not be made until after the conclusion of the five-year pool at July 31, 1950.

Right to Kill Monkeys, Says Gandhi, If They Ruin Crops: Hindus Roused

By B. S. V. RAO

Bombay, July 30 (AP)— Mahatma Gandhi, apostle of non-violence, has startled millions of Hindus with a pronouncement that it is neither sacrilegious nor contrary to their theory of non-violence to kill monkeys which destroy crops.

Countless generations of pious Hindus have revered monkeys as descendants of Hanuman, the God of Strength, and patiently have endured their destructive raids upon growing crops, considering it sinful to raise a violent hand against the marauders.

A correspondent precipitated the statement with a remark that his uncle kept monkeys out of his fields at night by stringing up electric lights to frighten them. He asked whether this should not be recommended instead of execution. Gandhi retorted: "That would be violence in the name of non-violence."

He followed through with an article in his weekly newspaper, the Harijan, in which he wrote that the electric lighting plan would enable the farmer who could afford the equipment to save his crops at expense of less prosperous neighbors, who would have all the more monkeys with which to cope. He contended this would be no more non-violent than to throw refuse into a neighbor's yard.

"If we must save society as well as ourselves from the mischief of monkeys and the like," he said, "we have to kill them."

The veneration of monkeys has been closely interwoven with the Hindu religion for so long that it generally is believed it will be long before there is any noticable increase in the killing of them, despite the word of such an honored man as Gandhi.

Devout Hindus share their small food supplies with the monkeys, and a dead monkey merits a Brahmanical funeral.

Woman Tells Police Story Of Men Digging up $50 Bills; Believed 'Polka Dot' Loot

Toronto, July 30 (CP)—Police of Toronto and suburban York County today assigned officers to search for two men who dug up $300 in $50 bills near a farm house at nearby Richmond Hill used for some time as a hideout by the "Polka Dot Gang" which police said staged a series of armed robberies in central Ontario last fall.

Discovery of the money lent credence to underworld whisperings that $250,000 in bonds and cash, loot from warehouse robberies, may be buried in the vicinity of the farm. Police said that much loot still is missing.

Members of the Polka Dot Gang who earned their nickname by masking their faces in red-and-white polka dot handkerchiefs for their escapades, now are behind bars but tales of the hidden fortune still persist in the Toronto area. Some stories say it may be hidden in a cache like the two unidentified men found a few days ago at the Richmond Hill farm.

Mrs. Iska Stone who lives in the two-storey frame house once occupied by the Polka Dot Gang, today told newspapermen that two men who she had never seen before came to her house and told her they would give her $10 if she would allow them to dig up a sum of money.

"When they first came they told me they had a brother going through law school and needed the money to enable him to continue his studies," she said. "But after the money was dug up they became excited and said they really wanted the money to appeal a court judgment.

"When I asked them if they really had a brother going through law school, they laughed."

The two men, when they started to look for the money, halted opposite a scratch mark on the north outside wall of the house, Mrs. Stone said. One ran a finger down the mark, pointed at the soft earth directly below the mark and said:

"Right there."

"They had only to dig into the ground twice before they struck a bundle of rags from which they took a glove," Mrs. Stone related. "From a finger of the glove they took six $50 bills.

"I told them I wanted my money. The bills were damp and they took the centre bill from the roll and dried it with the heat from their car motor and then drove me to a Yonge Street service station where they changed the $50 bill.

"I told them I wanted to buy some groceries and they drove me to a grocery store. When I went inside, one of the men accompanied me. Apparently they were afraid I would call the police. They took me home after that."

Mrs. Stone said that since she moved into the house in January she has been constantly on the watch for the money said to be hidden in the vicinity. She and friends have organized "treasure hunts" in which they removed bricks from the large fireplace and front walk but found nothing.

"I have stood on the very spot where that money was found on numerous occasions, and even debated in my own mind whether that scratch on the wall had some significance but never dug in the ground below it."

Newsphoto "Reunion" Wins A.P. Award

Milwaukee, Wis., July 30—(AP) —Augie May, Chicago Tribune staff photographer, won first prize in the annual newsphoto contest conducted by the Associated Press Managing Editors' Association, W. R. Arnold, chairman, announced today.

May's photo, "Reunion," is a novel, from-shoulders-down shot of a man in army uniform clasping a young woman whose feet are off the floor; a chubby baby boy, mouth open in a big smile, tugs at the man's trousers. "Reunion" received 23 points of a possible 30 and won over more than 280 entries from 20 states.

May will receive a $100 cash prize and a photograph of a silver and oak plaque with his name inscribed, symbolizing the AP award for outstanding excellence in photography. The plaque itself is kept on exhibit in AP general headquarters in New York.

Premature Baby Thriving

Baltimore, July 30 (AP)—Survival of a premature baby girl, weighing only a pound and a half at birth, was disclosed Sunday at the premature nursery of the Johns Hopkins Hospital. The baby now weighs four pounds and 15 ounces.

FOREST FIRE NEAR, TOWN OF SHEDIAC MAY EVACUATE

1,500 Battle Flames and Trains Stand Ready to Move Out Dwellers

Moncton, N.B., July 30 —(CP) —Residents of the Northumberland Strait resort town of Shediac were ready to move out today as a raging forest fire edged closer to the community of more than 2,000 inhabitants.

With menacing flames leaping high across the Scoudouc river, three special trains were held in readiness to evacuate townspeople and summer colonists.

Yesterday, motor launches were used to carry to safety 35 girl campers after two camps had been destroyed. Buildings on 3 farms and almost the whole of a summer colony of 22 cottages were reported burned.

Although reports from the fire areas were incomplete, there was no news of casualties.

Forty miles north of Shediac, another fire menaced the lumbering village of Richibucto, but subsiding winds last night gave weary fire-fighters a temporary rest.

Forest rangers said only a heavy rain could stop the flames, but weather reports promised nothing more than scattered thundershowers.

Most of the property damage reported was on the neck of land jutting into Northumberland Strait from the Shediac area. But property damage was light compared with the vast area of timberland consumed.

Moncton and Shediac Red Cross units moved in to help feed the fire-fighters, estimated at more than 1,800. Mobile canteens were set up and a truck was used to deliver food to men working on the fire-lines.

HOUSING PROGRAM MEETS OPPOSITION IN THE COMMONS

Agreed Legislation Is Effective in Itself But Critics Contend Action too Late

By GEORGE KITCHEN (Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 30 (CP) — The government's housing program, and its past record in that field, came under fire yesterday as the Commons gave clause-by-clause study to a bill to broaden the powers of the National Housing Act.

The criticism came from both Progressive Conservative and C.C.F. speakers, who generally agreed the legislation was effective in itself, but contended it was being introduced far too late to assist a situation that was worsening gradually and showed no signs of improvement in the immediate future.

Reconstruction Minister Howe, piloting the measure, explained the government's plans to stimulate building and the production of the required materials and agreed to amend the bill to grant to fisheries companies loans to build homes for their workers. These loans already were planned for lumbering and mining companies.

He declined, however, to meet requests of C.C.F. members that loans be granted to Co-operatives formed for the sole purpose of building houses because they would be without "substance" and said individual members would do better to apply the loans on a personal basis. Co-operatives with other income, however, would be eligible for loans.

The bill was approved in committee and will be given third and final reading later, possibly tomorrow.

Four Killed and 19 Injured in Attack On Truck Convoy

Sources Say Communists Obviously Planned Action

By TOM MASTERSON

Peiping, July 30 — (AP)—At least four United States Marines were killed and 19 wounded, two so seriously they may die, during the four-hour attack by an estimated 300 Chinese Communists on a truck convoy of 100 Marines bound for Peiping as replacements.

An undisclosed number of other Marines were listed as missing and a search was made for them throughout last night and today.

Piece by piece, the story formed today of Monday's incident which occurred near the village of Ohsiwu, 35 miles southeast of Peiping.

Marine sources said the Communists obviously had planned the action and were lying in ambush, hidden in cornfields on both sides of a highway.

A Marine whose face was shot away and another whose body was peppered with bullet holes were not expected to live. Of the wounded, eight were treated and released but 11 were sent to hospital.

Several Reasons Given

Several possible reasons for the Communist assault were given. Marines said that a patrol recently exchanged fire with Communist troops in that area, killing several Chinese and the Communists near Hohsiwu probably were retaliating.

Another source said that a United States army officer recently was stopped by Communist soldiers while driving through the same area and an incident followed in which a Chinese was shot to death. That report was not confirmed.

The Marines said that 300 "leathernecks" from Tientsin, equipped with at least a dozen 105-mm howitzers and supported by planes, were rushed to aid the ambushed convoy.

But other sources said the Communists had retreated before the patrol arrived.

Total Not Given

The Marine Corps declined to state officially the number of casualties. It merely stated in a press release that "we had casualties and there were some casualties among the force that attacked us." The release described the assailants as "uniformed armed Chinese estimated to be about 300 men."

Marine sources said the dead have not been identified.

Marine sources quoted the men in the convoy as saying the Communist ambush was a complete surprise. Two Marine officers in a command car leading the convoy of seven trucks were reported to have been killed instantly.

B. C. Fruit Crops Badly Damaged By Hail Storm

Kelowna, B.C., July 30 (CP)—Damage of thousands of dollars was suffered late yesterday by Okanagan Valley fruit growers when a hail storm, termed the worst in the history of the district, swept through a wide area.

The storm cut through the districts of Winfield, Ruthland, Glenmore, Kelowna, Okanagan Mission, and Summerland, where the damage was extensive.

An early survey showed that in the Kelowna area alone the apple crop will be reduced to nearly 1,000,000 boxes. Pears and prunes are likewise affected while apricot and peach crops may be a total loss.

ome of the hailstones that pelted the heavy-laden fruit trees were from an inch to an inch and a half in diameter and weighed nearly three ounces.

Many green houses were ruined, window glass smashed, boughs stripped from trees and leaves sheared off.

In some orchards peaches were reduced to a mass of pulp, some cut in half, and thousands of apples litter the ground, and many more had large slives cut out by the heavy hailstones.

Vegetable crops also suffered heavy loss, particularly cucumbers and tomatoes.

U. K. May Revise Living Cost Index

London, July 30 (CP)—Britain's official cost-of-living index, 103 per cent above the level of 1914 when it first was calculated, soon may be revised to give a truer picture of the country's price situation.

Following pressure on the government for revision of the index. Labor Minister Issacs has referred the matter to an advisory committee representative of government departments, trades unions, employers' organizations, co-operatives, retail traders and statisticians.

Ten years ago this committee carried out the first comprehensive inquiry into living costs since 1918 but its findings were delayed by the war. Now it will make adjustments to the results obtained in 1936 so as to bring them into line with present conditions and prices.

No new inquiry is being made and the work probably will be finished in a few weeks. On the committee's report, the government will decide whether a new cost-of-loving yardstick should be set up.

Despite public complaint that the index figure is far from accurate, it is not certain action will be taken at once. Some government officials claim the transition period has brought instability of prices and that an index revision now would have no lasting value.

$100,000 GARAGE FIRE

Clinton, July 30 (CP)— Fire last night gutted the Hanover Transport Company's garage here, destroyed five trucks loaded with merchandise and caused damage estimated at $100,000.

The flames were reported to have started from a short circuit in one of the trucks. Workmen tried to move the vehicle from the building but were forced to abandon their efforts when the fire spread rapidly throughout the building.

Two other trucks were saved.

Output of Natural and Synthetic Rubber Likely to Create Big Surplus

By MORRIS J. HARRIS

Washington, July 30 — (AP)—Natural rubber, lack of which threatened the Allied war effort for a time, is coming back. Plantation growers of Malaya, the Dutch East Indies and Ceylon already are beginning to wonder what they are going to do with the increasing tonnage flowing from their war-rested trees. In a swelling tide of Canadian and American - made automobiles calling for millions of tires and other rubber consuming accessories they see hope the supply can be used.

British Malaya again is beginning to turn out the once precious latex in an imposing stream. Sumatra, Java and Borneo, once leaders among world rubber producers, presently are throttled by political paralysis. Even so they are managing to contribute appreciably to the supplies flowing from Southeast Asia. Ceylon, a high priced area, is pouring out still more and increasingly worrying about future prices.

Unless United States consumption, which used around 800,000 tons in 1941 out of a world supply of about 1,000,000 tons, gets going again soon a world rubber surplus is assured.

Which brings up the question of what the United States is going to do with its synthetic rubber industry, so frantically acquired during the war and capable of producing better than 1,000,000 tons yearly.

With trees and synthetic plants working at full pace the world soon will have available about 3,000,000 tons of rubber a year and uses for but about half of it, assuming United States consumption to be at pre-war levels. At present American demand is down, natural production is going up and American synthetic plants are being held in leash, partly by alcohol shortages and partly to avoid flooding the world with unwanted synthetics.

COMPLETES HARVESTING OPERATIONS IN MONTH

Some kind of a record in the completion of harvesting operations is claimed by Mr. Harry Kelly, Foxboro, who this year has taken his entire hay and grain crop off within a one month period.

On June 29th, Mr. Kelly, whose farm is two miles north of Foxboro on the Madoc Road, started haying operations. On the 29th of July he had finished threshing. Ideal weather conditions with an almost complete lack of rain was given as the factor which enabled both hay and grain to be handled in such a brief period.

Lucky Fishermen End up Day Minus Catch

Roy Woodbeck, news service representative here is going the rounds mumbling "now you see 'em—and now you don't."

While Woodbeck is enjoying the best of health, he has a good reason for the recently acquired habit of talking to himself.

It seems that he, with two companions, went out the other day to garner prize fish from the Moira River, and being good fishermen, blessed perhaps with a little luck, they caught six nice pike, approximately thirty pounds of fighting fish.

Wanting to keep the fish fresh for the anticipated feed, the boys strung the six pike on a string, and allowed them to stay in the water behind the boat.

Came the end of a perfect fishing day, and they reached for the catch. But alas, misfortune had struck. Where once was a string of six fine finny specimens—nothing remained.

At some time, the string had parted company with the boat, and the pike had returned to their native habitat, giggling with fishy grins at the alleged wisdom of man.

King Puts Wreath On Tomb of French Unknown Soldier

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Paris, July 30 (CP Cable) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada left this morning's session of the Peace Conference Committee on procedure at Luxembourg Palace for the Arc De Triomphe where he placed a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Following the brief ceremony the Canadian Premier, returned immediately to the palace and rejoined the procedural committee which was still in session.

Last night the Canadian delegation to the peace talks held a special meeting to consider the exact position it must take over the challenge of the outspoken Australian Minister of External Affairs, Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, threw at the Big Four during the opening session of the conference yesterday which in effect, amounted to challenging the right of the foreign ministers to reserve for themselves the making of the final peace settlement.

Today Mr. King may give the commission on rules procedure, on which all 21 countries are represented, the official indication of Canada's attitude on this question the first roadblock in the path of any rapid progress for peace.

The Canadian delegates probably are inclined to agree in principle with Dr. Evatt but would not go as far as the Australian Minister is going in opposing decisions by Moscow to the conference that the "small 17" invited here could only make recommendations to the Big Four and the latter would write the final treaty texts with Italy, the Balkan States, and Finland.

The Canadians may take the position that European peace is impossible without Russia who insists on following to the letter the Moscow declaration, and without being appeasers it is better to accept this reality and work for co-operation rather than provoke diplomatic conflict before the peace conference really gets underway.

World's Fastest Speedboat Drivers Scheduled to Make Appearance at Rotary Regatta

What bids fair to be one of the most spectacular speedboat racing events ever seen in this district will be seen off beautiful Massassaga Park here on Wednesday, August 7th.

Under the aegis of the Belleville Rotary Club and sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association, the second regatta of the service club, one of a series of five named the Canadian Vacation Circuit, the event has attracted the cream of international speedboat drivers in three classes, some of them holders of world's records, and others aspiring to championship titles.

"Pops" Cooper to Race

Highlighting the 225 Class will be the former holder of the world's record, Jackie "Pops" Cooper of Kansas City who won the title in Picton in 1939 when he sent his craft hurtling over the water at a tremendous speed but lost the title the next year to Dave Foreman's Buffalo "Voodoo" who sped over the course well over 80 miles an hour.

Matching speed with Cooper will be the holder of the 225 five-mile record, Joe Taggert, Canton, Ohio, whose craft "Tommyanne" set the world's record at New Martinsville, Virginia, in 1941 with an average speed of over 73 miles per hour.

Drivers from California, Florida, Ohio, New York City, Buffalo, Brooklyn, Long Island, Grand Island, Providence, Canton, Pontiac, Philadelphia, Montreal, Toronto, Waterloo, Quebec, and many other places have entered their craft in the various classes.

Twelve 225's have entered in that class, while five drivers will surge over the course in the Class "D" 225 cubic inch speedsters. Fourteen 135 cubic inch boats will be here to await the starter's gun.

Good View Promised

The regatta will start sharp at 1 p.m. on August 7 and the course at Massassaga Park has been laid out so that spectators can see the boats in all phases of the race.

The boats will flash over the first leg of the course a scant twenty-yards from shore. The turns are located so that the races will be in full view of the spectators at all times.

Arrows have been placed in the city and on the Picton-Belleville highway designating the route to Massassaga. Buses will leave the city at intermittent periods for those who have no method of transportation.

The Regatta Committee under Chairman Lloyd Hicks, announced today that no delay will be brooked in starting the races. The boats will start in their respective heats every twenty minutes regardless and the last heat should be over by six o'clock.

In the evening a Regatta Ball will be held in the Fair Grounds Park Pavilion with the Commodores twelve-piece orchestra in attendance. Here high-ranking regatta officials will present the prizes to winners.

Special trial runs

Previous to the date of the regatta and the morning following special trial runs will be made by various drivers in an effort to break the existing world's record marks, regardless of where they have been made. These trials been sanctioned by the APBA over a measured course off Victoria Park running parallel with the government dock.

The trials will take place at dawn on dates which will be announced later.

Race Entries

Following is the list of entries for the regatta up to the present:

Property Wilfully Destroyed Say Police Officers

Wilful destruction of public property seems to be second nature to some persons is the belief of local police officers who, during the past two days, have received complaints of two such incidents occurring.

Supervisor at the Queen Mary School playground reported to police on Monday that over the weekend the drinking fountain on the school property had been broken and essential parts carried away. Officers were asked to keep a check on the property over weekend and see that boys were kept off the property after hours.

The second incident of public property being damaged occurred in the men's police cell where the toilet bowl was smashed by an inebriate who had been booked for disorderly conduct. Apparently resentful of being locked up, the party took out his vengeance on the cell accessories.

Sequel to the latter incident was seen in Magistrate's Court Tuesday morning, however. Arraigned on the disorderly conduct charge, and also for wilful destruction of property, the accused pleaded guilty on both counts and was assessed $2 fine and ordered to pay cost of replacement of damaged property, amounting to $15, as well as costs of the court.

Office of the Quinte Dry Beverage on Station Street was reported entered during the night, the office being ransacked, but nothing being reported missing. Entry had been gained by prying the west window open, according to the information given police.

Good Vegetable And Fruit Crops General in Ont.

Toronto, July 30 — (CP) — Though the prolonged hot dry spell retarded growth in some districts of Ontario during July, conditions generally were good for fruit and vegetable crops, the Ontario Department of Agriculture's seasonal fruit and vegetable report showed today.

The report said the pack of canning peas has been heavy in western Ontario with acreage yields above average. Eastern districts had one of the shortest pea packs in their history, with few plants operating over 14-15 days. For the first time, shelled peas were shipped by air from eastern Ontario to Windsor for processing. Tomatoes and corn showed good growth in most districts and prospects were very promising.

An estimate of the damage in Essex-Kent counties due to the storm of June 16-17 showed the onion crop to have suffered most with 39 per cent of the total acreage there lost. About 3,000 acres of processing tomatoes, 300 acres of potatoes and 30 acres of spinach were also destroyed, but the report said damage was less than first expected and "present recovery is excellent."

All except small fruits, such as raspberries, have enjoyed favorable growing conditions in the province during the month. In both eastern and western Ontario, the raspberry crop will be about 11-12 per cent below last year, the fruit small and many drying up, so that last month's estimate was too high.

The apple crop, especially of McIntosh, Snow and Spy will be well over last year's light crop but a prolonged June drop, particularly in eastern sections, has cut down the previous estimates considerably. Sweet cherries in Western Ontario have practically all been harvested while in the east the bulk of the cherry crop has been severely affected by dry weather. The overall harvest will still be from 100-200 per cent above last year.

Peach, plum and pear crops were expected to be well over the 1945 harvest, though the pears will still be way below the 1940-44 average. Reports showed a good crop of blueberries under way in the Thunder Bay area at the head of the lakes, with variable expectations from other sections of northern Ontario.

Insect pests have been kept well under control with the exception of some fruit scab reported from Essex-Ken and bud moth and leaf roller in evidence in orchards of Middlesex, Huron and Lambton counties.

Shelve Plans For New School In Thurlow Twp.

Plans for the erection of a proposed $35,000 two-room brick schoolhouse in the Hillcrest district in Thurlow township immediately outside the city limits have now been shelved at least until 1947, it was learned here this week.

Crowded conditions at the present Prince of Wales School in Thurlow township had resulted in school section officials contemplating the erection of an addition to the school to take care of the additional pupils, but residents of the Hillcrest district opposed asking that a new school be built in their own area.

Result of divided opinion on the part of the school section taxpayers, it has been decided that no action regarding the new school will be taken this year. For the fall term opening in September, but four teachers will be hired for Prince of Wales School, the same number as prior to the summer holiday period.

Several Large Canadian Cities Have Number of Policewomen

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Men beware! Canadian women have invaded another of your sacred fields—the police force.

A Canadian Press survey today revealed that in several large cities throughout the Dominion policewomen have definitely become an accepted fact. Some centres have increased their staff during the war. Others have added to it since then. However a few have so far held out against fate and are keeping the women "in their place" as police matrons.

Although Montreal boasts no policewomen at the moment, 20 will be engaged in the near future. At present suburban Westmount confesses to have two women "Park Rangers." Employed by the parks department these women patrol the wooded areas, keeping a watchful eye out for any juvenile delinquency.

For the most part Canada's policewomen belong to the morality squads and their duties generally do not include the usual pounding of beat, but rather they check up on women in hotels, beer-parlors, and rooming-house, and occasionally make the rounds of the public dance-halls to keep an eye on unescorted girls.

Many of the policewomen have been recruited from among former servicewomen.

"Plainclotheswomen" are the fashion in most of Canada's police forces but Calgary's three members wore uniforms similar to those of nursing sisters in the Canadian army—the blue two-piece suit, brass buttons, snap brim hat, black shoes and stockings.

To qualify for the job in Edmonton a woman must have plenty of common sense, said police officials of that city. She must be of good appearance and "able t olook after herself."

While the girls do not necessarily have to attain the six-foot height of the average police officer they should be around five foot, six inches, said officials in Toronto where there are four policewomen in the morality squad.

And, girls, the job gives a comfortable salary too! In Montreal, the municipal executive council is offering $1,500 to start, rising eventually to $2,000.

Justice Minister Will Not Disclose Evidence Given

Ottawa, July 30 —(CP)— Justice Minister St. Laurent said Monday in the Commons he could not make public a transcript of evidence given by Dr. David Shugar before the royal commission on espionage, because part of that evidence dealt with secret technical data which it was not in the public interest to disclose at this time.

He spoke on a motion of John Diefenbaker —(PC-Lake Centre) calling for production of the evidence.

Mr. St. Laurent, replying to M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, said he would have no objection to a small-committee of the House going over the evidence with him providing members agreed to keep the evidence confidential. Mr. Diefenbaker said he could not support such a committee because it would only add "secrecy to secrecy."

Dr. Shugar was among those named in the royal commission report as having agreed to participate in Russian-directed espionage activities. Dr. Shugar was acquitted in Magistrate's Court on conspiracy charges laid as a result of an interim report of the commission.

Mr. St. Laurent announced recently that law officers now were studying the final report to decide whether new action should be instituted against Dr. Shugar.

NOTED AUTHOR WRITES INDIAN WAR HISTORY

New Delhi, July 30 (CP)—Compton Mackenzie, the distinguished novelist, whose "Gallipoli Memories' and other historical writings had a great success after the First Great War, has been engaged to write a popular history of India's military effort and achievements in the Second Great War. Mackenzie will arrive in India in October to begin his task.

The full history which the historical section, set up a year ago by the war department of the government of India, has in hand will necessarily take some years to complete, but it is felt that an abridged history by a popular writer is required to be produced contemporaneously with similar accounts which are being prepared by all the Allied Nations. Publication of Mackenzie's book has already been arranged in England and India and it is expected that it will also have a wide sale in America and Canada, where the prowess of Indian troops is recognized, particularly by those who fought alongside them in Italy and elsewhere.

AUSSIE MUSEUM HOUSES RELICS OF GREAT WARS

Names of Fallen, Scale Models of Battlefields and Work of War Artists in Million Dollar Memorial

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canberra, July 29 (CP)—The names of Australian servicemen who died in the Second Great War will be inscribed in bronze with those of the First Great War's dead in the National Memorial, a unique $1,000,000 museum completed in Canberra in 1941.

The museum, a long stone building with a 117-foot dome, is a treasure-house of war relics, records, the works of war artists and among its features are scale models of battlefields with small modelled figures of Australian soldiers in action.

The result of an idea of C. E. W. Bean, official Australian correspondent in the First Great War who earned a doctorate of literature for his war history, the memorial is built on a 30-acre site at the foot of Mount Ainslie in Canberra. Facing the Parliament buildings across a wide valley it is one of Canberra's landmarks.

Though there remains work to be done to the large Hall of Memory beneath its black dome. the memorial has been opened since 1941 and Armistice Day services are held in its courtyard at the Pool of Reflection which is surrounded by the galleries where the Roll of Honor of two wars will be inscribed.

Within the spotless museum are the Naval Galleries, the Gallipoli Galleries, the Palestine Gallery, Airplane Hall, France and Belgium Galleries, and displays of uniforms, weapons and equipment used by and against the Australians in the First Great War.

The museum with its priceless collection of exhibits and realistically-executed relief maps and model battlegrounds was intended originally to be a monument to the Australian effort in the First Great war. However, relics such as attacked Sydney harbor in May 1942, have been added.

The model battlefields are among the most unusual exhibits. They are the work of an Australian sculptor, C. Webb Gilbert, and an artist Louis McCubbir, who collaborated in the reproduction of scenes from Australian campaigns in Palestine, at Gallipoli and on the Somme.

Outside the Memorial building on Gallipoli Avenue stands the Lone Pine, planted in 1934 by the Duke of Gloucester, and said to have been grown in Australia from a pine cone picked at Gallipoli in 1915.

DIFFERENT BIRD FLUSHED

Hamilton, July 30 (CP) — Watching for a nude cyclist who has appeared at several district picnic lately, Hamilton police yesterday flushed a different bird from behind a bush in Gage Park.

It was Nick Klymhow, 54. His original excuse when he appeared in court today was that he was suffering from a rare skin disease which would not permit him to wear trousers. Unconvinced, Magistrate H. A. Burbidge convicted him on a charge of indecent exposure and remanded him to Aug. 9 for sentence.

HOTEL LICENCE CANCELLED

Toronto, July 30 (CP) — The Liquor Authority Control Board of Ontario today announced it has suspended the beer and wine sale authority of the Sheldon Hotel on Victoria Street in downtown Toronto for failure to obey recent Board order requiring beverage rooms to remain open for at least one hour Tuesday and Thursday nights. An official said the Sheldon failed to stay open last Thursday. The suspension is for one week.

"This is just a reminder that hotels are to obey the Board order," said the spokesman.

As the Allies Planned

Time and victory have wrought changes which Adolf Hitler never counted on. He declared some years ago that Germany would come to the peace settlement conference armed. The first peace conference arising out of the Second World War has opened and Germany is not represented there. Nor is Japan. Hitler is not there. There is no German armed might now.

The power of might and aggression was the greatest threat to the world but the United Nations overcame it and prevented such a scene as Hitler had envisioned to himself with Germany making world decisions and settling the post-war problems. What a nightmare of horror and mockery of the names of "peace" and "conference" would there have been had Hitler's dream come true! It would have been the most tragic experience in the history of man. It would have been the twilight or the midnight of civilization, and of all that man in his climb up through history had achieved. But in the nature of things that evil could not be. Liberty is a spirit that cannot be defeated. It triumphed over the horrors which the Nazis had planned for the world. Hitler's boast of dictating the fate of the world by arms gave way to the spirit of freedom.

Mankind is earnestly regarding the progress that will be made towards the settlement of world problems at the present peace conference in which treaties with five nations will be considered, and prays that the delegates will be so guided as to reach solutions of whatever problems have arisen or will arise.

Greece

The Greek plebiscite, to be held on the 1st of September for or against the monarchy was the subject of a question in the British House of Commons last week. This was indicative of British popular interest in the manner in which the plebiscite will be conducted. While the future form of the Greek constitution is the concern of the Greek nation alone, British friends of Greece feel justified in expressing the hope that all parties will be enabled to register their vote fairly and freely, without threat or hindrance.

The United Kingdom Government shares these hopes and has so informed the Greek Government, in all friendship but with firm emphasis.

The Minister of State, Mr. Noel Baker, said in his reply to Mr. Wilkes (Labor) according to Hansard: "As the result of concessions made by the Greek Government to the Parliamentary opposition, the election will enable the Greek people to express their will against the institution of monarchy if they so desire. Each elector will be given three ballot papers; one will be stamped with the name of the King; one will be stamped with any constitutional formula which the opposition may suggest, for example, with the word 'Republic;' the third will be left blank to be filled in as each elector may desire. Blank ballot papers on which nothing is written will be counted as votes against the King."

"The Prime Minister has given assurance that if the King fails to obtain a majority, the Government will resign and the whole question of the Constitution will then be opened."

"His Majesty's Government have told the Greek Government, with all the emphasis at their command, how essential it is that the plebiscite shall be a fair and honest expression of the people's will, carried out in conditions of social and political security. But His Majesty's ambassador in Athens has made no representations to the Greek Government about the form of the plebiscite."

Short Speech, Short Words

Since "brevity is the soul of wit," it would seem that the speech delivered not long past by S. Dewitt Clough to the graduating class of Abbott Laboratories in Chicago has the merit of wit since it is composed of brief, simple gems of wisdom and observation on life. The graduates who heard Mr. Clough will surely remember his words, as so much thought in so few and so short words.

Here is the speech travelling over the continent in the press as a model for speakers and writers and all others:

"It was good of you to ask me to be with you. I am glad to be here. You have all done well. I urge you to press on to the high goal you have in mind. Aim at the stars. You will hit some of them. Luck is just a bit of pluck.

"Your thoughts plus faith will come true. You are what you think. You can be what you will. Bear this in mind. Think well and you will be well.

"Let your aims in all your work be these:

"Be brief.

"Be clear.

"Be kind.

"Be true.

"Bless all and God will bless you.

"There can be no chance for you to fail as long as you think right.

"This is my speech.

"Thank you."

The words are all of one syllable and yet they were spoken by a man who could have used much longer words but for the sake of clearness and for understanding he used the short. At the same time they are nearly all Anglo-Saxon with a few from the Norman French and Scandinavian tongues taken into English in the early days of the growth of the language.

To write or speak in words so English is worth the cost in thought, though it may be hard to do—it is worth trying.

Professor Has It

Professor August Piccard is one of the strangest paradoxes of a paradoxical age. He is a professor who looks like a professor.

As such he establishes the further paradox of doing things that are more in the line of Buck Rogers, Jules Verne or Douglas Aircraft.

Plainly he doesn't care a hoot about politics.

A few years ago this Swiss scientist floated affably in a wonderful balloon — which he designed — ten miles above the earth, and took a peak at the hitherto unsampled stratosphere.

Now he is planning to go four miles under the sea in a steel sphere, to see what they are doing in those parts. Reports have it that he will probably pick the Gulf of Guinea, where you might find almost anything, even a sea monster uglier than British Columbia's ogopogo.

Yet even as Professor Piccard looks like a professor, so he may have the clue to something which is so eminently practical that it might rival the psyche of a banker.

Because, without risking hangovers or the reportedly dismal after-effects of opium, he has found a most satisfactory medium of escapism — which means getting away from it all.

It cannot be denied that, with things the way they are now, ten miles above the earth, or four miles under the ocean, are just about the best places a man could possibly be.

—Hamilton Herald.

The long search for a "death ray" can now be called off. The atomic bomb is that, too. By-products of bomb manufacture also emit death rays.

Fortunately radiations from fissionable materials also make detection of their manufacture easy and certain. Humanity does not have to commit suicide. The alternative, however, is painful — the exercise of intelligence and self control, says the Chicago Daily News.

GOLF

Golf is a game domineering.
  Of triumphs not many can boast.
For prizes (which tarnish) and cheering
  It asks far too much of the most.
A man must with patience endeavor
  To live to its laws, one and all.
The first one (and some learn it never),
  You must keep your eyes on the ball.

Golf's a tyrannical master.
  Respect for its rule it demands.
The club head must always move faster
  Than shoulders and hips and the hands.
Golf penalties strike without pity.
  Alike on all players they fall.
For clever, for wise, and for witty—
  One way: keep your eye on the ball.

A golfer must think when he's playing
  Of what he is trying to do;
Hear nothing companions are saying;
  However so lovely the view—
All beauty he has to be spurning.
  Still keeping his eye on the ball.
But this takes a lifetime for learning,
  And I cannot manage it all.

In a baseball match at Madoc yesterday the Belleville Juniors were defeated by the team of that place, the score being 6 to 1. The outstanding player for Madoc was the pitcher, Casey, held the locals in the palm of his hand, striking out 18 of them. Ken Colling was pleased with the work of his newly acquired pitcher, Ibey, a southpaw. He pitched a good game and it was not his fault that the local team lost.

Why is it that with so many automobiles in Belleville, so few of them are seen on Front Street? The only reason we can think of is that the roadway is so bad that the owners of the cars do not wish to risk their lives on it.

Ald. Sinclair, chairman of the gas committtee in the city council, informs us that seventy new gas services will be installed before winter comes. Some people ridiculed the idea of putting new gas main on Bleecker Avenue, but the wisdom of such action has been amply vindicated; twenty-five new services have been installed on the avenue this season.

Eire News Letter

By MICHAEL ROONEY
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Dublin, July 30 — (CP) — A new Republican political party, Clann No Poblachta, has been formed in Eire and will contest elections in an effort to obtain representation in the Dail.

A statement issued after a preliminary conference here said that "for many years a large section of the publican opinion has felt that Republicans should take an active part in the political life of the nation . . .

"It was felt that the cycles of repression and violence which have marked the history of the last quarter of a century could provide no solution and could only weaken the national effort . . .

"The nation is being weakened by forced emigration of its youth. A small section has been enabled to accumulate enormous wealth, while unemployment and low wages, coupled with an increased cost of living, are the lot of the workers.

"It has become apparent that if these evils, and the system responsible for them, are to be ended, there must arise a strong political party that will set up an ideal before the nation and a new standard of political morality in public life."

Teachers: Dublin's school strike drags on week after week with no sign of a settlement of the teachers' demands for increased salaries and improved working conditions.

Fear that the strike would react on the government's plans for teaching Irish were expressed in the Senate by Senator M. Hayes, who said that if the teachers eventually returned to work "sour and humiliated" it would affect their teaching enthusiasm.

He urged an examination of Eire's teaching system and criticized the government's decision to increase the grant to parents in Irish-speaking district to encourage their children to speak Irish.

Farm help: Increased wages for Irish farm workers on a uniform scale were urged by speakers at the Irish Trade Union Congress, who said Dublin agricultural workers now had annual holidays, a weekly half-day and overtime rates of pay. Conditions in rural areas, however, were described as "terrible."

Tattoo Marks May be Clue To Slain Man

Windsor, July 30 — (CP)—Investigation spread to both sides of the international boundary today as police tried to identify a tattoed man, whose battered, naked body was found Sunday, lying face down in a pool of stagnant water on Peche Island in the Detroit River.

Ontario Provincial Police, led by Inspector F. C. Kelley of the Criminal Investigation branch, and Detroit police had only four tattoo marks as clues. Yesterday several Detroit residents viewed the body in a funeral home here but no one reported recognizing it.

Police said they were "almost certain" the slaying took place on the island, but the body may have been dragged to the swamp on the northeast shore where it was found by two Detroit holidayers. Marks on the ground, possibly indicating a struggle, were obliterated by curious sightseers. But the marks may also have resulted if the body had been dragged to the spot, after being transported from some other place.

Hammer Blows Possible Cause

Found beside the body was a 15-foot length of half-inch rope, one end of it covered with blood, and six cents in American money. There were no clothes found on the island. The jaw was fractured and there were two gaping holes in the base of the skull, possibly caused by heavy blows with a hammer or other blunt instrument. Laverations were found all over the body.

The man's fingerprints have been sent to Washington and Ottawa, but this would establish identification only if he had a police record or was a veteran of the armed forces. In addition a chart of his dentures was made by a Windsor dentist.

One of the tattoo marks was heart-shaped with the name "Mabel" inscribed. Another showed a cross, some flowers and the word "hope."

The body was discovered Sunday evening by Gladys Witherie and Chester Farnest of Detroit, who had beached their pleasure craft and gone for a walk on the island. After an autopsy, coroner Dr. James M. Young estimated the time of the slaying at approximately 7 a.m. Sunday.

The man was described as five feet six inches tall, barrel-chested, with a small moustache and iron grey hair.

HOUSING PROGRAM

Many Speakers Heard

Speakers in the day-long debate included W. A. McMaster (PC — Toronto High Park), E. D. Fulton (PC — Kamloops), Lt.-Col. C. C. Merritt, V.C. (PC — Vancouver - Burrard), Howard Green (PC — Vancouver South), Alistair Stewart (CCF — Winnipeg North), Stanley Knowles (CCF — Winnipeg North Centre), John Probe (CCF—Regina City), and James Sinclair (L — Vancouver North).

The Senate met briefly and dealt with several minor bills.

In the housing debate, Mr. Howe outlined steps the government was taking to increase the production of building materials. The practice was to examine the situation in an industry, determine what was preventing full production and institute remedial action.

For instance, price increases had been granted to stimulate the production of nails and soil pipe while asbestos output was stepped up by granting double depreciation to the company producing it on the understanding it undertake a fairly large expansion.

New brickyards and an old wall board mill were being brought into operation by government assistance and negotiations were under way which might result in the government making some plumbing manufacturing machinery available.

Imports Improving

One of the first questions asked of an industry requiring assistance was whether the plant was operating at full capacity. If not, three shifts a day were put in operation to boost the output. Agreements with plants being assisted usually extended for two years.

Mr. Howe also reported that imports of window glass from the United States, Britain and Belgium were improving.

Replying to questions, he said the loans being extended to lumbering companies for the building of houses for employees also would be granted to logging operators, who, were considered for the purposes of the bill to be in the lumbering business.

Mr. McMaster urged the government to take steps to direct the flow of building materials into proper channels and noted April construction figures showed only $18,000,000 spent on homes while $42,000,000 went into the building of industrial plants, churches, theatres and other types of construction.

Want Prices Investigated

Mr. Dulton said the government should leave the building of homes to those who know how it should be done and confine itself to a policy which would encourage construction and the production of materials.

Col. Merritt and Mr. Green joined in urging Mr. Howe to investigate ceiling prices and the supply of lumber in British Columbia.

Mr. Stewart urged the government to get into the housing business with both feet and contended that private enterprise never could provide the houses needed. The government also should undertake a slum clearance program.

Mr. Knowles said the government should give the building of homes, whether by private or public enterprise, No. 1 priority. Thus far, it had failed to meet the problem.

20 OCCUPANTS HOMELESS

Hull, Quebec, July 30 —(CP)—Fire, which for a time threatened to consume an entire block of homes, yesterday destroyed two Kent Street houses here and left 20 occupants homeless. Several houses caught fire during the hour-long battle, but the spreading flames were brought under control with small damage.

THE DOCTOR'S SKILL

I hate to mention this less readers of limited I. Q. take fright where only assurance or encouragement in intended. But the truth is that most of the crises or tragedies that occur from heart or artery disease happen, not when the individual is busy at his or her activity, muscular work, exercise, play, but rather when he or she is at rest. This statistical fact alone, it seems to me, cancels out whatever theory or fancy the old timers conceived as warranting their policy of rest, rest and more rest for all sufferers from heart or artery trouble.

In recent years many reports in medical literature have tended to strengthen the more physiologic view and established the principle that most such sufferers from heart and artery (forgive me, but I must use the term in the scientfic, not the popular sense) degeneration, even if they need rest to restore lost compensation or reserve power, have greater need for exercise, graduated doses of exercise as prescribed by the physician, to regain fair working or living capacity.

For years I have been trying to teach people the ways of health and in my judgment it is of little advantage in most cases and a disadvantage in many to know precisely how many millimeters of mercury or "points" one's blood pressure is.

And so, I arrive at what a lot of our readers will consider an amusing conclusion, namely, that ours would be a happier, healthier world if all sphygmomanometers (gadgets for measuring blood pressure) were left exclusively to the physiology laboratory and the popular mind were disabused of the idea that high blood pressure is a disease or condition that is susceptible of treatment by medicine, diet or other specific remedy. It is as sensible to entertain that idea as it is to think there is some specific medicine, diet or other treatment for high temperature (fever) regardless of what ails the individual.

After all, the professional skill of the doctor always was and still is more reliable than the blind record of a machine. Measuring in individual's blood pressure may be of scientific diagnostic interest in some circumstances, but so far as health or medical treatment may be concerned — aside from the psychological effect on people who are impressed by machinery — it is of precious little value. If the physician cannot determine by ordinary physical examination whether the blood pressure is too high in any case, he needs more training in physical diagnosis.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Cramps

Is it true that many drownings are caused by cramps? Is it dangerous to go in the water after a meal? (K. M.)

Answer—No, to both questions. "Cramps" to explain drowning, is just a surmise. Various seizures which happen in the water account for most drownings — epileptic, apoplectic, heart disease, syncope or simple fainting. Then in some ceaeassisl in some cases vertigo resulting from entrance of cold water into the ear (particularly if there is a drum perforation) probably renders the swimmer temporarily helpless.

Hear Ye, Hear Ye

To Whom it May Concern: I have read in the paper that you have a cure for pimples and blackheads. I have tried everything without getting any help. I'll be glad to pay anything for a cure. (Betty)

Answer—Write again, ask for the pamphlet "Acne — Blackheads and Pimples", sign your name, and inclose an envelope with your name and address and a stamp on it. I never have a cure for anything, for the same reason that an honest doctor never promises or guarantees to cure anything.

Is the Gila monster's bite fatal to man?

Naturalists disagree as to the extent of the ill effects of the bite of the large, odd-looking "beaded" lizard known as the Gila monster, which inhabits sandy wastes in the Southwest and which is one of the ony two known species of venomous lizards, the other being a first cousin in Mexico and other parts of Central America.

The name of this creature arose from the fact that it first attracted notice in the valley of the Gila (pronounced "HEE-la") river in Arizona. Formerly all lizards were believed to be venomous, and Shakespeare refers to this belief in III Henry VI when he has Queen Margaret use the expression "venom toads, or lizards' dreadful stings."

Until recently it was widely believed that the Gila monster's venom was similar to that of rattlesnakes and other venomous serpents and that it was fatal to man and the larger animals. It is now known that the venom-producing apparatus of the lizard is very inefficient compared to that of venomous snakes, and that its venom, supplied to grooved teeth by a gland on each side of the lower jaw, is not injected directly into the victim's flesh by the teeth but is mixed with the saliva in the reptile's mouth. That is why many authorities once supposed that persons who died from being bitten by Gila monsters were the victims of blood-poisoning induced by the germ-laden saliva rather than of the direct effects of the venom.

As a matter of fact, the poison gland of the Gila monster, like that of venomous serpents, is a modified salivary gland. To do a good job of poisoning the Gila monster must sink its teeth deep into the flesh. Although generally sluggish by nature, it strikes with lightning-like quickness, clamps its powerful jaws on its victim and holds on with a bull-dog grip that often cannot be broken even by dismembering the monster.

Undoubtedly the poison affects the human heart, and there are cases on record of persons who died from its effects, but ordinarily the venom produces no ill effects other than an irritation or painful soreness for several days. Fowls, rodents, frogs and other small creatures are much more likely to die from the poison, but experiments show that it is not necessarily fatal to them.

The Gila monster, like venomous serpents, is immune to its own poison. Scientifically it is known as "Holoderma suspectum," while the species common in central and western Mexico is "Heloderma horridum." Both species, during periods of plenty, develop fat tails, which serve as reservoirs of energy for times of food scarcity. In the natural state these lizards live chiefly on ants, but in captivity they seem to thrive on a mixture of raw eggs and ground raw meat. They sometimes attain a length of two feet. In captivity they often become quite tame.

Putting United Nations Charter On its Feet First Job of Rotary District Gov. Tells Clubmen

George Ziegler, Parry Sound, Welcomed Officially by Local Club

Rotary International's first job in these amazing days of peace is to get the United Nations charter on its feet; to be the handmaiden of the United Nations in securing information regarding the world charter and to give this information to "We, the people," District Governor George Ziegler, of Rotary District 168 told the Belleville club at his annual visit on Monday.

Governor Ziegler, who is a retired banker and at present the mayor of Parry Sound, in his early remarks paid sterling tribute "to one of my dearest friends, the late Owen Herity."

"Where in the world is there such an organization as well equipped as Rotary to get peoples of the world internationally-minded?" he said. "At present, Rotary is represented in 72 different countries with 580 clubs and a membership of 240,000."

"International understanding and co-operation for the betterment of all is our job, and the top theme of Rotary International."

Refers to Convention

Referring to his recent attendance at the Rotary International convention, Governor Ziegler told the clubmen that a brilliant Chinese speaker, one of the chairmen of the United Nations Security Council told the international group that 1,000 service clubs were needed in his country today, because like any other country, China needs the promotion of better understanding and fellowship among business and professional men; community-betterment undertakings; raising the standard of business and professions and fostering the advancement of good will, understanding and peace among the peoples of the earth.

At the international convention where 40 countries were represented, Governor Ziegler said, "Rotary strongly emphasized the international aspect." The Netherlands had 39 charters cancelled during the war. It has re-established 33 and has instituted one new club.

DIST. GOV. GEO. ZIEGLER

The United Nations are not far enough advanced in organization to even encourage its Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. It is Rotary's job to put this on its feet.

Rotary International realizes that this cannot be fully accomplished in the next 20 years, but if it is effective within the next seven years, it will help considerably. "We must help put it across."

"Our vocational work has been slipping a little during the past and we must look after it—but this international job comes first," he said.

Governor Ziegler met the directors and committee chairmen at an informal meeting in the Hotel Quinte directly following the luncheon address. He outlined plans for the coming year and invited suggestions from the clubmen for the betterment of not only the Belleville club but Rotary as a whole.

He was introduced and thanked by President Bert Howard. Jack Deacon led the sing-song and a number of American guests from Brooklyn and Arkansas were introduced.

RIGHT TO KILL

The little animals are allowed to shelter in dark-corridored Hindu temples.

Although the Hindu venerates the monkey, he dreads its attacks on crop and has complained bitterly of these losses. Yet veneration was so strong that he would employ only bloodless devices of control — mostly trapping the monkeys in nets or skilled throwing of a noose, then transport them to some distant place. This meant only that the monkeys would pester someone else.

Hindu mythology says that Hanuman, a giant ape, attained Godhood after he helped Rama, a great Hindu God, to recover his abducted wife from the Island of Ceylon. The story is that Hanuman and an army of monkeys dropped ganite blocks into the Guf of Manar, creating a chain of island "stepping stones" which enabled Rama's conquering army to reach Ceylon.

Judiciary Probe Into Police Force Maybe Demanded

Mnotreal, July 30 (CP) —Resignation yesterday of Capt. Arthur Tache, head of the Montreal morality squad, today gave impetus to reports that the Citizens' Vigilance League would rene wits efforts for a judiciary probe into the municipal police department.

Capt. Tache, assigned to the position last November and ordered to clean up gambling and vice, resigned following a suspension order by Police Director Fernand Dufresne. Hiss successor is Lieut. Gabriel Piche.

The suspension authoritative sources said, was based on several charges, including one that said Tache, before leaving for a two-week vacation, left behind a detailed plan of raids to be carried out "at a specific hour and a specific date." Another charge was said to be bribery.

Following Tache's resignation, Assistant Diretcor Alfred Belanger said there no longer was any need of proceeding with the charges.

Belanger said that charges against Tache, who goes on pension following 32 years service with the force, if proved before the disciplinary board of the department, "would perhaps have been enough to bring about Capt. Tache's dismissal." He added the resignation was "a little forced."

Whether or not there will be further changes in the morality squad now is up to Lieut. Piche, Belanger said, adding that another member of the squad, so far unnamed, will be charged with failure to carry out the director's orders. He is said to have acted on Tache's orders.

TRENTON

Police Report Three Accidents

Trenton — A car owned and driven by Eric N. Smith, R.R. No. 2, Trenton, was proceeding north on Victoria Ave. on Sunday evening when at the intersection of Victoria and Dundas Sts., Smith lost control of his car, which mounted the curb on the southwest corner, knocked down an iron school sign and proceeded across Dundas Street to the north west corner, again going over a high curb and knocking over trees on a lawn at 120 Victoria Ave., and then struck a parked car at the above address, doing no damage to the parked car which was owned by Kenneth Wilson, 137 Palmerston Ave., Toronto. Smith's car was damaged considerably on left front fender, wheel and left front headlight.

Donald McColl of Batawa was parked on Dundas Street opposite Couch & Newtons. When he went to pull away from the curb he was struck by a car driven by W. D. Haig, R.R. No. 5 Colborne, doing damage to the Haig car to the extent of about $15.00.

A car driven by Ed. J. McDonald, 179 Victoria Ave. Trenton, was involved in an accident with a taxi driven by Harry Leland, 33 South Street, Trenton and owned by Claude Wallace. Both cars were slightly damaged.

Aerial Acrobatics Displayed In Steel Strike

Hamilton, July 30 — (CP) — After skirmishes on land and water the steel strike took to the air here yesterday when thousands of steel workers and citizens were treated to a display of aerial acrobatics that resulted from efforts of a company plane to drive a union plane away from the strike-bound Hamilton works of the Steel Company of Canada.

The aerial "dog-fight" resulted in no casualties and didn't prevent the union plane from sweeping over the sprawling plant 10 or 12 times, dropping thousands of leaflets to those men who remained on the job at the Steel Company of Canada since the United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.) went on strike July 15.

Spectators said that the union plane, a 140-mile an hour machine piloted by Ernie Taylor, Atlantic Ferry Command veteran was harassed by the company plane, a 170-mile an hour job piloted by an R.C.A.F. veteran, flying from a field near Hamilton from which supplies have been flown into the plant's own landing strip since the strike opened.

Eye-witnesses said that the faster company machine tried to force the union plane off its course by flying over it and then diving in front, but in almost a dozen runs over the property the union pilot refused to be diverted.

Leaflets Fall on Stelco Property

The company acknowledged that many of the several thousand leaflets dropped by the union plane fell on plant property. These leaflets asserted that the union was "certain to win the strike" and the leaflets themselves were "safety passes" thru the picket lines for any of the workers that cared to accept the invitation.

Although no accurate figures are available it is reported that possibly 2,500 men are still at work in the Stelco plant, which employs around 4,800 in normal times.

Steel company officials reported yesterday further increases in production since the start of the strike. They said coke production was expected to reach normal figures shortly; that pig iron production 80 per cent of normal, and that about 11,000 tons of ingots have been turned out since the start of the strike. Production was also said to have improved in the bloom and billet mills, and in those finishing mills that have been kept operating.

Three bus-loads of U.S.W.A. members from Toronto factories will join Hamilton steel strikers on the picket lines for some hours tonight.

NEGOTIATIONS OPEN

Toronto, July 30 (CP)—Negotiating committees of the United Packinghouse Workers (CIO) and representatives of Canada Packers Limited and Burns and Company Limited went into session yesterday to discuss union demands of $33.60 for a guaranteed 37 1-2-hour week. There will be no statement until negotiations end successfully or are deadlocked. The talks are expected to continue all week.

INCREASE GRANTED

Washington, July 30 (AP) — The office of price administration yesterday authorized an immediate increase of 11 per cent in retail ceiling prices for men's shirts, shorts and pajamas.

The agency also granted an additional increase of up to 10 per cent, on top of the 11 per cent, for men's and boys' dress shirts and boys' sport shirts in lower price brackets.

PINERO NOMINATED

S. troops landed in Puerto Rico in 1898. He has been resident commissioner for the island since January, 1945.

Leaflets with "passouts" for the men inside the Steel Co. of Canada, Hamilton, are dropped into the plant from plane which took off from Toronto Island Airport yesterday afternoon. Passout slip, addressed to picket captain at the Stelco gates, is signed by Reg. Gardiner, president of Local 1005, Steelworkers' Union.

The bride-to-be sincerely thanked the ladies present for their gifts and good wishes.

During the evening the ladies compiled a cook book of their favorite recipes which was later presented to Miss Lougheed by Mrs. K. Vivian.

WEDDINGS

JACKMAN—HOGG

Stirling, (Special.) —A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday, July 27, at 3 p.m., by the Rev. J. W. Houston, of Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, in Stirling United Church, when Marie Leury Hogg, Stirling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Leury, became the bride of Desmond Jackman, D.F.C., Belleville, son of Mrs. Edna Jackman, Stirling. Cool Streak of Black

By PRUNELLA WOOD

NOTHING which feels or looks cooler than black . . . nothing which looks as formal in hot weather, either. That's why most fashion-gleaming notes concerning best-dressed gatherings all over the country consist mostly of black-frock descriptions during August.

This particular model is from a ready-to-wear collection of original models. . . meaning that you won't meet yourself coming in great masses of other women in black. Meaning also that the model is cut and finished with handwork, and is just one jump short of a custom-made outfit.

This dress is a two-piece after-dark model, of black crepe, with its back-dipping flat peplum bordered with cutouts which are backed with black lace. The bodice cutout has no backing.

Women's Activities

MELROSE W.I.

The regular W.I. meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Arnold Reilly, Melrose, with an attendance of 34. All were pleased to welcome Mrs. C. Holmes, guest speaker.

Mrs. Wm. McMechan presented Salvation Army badges to all present.

Mrs. Harry Murphy, program convener, took charge of social part with community singing and later conducted a quiz on Institute progress in passing years.

Mrs. Bruce Sherman favored with a solo.

Mrs. C. Holmes addressed the gathering, relating interesting and amusing experiences during her membership in the W.I.

A contest followed "My Confessions", which proved highly entertaining.

At the close of the meeting delicious refreshments were served.

TOO BAD — THERE WAS NO LIFE INSURANCE—!

WHAT woman excites more pity than the widow left without some financial provision for her future?

For most people, Life Insurance is the one sure means of planning a continuance of income in case of the untimely death of a breadwinner. It can be arranged to provide a guaranteed monthly income which will arrive with clock-like regularity . . . a continuing "pay-envelope" to replace earnings that are lost.

The wife who neglects to plan the family budget to allow the inclusion of Life Insurance is foolish indeed.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The War Widow and Her Wedding Ring

Dear Miss Fairfax:
My problem is one which probably confronts many young war widows of today.

Should I continue to wear a wedding band, and if so, how long?

T. S.

Whether or not—or how long—a widow continues to wear her wedding ring is entirely up to her own feelings and wishes.

Some widows like to wear their rings until they become seriously interested in another man and look forward to a second marriage. Others, if they never marry again, like to wear the memento of their love all their lives.

And still other prefer to put their rings away, after a year or so, on the theory that an opportunity for a second marriage is more likely to present itself if they do not appear to be already tied up. They feel that when a man sees a wedding ring on the hand of a women he meets for the first time, he naturally takes it for granted that she has a husband in the offing, and so, no matter how much he may feel attracted to her, he is unlikely to try to follow up the meeting. Whereas, if he sees no ring, he assumes that she is a free agent. Then, if the two become really interested in each other, the fact of the woman's earlier marriage comes out naturally and takes its proper place as past history.

So you can feel free to do as you please in the matter of wearing your ring.

Her Boy Friend Makes Lame Excuses

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am a girl of 25, and have been going with a man the same age for two months. I am madly in love.

Lately, he has broken several of our dates and refuses to give a reason. On one occasion, while at a dance, he became irritated because I was unable to dance on account of my fallen arches. On the same night he became peeved because of my bright nail polish and dark lipstick, but at the same time he enjoyed gazing at the girl in the next booth who looked no different than I.

Do you think I should try and please him by dancing regardless of my arches, and lighten my make-up to make him once again love and appreciate me?

Desperate

It sounds to me as though your boy friend were thinking up pretty lame excuses for finding fault with you. If he was entranced with you, he'd rather sit out dances with you than glide around the floor with the smoothest dancer in the world. Love is like that.

And by the same token, if were equally "madly in love", you could wear green nail polish and bright blue lipstick, and he'd think you looked like an angel, and would never stop to try and figure out why. Love is blind, you know.

Of course, if you're really set on making a play for this lukewarm lover, get yourself some arch supports and tone down or match up your make-up and see if it makes him any more ardent. But my hunch is that wou'd be smart to play him with a nonchalant line instead of trying to reel him in. Because it looks very much to me as though he were trying to wriggle off the hook, and you don't want to be made a sucker of by finding yourself frantically trying to land a catch that is swimming gaily away.

.. Should She Carry a Torch? ..

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am a girl of 18, just finished my last year of High School. I like a man just out of the service who is 23, but he doesn't like me. He thinks I am just a kid.

Do you think I should go around carrying a torch for him, or just forget him?

Susan B.

What do you think yourself, Susan? Don't you think torch-carrying is pretty silly business for a girl just out of school who's got the whole world ahead of her?

If you were, say, 48 instead of 18, and hopelessly and desperately in love and knew it was your last chance, than I might say: Sure, go ahead; get all the satisfaction you can out of pampering yourself by carrying a torch. Though I'm sure you'd get a lot more out of life by putting the whole thing out of your mind and interesting yourself in other things.

But since you're not 48, but just 18, I say: Be yourself, Susan! The world is full of nice boys, and here's a lot of fun waiting for you if you've got sense enough to take it. So for heaven's sake, start having it, and quit mooning over a man who isn't interested in you!

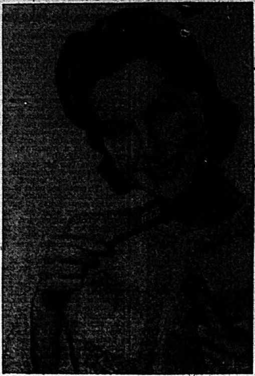
Are Your Teeth Shining Bright



Brush teeth thoroughly two or more Times a day

By HELEN FOLLETT

BEAUTY of the face lies in the entire composition, not in the eyes or the complexion or one feature alone. Lovely white teeth of perfect formation are a necessary detail.

According to surveys, tooth care is not what it should be. Individuals who can well afford the best professional attention often postpone the visit to the dentist's office until their biters are in a deplorable condition.

Unless the dread toothache attacks them they just slide along. Twice a year the teeth should be examined, cleaned, tartar removed, repairs made if caries have appeared.

Eat Hard Substances

If you would preserve your teeth, make it a practice to eat hard substances, bread crusts, raw carrots, raw turnips, hard apples. We know that when any part of the body is exercised, it develops greater strength and more stability; this fact applies to the teeth and the gums as well as the musculature.

When brushing your teeth be sure to include the biting surfaces. Decay occurs more frequently in the double teeth, in which the formation of the enamel cup is irregular. In these little fissures, food will collect; it should be brushed away after each meal, the mouth rinsed afterward to flood away foreign particles.

Brushing Teeth

When brushing teeth, sweep away from the gums. Undue pressure on the gums will cause them to recede. If they are inclined to bleed, it is possible that tartar has formed and is causing trouble.

The formation of this barnacle-like growth is more active in some than in others. It forms hard, scaly masses at the base of the teeth, sometimes is responsible for infections and pain.

Use the brush so that the sides of the teeth are included in the cleaning process. And keep on brushing until your teeth shine.

Housewarming Party Plans

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:
We have just finished the decoration of our new house, and now our friends are inquiring, "When are you going to invite us to see your new house?". We are thinking of giving a Housewarming Party, and we have several questions on which we would very much like your advice.

1. Is it proper for us to give this Housewarming soon, or do you think we should postpone it until Fall?

2. If your advice is that we should give it soon, then whom should we invite? And should we invite them by telephone, or send written notes? If you suggest notes, do my mother and I both sign the notes, or would it be proper for me to write the notes, saying it is my mother's suggestion?

3. If a drink is served, should it contain whiskey, or should cocktails be served ,or should only a non-alcoholic drink be served?

4. Would you suggest we give this party during the week or during the week-end? And at what time of day?

5. If a guest brings a gift, should I write a thank-you note to to her or him a day or two after the party?

H. C.

1. That depends on circumstances. If your new house and its location are particularly attractive in summer, and if the majority of your friends won't be away at this time of year, it would be pleasant to give the Housewarming now. But if more of your friends will be able to come in the Fall, after vacation time is over, I suggest you postpone the general party, and this summer invite only your most intimate friends to drop in.

2. To a Housewarming, the family usually invites all available relatives and friends. Housewarming invitations may be given in various ways, depending on the number of guests to be invited and on the hostess' convenience. If only a few guests are to be invited, the invitations are usually given verbally or by telephone. If many invitations are to be sent, the invitations are usually written on visiting cards or on the inside pages of Informals, like a tea invitation:

Housewarming
Sunday, October sixth
Four to seven

Or, it is always proper to write notes of invitation, either on notepaper or on the inside pages of Informals:

Dear Mary,
You and Tom will make mother and me very happy if you will come to our Housewarming on Sunday, October sixth, from four to seven o'clock. We can't "officially" open our new house without you two dear friends!
Devotedly,

3. Whether or not you serve alcoholic drinks depends entirely on your and your family's preference. But if you do, you should (and this is most important) provide a non-alcoholic drink. If you give your party this summer, you might feature a fruit punch or some other fruit beverage; and if you wish, serve an alcoholic drink also. If in the Fall, you might serve tea and or coffee, with cocktails and or highballs as alternatives.

4. A Housewarming is usually given on either Saturday or Sunday, and usually it is a late afternoon party, four to six, three to six, or, most often, four to seven.

5. Yes.

Novelty is rife in charming blouses prepared for Autumn. A college girl would just delight in a white rayon crepe blouse gay with a hand-painted clowns-and-ballons design, picked out in sequins.

Fashion Flashes

TAKE ALONG at least one "background" dress when you go away. The sort of dress that serves as a smart but unobtrusive background for accessories is a great space-saver. Such a dress is a soft, simple affair in navy woollen, made with high, rounded neckline, and short, full sleeves cut in one with bodice. Skirt fullness at side has slit pockets.

Cooling off with a shower and then on with a cool, pretty housecoat makes good summer sense. Black spun rayon is used for a pretty coat with double-breasted fastening. White eyelet edges the broad collar and the slanting pockets.

Definitely on the dressy side, yet tailored, is a suit of taffeta, plaided in black on white. Black velvet collar and black velvet shoelace fastenings. Tiny but full peplum and full skirt.

Look out for new variations of the cape stole next Autumn. One lovely model is a shawl stole of black Russian broadtail, the fur worked on the bias. It is bordered with platinum fox.

The darling of the millinery world ust now is the pompom of clipped ostrich. It appears on everything from budget "lids" to creations. Definitely in the latter class is a lovely hat of white smoke felt with rolled breton brim and telescoped crown, trimmed with huge pompoms in pale beige ostrich.

Pretty Play Suit

Cheerful checked gingham outfit

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

AMERICAN DESIGNERS have not been playing when it comes to play clothes. They've been busy turning out good variations of the play suit, that useful country or resort ensemble. Red and white checked gingham is used for this nice little outfit which has matching shorts beneath the cover-up skirt which is made with broadly spaced unpressed sidepleats from an easy waistband. The shorts look good with the cover-up short-sleeved midriff too, or with a matching halter bra. The side effect jabot on the bodice lends a pretty touch.

"Sleep and Soft Forgetfulness"

Considering what a delicious moment it is after one has crept into bed, drawn up the covers, chased fretful thoughts from one's mind—it is strange that so few women make it a habit to get to bed at a reasonable hour. You know those night prowlers. The things they think they have to do after the children are tucked in! Along about 11 o'clock they may decide to do the family ironing. If they are reading a mystery story, they keep right on until after midnight.

How do they look when they drag out at seven to get the kids ready for school? They're grand old ruins. Faces all puckered up. Frowns between their eyes. They feel as cross as two sticks. Snarly and snappy because they have not had enough sleep. These misguided women pay and pay and pay, and payment is in the form of premature wrinkles. Cosmetics cannot disguise the facial disasters that come through loss of sleep. Make-up cannot camouflage weariness.

The activities of the day bring a certain amount of wear and tear. Fatigue bugs get into the circulatory system. Nerves cry out for rest. Repairs are necessary. If Nature is to make repairs, there must be seven or eight hours of restful sleep.

Over-fatigue can bring about excitable restlessness and nervousness that keep the sand man at a distance. You can be so tired that you can't sleep. You are unable to relax and compose yourself. Unless the mind is at rest the body cannot be released from tension.

Long hours of sleep are a good-looks insurance; they help one to hang onto the appearance of youth. The nervous system of the good sleeper is stronger, under better control, than that of the girl who drags out of bed every morning unrefreshed and heavy-lidded. The day starts all wrong for her. Her feathers are dragging in the dust. If she is a career girl, she is not likely to be efficient in her work. If she is a home body, every little chore looks like a big job.

And, let me say this: don't fancy that there are any pick-up beauty treatments, any miracle-working cosmetics that will take away the shadows, give freshness to the complexion. Pulchritude aids can't work against such heavy odds as weariness and low spirits.

If you are a chronic stay-upper do reform. Before retiring, give yourself a half-hour session of beautifying. During that time you will go limp, get drowsy. Have a warm bath. Brush your hair. Arrange rolls and ringlets and put on your wave net. Get out the cream jar and tip-tap some of its fragrant contents over face and neck. Use the leavings on your fingernails. Sit tall, breathe deeply for five minutes. Then go to bed.

These misguided women pay in the form of premature wrinkles

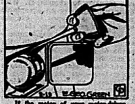
Attorney-General Nathaniel Goldstein said evidence against the organization was obtained by an undercover agent from his office.

Wife Preservers



If the motor of your motor-driven home appliance heats up too much, check to see if lubricant is needed. If, after oiling, the motor continues to heat up, it is time to have it checked by a motor repair shop.

Mrs. J. W. Snell, Walton St., Port Hope, writes: "Super Suds is my helper in all my housework and I find it grand for washing clothes. It makes them so soft and white. Another thing, Super Suds is safe. It makes the clothes last longer and my colored things always look fresh. Super Suds gets the dirt out quickly and easily, and never hurts my hands."

Thank you, Mrs. Snell, for your grand letter. You see, Ladies, Super Suds is Concentrated. Super Suds actually gives you far more washing-power . . . livelier, richer suds, without hard rubbing. And Super Suds costs no more than ordinary washday soap.

THEIR WAY TO Enjoyment

Our lakes this summer are going to attract thousands of friendly visitors from the States. We want them to enjoy themselves . . . it's in our own interest to see they get the very finest of everything we can give them.

WHAT CAN I DO? The answer is plenty! Here are some of the things anyone can do. These practical suggestions come from a well-known Ontario Hotelman:

1. Know the places of interest and beauty spots in your district and tell people all about them.
2. When you write your friends in the States tell them about the places they would really enjoy visiting.
3. Try to make any visitor glad he came to Canada.
4. Take the time to give any requested information fully and graciously.
5. In business dealings, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it up, follow the "Golden Rule."

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! The Province of Ontario profits to almost the same extent from tourist business as it does from the gold mining industry. It's up to each of us to see that it goes on growing.

This diagram shows how everyone benefits from the Ontario tourist income. Every dollar is shared this way . . . 1. Hotels; 2. Stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc.; 5. Amusements; 6. Garages.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them . . . we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday . . . so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend.

"Let's make them want to come back!"

Tune in "Ontario Holiday"

Most of us have a tough enough time with the few bridge rules we can manage to remember. With these we can play an acceptable game with all types of players who are as good as they claim.

So, I hate to see any cumbersome oddities creep into the needs of players. Not only does it complicate our own game. It drives the poorer players into a worse-than-ever condition.

However, as you go out into company without a guardian, you are likely to hear some strange things. And I do not want you to appear ignorant. So, I must acquaint you with some of the facts of bridge.

Among expert players, a few use what is known as the "trump echo." It is a seemingly unimportant diversion. In experienced play, however, a pair that knows it can make good use of it.

The trump echo is out to use by defenders like this: If trumps are played and you have three of them, first discard your middle one. When trump is played again, use your lowest.

Ordinarily, the high-low discard in a suit asks partner to lead that suit again. Not always is this necessary when that suit is the trump. So, in the trump suit it may be employed for another signal.

It may be used that way to show your partner you have another trump left, in case he needs to know. Like when you are sitting in the east and the spade trumps are distributed like this:

NORTH
♠J 7 3

WEST

EAST
♠8 6 4

SOUTH
♠A K Q 5 2

When south draws trumps, you play spade six as the start of a trump echo. On the second round, you play the four. Partner now has the signal that you have one trump left.

In order to save his dummy third trump for another purpose, declarer may not lead a third round of trumps. If your partner gets the lead, it may be important for him to know you have that trump.

If you are unable to remember this, forget it.

ON WAY HOME

Ottawa, July 30 —(CP)— Recovered from his 26 days in the Ontario wilds, Flt. Lt. William McKenzie took off for Winnipeg by R.C.A.F. plane yesterday with his wife and mother, Mrs. J. S. Taylor. McKenzie reached civilization last Thursday at Flack Lake, Ont., after spending 26 days in the wilds because of the crash of his jet-propelled plane.

George Polmanter Loses Close Decision to Pete Zaduk, Guelph, In Main Bout of Toronto Card

Sport Scribes Award Belleville Boxer Award of "Most Promising Fighter on the Card"

Belleville's George Polmanter was the victim of a pretty raw decision in Toronto Monday night before a sell-out crowd at Oakwood Stadium when he fought Guelph's "Pete" Zaduk in the five-round main "go". Polmanter fought the fight of his life and when the decision favoring Zaduk was announced, the "boos" lasted for fully five minutes.

It was a grand fight all the way with lots of action. The first round opened at a fast clip with the fighters feeling each other out. The pace kept speeding up right through until the final round when both boys showed signs of tiring. We, like thousands of others, figured that Polmanter won at least three of the rounds and the worst he should have received was a draw. He never looked better. This was evidenced by the fact that he won the poll of the sport scribes present as the "most promising boxer on the card."

The Toronto promoters are hot after a rematch. It certainly would be a big drawing card for Belleville.

"Joe" Wilson was the only one of six Belleville fighters to come back with a win. Wilson was awarded a clean-cut decision over "Al" Rowand of Toronto. The local boy was "on top" all the way and at no time was there any doubt as to the outcome of the battle.

Orr Treated Roughly

Bill Orr was treated pretty roughly, by Toronto's "Butch" McCallum. He was saved by the bell in the first round when the bell rang ending the round with the referee tolling over the prostrate Orr. He hit the deck again early in the second round for an "eight" count and was counted out following the second knock-down of the round at 1.53.

"Baldy" Young of Belleville dropped a close decision to Toronto's Gus Rubicini. Young fought all the way but the bigger, more experienced Toronto boy had the edge throughout. The local lad made a lot of friends by his willingness to mix it.

Toronto's Ernie Majurie displayed just a little too much class for "Singing Arthur" Duby. It was a good fight all the way but Duby didn't seem to be his usual self.

Harry DeRushie proved to be no match for Toronto's Val Mancuso. Mancuso lost no time with DeRushie. He dropped him almost at the start of the first round and when DeRushie got to his feet, he hammered him again, knocking him out after only 55 seconds of the round.

The following is a summary of the bouts in which Belleville fighters participated.

Main Bout

"Pete" Zaduk, 147 lbs., Guelph. decisioned George Polmanter, 147 lbs., Belleville.

"Joe" Wilson, 126 lbs., Belleville, decisioned "Al" Rowand, 126 lbs., Toronto.

Gus Rubicini, 118 lbs., Toronto, decisioned "Baldy" Young, 118 lbs., Belleville.

Ernie Majurie, 118 lbs., Toronto, decisioned Art Duby, 118 lbs., Belleville.

"Butch" McCallum, 198 lbs., Toronto, knocked out Bill Orr, 195 lbs., Belleville at 1.53 of the second round.

Val Mancuso, 135 lbs., Toronto, knocked out Harry DeRushie, 133 lbs., Belleville, at 55 seconds of the first round.

Cycle Factories Fight For Trade

London, (CP)—Bicycle manufacturers in the United States and Britain are fighting for first place in the European market.

British manufacturers plan to build 2,500,000 bicycles this year, two-thirds for export. It is believed the United States can produce over 6,000,000 a year. The American bicycles are heavier than the British.

Britain hopes soon to be able to supply the Dutch government and police with 350,000—equivalent to the Dutch manufacturer's annual pre-war output. France has ordered 20,000 and 100,000 are being sent to Europe through U.N.R.R.A.

Britain's 2,500,000 program is being undertaken though only one-third the pre-war personnel is available to build the bicycles. In addition, it is proposed to feed overseas bicycle assemblers with the parts they previously obtained from Germany and Japan.

In these efforts to put Europe "on wheels" Germany now is unable to compete. Spain is turning out 250,000 to 325,000 bicycles a year. It is estimated that 900,000 now are in use in the country.

Surplus of Flat Cars Bothersome Problem

Ottawa, July 30 (CP)—Canada has a war surplus of 1,644 flat cars and hasn't decided what to do with them, it was disclosed Monday in a return tabled in the Commons for Percy Black (PC-Cumberland).

The cars are on Canada's hands because the war ended before the whole of a mutual aid order for 3,000 could be delivered to Russia. And built for the Soviet, the cars won't fit Canadian rails.

The cars were turned out in the following numbers and price: Eastern Car Company, New Glasgow, N.S., 1,500 at $4,370 each; National Steel Car Corporation, Hamilton, Ont., 700 at $4,697 each, and Canadian Car and Foundry Co., Ltd., Montreal, 800 at $4,383 each. The difference in price resulted from varying quanities of spare parts.

Of the 3,000 cars produced, 1,356 were delivered to the Soviet and the remainder of 1,644 were declared surplus to War Assets Corporation.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a Saturday walk with pop and a man passed in a big shiney red car, and pop said, There he goes, the lucky stiff, and I said, Who is he, pop, and why's he lucky?

He's Sibley D. Enders, and he's lucky because he became tremendously rich while I remained comparatively poor, although, outside of his money, all he's got that I haven't got is a memory like filing cabinet, the ability to talk on 4 telefones at the same time, and the instincts of a killer, pop said. So you see, it's only by mere chance that I'm not driving that expensive big car, and I can think of only one quick way to lift by flagging spirits and expand deflated morale, he said.

How, pop? I said, and he said, By stepping into the barber shop and engaging in an airy conversation with the manicure gerl while she polishes my nales with her snowy fingers and giggles musically at my excruciating witticisms. It will put starch into my wilting self confidence and give me a strange new sense of power, he said.

Do you mean that cerly blonde manicure gerl with all the little white teeth? I said, and pop said, I believe I do, now that you mention it.

But G, pop, she's been changed for a manicure gerl with a crooked nose and frizzy black hair and thick glasses, I said, and pop said, Are you sure?

Sure I'm sure, pop, I couldn't imagine anything like that, could I, pop? I said, and pop said, Perhaps not, or at least it would hardly be werth the trubble.

Hay, pop, we're going passed the barber shop, I said, and pop said, Oh, so we are. Well, didn't some great generel say, Never tern back? he said.

I don't know, I said, and pop said, Neither do I, but great generels are always saying the darnest things, according to the newspapers. I'll change my plan of campain by buying myself a 30 cent cigar at the next drugstore, he said.

Which he did, looking like somebody feeling better instead of werse as soon as he lighted it.

Missing Mother Reported on Plane

North Conway, N. H., July 30 (AP)—Mrs. Barbara Walker, attractive 23-year-old mother who disappeared from a night picnic party at this fashionable resort a week ago, was reported on her way to California by plane.

Police said the report followed word that she spent last Friday night at the Y.W.C.A. in Boston —even while searching parties and an airplane scoured a lake and woodland near Conway in fear that she had been abducted.

The alarm that started a frantic quest for the young mother of a two-year-old boy came after her shoes, a hair ornament and flashlight were found near her automobile. Yesterday, a pair of torn slacks was found.

Mrs. Walker Sunday mailed from Boston a letter to her parents in North Conway containing about $2,00, a bank book and an aviation insurance policy covering a trip to New York. The policy was made out to herself and her two-year-old son.

FIRST DELIVERY REPORTED

Winnipeg, July 30 —(CP)— First delivery of wheat to be reported to the Agricultural Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway, was made yesterday by L. K. Leck from his farm 15 miles southeast of Purple Springs, Alta. The wheat weighed 63 pounds to the bushel and was graded as No. 1 Northern Hard. The crop yield per acre has not been determined but was expected to be slightly above average.

Why Should We Have To Endure That Nuisance, the Juke Box?

(The Ottawa Journal)

In the House of Commons the other day Mr. Hansell made a facetious but pointed comment on that noisy and quite useless contraption, the juke box. "Whenever I go to a restaurant," he said, "somebody is bound to drop a nickel into the juke box and blare into my ears some of our Western and American culture. Let the Minister put a little gadget on these machines so that the rest of us who do not like it can drop in a nickel that will turn the thing off."

The juke box has become one of the plagues of modern life and its over-loud and raucous voice ruins the peace and quiet of restaurants, tea shops, tourist camps. It makes conversation all but impossible, ruins even the most placid of disposition, and very often drives patrons away from the establishments which inflict these garish monsters upon their customers.

We know, for example of a small, quiet, well-run tea room, which promised to be popular with Ottawa motorists out for a drive and with tourists. Then the proprietor put in a juke box, and the whole character of the place is changed. It may be more popular with village youngsters, but they are seldom the mainstay of a business—it drives away those upon whom permanent and profitable trade depends. We know many persons who avoid as they do the smallpox once-favorite restaurants which now have juke boxes: often the proprietor adds to the degradation of his own establishment by installing a device which lets a customer turn the monster loose without leaving the table.

The appalling selfishness of those who feed nickels into a juke box is marked only by the proprietor's lack of consideration for those who denounce it as an abomination. As we have no hope that either situation will cure itself, relief has to be sought in other ways. Mr. Abbott says they are taxed, but obviously they are not taxed enough. We are strongly of the opinion that in Ottawa they should come under civic license, with an annual license fee for each machine of at least $1000.

The public have a natural right to a reasonable degree of quiet. A restaurant in Ottawa operates under a civic license and thus has a responsibility to the public. It is intolerable that to, please some of its patrons it should be free to do its best to drive the others mad.

Canada Likely To Play Big Role At Peace Parley

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, July 30. (CP Cable)—Canada is likely to play one of the biggest roles among the 17 countries invited by the Big Four to the 21-power peace conference opening in Luxembourg Palace today—a role of co-operation in trying to formalize peace in Europe and bring stability to the continent.

Parisians are paying a lot of attention to Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada who comes to the peace talks strengthened by his reputation for sanity and skill in international affairs. With Prime Minister Smuts of South Africa absent from the conference Mr. King is looked upon as the senior statesman of the British Dominions.

In an interview with The Canadian Press at the Hotel Crillon overlooking Place de la Concorde in the centre of Paris, Mr. King, apparently conscious of the possibility that this could be a "rubber stamp" conference for Big Four decisions, said:

"There should be an ample opportunity to have our views expressed. We are not here just to look at anything cut and dired."

He said Canada's aims at the peace conference were clearly understood.

"It has been stated before. We are not seeking reparations or territory. Our single desire is an enduring peace".

Mr. King, Health Minister Brooke Claxton, and other senior Canadian delegates, may not make the biggest contribution in speeches in the open forum. Their weight more probably will be felt in committees in secret sessions and in informal meetings. But the Canadian contribution is bound to be large from the way the situation is shaping up here now.

The Canadian Prime Minister's statement in an interview that "we are not here just to look at anything cut and dried" is particularly significant for it means in effect that Canada is going to insist on careful consideration of all draft treaties and will not accept, without thorough study, any of the decisions reached with such labor and time by the foreign ministers.

Twelve Fishermen Hike For Autos As Wolves Snarl

Peterborough, July 30—(CP)—Who's afraid of the Big Bad Wolf? Twelve fishermen in Dummer township.

The 12, in two parties of six men each, were so alarmed by a snarling pack of wolves at night that they dashed for their cars and vowed never to go back.

The men, including Bill and Allan Douglas of Douro township, were night fishing when they heard the snarl of the wolf pack "not 180 yards away."

"Four others were nearby," said Bill, "and we all dropped our lines and hiked for the cars. I had a trout on my line but I didn't even stop to pull it in."

Douglas said "it was a noise to chill the blood."

Statuary in Niches Of Ripon Cathedral

Ripon, England —(CP)—Thirty-two niches in the 15th, century stone screen which divides nave from choir in Ripon Cathedral are being filled with statuary, each figure the gift of an individual connected with the church.

Four large figures filling niches about seven feet high, and 13 smaller figures in the upper storey of the screen now are in place and the others will soon be finished by the sculptor, Esmond Burton of London.

It is doubtful whether the screen, built about 1490, ever before was provided with statues. The idea came from Dean G. Birchenough soon after his appointment in 1941.

The larger figures already in position represent Eadhead, Bishop Ripon from 681-686; St. Willibrod, 8th Century Archbishop of Utrecht; Archbishop Thurstan who in 1132 sanctioned the founding Fountains Abbey; and Matthew Hutton, Archbishop of York when King James I refounded the chapter of Ripon after a long suppression.

British Patrol Intercepts Ship With 2,500 Jews

Jerusalem, July 30 (CP)—A ship reportedly bearing more than 2,500 illegal Jewish Palestine immigrants from Europe was intercepted in the eastern Mediterranean by a British naval patrol craft today and escorted to Haifa.

The immigrants were not expected to disembark today.

(An exchange Telegraph Dispatch received in London from Haifa said a radio distress call had been received from a ship carrying 1,700 illegal immigrants, and that the ship had asked for an escort to Haifa.)

About 1,200 of the refugees were said to be men, approximately 1,000 women and the rest children.

The ship's approach became known when the glare of the red flares was sighted off Tel Aviv about 2 a.m. today.

Police and military forces were rushed immediately to the beach north and south of the town to prevent any attempt at illegal landing.

At the same time British aircraft and destroyers sped to the ship, intercepting it and escorting it to Haifa.

It was learned that the name given the ship by the refugees was "Haganah", name of a ewish organization.

Will Change Methods Of Packaging Peaches

Toronto, July 30—(CP)—Geo. Wilson, director of Ontario's fruit branch, Mon., said there will be changes in methods of packaging peaches.

Mr. Wilson was commenting on a statement made yesterday by V. G. McGuigan, chairman of the Kent Fruit Growers' Association, that red net-covered peach baskets will be used no longer and that peaches would most likely be packed in cardboard containers to be sold by the pound rather than by the basket.

The fruit branch director said that after Aug. 31, express companies have refused to handle baskets with red net covering and that his department was trying to find better methods of marketing peaches. He did not think, however, that peaches would be sold by the pound in Canada for some time.

Young Photographer Runs Camera School

Winnipeg (CP)—It might almost be said that Winnipeg's only school of photography was the indirect result of a fight between a policeman and an unidentified law-breaker about 10 years ago. As the constable felled his victim with a smashing right, a youngster named Harry Provisor aimed his miniature camera and took a fine series of action pictures.

He sold the pictures to a newspaper, resold them to a magazine, and sold them again to the house organ of a camera manufacturer. He eyed the resulting cheques and decided he'd found his career.

After a spell of duty as a photography instructor in the R. C. A. F., Provisor opened his own camera school in Winnipeg. His 60 pupils have daytime jobs, and attend classes at night. Some of them are just learning a new hobby; others want to open studios or work for newspapers.

A certain butcher is the most ambitious of all. He wants to buy a trailer and go on camera tours of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, selling his pictures to magazines.

Bring Members Of Polish Army Direct From Italy

Ottawa, July 30 — (CP)—Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent, acting prime minister, announced in the Commons Monday that the 4,000 selected agriculturists from the Polish army will be brought to Canada direct from Italy.

Replying to questions from Gordon Fraser (PC — Peterboro West), Mr. St. Laurent said he did not know if the movement of the former soldiers to Canada would in any way affect the repatriation of The Netherlands and Belgian war brides of Canadian servicemen.

He said all he knew was that a Canadian commission was working closely with British authorities to arrange for the movement of the Poles to Canada.

Former Educationist Ardent Entomologist

Winnipeg, July 30 (CP)—Bugs—50,000 of them—now occupy the hours that J. B. Wallis used to spend as assistant superintendent of Winnipeg schools. Retired for two years, he occupies most of his time with work on his beetle collection, believed to be one of the finest in Canada.

Mr. Wallis started collecting insects in 1904. As his collection grew large and unwieldy, he narrowed his interest to North American beetles.

He examines his beetles under a microscope, then mounts them. He has many ways of obtaining new specimens; once the University of Minnesota sent him 15,000 bugs to be identified. He received no payment for the work, but the university gave him some of the specimens he needed to fill the gaps in his collection.

Mr. Wallis straightens out the "miscroscope hunch" in his back by taking color pictures of birds and wild life. He also assists his son in carpentry and boatbuilding in their basement workshop.

Believed Man Slain Elsewhere

Windsor, July 30—(CP) — A medical examiner's report that the body of a man found slain on nearby Peche Island showed signs of a severe struggle, coupled with the fact there were no signs of scuffling in the vicinity where the body was discovered led police Monday to the belief the man had been murdered elsewhere and his body taken to the island.

The nude body was found at 7 p.m. Sunday and Dr. H. Bruce Hough who performed an autopsy, said there were multiple fractures of the skull and jaw which might have been inflicted with a hammer, and lacerations on both ankles, the back of the right leg and the back.

Coroner Dr. James M. Young said the victim had been dead about 12 hours which would set the time of murder at around 7 a.m. Sunday. Beside the body police found six cents in United States currency and a 15-foot length of half-inch rope. Two inches at one end of the rope were covered with blood. No trace of the man's clothing could be found.

The body was found lying face downward in swamp water on the north-east shore of the Canadian island, which lies at the entrance to the Detroit River, by Gladys Witberle of (5804 Vandyke Road) Detroit, and Chester Farnest of (2503 Phillip Street) Detroit. They had docked their boat at Peche Island and walked down a path when the discovery was made. Possibility was seen that the man had been murdered in the United States.

Cards and Dodgers Open Series Of Three Games at Ebbets Field With Nat. Loop Title at Stake

Rube Melton, Cardinal Cast-off, Will Hurl for Durocher's Men in First Game

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Former St. Louis Cardinal players and graduates of their farm system have been responsible for a number of defeats suffered by the Red Birds this season and the aspirants for the National League pennant will run into some of their former mates when they open a crucial three-game series with the pace-setting Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbets Field tonight.

Leo Durocher, manager of the Brooks and a member of the St. Louis' famous 1934 "Gas House Gang," has nominated Rube Melton, who hurled in the Cards' chain system to start for the Dodgers.

Pilot Eddie Dyer of the Cards, who trail the Dodgers by 2½ games, has selected southpaw Howie Pollett, who holds three straight victories over the Brooks to oppose Melton.

Brooklyn's Pistol Pete Reiser, another ex-St. Louis farmhand, and who since has been a fixture in Durocher's outfield, figured prominently in the victory scores by the leaders over Cincinnati yesterday.

Reiser smacked an inside-the-park three-run homer in the 5th inning to overcome a 3-1 Cincinnati lead, and the Dodgers went on to win 7-3.

Pitcher Mort Cooper and outfielder Carden Gillenwater, former Cardinal now performing with Boston Braves, played important roles in the Braves' 2-1 triumph over St. Louis.

Cooper fanned seven and allowed his former mates six hits. Gillenwater clouted the game-winning homer in the second inning.

Chicago's third-place Cubs drew to within four games in the second inning.

Chicago's third-place Cubs drew to within four games of St. Louis and 6½ of the Dodgers as they nosed out New York Giants, 5-4, in 11 innings.

In the American League, New York Yankees fell 11½ games back of the idle Boston Red Sox by losing in 12 innings to Chicago White Sox. Earl Caldwell, veteron rescue artist who entered the contest in the ninth inning, won his own game when he singled home Bob Kennedy in the 12th.

Washington Senators trimmed Cleveland Indians in a double-header, taking the opener 2-1, in 10 innings and the nightcap 8-4.

Detroit's third-place Tigers climbed to within two games of the Yanks as Freddie Hutchinson scattered seven hits in beating Philadelphia Athletics 4-1.

Pittsburgh Pirates, Philadelphia Phillies and St. Louis Browns, along with the Red Sox, were not scheduled.

Players Present Their Demands To League Presidents

(By The Canadian Press)

Representatives of National League Baseball players met yesterday in the New York office of President Ford Frick to draw up recommendations which called for a $5,500 minimum wage scale, a ban on the withdrawal of waivers, $5 per day expense money for the training trip and an undetermined form of retirement plan which would be extended to the minor leagues. Another meeting is scheduled for Friday.

Players of the American League conferred with President Will Harridge at Chicago where a similar set of demands was presented for consideration.

Prices averaged $3,947, or $2,208 higher than last year, for track youngsters at the opening yesterday of the Keeneland thoroughbred yearling sales, Lexington, Ky., the 55 animals bringing $547,000. Highest individual price was $33,000.

Cyril Washbrook yesterday scored his 2,000th run and his eighth century of the English cricket season in leading Lancashire to a 379 total for eight wickets against Northamptonshire. He will play for England in the Australian tour.

Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday filed a brief with the Pennsylvania's Labor Relations Board which claimed that unionizing of the diamond sport through the American Baseball Guild would be "completely destructive" for the game. The club asked for dismissal of the Guild's application as bargaining agent for the team."

An attempt to break the world speed record for the .225 inch class power, boats will be a feature of the Canadian Gold Cup speed-boat regatta at Picton on Civic Holiday next Monday. Chief contender is 79-year-old Jack Cooper of Kansas City, Mo., who won the gold cup at the last regatta in 1941. Cooper and perhaps a dozen others will attempt to break the world mark of 88.7 miles an hour set by Dave Foreman of Buffalo in 1940.

Western New York State is to have a modern one-mile race track with fire-proof stables and stands according to Incorporation Papes approved yesterday by the State Racing Commission. The location of the plant was not disclosed.

A seven-year-old gelding ridden by Robert Fitzhugh, proved an easy winner in a 14-mile cross country race in New Mexico against a former Cornell University track athlete, Jacob Weschler. The horse covered the course in 1:26 and Weschler finished 58 minutes later.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

STORK MAKES A HIT, BUT "JUMBO" WALKS

The big fellow looked haggard and somewhat drawn. Fine lines of fatigue etched themselves at the corners of his eyes, and his mouth. The husky shoulders drooped. He looked as though he had not slept for two nights. Little did he resemble the fine burly youngster who starred in the line for the Dominion champion Argonaut football team last fall. He didn't look like the big ambling baseball player who can sock 'em to all corners of the pasture — nor the big hunk 'o defence player that bull-dozed his way through the enemy rearguards last winter while wearing the hockey paraphernalia of the Redmen.

In fact big Vern "Jumbo" Goyer appeared to be a wreck. Yet in his eyes there shone behind the film of fatigue, the light of happiness. His face stretched wide in a big grin. The drooping shoulders, like an ox, that is, lifted as he broke the good news.

• • •

"No football players, chum," he announced from the bridge of the antique jalopy that staggered under his weight in his periodic jaunts around town. He tenderly caressed the piece of fence wire that holds the steering wheel together. He shifted his weight and the groaning jalop creaked and wheezed like an outmoded calliope.

• • •

"Just what, m'lad, are you referring to," we politely inquired. Any guy that plays football and weighs over 125 pounds is treated as a gentleman, by this corner.

• • •

"Jumbo" grinned again. Actually, the guy blushed. The pink started from his midriff, surged upwards, paused at the Adams' apple then slowly spread over his freckled face. He started to speak, stuttered a bit, mumbled a few unintelligible words, placed the cork back in the gas-line of the jalopy to stop it from leaking, and finally came out with:

"It's a girl, eight pounds, six ounces."

The jalopy reared on its hind wheels. It emitted a noise that sounded like the bugle call of a bull moose and the bray of an Argentine mule. Somehow it had its wires crossed. It shivered as Jumbo's ball-kicking foot smoke it a mighty blow in the region of the carbureter, heaved a deep sigh and settled down on its tires.

"Yep," said the big lad, wiping sweat from his fevered brow. "It's a girl, and everything is O.K. The wife is doing fine, thank you, and the new arrival is in the pink."

"Jumbo" did a seven-hour picketing job in the Agony Parade at the hospital the night previous, and nearly fainted when the nurse brought out triplets. She said to the big so-and-so; Is your name....?" That's as far as she got. The next minute the Jumbo was doing some of the prettiest broken-corridor running you ever saw. He topped three chairs, leap-frogged a couple of nurses, kicked an ambulance out of his way, vaulted two doctors' cars in the yard, and headed for his hide-out in Latta.

But they brought him back with the news that the nurse had made a mistake. "You're kiddin'" he asked, putting on his best Argo line grimace. Assured that the Stork had just hit a single and not a three-bagger, the big fella was persuaded to go back to the hospital where he saw his first baby for the first time.

• • •

Seriously, congratulations, m'lad, and the best of everything for the future of the new family.

Imperturbable Georgie Gee, erstwhile Kingston Ponies star outfielder, who left the Limestone City squad to play for the Halifax Shipyards down east, is not worried too much over intimations by a Kingston sports writer that he will be black listed by the Chicago Black Hawks for seeing greener baseball pastures.

According to reports, Gee told a Halifax sports writer that he had a release from the Ponies. The Kingston writer reported that Gee had "jumped" his Kingston contract. In the meantime the prize 1945 rookie of the Hawks is performing regularly for the Bluenose baseball squad and tis said will be a great help to them in the forthcoming playoffs.

• • •

Jack McIntosh, staid Front Street purveyor of clothes and whatnots to mesdames et messieurs, put on his best brassie and niblick front on Sunday up at the Bay of Quinte Country Club links, and we'll be doggone if he didn't cop the consolation prize of the club championship jousts by downing John Funnell by three up and two to go. The pair o' Jacks staged a neat game, and the pastime was close throughout.

Point Anne and SACOS won their first tilts of the Belleville Softball Association semi-finals series last night with the Oxpointers swamping Flashes under 12-1 count and SACOS staging a four-run eights inning rally that snatched victory from what looked like certain defeat.

• • •

At Ox Point, Phil Loft's squad were unbeatable. They clicked in every department of the game and fielded superbly behind the fine hurling of Pat Maracle. They pounded Rex Young for a flock of hits and were by far the better team on the night's play. Flashes were weak with the stick and at times kicked the pill around when bobbles meant runs. And in case you're interested Jack Boyle behind the plate and Chief Bennett on the bases did a fine job of arbiting.

• • •

At the Fair Grounds Maxie Peoples SACOS trailed the fighting Mountain View squad for eight innings and prospects for victory did not look too bright. Then their bats exploded in the eighth and four hits sent as many runs across the plate for 5-2 win.

• • •

The Latta baseball team behind the three-hit hurling of Joe Marsh extended the Napanee losing streak another game at the Alemite Field last night defeating the downeasters by a 9-1 count. Marsh had the situation well in hand and his mates put the game on ice with a six-run late innings slurge.

• • •

Tonight the Trenton Flyers fresh from their Congress battles take on the Kiwanis Juniors in an effort to wipe out the defeat the kids tacked on them at their last meeting. The game is scheduled for the Alemite Field at 6.30 Napanee treks to Batawa to take on the Smoky" Smith nine.

WILLINGDON CUP WON BY ONTARIO AT EDMONTON

Young Gerry Kesselring of Kitchener Holds Junior Title for Canada

By HERB JONES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Mayfair Golf and Country Club, Edmonton, July 30 (CP)—Ontario's golfing brigade found the rolling fairways and tricky greens of the Edmonton course to its liking yesterday with the eastern provinces Willingdon Cup team successfully defending the Inter-provincial team title it last won seven years ago and a 17-year-old from Kitchener annexing the Canadian junior crown.

The hot young Kitchener shotmaker was Gerry Kesselring who beat out Vancouver's Walt McElroy by a single stroke after the British Columbia boy had made a great recovery in the afternoon. Kesselring had a 36-hole card of 75-75 for 150 while McElroy posted 77-74 for 11 after missing his putt on the last hole.

Ontario's Willingdon Cup squad headed by Toronto's Phil Farley, who with Jack Nash of London was on the 1939 team, posted a total of 589 for the 36-hole Willingdon Cup grind. It wasn't exactly a sensational showing but was still 12 strokes better than Quebec's 601 and well ahead of the 609 posted by Alberta's four-man team.

But it was left to an Albertan, the foothills provincial titleholder Henry Martell to make the best showing of the day among the more than 100 amateurs who today begin five days of play for the Canadian senior amateur crown held by Vancouver's Ken Black.

Martel—like many of the rest yesterday, found the greens uncertain but undaunted by a brief storm that blew up in the afternoon posted the only par 70 of the day on his second round. He had a 72 in the morning, winding up with a 142, the best score of the day.

Quebec's Guy Rolland of Laval Surle Lac, suffered a two stroke penalty when he lost his ball in the trees coming home on the afternoon round and wound up with a 74 for a 36 total of 145.

Jack Nash and Nick Wienock were outstanding for the winning Ontario team with totals of 145 and 144 respectively.

Wyatt of Beattie Mines Top Scorer

Sudbury, Ont., July 30 (CP)—Frank Wyatt of Beattie Mines today led the 16 top scorers into the final 36 holes of the Seagram Trophy Golf Tournament, a 54-hole medal-play event that attracted 110 of the province's best golfers.

The tourney opened with 18 holes yesterday, all rounds being played over the nine-hole course of the Sudbury Golf Club. Only the top 16 qualified for today's 36 holes and these included five Toronto golfers, five from Sudbury, four from North Bay and Wyatt of Beattie and Joe Lee of Noranda.

Wyatt posted a one-over par 69 for yesterday's round, with Jim Twiss of Toronto a stroke behind in second place. The 16 qualifiers all had scores of 78 or better in two turns of the par 34 course.

Chief upset of the first round was failure of Johnny Poupore of Sudbury's Idylwylde Club to qualify for today's play. Poupore, last year's Northern Ontario champion, needed 79 and headed the list of those relegated to the first flight.

Montreal, July 30 — (CP) — Montreal is going to have a good-sized taste of Olympic track and field competition this Saturday when 55 American and Canadian athletes, a good many of them international or national champions, gather here for Canada's first post-war inter-neighbor meet.

The Eastern Canadian team need not be ashamed of itself. Eight Dominion champions are included in its ranks. Some of them are Negro flash Vic Sandiford of Toronto, Canadian 100-yard champion; Bob McFarlane of London, 220-yard champion; Bill Morris of Toronto, champion Dominion miler; and five-mile champion Walter Fedorick of Hamilton.

And it will be good to see Gerry Cote, the long-striding marathoner, in action locally. He hasn't shown around here in a long time.

The meet will provide a fair preview of what Eastern Canada's trackmen, all but idle for six years, will be able to accomplish in the Olympics at London, still two seasons away. Maybe we will again produce sprinters like Percy Williams and Phil Edwards — and women racers like Bobbie Rosenfeld and Myrtle Cook.

LATTA DEFEATS NAPANEE NINE BY 9-1 COUNT

Losers Secure Only Counter by Error in the First Frame

Joe Marsh, husky little Latta righthander kept his squad's winning streak intact Monday night at the Alemite Field when he hurled a three-hit game and with his mates batting consistently, defeated the Napanee team 9-1 in a Belleville Baseball Association game.

Laurenson's error in the first innings paved the way for the Napanee lone run. Marsh had retired the first two batters to face him and Murphy had hit safely to left centre. Switzer's drive was bobbled by Laurenson and on the ensuing throw Murphy galloped home.

Marsh whiffed nine of the enemy batters, walked none and helped himself to a hit. He stifled the Napanee bats for the remainder of the game allowing only two belts, one in the fourth and the other in the fifth.

Latta scored single runs in the second, third and fourth heat off starting pitcher Blute. Blute allowed five runs for four hits and lasted until the fourth when McTaggart relieved him. The Latta bats took kindly to his offerings and got to him for five hits for four runs over the remainder of the pastime.

The Latta bats clicked in the fifth innings when four hits, one a two-bagger by Jarrell sent five runners scampering across the plate. Two errors by shortstop Turner of the Napanee team aided and abetted the rally. The winners clicked for two more hits in the sixth which were good for one run and that ended the scoring.

Both teams erred afield with each squad being credited with five errors.

Jarrell, Collins and Laurenson got a pair of hits each for the winners with Murphy, Turner, and Blute being the only Napanee batters to connect safely with the Marshian slants.

POINT ANNE WINS FIRST SEMI-FINAL GAME BY 12-1

Winners Play Errorless Ball Behind 5-Hit Pitching of Pat Maracle

Point Anne and SACOS won the first games of the Belleville Softball Association semi-finals Monday night with the Ox Pointers swamping the Army and Navy Flashes 12-1 at Point Anne and SACOS staging a four-run eighth inning rally to win 5-2 after trailing Mountain View for seven innings, at the Fair Grounds.

Point Anne 12 Flashes 1

Playing errorless ball behind the fine five-hit pitching of Pat Maracle, Point Anne romped home to an easy win in a game that wasn't in doubt after the fifth innings.

The Loft crew played fine softball, fielding superbly and clustering nine of their twelve hits for runs. They scored single runs in the second and third innings, broke out into a three run-rash in the fifth and exploded again in the eighth when they notched five hits for seven runs to put the game on ice.

Maracle on the mound was in fine hurling form. He scattered the five blows Flashes nicked him for over as many innings and never was in serious trouble. He struck out only two and walked four and helped his own cause with a streaking home run in the fifth.

The Point Anne fielding could not be bettered. They tossed the Flashes out with almost monotonous regularity and pulled off three sparkling double plays.

Rex Young on the mound for the Flashes was nicked for eleven clouts. He held the Ox Pointers to two hits and two runs for four innings but they touched him for four in the fifth and five more in the eighth.

Flashes fielding was of the loose variety at times with overthrows occurring when the bobbles meant runs. They were weak at the bat with such sluggers as Harold Reid, Tim Williams and Walt Gerow failing to hit in their usual manner. Genereaux robbed Reid of a sure home run in the eighth when he came in from nowhere to pull down the third baseman's hard smash to right field.

Bradshaw hit a triple and a single for the winners with Whitehead and Sero kicking in with two hits each. Frankie Murray played a star game for the Flashes both at bat and in the field. He got two of the losers five smacks with Vern Goyer, Walt Gerow and Everett providing the rest.

The teams:

Point Anne — Bradshaw, lf; Loft, rf; Whitehead, 3b; Sero, ss; Horewood, 2b; Green, M., c; Genereaux, cf; Bennett, 1b; Maracle, p.

Sports Roundup

By SID FEDER

(Pinch-hitting for Hugh Fullerton Jr.)

New York, July 30 — (AP) — What's this about all not being sweetness and light between general manager Red Trautman and the Briggs-es on Detroit Tigers? . . . And the talk reviving again that Bucky Harris will be top man there sooner or later? . . . Has anyone pointed out that Saturday's Arlington classic was run four seconds faster than either the Derby or the Dwyer, Assault's only other two tries over the 1¼-mile route? . . . Maybe the clubfoot comet isn't that quick a horse.

Hit and Run

After Dixie Walker and Bucky Walters wound up their work as delegates at yesterday's National League meeting, they headed for Ebbets Field . . . and Dixie promptly clouted a homer off Bucky the first time they looked at each other in the park . . . Brazilian athletic officials who visited the Michigan State College campus last winter are trying to get the Spartan basketballers to barnstorm through Brazil next summer . . . Is it true a Washington Senators' "name" player already has okayed a Mexican contract for next season? . . . Learned, William and Mary's top tennis-er, had his feet so badly frozen while in the army in Europe, he barely managed to persuade the medicos not to amputate.

Thought for Today

In all the hullaballoo about the Pasquale Brothers grabbing major league talent, has any owner stopped to inquire just what that was the majors were doing coming up with players in places like Cuba and Venezuela, where they have organized ball too, the last few years? . . . and didn't the Negro National League holler about the way Branch Rickey put the grab on Jackie Robinson of Montreal's Royals of the International League?

EARL HARRIST HURLS NO-HITTER AGAINST LEAFS

Second Time Syracuse Pitcher Has Turned Trick This Season

By The Associated Press

The International League today boasts for the second time in a decade a hurler who has turned in two no-hit, no-run triumphs in a single season.

Karl Harrist of Syracuse Chiefs turned the trick last night when he blanked Toronto Maple Leafs, 5-0. On April 30, Harrist turned back Buffalo Bisons by the same 5-0 count without yielding a hit. Bill Harris was the last hurler to perform a similar chore.

Facing only 29 batters last night, Harrist had pitched a perfect game until the eighth inning when he gave up his only walk and second baseman Van Harrington was charged with an error on a hard-hit ball by first baseman Bruce Konopka of the Leafs.

The league-leading Montreal Royals trampled the Bears, 10-4, with outfielder Earl Naylor collecting four hits in four trips to the plate to pace the Royals' 13-hit attack against a trio of Newark flingers.

Buffalo hopped over Baltimore into third place by outslugging the Orioles, 9-5. Zed Mierkowicz belted a home run with the bases loaded in a five-run seventh inning Buffalo rally that overcame a 5-2 Baltimore lead.

Jersey City Giants and Rochester Red Wings divided a twin bill, with the Wings taking the opener, 5-2, and the Giants the nightcap, 8-6, in 10 innings.

CHICAGO ROOKIE, GEORGE GEE, IN BAD IN BASEBALL

Claimed He Jumped Contract With the Kingston Ponies to Play in Halifax

Kingston, Ont., July 30 — (CP) —George Gee, Chicago Black Hawks' top rookie forward, seemed to be in hot water today with both baseball and hockey moguls.

Gee reportedly jumped a contract with Kingston Ponies to play baseball with Shipyards team of the Halifax and District Senior Ball League. His action in breaking his contract with the Ponies suspended him from professional baseball and threatened his position with the Black Hawks in hockey.

Bill Tobin, president of the Chicago Black Hawks National League hockey club, said today he emphatically disapproves of the action of Gee in jumping Kingston Ponies to play baseball in Halifax and indicated that the Chicago club would discipline him. "Under no circumstances," Tobin said, "will I ever tolerate action such as this. Gee will be so informed. I did not desire to prevent his playing baseball for Knigston but this Halifax matter is something else again. Gee definitely did not seek nor would he have received my permission to play baseball for any other team than the Ponies."

Last season Gee was runner-up to Edgar Laprade for the rookie award in the National Hockey League.

At present Gee is play regularly for the Shipyards team and professes to be unworried over all threats that he will be blacklisted by the Chicago Black Hawks when he turns out for National League hockey in the fall.

Gee claims that he obtained a release from the Kingston Ponies of the Borber Baseball League but Mike (Kingston Whig-Standard) Rodden insists that he "jumped" contract.

AMATEUR BASEBALL

(By The Canadian Press)

Two American teams from Niagara Falls, N.Y., both playing in the Niagara District Senior Circuit, featured Ontario amateur baseball yesterday. Both teams collected 13 hits in registering wins. The Wolkes beat Hamilton Consumers 8-2 and Kimberley Clarks defeated Merritton-Thorold Thormers 3-2.

In the Intercounty County Senior Circuit Guelph Maple Leafs downed Kitchener Panthers 4-3.

Merritton led the league-leading Kaycees until the seventh when Syrus' single drove in two runs. Right fielder Zalha homered in the fifth for Merritton. Gord Bradshaw, hurling for the Wolkes yielded only four hits, while catcher Mazza led the hitting parade with two doubles and a triple.

Bill Leade, probably the busiest pitcher in Ontario baseball, won his fourth win of the year by spreading nine hits. Guelph scored all their runs in the first off starting pitcher Buddy Ruber who walked the first two batters.

London and Guelph battled to a 3-3 10-inning tie in the Intercounty Intermediate loop. In the Intercounty Junior division, Hamilton defeated Woodstock 4-3, and Preston beat Waterloo 5-3.

Hollywood Column

By HOWARD C. HEYN

Hollywood, July 30 —(AP)— Humphrey Bogart is a Bogier boogie-man than Dick Powell. That's what Bogey thinks, anyway.

I caught the yachtsman - actor watching Dick Powell at work in "Johnny O'Clock."

Powell, simulating a deep abdominal wound, was holding a covey of cops with a smoking pistol. The Old Maestro viewed the proceedings deadpan for a few minutes, and then said:

"The new Powell is just the old Bogart."

Bogie, in his picture, "Dead Reckoning," keeps the law at bay while the room burns up around them.

"I stand there nerveless, fire all around me, until they crack," he said ominously.

When we left the set Bogey admitted that even he doesn't enjoy working in these hard-boiled roles.

"But it's not because I dislike being a tough guy," he amended quickly. "I just don't like working at all. I'm the laziest man alive. I just do this for a miserable fortune."

Peggy Cummins sent Linda Darnell a congratulatory telegram when the latter received the "Amber" role. She wished Linda health and strength as well as good luck.

"I know I needed it," Peggy earnestly said.

FAITHFUL

BY MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 20

Mary thought, "Mark is the hermit they're talking about. And Iris, listening at all this with amusement, is the woman he ran away from. Today is another day without Clive and every day is another century—separating us. Where is he now? We could have been married in Boston yesterday morning in the rain. Then he wouldn't be alone and I wouldn't be alone. Why did I let him go? Everything in me is telling me it is right. If Julian opposed it, I couldn't feel that it is right."

About six people left the Henshaws and went to their own cottages to dress for dinner. Iris wrote letters to Joel, her mother, Eve, and Louis, then said to Mary, "I'm going to take a walk before I dress for dinner."

Mary stopped still. "Aren't you afraid of the hermit?"

"I'm not interested in him. I want to see the waterfalls. Do you think he'll mind if I trespass on his property?"

Mary laughed. "I have a strong suspicion he'll drag you into the most charming house at Eaton." She thought, watching Iris pull a felt hat over her hair, "I wonder if I should tell her. It's cruel to let her meet him like this. No, I won't tell her. She wouldn't go."

The sun was low behind the pines. Lights, like friendly, guiding eyes, were beginning to appear over Eaton Forest. The peace of early twilight had descended over the little colony.

Iris walked toward the sound of the waterfalls, her sturdy brown shoes making a crunching sound over the pebbled road. Taking the winding shadowed road that led to Bluff House, she found herself in a cleared opening where a stone house stood. Smoke was coming from the chimney.

Walking past the house, she came to a small stone platform. The whole world seemed to stretch before her below. From the great height the pines seemed tiny. Even the waterfalls, foaming over the rocks, seemed minerature from this high place. The incredible beauty of it all made her catch her breath.

There were tears in her eyes when she turned away. In the hazy light she saw some one step down from the stone porch and come toward her. He was a tall man who walked with a loose jointed masculine grace. He wore brown riding boots and an old sweater. The smoke from his pipe hung low about him.

Still she could not see him clearly. Iris set her mouth and smiled a little, thinking, "So this is the hermit who has everybody talking. He's very good-looking. I wonder if he is a savage. I wonder what he's going to say to me. He looks....yes, he looks like.."

He came close, quite close now and Iris stood still, her hands clasped behind her.

"Iris," said Mark.

She had a first impulse, a crazy impulse, to reach out and touch him to see if it were really he. Then bewilderment cleared and the flame of anger came to her face. She had been deceived again—brought by Mary to Mark! By correspondence they had planned this neat little trick. But the angry flash died as quickly as it had come and her mouth and eyes softened toward him. Mark—here! And all the stirring in her heart she tried to smother began again. Iris thought, "I'm living again!"

He laughed that deep unforgetable laugh of his. "Did you drop out of the sky? Did wishing for you to be here bring you? I came out to look at the sunset and here you are, Iris?"

"You knew perfectly well I was coming. Please don't pretend."

"I knew nothing of the sort."

She looked at him. "Didn't Mary...."

"Is she with you? One thing at a time...."

Then he did not know that she was coming. Iris believed him. It was Mary's little plan!

"I'm sorry," said Iris.

"You must think I make a practice of deception."

"No. I'm sorry. So many things have happened. Mary suggested this trip. It was terribly warm at home...."

"And this," he said, "is Eden. Won't you come in? It gets cold at night."

"The hermit is inviting me in?"

"Is that what they call me? I have been unfriendly, I suppose. But I'm weary of cocktail parties and small gossip and all the social things. I'm grateful to Mary for suggesting this place to me. Let's go into the house, Iris."

A large police dog pricked up his ears when they stepped on the stone veranda. He sniffed at Mark's riding boots and growled at the girl in the yellow sweater.

"Major is the orphan I adopted," said Mark, patting the dog "The people who had the place before left him. We've become great pals."

In the long living room Mark switched on a small lamp and pulled up two chairs by the fire. For some time they said nothing. Casual conversation between them was futile and foolish. Iris leaned toward the fire, her hand cupping her face. Mark lighted a cigaret and pocked at the fire.

Had there been a force, stronger than Mary's wish, that had brought them together again? She dared not lift her eyes. But this meeting in what Mark had wisely called "Eden" would avail them nothing. It meant that they would have to say good-bye again and the second time would be more painful than the first.

Mark smoked, inhaling deeply. How many nights, to the serenade of the falls, he had visualized Iris here just as she was now! He had begun letters to her numerous times. Some were filled with anger, others with tenderness; anger when he knew she loved him and had sent him away, tenderness when he thought of how much he loved and wanted her. How empty everything had been since that stormy day!

"You said that so many things had happened," he said.

"Louis had to let me go," she said quietly.

"His wife?"

"Partly. She wanted Camilla to have my job. Then," said Iris, "Louis and Annette faced each other with the truth. Annette has been unfaithful and admitted it. He is letting her divorce him. I didn't have a job and Louis didn't want me involved in a divorce suit...."

"I see," said Mark. He smiled. "Camilla doesn't need your job now. She's married. I had a letter yesterday. It was very sudden and she wanted me to know."

"She wanted to thank you for paying for her operation."

He shook his head. "How things get around. She married the president of a bank. He's a good bit older than she. She's known him for years." He threw the cigaret into the fire. "I can think of no better combination than Camilla married to—a bank." He looked at her. 'And you, Iris, is everything still the same?"

"It is the same as it was two years ago, Mark. Eve is working now in New York. She's studying hard and growing up. It's odd, isn't it, that to get knowledge and work toward a goal one must have severe growing pains?"

"You should not have returned that money."

"I had to. It was a matter of principle and honor. I'd rather not—not talk about that money."

"How is Mary?"

In talking of Mary and Clive Leader she was spared talk of herself and her forthcoming marriage. Quietly, clearly she told him of their meeting on the boat and Mary's decision, which she now regretted she had made.

He listened, his mind divided. In spite of that brave little air about her, Iris was miserable with her own decision. He asked himself, "What should I do now? Sweep Iris off her feet? I know she loves me. She betrays it every time she looks at me. Away from Joel, I could make her forget him and her promise to him. But do I want her like that? No. She must come to me of her own will."

"And do you think that's the end of it?" he asked, coming back to the subject of Mary.

"I'm afraid so. He was so fine, Mark. (So much like you, she thought.) It could have been perfect but Mary threw it away. She realizes her mistake now. Mark, I'm sorry about the day when I lost my temper and said so many beastly things to you. I could hear everything crashing around me that day. I'm sorry. I—I've been wanting to tell you."

He reached for her hand and stroked her fingers.

"That's over and done with. I don't believe in bringing up the past—the worst part of the past, I should say. We must forget the past, enjoy the present, and think hopefully of the future."

She drew her hand away, and got up. "Mary won't know what's happened to me. Won't you walk back with me and see her?"

"It would be unfair not to let her enjoy her comedy. Or is it a comedy? Perhaps a tragedy, Iris."

When they came out of the house, Major followed at his master's heels. Where the road was steep he took her arm to guide her.

Iris was trying to analyze her feelings. If Joel were here, he would not be like this. He would complain about the penetrating mountain cold, the pebbled roads that were difficult for walking, and the long walk. She could not talk with Joel except to encourage him when he was dejected or reproach him when his ego became unbearable. Life with Mark, beyond the wonder of being loved by him, would be filled with amusing advenures in strange beautiful places.

Iris went into the cottage first. She stood in the doorway for several minutes without speaking, as if what she saw she felt she had no right to share. Then Mark heard her deep, happy laughter.

"Come in, Mark. I want you to meet Clive Leader about whom I was telling you."

Turning to Mary, Iris said, "No explanation is necessary. I can tell by your faces." She took Clive Leader's hand. "I'm so glad you came back." Her voice was trembling a little. She turned back to Mary. "This," smiling in Mark's direction, "is what I found at Bluff House. You know perfectly well I'd find him. He didn't drag me in. I went in of my own accord."

Mary blinked tears. "Well, I think you might kiss me or something. You can't bawl me out. Louis is involved in the conspiracy, too. He suggested my bringing you here. You can't bawl out a bride-to-be. Clive, my dear, forgive me if I cry a little, but.."

"We've got to do something about this," said Mark. "Celebration. Certainly we can't eat a plain dinner on such news. I'll go down to the dining room and see what they have in stock and have it cooked and sent to my place. Champagne, if they have any."

"Take Clive with you," said Mary. "I want to cry on Iris's shoulder and I don't want him to see. Besides, the women in the dining room might mob you if you go alone."

When Clive and Mark went out, Iris took Mary's shoulder. "Clive must love you a great deal not to mind the shiny nose and red eyes."

"What did Mark say and do when he saw you?"

"He thought I'd fallen out of the sky. Mary, it hasn't been my trip or my holiday. It's yours. Tonight is yours. We aren't going to talk about Mark and me except to say it—it isn't any use. It was a sweet thought of Louis's but it can't mean anything. Just something else to think about and be hurt by."

"I'm sorry."

"Sorry? It gave you Clive and a home in China and a life that's going to be full and interesting from now on."

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Puds Simkins were saying different things to make Mary Watkins laugh, and Puds got jellis on account of her laughing more at me than what she did at him because I'm naturelly the funniest, and he said, Aw, she aint laughing at you, she laughing out of pure politenisk.

Aw, is that so, well even if I was only half as funny as I am, I'd still be twice as funny as you, I said.

Being a good answer, and I made a funny face to make it still better, and Mary Watkins laughed even harder and Puds got even jellisser, saying, Aw, go and jump off a bridge before I push you in a lake.

Hay, are you looking for a fite? I said, and Puds said, Sure, I've got a cupple of minutes to waist, and that's all the longer it'll take to lick you.

And he put his fists up and I put mine up, and we started to dance around like boxers, and Mary Watkins said, Boys, I'm going right in the house if you dont stop fighting immeeditly.

Being just what we knew she would say, and I said, Well, okay, but it's a lucky thing for him you were here to save his life, and Puds said, Okay, you just saved Benny from being nocked into the middle of a hospittle.

Which just then Maggie Jonsin came skating across the street waving her hockey stick yelling, Hay, wait, dont start fighting yet, I want to be the empire.

There's not going to be any fight, so you dont need to bother, Mary said, and Maggie said, Aw, go ahead and fight, dont listen to her, she's a sissey.

I am not, Mary Watkins said. Let them fight, I can be just as tuff as you if I want to. Go ahead and fight and see how much I care even if you both get bluddy noses, she said, and I said, Hay, we aint going to get all tired out of breath just to do a cupple of gerls a favor, are we, Puds?

I should say not, like heck, Puds said.

And we walked away looking independent like 2 frends.

Rules Committee Recommends Press Be Admitted

By A. I. GOLDBERG

Paris, July 30. (AP) — The Rules Committee of the Paris Peace Conference on which Prime Minister Mackenzie King is a member, decided today to open its meetings to the press of the world and recommended that newspapermen be admitted to all general sessions of the conference.

State Secretary Byrnes of the United States proposed the action to give the press free access to the proceedings of the conference which will consider the treaties for Italy, Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria and Finland.

He was supported by V. M. Molotov, Russia's foreign minister, and the Australian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. H. V. Evatt.

Paul Henri Spaak of Belgium, was elected chairman of the committee 13-7 over Edward Kardelj of Yugoslavia, with one abstention. Mr. Spaak was nominated by Dr. Evatt; Mr. Kardelj by Mr. Molotov.

Mr. Kardelj was chosen vice-chairman on the suggestion of the United States.

The Committee meeting at which these actions were taken was closed so it was not immediately learned how the National delegations split on the Spaak-Kardelj contest.

The delegates took no action on the explosive question of whether a simple majority of the two-third rule would govern further voting of the committee. A member of the British delegation said the committee did not reach the subject, which was raised originally by Evatt in the open full conference session yesterday.

Neither M. Bidault nor Prime Minister Attlee of Britain, who is serving in the place of Foreign Secretary Bevin, sat in the committee session.

Most of the principal figures of the conference are slated to speak this afternoon at the second meeting of the 21-power group.

The Australian proposal for an equal voice for all countries, advanced yesterday by her Minister of External Affairs, Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, will receive its first test when the rules and procedure commission decides whether a simple majority or a two-thirds majority will govern decisions of the conference.

It was clear that Dr. Evatt would insist that only a simple majority be required to make recommendations to the Big Four on the drafting of treaties for Italy, Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria and Finland.

An Australian source said Dr. Evatt was prepared to go down the line for his contention that the 17 invited countries "have just as much right to participate in the final making of peace as the Big Four themselves."

Other members of the Australian delegation said frankly that Dr. Evatt was not so much interested in the treaties for the five Hitler satellite countries as he was in establishing the principal of equality among the Allies. They added that he was looking toward future conferences when the treaties with Germany and Japan will be written.

The Australians and Canadians headed by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, were reported to be backing Mr. Byrnes' proposal for "wide open" new coverage. Britain was said to favor open sessions " in principle," but to be concerned about cramped space. Russia's position was not immediately announced, but the Soviet attitude at previous meetings suggested that Moscow would want all except plenary sessions to be in camera.

France in Grip Of Postal, Phone, Telegraph Strike

Paris, July 30. (AP)—France today was held in the grip of a 10-hour internal communications strike by 200,000 postal, telegraph and telephone workers just as the Paris Peace Conference was getting down to business.

The workers walked out at 4 a.m., to bring pressure on the government for higher wages and appeared 100 per cent effective wherever the Unions called out their members.

The strikers left workers at offices to give emergency service.

Emergency services included acceptance of telegrams to or from the peace conference delegates, the Foreign Ministry, Health Services and in distress cases.

International communications companies also were permitted to operate their lines abroad, but they were without normal means of delivering incoming cables and radio messages inside France. Dial telephones were operating haphazardly, but some telegrams from abroad were being telephoned to the addressees.

Press wireless and agencies with direct leased wires running out of the country were allowed to function without disturbance.

Union headquarters said higher wages had been promised by the Finance Ministry but the ministry had not followed through.

VEHICLES OF SPEED AND COMFORT IN SWITZERLAND

The old open horse-drawn carriage, lazily travelling over the road with a wedding party in Bern, Switzerland, is in striking contrast to the speedy cyclists racing past on their trip. Old "Dobbin" will not be rushed, however. The bride and groom wave to the speedy cyclists from the carriage. To facilitate travelling the steep hills of the countryside, the rear wheels of the carriage are equipped with skid chain and block to prevent its rolling backward.

FORGOTTEN BRIDE LANDS STAGE JOB IN JOHANNESBURG

Russian and Italian Girl Claim Husbands in South Africa but Both Are Turned Down

Johannesburg, July 29 (CP) — South Africa has had its second drama of an apparently "forgotten" bride. The first took place some months ago, when a Russian girl, Halina Lipiaewa, arrived in Port Elizabeth claiming to be the bride of Garold Seabourne of that city.

Now a 22-year-old Italian girl, Angella Bramlla, has arrived at East London claiming that she is Mrs. George Thomas Moss, wife of a farmer in that district.

But both Halina and Angela were turned down. Seabourne said he had never married Halina, as she claimed, through the barbed wire of a German prison camp. George says he was married before he went to Italy and never was in Salerno, where Angela claims the wedding took place.

The East London liaison officer held a hearing recently when he told Angela she could not possibly be married to George, as he had already been married when he went to Italy. Angela tore off the ring she was wearing and tried to throw it at George, who was present with his wife.

Won't Go Back.

Moss claims that Angela was already married when he met her, that she had a child by the husband from whom she was separated. Angela admits the child but denies the husband. Angela swears she would sooner die than go back to Italy.

But while Angela's troubles are at their height, Halina the Russian, is doing pretty well. The authorities have allowed her to remain in South Africa pending a decision on her status.

Halina has just arrived in Johannesburg where, with the permission of the authorities, she has landed an $80-a-week stage contract with African Theatres.

Halina had her audition at the famous Empire Theatre. She appeared in a chic leaf-green suit, looking somewhat plumper than when she first landed in South Africa, carrying an oversize guitar and complete with enviable nylon "stockings",—drawled out in a voice which is rapidly picking up the English language, tho' not its exact pronunciation.

Halina sang first a Russian version of "Ramona," and was heartily applauded by the twelve listeners. Then she went into songs of her native land sometimes with verve, sometimes with nostalgia. She got the contract.

Snowfall Disrupts Australian Traffic

Cooma, Australia (CP)— The heaviest snowfall in 30 years brought winter to the southern Australian tabelands blocking traffic, disrupting communications and isolating a dozen or more communities.

At Coonabarabran the temperature was down to about 20 degrees and thousands of acres of grazing land were covered with snow which drifted to a dept of five feet across roads.

Travel on highways came to a halt, automobiles and buses stalled and even trains became snowbound. At one point during the tie-up, listeners tuned in to a Canberra radio station were startled to hear an announcer give a description of a missing train.

The storm was accompanied by a cold snap which gripped a wide section of the mountainous districts of Southern Australia and near Cooma the Murrumbidg River froze over.

The heavy snowfall was ide for skiers who have opened th snow season at 7,000-foot Moun Kosciusko near the border of th states of New South Wales an Victoria.

Several little southern town however, were without food sup plies or mail for several day and supplies had to be delivere by tractor to some remote cattl and sheep stations.

There were losses among cattl herds which had not bee brought down from the high lands for the winter and sheep went hungry for a few days be cause they couldn't get throug snow for their feed.

The temperature was down to freezing in Canberra, the Aus tralian capital, and hills sur rounding the city were whit with snow.

Bath, England (CP) — Hel mets are to be discontinued in the Somerset police force. Caps will be worn instead.

U. S. Strategic Bombing Survey Report Gives Boost to Proposal For Unification of War Services

Washington, July 30 (AP) — President Truman's proposal to unify the armed forces of the United States under a single cabinet officer received a boost Monday from the civilian-directed United States strategic bombing survey. It was based on a detailed study of the conduct of the war in the Pacific.

Japan's lack of co-ordination at top levels contributed substantially to her disastrous decision to embark on a career of conquest and to ultimate defeat, the survey group found.

Its findings and recommendations were contained in a bulky report released without comment by the White House after the administration dropped its fight for action on the merger at this session of Congress.

The survey commission reported that "bureaucratic rivalry" between Japan's army and navy impeded war planning, proper employment of air power, development of adequate logistics and efficient use of her economic resources.

The existence of such joint agencies at the Supreme War Council "served mainly to hide the fact that real unity, integration, and co-ordination were conspicuously lacking," the survey said.

In any reorganization of American defences, however, the survey recommended that the air forces be broadened into a co-equal service with added responsibilities for rocket and other defence.

The survey commission made these other major recommendations:

1. Research and development. "If the United States is not to be forced to hasty and inadequate mobilization every time the threat of aggression arises in the world, it is essential that in the field of military weapons and tactics she be technically not merely abreast of, but actually ahead of any potential aggressor . . . expenditures for research and development in the order of 1,000,000,000 annually may be required."

2. Intelligence. "Greater centralization to be provided by the National Intelligence Authority . . . The present lack of recognized responsibility for intelligence work by the various operating organizations and the present shortage of trained and competent intelligence personnel give cause for alarm and require correction."

3. Armed strength as a force for peace. "The best way to win a war is to prevent it from occurring," but "prevention of war will not be furthered by neglect of strength . . . As one of the great powers we must be prepared to act in defence of law and to do our share in assuring that other nations live up to their covenant."

Loan Extensions To Mine, Lumber Co. Outlined

Ottawa, July 30 — (CP)—The government proposal to extend loans to mining and lumbering companies for the development of family housing units in outlying areas, particularly adjacent to on-site operations of the companies, was outlined in the Commons Monday by Reconstruction Minister Howe.

Mr. Howe said housing was in "very short supply" in outlying areas and from all points of view it was desirable for on-site operations of lumbering and mining companies to employ a larger number of men, and particularly married men. The day of the bunk house was over, even for single men.

However, mining and lumbering companies had difficulty in employing married men because of the impossibility of bringing their families with them. They also had difficulty in obtaining financial facilities for the building of homes because they were so remote or were located on unmortgagable property.

Mr. Howe said the main features of the government's proposal were these:—

1 The loans are made to, or are guaranteed by, the lumbering or mining company.

2. The term of amortization may be as long as 15 years.

3. The rate of interest is four per cent.

Can't Earn More than 4 P.C.

4. The company cannot earn on its investment in the housing project more than the four per cent interest rate. Any current surplus must be used for a rent reduction fund. Should an equity exist after the loan is repaid, and the company has recovered its investment with not more than the four per cent interest, the value of the residue shall be used for charitable purposes or community benefits.

5. Minimum standards for this type of housing will be very flexible because the type of housing, the locality, and the needs will vary greatly.

6. The maximum loan will be 80 per cent of the lending value, although in many cases loans will be considerably less than 80 per cent.

7. Provision is made for the sale of such houses by the company to home owners. In such cases the company will remain on the covenant of the mortgage even for that portion which has been sold to a home owner. Provision will be made that if the home owner's account is current, default in the blanket mortgage will not prejudice his position.

8. The corporation, before recommending a loan for approval, will satisfy itself through inquiry to other government departments that the area in which the housing is to be erected has a productive period sufficient to justify the loan, and that the proposed housing is necessary in the area, and generally will result in additional employment.

Art Centres Grow In South Africa

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—Openings abound in schools throughout South Africa for bilingual (English-Afrigaans) persons with an art education who are "willing to do a public service."

However, Norah McCullough, who has returned to Canada after seven years in the Transvaal and in Cape Province where she was inspector of art for the Cape Department of Education, emphasizes bilingualism is important in find any job in the Union. Memories of the Boer War still cling and the Boers are sensitive about their language.

"They react warmly when they find you can speak Afrikaans — however little—as it demonstrates your goodwill."

Miss McCullough, formerly assistant educational supervisor at the Toronto Art Gallery, has pioneered in art centre work in South Africa and since her return has been lecturing and writing about her experiences.

Stressing the importance an art centre should have as a focal-point for the community, Miss McCullough described the growth of the Pretoria Centre in the Transvaal which was opened first for children, but has developed into a community spot where weaving, pottery, painting are taught and a school of drama is being developed.

Miss McCullough believes the teaching of creative art should be regarded as a tool to polish a child's development.

She said the exchange system of teachers is "very healthy" and helps spread among all persons, a wider knowledge and tolerance. She said she hoped the system would eventually be tried with students thus giving South Africans the opportunity of studying in North America.

Education is highly regarded in South Africa and there are four large English-speaking Universities and three Afrikaans. However, professions are limited for women.

"In South Africa woman's place is still believed to be in the home," said Miss McCullough. "Her best choice of a career is as a teacher .. there are a few women doctors, one or two lawyers .. but you rarely meet women architects, engineers and business executives."

Union Submits 7-Point Program

Asks Recognition Of Steel Industry On National Basis

Minimum Wage of $1,750 And 40-Hr. Week Sought

Ottawa, July 31 —(CP)— The United Steelworkers' Union (C.I.O.) today told the Commons Industrial Relations Committee it was prepared to consider "a fair and reasonable settlement" in its demands which led to the strike in three basic steel plants.

The union's statement was made in a brief prepared for delivery to the committee by C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the union outlining the union's demands for the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, Sydney, N.S.; Steel Company of Canada, Hamilton, Ont., and Algoma Steel Corporation, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Outline of Brief

The brief outlined the union's seven-point program:

1. Recognition of steel as a national industry placing it directly under the National War Labor Board.
2. Establishment of a steel council with representatives of labor, management and the public.
3. Union-management production committees.
4. A national minimum guaranteed wage of $1,750 or $33.60 a week, equivalent to increases of 19½ cents-an-hour.
5. A standard 40 hour week as manpower becomes available.
6. Two weeks' vacation with pay after five years' service.
7. Union security provisions in contracts between the union and companies.

"These represent the program or policy considered necessary and desirable by members of the union, subject of course to modification through the normal process of collective bargaining," the brief said. "If a fair and reasonable settlement were offered its acceptance would be recommended by the National Advisory Committee to the membership whose decision would be final so far as the union is concerned."

Wants General Settlement

While the union was not demanding a master agreement it asked for a general settlement with each company which would include subsidiary or branch plants and any settlement arrived at should be implemented without delay and without amendment.

"It is important when a settlement is reached under government auspices in any industrial dispute, not only that it should be a sound and satisfactory settlement, but also that, firstly it should take effect without undue delay and, secondly, it should not be open to amendment or variation later by any board or authority," the union said.

"Unless those two principles are respected the best of settlements is likely to contain the seeds of another major dispute in the not-distant future,"

Dealing with wages the union referred to the 15-cent increase granted British Columbia loggers and said Labor Minister Mitchell had described it as "fair and reasonable." Later he had warned against wage increases of more than 10 cents.

Based on Requirements

The union said its figure for an annual income of $1,750 was based on "the minimum amount of money necessary for a health and decency standard of living for the average Canadian family in 1944" according to figures compiled by the Toronto Welfare Council. Actually since that time living costs had increased to a point where the welfare council figure now was $225 higher.

Turning to the ability of the companies to pay higher wages the union said Stelco's wartime profits averaged more than $4,000,000 a year after taxation and the general financial position of the company had improved considerably.

Algoma "fared very well during the war years" and had an operating profit of $3,482,797 in 1945 with its financial position also improved. Dosco which "has always pleaded poverty" had received more than $21,000,000 in government assistance since the war started and showed a profit of $3,500,000 in 1945.

"These companies can pay the wages sought," the union said.

The increase sought from Dosco was five cents more than the other two companies to level the Nova Scotia rates with those paid in Ontario.

The 40-hour week proposed by the union would spread employment and income. The steel industry could probably employ 13,000 to 18,000 more workers.

Union security terms in a contract were not a major issue at Dosco or Algoma but were at Stelco. The benefits derived from union organization were shared by all employees and there should be equal distribution of the costs of maintaining the union. Union shop contracts — requiring all employees to become members of the union — had been found to provide smoother labor relations.

The union said the least it could accept at Stelco was the Rand formula which would require all employees to pay union dues while leaving them free to join the union or stay out.

27-Pound 'Lunge Hooked at Picton

Picton, July 31 — Largest muskie to be taken from local waters this year was landed yesterday by Ben Ruttan, Ferguson Street. Accompanied by Vernon Wheeler, Mr. Ruttan, a veteran fisherman, hooked the big fellow in Picton harbor and landed it after a 15-minute battle. It tipped the scales at 27 pounds and measured 44½ inches in length. Mr. Ruttan was using a Star spoon painted red and silver on one side and red on the reverse.

'Lunge have been reported to be biting slowly so far this season, but catches of bass, pickerel and pike from Prince Edward waters are excellent.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, July 31—(CP)—Synopsis at 7.30 a.m.—Warm air covers the southern and eastern parts of the United States, while cooler air covers eastern Canada and the states around the Great Lakes. A few showers have persisted for some 200 miles north of this boundary, and were reported last night as far north as Toronto and London.

Precious Cargoes Worth Millions Safe On Old Thames, Crime Non-Existent

By RONALD BEDFORD

London, July 31 (Reuters) — Although millions of dollars worth of rationed gods rock gently every night on the waters of the Thames, organized crime is almost non-existent on the 40 miles of waterway patrolled by high-speed launches of the Thames River division of Metropolitan Police.

I have just returned from a night with these patrols, and seen how the barges, lighters and steamers that ride at anchor during the night, appear to be safe from the organized gangs of racketeers who are known to hi-jack loaded trucks on the roads at night, disposing of their loot to black marketeers.

River police are responsible for law and order over a 40-mile stretch of the Thames, and every patrol boat is linked by radio-telephone to Scotland Yard, nerve-centre of London's crime-fighting machinery.

These boats, like the police radio cars which cruise through the streets of London, can be called out by the emergency telephone system, whereby Londoners, by dialing 999, can summon police assistance.

As we nosed into the darkness for the routine patrol, the Thames became alive with the mystery that surrounds a great river at night. Here lay storehouses of treasure—spices from the east, timber from Scandinavia, tea from Ceylon, oil and fats, consumers goods from the Americas.

In any one of these vessels was enough to keep a black market going for months, but the precious cargoes are undisturbed while remaining at anchor on the river. Powerful lights from our boat swung searchingly on the lighters to make sure that everything was safely battened down.

In addition to safeguarding anchored ships, patrolmen salvage valuable cargoes from the bottom of the Thames and rescue wouldbe suicides or others who fall in the river.

HOUSE APPROVES MOTIONS TO TAX CO-OPERATIVES

C.C.F. Group Supported By Conservatives And Social Credit Party Forces Standing Vote

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 31 — (CP) — A hard-fought C.C.F. battle against the taxation of co-operatives died in a welter of words last night as the Commons gave approval to three budget resolutions aimed at giving effect to that proposal.

Supported by the Progressive Conservative and Social Credit parties, the C.C.F. group forced a standing vote on the main resolution on co-operative taxation, only to see the motion carried by a count of 70-56. Formal divisions are not possible when the House is studying resolutions in committee stage.

Two additional resolutions touching on the contentious question then were quickly passed without recorded vote, although Fred Zaplitny (CCF — Dauphin) sought to move an amendment to grant tax exemption to co-operatives established during the last three years. The amendment was ruled out of order.

C.C.F. members, fighting principally against a stipulation that three per cent of the working capital of co-operatives be taxed, urged that that provision be removed or the legislation withdrawn until a Dominion co-operatives act be established.

Determined to Enforce Act

Acting Finance Minister Abbott indicated the government was determined to enforce the Legislation as drafted, although he did move three amendments which he announced last week would be made in an effort to meet opposition objections.

Resources Minister Glen said the wives and dependents of servicemen would retain their priority on transportation and would not be interfered with by the movement of single Polish Army veterans to Canada to work farms.

The House gave third and final reading to a bill amending the National Housing Act to broaden its powers.

First reading was given a dozen bills concerning veterans matters which will be embodied in Canada's veterans charter.

Molotov Wants Free Countries To End Franco Rule

Paris, July 31. (AP)—Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia, in a speech to the Paris Peace Conference today, called upon "democratic countries" of the world to put an end to the Franco regime of Spain.

"It is impossible to safeguard peace," said Mr. Molotov, "unless Fascism is destroyed".

The Soviet Foreign Minister spoke after an appearance before the Conference Rules Committee at which he fought to establish a two-thirds majority voting rule for the conference of 21 powers, because, he said, "if all decisions were by simple majority the U.S.S.R. would be sure to find itself always in the minority."

Addressing the conference, called to confer on the peace that is to be written in Europe with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland, Mr. Molotov said:

"If we have still to deal with the question of the Fascist regime in Spain, then the time must not be too distant when democratic countries will be able to help the Spanish people who groan under Franco's regime to put an end to this survival bred by Hitler and Mussolini which is dangerous to the cause of peace."

Making his first public official conference pronouncement, the Soviet Foreign Minister told a meeting of the Rules Committee: "This (a simple majority) naturally would place the Anglo-Saxons at an advantage because it would form a block of from 12 to 13 votes."

He expressed fear that adoption of a simple majority rule would play the west against Eastern Europe.

YOUTH IS SHOT, CONSTABLE FACES MANSLAUGHTER

Victim, With Two Others, Allegedly Removing Cases From Parked Car

Toronto, July 31 — (CP)—Police Constable George Joyce, 29-year-old war veteran, was charged with manslaughter and suspended from duties last night following fatal shooting by police of 14-year-old Donald Robertson.

The Robertson boy and two other youths were allegedly removing suitcases from a parked car in a vacant lot when they were spotted by Constable Joyce and Constable F. A. McNiffe, patrolling the east-central Gerrard and Jarvis district in a police cruiser car.

The two officers jumped out of their car and called on the three youths to halt. Police said the boys ignored the warning, and that each officer then fired a revolver shot in the air. As the officers continued in chase of the youths, Constable, Joyce fired a second shot and young Robertson fell. He died while being taken to hospital from a bullet wound which entered his back and pierced his heart and chest.

Constable McNiffe meanwhile had captured John Kerrigan, 16, and he with James Baxter, 16, who was apprehended shortly afterwards, was charged with theft and receiving. The two youths and Constable Joyce will appear in police court today.

Chief Constable John Chisholm conducted a police investigation last night after which the manslaughter charge was laid against Constable Joyce. He was released on $3,000 bail to appear today.

The slain boy was the youngest of three children of Allan S. Robertson, a city ambulance driver. A war veteran, Mr. Robertson said he thought Donald had been "at a bad age," and added: "I tried to keep a close tab on him." The boy's mother was discharged from hospital recently after an illness of several months.

The boy's father said police had informed him that Constable Joyce had missed his footing and slipped just as he fired his second shot, causing it to go much lower than he had intended.

DIVIDE PALESTINE INTO FOUR AREAS U.K. PROPOSAL

Two Provinces, Arab And Jewish May Control Numbers Seeking Residence

London, July 31 — (CP)—The British government announced today that Anglo-American experts proposed to split Palestine into four areas and leave to a Jewish province itself the problem of deciding how many of Europe's homeless Jews might migrate to the Holy Land.

"But the implementation of the experts' plan as a whole depends upon United States co-operation," said the acting prime minister, Herbert Morrison, and Dominions secretary Viscount Addison in simultaneous announcements in the Houses of Commons and Lords.

Britain accepted the four-area proposal for troubled, bomb-torn Palestine "as a basis for negotiation."

If United States assistance in carrying out the pan is not forthcoming "we shall have to reconsider the position, particularly as regards the economic and financial implications," both declare, adding pointedly:

"The situation in Palestine will not brook delay."

The four areas, it was announced, would include an Arab province and a Jewish province and each "would have the power to limit the number and determine

CAR PRIORITY SYSTEM REMOVED BY GOVERNMENT

Disrupted by Low Car Production and Lively Black Market

Ottawa, July 31. (CP) — Canada's year-old car priority system, disrupted by a combination of low automobile production and a lively black market in the priority certificates, will end August first.

This announcement came last night from Reconstruction Minister Howe who said the system became unworkable when the car shortage and increased demand brought about a situation where enforcement was costing more than the system was worth.

For the man-in-the-street the announcement apparently spikes any hope he may have had of buying a new model for many months.

Mr. Howe said the trade had been a "firm" order to fill first the orders of those now holding priority certificates—and there is a backlog of some 60,000 unfilled certificates.

Three weeks ago Mr. Howe told the Commons Veterans Committee that veterans priorities had "completely bogged down" and in an interview last night said there had been widesperad illegal traffic in priority certificates.

Gives No Detail

He gave no details and declined comment regarding possible action against traffickeds. However, other sources disclosed that at least 500 forms have been sold at black market prices, some reaching as high as $500.

"Our system would have been successful had car production lived up to anticipation," said Mr. Howe. "When it didn't, the system broke down."

He expected the first-come-first-serve system of the future to work out because the trade could be trusted to take care of deserving cases and kill the black market.

The Motor Vehicle controller will give "most careful consideration', on the basis of evidence submitted, to urget cases which might arise after August first.

The latest figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistis, issued June 24, show May automobile production totalled 20,022 units compared with 16,830 in April and 15,045 in May, 1945.

Terms Would Strip Italy, Finland and Nazis' Balkan Satellites of Military Power Domination of Eastern Europe is Left Intact

By MEL MOST

Paris, July 31 —(AP)— Russia emerged today as the principal beneficiary of proposed peace treaties which would strip Italy, Finland and beaten Germany's Balkan satellites of their military power, redraw their frontiers and charge them at least $1,000,000,000 in reparations.

The treaty drafts presented to the 21-power peace conference last night by the Big Four agreed upon substantial territorial increases for the Soviet Union, upon payment of $900,000,000 in reparations to Russia and left Russia's domination of Eastern Europe intact.

In certain disputed sections of the treaty drafts, however, it seemed apparent that the western powers intend to try to whittle down some of the Russian gains in the east, at least in economic matters.

The United States and Britain want the vital Danube River opened to trade on a basis of complete equality, while Russia wants nothing said in any of the treaties about freedom of navigation on the Danube. The three western members of Big Four also want "most favored nation" status for all Allied countries in commercial dealings with the five defeated powers while Russia would exempt all fields closed to private enterprise and would make exceptions for neighboring states.

No Planes, Subs Allowed

Under the proposed treaties —which would end the State of War in Europe except for Germany and which would offer the five countries concerned an opportunity to enter the United Nations—none of the defeated countries would be allowed any bombing planes or submarines and would be required to guarantee fundamental human rights and to bar Fascist activity.

The military machines of all would be reduced to a vestige of power, and the treaty drafts directed the five beaten countries to co-operate for the purpose of insuring against any German rearmament in the future. The atom bomb was not mentioned in the treaty drafts, but rocket bombs would be outlawed.

The proposed treaties— 286 pages in length—offered a peace to Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Finland and Hungary which was mild in tone and largely so in demands, except for reparations and upon Italy's empire and border real estate.

Little Change in Status Quo

The drafts offered little vital change in the troubled status quo—except for withdrawal of Russian occupation troops from the Balkans and Anglo-American forces from Italy.

Russia alone of the major powers would win reparations—$100,000,000 from Italy, $300,000,000 each from Finland and Romania and $200,000,000 from Hungary. To the last award, however, the United States has entered some unpublished reservations, repre-

Policemen Urged To Seek Better Working Conditions

Toronto, July 31 (CP)—Delegates to the Ontario Police Association convention here yesterday were urged to strengthen their unions and seek better working conditions by Guy Merrill Desaulniers of Montreal, counsel for the Canadian Brotherhood of Policemen.

He termed "unconstitutional" the law prohibiting policemen from going on strike for improved working conditions and advised existing police unions to seek certification from the Ontario War Labor Board.

"Policemen have a right to strike and to participate in unions," he said. "They should belong to a union, both for their own benefit and the benefit of the public, in spite of the fact that the law prohibits a policemen's union from being affiliated with any other labor organization."

"For years we have heard about the duties of policemen but we seldom hear about their civic rights and liberties," said Mr. Desaulniers. "We ask governments to give this recognition of rights to policemen who must otherwise fight to obtain them.

"The question of the right to strike by public servants is a Federal matter and not one controlled by municipal corporations, which are the employers of most policeman. If employees (municipal and provincial governments) act in bad faith as far as working conditions are concerned, then the unions should use every moral and legal right to get adjustments."

ATOMIC CLEARING HOUSE

Oxford, England, July 31 — (CP)—The Atomic Scientists' Association, international body, agreed last night to set up an international clearing house for exchange of as much technical information as national laws permit.

Factory That Makes Butter From Coal Discovered in British Zone of Germany

By JAMES DEVLIN

Witten, Germany, July 31 (AP) —A factory that makes butter from coal was one of the prizes discovered by the British in their zone of Germany.

"It is excellent butter and I doubt if anyone ever would guess it was synthetic," said one British official who sampled it.

The factory, Imhausen and Company, located in this Ruhr city, has not made butter since the end of the war, but its management hopes to resume operations in about a month.

Dr. Karl Heinz Imhausen, young manager of the company, said the plant normally could produce 600 tons a month at a cost less than that of natural butter.

The synthetic butter can keep without refrigeration. Dr. Imhausen exhibited a pound manufactured before the war ended. It had not been kept under ice, and had not melted. It looked and tasted like the real thing.

Coal is converted into butter like this:

Coal is made into coke, coke into gas, the gas into paraffin. By a blowing process 80 to 82 tons of fatty acid can be drawn from 100 tons of paraffin. The fats are further separated by distillation under a high vacuum. Some are edible, some are not.

From there on the recipe is: Add to the pure, synthetic, edible fat 20 per cent water. Add carrot extract for vitamins and coloring. Add salt. Finally, inject something called diacetyl to give the odor of butter.

Most of the fats that don't go into butter are made into soap. The residue, is manufactured into a basic product for plastics, a softening material for rubber, an ingredient for varnish and into alcohol.

Canada, Bulgaria Were Not at War In Recent Struggle

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, July 31 — (CP Cable) — The Canadian delegation here is helping to write the peace treaties with Italy, Hungary, Romania and Finland but not Bulgaria. By a sheer fluke Canada, during the Second Great War, was not at war with that Balkan state.

When the draft treaties became available last night the four drafts listed Canada as a signatory power but the Bulgarian draft correctly omitted the Dominion from the Allied countries who waged war against Bulgaria.

There were a variety of explanations including some facetious ones why Canada did not declare war on Bulgaria with the other Allied countries when Bulgaria joined Germany in the attack on Russia.

But it appears the war declaration omittance at first was overlooked by the Canadian External Affairs Department at Ottawa under the pressure of work and when some official discovered the oversight it was decided that it was too late to bother about the matter.

Canada has no claims against Bulgaria so the issue does not amount to much.

More Donations To Kiwanis Fresh Air Camp Needed

Summer holidays are fast slipping away but according to the weatherman there will still be plenty of hot and sweltering days before September rolls around and there are simply dozens of youngsters in Belleville who can but dream of a happy holiday at some lakeside camp.

That is, they can but dream of a holiday away from the sweltering city pavements and dusty alleyway playgrounds unless they are one of the lucky ones to go to the Kiwanis Fresh Air Camp at Roblin Lake or some other holiday resort.

Frankly speaking every youngster in the city each summer should rightfully be entitled to a brief holiday such as the local Kiwanis Club, through its Roblin Lake camp, offers. But it takes money to equip and to operate such a camp and the Kiwanis Fresh Air Camp can operate only tionsthrough goodwill contributions from the general public or by the expenditure of club funds.

Early in July the Roblin Lake camp opened to give boy scouts and girl guides a brief holiday and since July 27th youngsters who otherwise might not have had the opportunity, have been enjoying camp life. The camp will remain open until late in August.

Contributions to the camp fund previously acknowledged amount to $677. Recent contributions include: Charles L. Hyde, $5; L. G. Fozard, $5; Mrs. Amy Rawson, $10; J. G. Brooks, $5; Ontario Intelligencer, $50; total $752.

The camp fund is still open and any and all contributions will be gladly received by Bruce Lattimer or any Kiwanian.

Quality and Yield Of Wheat Better Than Year Ago

With spring grain approximately 60 per cent cut and stook threshing already underway, yields reported to date are above the average with quality considerably better than last year, according to the weekly crop report published by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The stand of straw in the Bay of Quinte area is especially good with field being practically free of rust and very little, if any, lodging reported.

In Hastings county recent rains have improved pastures slightly and have helped to check the downward trend in milk production. In Prince Edward county, however, pastures are very dry with the milk flow continuing to dwindle. More rain is badly needed.

Root crops are reported to be making good growth with corn and tomatoes doing well. Many district poultry raisers are marketing cockerels of from 4 to 6 pounds weight. Raspberries will be about 50 percent of normal yield.

Council Permits Erection Of Service Station

Picton, July 31 — Following a lengthy discussion, at a special meeting of town council Monday night, it was agreed that Prince Edward Motors had secured a proper permit to erect a service station. The meeting followed opposition to the building of such a station on the corner, which is near a church.

Acting Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon though objecting, said he felt council had committed itself, but that there was misunderstanding concerning the type of building to be erected, that the original idea had been a showroom only, and that later permited permitted erection of gasoline pumps.

No action was taken to halt the building as the permit was passed earlier and still stands.

Advantages in Peru to Canadian Business Outlined to Members Of Kiwanis by Prof. Stephenson

The commercial and industrial opportunities for Canadian businessmen in Peru were outlined to the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at Hotel Quinte on Tuesday by Professor Wilfred Stephenson, teacher of English at University of Peru at Lima. Mr. Stephenson is making an extended trip across Canada extolling the business opportunities that can be developed in South America. He showed that the people of Latin America have money to spend and need Canadian manufactured goods of all kinds. His outline of that southern country was most interesting and in the question period, which followed the address, he explained some of the trouble in Bolivia.

Program Outlined.

The program for the Kiwanis Centre was outlined by Jack McVeigh and he hoped that the Vocational Guidance Committee would take a keen interest in the boys and girls now at Roblin Lake camp and study their needs so that the work started at the camp for less fortunate children could be continued at the Centre in the fall and winter months. He advised the committee members to meet with Mr. and Mrs. Stevens the camp directors and receive from them the case history of these children.

Following along the same lines, Aubrey Coe hoped that the members would take a keen interest in these children and visit the camp at regular intervals, enjoy their play and take part in the exercises. "This is a great work," said the speaker, and the club has obligated itself to look after these children. These are now 65 boys at the camp and on August 5th. 65 girls will move in and it is hoped that at least 300 children can be accommodated at the camp this year.

New Project Explained.

Ted Schwab, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, requested help to man the gates at the fair grounds on Monday when the motorcycle races, under the sponsorship of the club, will be held. The best riders in Canada and the United States will be in the competitions and some thrilling driving will be witnessed during the afternoon. He also announced another project of the club which should bring in the needed revenue to continue the work of the club and at the same time allow some lucky person to obtain a new home at a reasonable figure.

Two lots will be secured, one of which has been donated by Paul Haggis of the Crystal Hotel, and on these lots will be erected two houses at the actual cost of material and labor and these will be auctioned off to the highest bidder at a radio show that will be held over CJBQ latter in the Fall. The speaker showed that all material and labor will be supplied at the lowest possible figure the members of the club supplying most of the material. It is believed a substantial sum will be raised to increase the welfare work of the organization.

A Big County

The speaker was introduced by I. L. Moore and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Wally Warner. Mr. Stephenson stated that Peru was a country of 1,500,000 square kilometers and had a population of over 5,000,000. He stated its territory was a very privileged one in natural resources and one of the South American countries, that has suffered least from the last war. "The Peruvian people without having a very high standard of living have kept themselves within their own rhythm or balance and relatively low prices have been maintained," said the speaker. During the war Mr. Stephenson stated Peru increased exportation and at present there is a great deal of money in the country.

Expansion Definite

Mr. Stephenson stated that the future trade expansion with Canada is big and definite but the extent will largely depend on Canada's reconversion to civilian production. He named the many articles that Peruvians are in need of and the majority of those mentioned are made in this country. He thought that Canada and the United States were the principal centres of world supply and demand and that Canadian firms should seek new outlets in foreign trade and especially with South America. He opined that Canada should send salesmen to South America who can speak Spanish because the Peruvian was touchy, fearful and sometimes suspicious of those who cannot talk in their language. He described the advancement made in flying and predicted that Peruvians would have many planes and airways.

In conclusion Mr. Stephenson stated "as one who has lived in various parts of South America for the past 26 years I know that Canadians are highly appreciated and liked in Latin America and especially so in Peru and I personally think that Canadian business men should take the initiative and launch out, so as not to be the last to enter this great field of commercial and industrial activity that is to be very soon opened in Peru: a country of natural resources which will pay a hundredfold, any capital devoted to the development of its industrial advancement and its commercial possibilities."

Twin Brothers From Toronto Return Here for First Visit in Forty Years

"The town certainly has changed some in forty years, but there are still a few persons that we know in Belleville," agreed Messrs. C. G. Jones and A. V. Jones twin brothers of Toronto who today paid a brief visit to Belleville where they lived their early life and received their education.

Although having lived for the past four decades only 100 miles away in Toronto, it is the first visit of the brothers to their native town since they moved away 40 years ago.

The two Toronto men said they had attended Queen Victoria School, but when they sought to visit their former classrooms they were surprised to see that a different school rested on the old site. The old school, they said was a combination public and high school.

Sons of the late Albert Jones, former railroad mail clerk between Belleville and Madoc, the two Toronto men recalled singing in the choir at St. Thomas Church during the time when Rev. Mr. Beamish was and also singing at Christ Church, "across the river." The family left Belleville when the boys were youths of approximately 17 years.

Only a very few of the store fronts on Front Street were recognized by the brothers who recalled only the old landmarks.

"Of course we have passed through Belleville on several occasions while en route to centres in Quebec Province but this is the first time that we have stopped in the city since we left here 40 years ago," laughed one of the brothers, "but now that we have made the break we're going to come back often."

While in the city the brothers renewed old acquaintances and visited houses in which they lived nearly one-half century ago.

Still similar in appearance the twin brothers both work in Toronto, A. V. Jones with the registration department of the Civil Service, and C. G. Jones with a well known plumbing manufacturing concern.

Polish Ex-servicemen Being Brought To Canada Diligent and Industrious

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 31 —(CP Cable) —Canada's decision to admit 4,000 Polish ex-servicemen into the Dominion as agricultural workers will bring to the country a group of men who acquired a reputation for diligence and industry while serving alongside the Canadians both in Italy and Northwest Europe.

Tankmen of the 5th Canadian Armored Division become acquainted with the Poles' hard-working qualities on exercises "Shakedown" and "Grizzly" in Norfolk county in the spring of 1943. The Poles seemed to forget that the exercise was taking place in the delightful English countryside and threw into it every warlike artifice which the "real thing" would have demanded. They won their manoeuvres hands down.

In Italy their fortitude was attested in the winter campaign of 1944 in the Hitler Line at Cassino. They fought their way up the Adriatic coast and after playing an anchor role in the Gothic Line campaign, captured Pesaro with troops of the 1st Canadian Corps under Maj.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns.

Their formations in Northwest Europe took more time to find their stride, but once having struck it, they showed themselves of similar stature.

Canadian troops always looked upon their Polish comrades with sympathy, although there was no close association between the two groups.

Many Poles who fought near the Canadians at Cassino had gone through the 1939 Polish campaign and then spent months or years in Russian prison camps before escaping to re-enlist in the Middle East. Others, coerced into the German army, had deserted at the first opportunity to find their way to ranks of their own nationality.

Most soldiers of the two Polish corps have undergone great political anguish and emerged either pro- or anti-Russian.

IN MEMORIAM

SHARPE — In proud and loving memory of Flying Officer Harry Morden Sharpe, killed in France, July 31, 1944.

We cannot say and we will not say
That he is dead; he is just away.
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
He has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be since he lingers there
And you—oh, you, who the wildest yearn
For the oldtime step and the glad return
Think of him faring on, as dear,
In the love of there, as the love of here,
Think of him still as the same, we say
He is not dead—he is just away.
—Sadly missed by Grandparents, Mother, Dad and sister, Pauline.

DOUGLAS — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, John Douglas, who passed away July 31, 1943.

I have lost my soul's companion,
A life linked with my own,
And day by day I miss him more
As I walk through life alone.
—Sadly missed by Wife, Daughters, Son, Clarence, and Grandchildren.

WILSON — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Frank Wilson, who passed away July 31, 1934, in his 76th. year.

No morning dawns, no night returns
But that we think of him,
Those left behind are very dear,
But none replaces him,
And since he's gone it's not the same.
The world is bleak and bare,
We miss him in every place we look
And he just isn't there.
We like to think when life is gone,
Wherever Heaven may be,
That he'll be waiting at the door
Up there to welcome us.
—Ever remembered by his Wife and Family.

Maj.-Gen. Arthur E. Potts Returns to Civilian Life As Big a Pacifist as Ever

By GEORGE RONALD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 31—(CP)—Maj.-Gen. Arthur E. Potts, a soldier in two world wars and through 21 years of uncertain peace, returns today to civilian life "as much a pacifist as ever" but alarmed at the apathy of Canadians "to the urgency of national defence in peacetime."

Gen. Potts, who is retiring as general officer commanding the Canadian army's central command, said in an interview with The Canadian Press that without an adequate peacetime force "we'd certainly be out of luck" if there was another war.

The 55-year-old general is one of seven brothers who fought in the First Great War — three were killed — and the father of three sons and a daughter who served in the Second Great War.

He rose from the ranks in the First war, was twice wounded, won the Military Medal and became a lieutenant. Between wars he became brigade commander in the non-permanent active militia in Saskatoon, Sask.

In the Second War, he led the expedition which raided Spitsbergen in September, 1941, and after commanding the Sixth Division on Canada's west coast he came to Toronto in October, 1943, as officer commanding Military District No. 2. Recently he was appointed G.O.C. the central command, comprising districts one (London), two (Toronto) and three (Kingston).

Plans Unsettled

The former University of Saskatchewan dairying specialist said his plans for the immediate future are unsettled. First will come "a bit of a holiday." As a civilian again, Gen. Potts said, he intends to advocate national defence as a "must" for Canada's future.

"People give the fullest credit to the boys who went overseas and won the war — and rightly so — but those boys wouldn't have had the chance to win if we had been unable to put citizen armies into the field as soon as war started," said the native of Blyth, Nothumberland county, England.

"I don't think people realize just how touch-and-go it was both in 1915 and 1940. It is my confirmed opinion that the reason we went on from there was that we had citizen armies to start with. I'll go one step farther and say that if it hadn't been for the people who were 'anti-defence' in the 1930s we might have had a force of such strength that we might not have had to fight the war.

Seen Too Many People Killed

"God knows I'm a pacifist — I've seen too many people killed — but I blame these so - called rabid pacificists who are sticking their heads up now for whatever lack of preparation might become apparent later. It is foolish to think the whole course of history will change just because we're here. Like everybody else I hope there won't be another war but we'd be crazy to take it for granted.

"It would be interesting to compare the amount spent on, say, fire insurance, to the amount spent on national defence. It seems that people will pay for protection against anything but war and death from war. The man who takes out fire insurance doesn't expect or hope his house will burn down, but he's prepared. The same should be done about defence. That's what I'm going to preach."

The general said there was a "great mistaken public idea" about soldiers causing war. "Soldiers don't make war. Yes, perhaps they do in a soldier dictatorship. But here the soldier is the servant of the people thru the government they elect. The soldier just does what he's told."

HOUSE APPROVES

Serious Blow Claimed

In the debate on Co-operatives, M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, urged Mr. Abbott to reconsider the legislation, which he said would be a "serious" blow to the Co-operative movement.

Co-operatives would be compelled to compute three per cent of the capital in use and pay taxes on it. This would strike at the very basis of Co-operatives and place them on the same basis as profit-making organizations. This was compulsion.

Mr. Abbett replied that the MacDougall Commission on Co-operatives had found that a Co-operative enterprise which employed capital earned returns which could be taxed as interest. There was the principle that when a concern or individual earned something that was taxable, then that taxable income should be taken into account.

Could Pay Dividends

The proposed legislation would enable a Co-operative or any other company to pay patronage dividends out of income that otherwise would be taxable under the income tax Act and to deductk such patronage dividends before paying income tax.

John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, opposing the proposals, said that, while the government may have drawn up a wise taxation policy for the future, it would have difficulty in establishing a policy for collecting taxes for years goie by.

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, said his group was opposed to the legislation because it would place the Co-operatvies in the same position as ordinary business. This was a wrong principle.

John Blackmore (SC—Lethbridge) charged there were in Canada a group of men who were deliberately aiming at destroying the Co-operative movement. The resolutions should be withdrawn until they were fully explained to the people.

Should Bear Fair Share

Garfield Case (PC—Grey North) said everyone should bear a fair share of the nation's financing and argued that every time an exemption was granted someone else had to "dig a little deeper."

The House later turned to study of a resolution granting a three-year tax exemption to new mines and heard from Mr. Coldwell the comment that the government was taking from private industry all the risk that industry itself should take.

He termed the resolution "most generous" to the mining industry, which depleted the nation's resources and left nothing but a hole in the ground. Exponents of private enterprise were mainly interested in the amount they could make in Canada and fake elsewhere.

Rodney Adamson (PC—York West) denied that only the "rich" made profit on mining developments and argued that labor and other production costs absorbed most of the earnings.

J. L. Gibson (Ind—Comox Alberni) said more always was put into mines than was taken out.

J. M. Macdonnell (PC—Muskoka-Ontario) said there still was enough risk for private enterprise.

How To Land Big Ones

Oconomowoc, Wis., July 31 — (AP)—Here's a tip to the fishermen who carry all the necessary equipment to land the big ones. Three girl campers on Upper Nashota Lake were rowing in shallow water when they spied a large fish. One of the gals delivered a knockout blow with an oar. Her companions, squeamish about slippery fish, slipped a bath towel beneath it and lifted it— a northern pike—into the boat. The catch measured 44 3-4 inches and weighed 20 pounds.

Senate Members Believe Definite Action Should Be Taken to Retain Public Esteem; Three Factors Named

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 31 — (CP)—Several Senators have come to the conclusion that there must be changes in the representation in the Senate and that the Senators themselves should start the ball rolling in that direction.

Many senators believe the present situation calls for some definite action if the Senate is to retain public esteem and three factors are forcing an issue.

They are:—

1. The continual shrinkage in the numerical and debating strength of the Progressive Conservative opposition.
2. Three provinces are governed by political parties that are not represented in the Senate.
3. The Senate is regarded as the protector of Dominion-Provincial relations, provincial governments should have representatives to express their views in the Upper House.

With the deaths this session of Senator A. D. McRae and Sir Thomas Chapais, the number of Progressive Conservatives in the Chamber has been reduced to 24. There are 65 Liberals and when the seven vacancies are filled there will be 72.

More important than the numerical weakness of the party which forms the opposition is that a number of them are too old to take an active part in the debates and work of the committees. Of the 24 Progressive Conservatives, 15 are more than 70 years old. Five of them are more than 80.

Quebec has a Union Nationale government, Saskatchewan is C.C.F. and Alberta, Social Credit and no one in the Senate express their political views or doctrines.

The first question the Senate Committee would decide is whether senators should be appointed or elected by popular vote as is done in Australia and the United States.

Despite the evident success of Australia with an elected Senate, those favoring an appointed Senate claim that an elected Senate would be a useless expense because it would be largely a duplicate of the House of Commons.

Another point the committee would have to decide would be the age limit of senators. It is agreed that to put an age limit of say 75 years in the report it would have trouble in passing but it would pass, senators say, if it did not apply to the present members.

To get over the difficulty of a one-sided Senate and at the same time give the provinces representation it will be urged that half the senators in each province be appointed by the provincial government and to get a 50-50 representation as soon as possible, each provincial government would fill the vacancies as they occur until the half - way mark in representation was reached.

Another point to be considered is whether a person made a senator would remain until he or she reached the age limit or should it be for a flat 10 years.

TERMS WOULD

sented by a half-page scissored out of the treaty draft. Bulgaria's reparations have not been settled and the Italian figure is a partial one. Hungary would be required to pay another $100,000,000 to Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia.

Territorial clauses in the five drafts also held advantage for Russia.

Some Taken from Italy

In the case of Italy, five small border slices would go to France, Eastern Zenezia Giulia would go to Yugoslavia, the Dodecanese Islands to Greece, the African colonies would meet some undedided fate and the Port of Trieste would be internationalized under United Nations supervision.

The starting point for the territorial changes for Italy—as well as for Hungary—was the border line of Jan. 1, 1938—before Munich—while for Romania, Bulgaria and Finland the changes were based on the frontiers of Jan. 1, 1941, while the German-Soviet pact was still in force.

This meant Allied confirmation of Romania's 1940 cession of Bessarabia to Russia—a cession which was withdrawn after Germany's invasion of Russia as well as of Lower Dobruja to Bulgaria and Finland's cessions to Russia in 1939, to which now is added the ice-free Arctic Sea outlet of Petsamo province. Hungary is required to recognize the sub-Carpathian Ukraine as Soviet territory.

Cop at Bazaar Flees To Rectory for Safety

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., July 31 — (AP) — A scuffle between a policeman and a young man at a church bazaar in nearby Plains township touched off an angry demonstration early today and the officer fled to the Rectory for safety.

Joseph Sheerin, the policeman, fired two shots into the ground and retreated across the street to the rectory. The pastor, Rev. Joseph Pilny, called police.

The crowd of 300 to 500 milled outside but made no attempt to enter. Twenty state policemen arrived and the crowd left about 2 a.m.

Sheerin said the scuffle began when he tried to arrest Frank Wienek, 19, for creating a disturbance. A crowd gathered and Sheerin was struck across the face.

Wienek was treated for head lacerations in hospital.

POPULAR INVITATION

New York, July 31 (AP)—The swank hotel Chatham in midtown Manhattan threw a cocktail party for guests who didn't like the dark. Electric power into the 13-storey hotel was shut off at midnight Sunday for two hours to permit a change-over from one source of current to another. The management advised the 600 guests in advance, provided each with a flashlight and invited those who didn't want to remain in their rooms to enjoy drinks on the house in the hotel's open-air restaurant where candles supplied illumination.

ARRESTED FOR ATTEMPTED RAPE

Toronto, July 31—(CP) — Police said Tues. that Walter Arnold, 32, of Toronto was arrested on a charge of attempted rape following the complaint of a 30-year-old married woman that she had been pulled into a truck in downtown Toronto last night, driven to an east end beach and assaulted.

August Comes

Another month of summer begins, August, with all its appeal and the full sweep of the season. It finds hundreds of thousands of American tourists and Canadians enjoying the resorts and beauty spots of the great outdoors of Ontario and of the other Provinces with more to follow and swell the population living close to nature's heart to undoubtedly the largest proportions of any holiday season. After August there is September, an ideal month which people of this northern clime love so much. And then after that October, which has its brilliant foliage as the year moves on into mid-autumn.

Canada's wide variety of climate has been justly admired and its appeal continues to grow. It has never failed to draw the praise of visitors.

The weather and nature have been generously kind this year. Visitors are seeing our forests and streams, our highways and the great hinterland of the north in all its matchless beauty with its power to restore body and spirit.

Highways and streets are a parade of cars from many States of the Union and from all the Provinces of the Dominion. Guests of Canada are found in numbers in every part, where ever one would wish to go.

The first complete summer since the world emerged from the war in Europe and Asia will always be a memorable one for home are the men from the battlefronts of the world, home are the sailors and seamen and the airmen from their long journeys and flights and home are members of the women's services. It has been a summer in which families have been reunited. It recalls the pre-war vacations, only this of 1946 has been intensified naturally by the sense of relief from the strain of the international struggle and by the complete unity of interest in enjoying this holiday season.

The official Weekly Road Bulletin issued by the Ontario Department of Highways in the past week stressed the beauties of Algonquin Park as a great playground and on its last page devotes an article to "Canoe Trails of Algonquin Park," which sums up the very spirit of life in the haunts of nature in this great area of "vast forest-land of 2,700 square miles interlaced with the waters of 1,200 lakes and their connecting rivers — a game preserve where may be taken trophies of the rod and camera, but not of the gun." Such a picture of any part of Ontario is an incentive and invitation to everyone.

Canada and Art

Canadian interest in art continues to grow, according to the annual report for the National Gallery of Canada. Nearly 150,000 visitors witnessed special and regular exhibitions in the year ending March 31st., 1945. Loan exhibitions to points outside of Ottawa were in greater demand than ever and were sent out in larger numbers. "The cumulative effect of these exhibitions," the report states, "is apparent in the steadily growing interest in art centres and in the increased attendance at individual are galleries." So great has been the demand for good color reproduction of Canadian paintings, by which the benefits of the Art Gallery are carried to the remotest settlements, that it has grown beyond the capacity of the present staff to cope with satisfactorily. It is noted that extra space and assistance will be required for this work if it is not to be handicapped. During the year under review 163,210 prints, including the well-known silk screen prints, were sent out. This is four times the number distributed last year, which was in turn double that of the year before.

Through CBC broadcasts a plan was carried out to increase the effectiveness of the Art Gallery as an educational institution. The plan is to extend the plan by including other schools and periods besides treating of outstanding Canadian artists.

The report notes, "The almost universal demand for a system of art centres to help in bringing the arts even to the smallest communities is convincing proof of the people's awareness of the better things of life. This improved viewpoint will bear fruit in a still greater measure of prosperity for all."

Demands of foreign countries for exhibitions of Canadian art continue active.

The growth of national consciousness of the people is reflected in the development of Canadian art and is something of which the people may be proud. No community can be unaffected by this movement. Artists in Canada come from all parts of the country, this fact indicating that art is the treasure of everyone.

The report notes that the works now being produced by Canadian artists on the part Canada played in the war will be "an artistic record of the conflict which will be of inestimable value and interest to Canadians now and in the future." Thirty Canadians served for various periods.

It is pointed out that it is important to bring the design of Canadian manufactured goods abreast of the best international standards of design and at the same time give Canadian products a distinction which will be recognized as truly Canadian.

Duties Abroad

Britain's occupying forces in ex-enemy countries have been reduced, but it is necessary, especially in Germany, that they should remain substantial for a long time to come. The alternative would be tantamount to inciting a revival of Nazism. The safeguarding of British communications and bases must also be maintained. And, finally, Britain must make her contribution as a leader of the United Nations to the international security system. What the extent of that contribution will be we do not yet know. The Labor party is in favor of an international security force which ultimately supplant all national armies. But it would be folly to deny that the world as a whole is not yet ready to make such a change; and that, unless we are prepared to become a cipher in international councils during this vital period, we must keep our forces at a reasonable strength. Meanwhile, the government must lose no opportunity to urge the progressive reduction of armaments and armies which is foreseen in the United Nations Charter.

—London Daily Herald.

From Bombs to Playgrounds

Some of London's grim scars of war—areas where German bombs turned whole rows of houses into a mass of tangled debris — have been cleared and transformed into open-air playgrounds where small children, especially in crowded districts, play safely and happily under the supervision of trained mothercraft nurses. Mothers working a 30-hour week leave their youngsters at a charge of 20 cents a day. The children play from early morning until sunset to their hearts' content with swings, see-saws, rocking horses and rag dolls — still not easy to get in post-war Britain. Those under two years are given a complete change of clothing every day in return for one clothing coupon from their allowance. The daily three meals consist of breakfast (which includes free orange juice), a cooked dinner and tea.

A Glut in Cotton

Altogether in the world today there is a surplus of 26,500,000 bales of cotton — 5,000,000 more than existed at the start of the war. That is the picture confronting the American cotton exporter today. Already in order to sell cotton abroad the Americans are forced to pay a subsidy of 4 cents a pound because Brazil is undercutting them. Like every other merchant who is seriously over-stocked, the Americans will be glad to sell to Lancashire, their best customer, on a promise to pay when the cotton is worked up into the finished article. So we should start placing the orders now, whatever the fate of the loan. The means of payment will come when a world hungry for Lancashire's products has increased our reserves of foreign currencies, says London Sunday Express.

It is very nice to be

With a glass of lemonade
When it's ninety in the shade.

Quite contented I can sit,
When of breeze there's not a bit,
With my labors all forgot
When the sun is blistering hot.

It is good to doze away
Every sweltering summer day.
With a great yawn I reply
When for help the women cry.

I'm a very lucky man
That to idle thus I can.
And I'm sorry for the lot

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How did Ireland get its name?

The first element in "Ireland" appears to be an ancient Gaelic root word that the early Celtic settlers on the island applied to themselves.

More than 400 years B.C. the island was referred to as "Ierne" in a Greek poem. In later Greek this became "Iverna," and in Latin "Hibernia," which is still a poetic name of Ireland. Some authorities derive "Erin," another poetic name of Ireland, from Gaelic "Iar-innis," west island, and "Ireland" from Gaelic, "Iaren-land," land of the west, supposedly alluding to the fact that it is the westernmost of the two British Isles.

Another theory is that the first element in "Ireland" signifies "iron" and that name literally means "ironland." In support of this theory an "old Celtic legend" is cited to the effect that in ancient times an iron sword was buried in the heart of the island to bring good luck and to charm the land from frequent inundations from the sea.

"Eire," pronounced "AIR-a" to rhyme with "Sarah," is the modern Gaelic form of "Ireland." "Erse," a variant of "Irish," is applied in both Scotland and Ireland to the ancient Gaelic language. Thus it appears that "Ireland," "Irish," "Erin," "Erse," "Averna," "Hibernia" and "Eire" all stem from the same Gaelic name that the early Celtic inhabitants applied to themselves for some reason now unknown.

In 1922 the island was divided into two political units — Northern Ireland, part of the United Kingdom, and the Irish Free State, an autonomous state within the British Empire. The Irish Free State, often known as Southern Ireland, notwithstanding it extends farther north than Northern Ireland, protested against this "Partition of Ireland." Under the constitution of 1937 the Irish Free State officially changed its name to "Eire" in Gaelic and "Ireland" in English. At the same time Gaelic was made the first official language and English the second, although comparatively few of the inhabitants could speak or understand Gaelic, while virtually all of them could speak English.

This constitution divorced Eire from the United Kingdom for all practical purposes and made it a "sovereign, independent, democratic state," although provision was made for co-operation with the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations. In 1929 the United States provided that citizens of Eire need not renounce allegiance to the British Sovereign when they became naturalized American citizens. The constitution of Eire declares that the country shall embrace the "whole of Ireland, its islands, and the territorial seas," but provided that, pending the reintegration of the national territory, the laws passed by the Parliament under the constitution shall apply to the same area as the former Irish Free State. The Eire flag consists of vertical stripes of green, white and orange, the last being symbolical of Northern Ireland. Although recognized as a Catholic country in the constitution, Eire chose a Protestant for its first President. Dr. Douglas Hyde (1860-1945), noted scholar and writer, was inaugurated President of Eire June 25, 1938.

MACKENZIE'S COLUMN

Division into Two Sections May Be Germany's Fate

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP. Foreign Affairs Analyst)

As the long-awaited Paris peace conference got into action Monday in ancient Luxembourg palace there came from Washington an indirect, but none the less potent, reminder that there still remains a problem which is vastly more important than anything on the conference agenda—and that's what is going to happen to Germany.

The Washington reminder was the announcement that Britain had agreed in principle with the United States to merge their German zones of occupation into a single economic unit. This is Britain's response to United States State Secretary Byrnes' appeal in the Big Four foreign ministers' conference uly 11 for the establishment of a central administration in Germany to give economic unity. The purpose was to permit an exchange of resources and thus avert the economic paralysis with which the Reich is threatened because it is divided nto four more or less airtigh ctompartments.

Ostensibly the Washington announcement had no relation to the peace parley. It wouldn't be surprising to learn, however, that the timing of the statement was by inspiration. In any event it was par for the occasion, for the future of Europe depends in great degree on what disposition the Allies make of the Germany which for so long was the economic arch of continental Europe.

Official circles in Washington and London expect that France will join with Britain and the United States in this economc unty but that Russa will reject the proposal. If that's what happens it will mean that the Reich will be split into two sections—the western part which will comprise the American, British and French zones, and the eastern side which is in Russian hands.

Could Become Permanent

This division might easily become permanent, thus separating Europe into two camps—one under Russian domination and the other playing along with the Allies.

Something of the sort apparently was in the mind of Gen. De Gaulle Sunday when he made his sensational speech calling for the quick formation of an Anglo-French alliance as keystone of an eventual bloc of western European countries, bound together for self-preservation. He asserted that world security depends upon "future relations of America and Russia."

A somewhat similar thought was sounded by President Bidault of France yesterday in opening the peace conference which is dealing with the peace treaties for Italy, Bulgaria, Hungary, Romania and Finland. He said that whatever blame could be attached to the failure to keep the peace after the First Great War, a "fundamental cause of that failure was that the two great powers (apparently the United States and Russia) who had taken a decided part in the conquest of arms remained on the sidelines during the solution of peace."

The five treaties before the peace confreence are, of course, important but they are trifling as compared with other issues with which Americans still have to deal. As this column remarked yesterday, the greatest question of the day is "what are Russia's ambitions?" World peace primarily hinges on this. But next in importance ranks that problem of what is to happen to Germany.

Women Must Take Part in All Needs In Peace as in War

Montreal, July 31. (CP)— An agreement on the need "to reduce and finally to eliminate the traditional limitations on the work opportunities of women", has been reached by eight members of the committee on women's work of the International Labor organization who have been meeting at I.L.O. headquarters here from July 8 to July 13, it was announced today.

The eight members, experts in the field of women's work, agreed that "women themselves must show the same readiness to participate in the full range of their country's and world economic needs. . . as they did on the advisory committees and boards for development of war production.

Principal purpose of the meetings was to exchange views on problems relating to the post-war employment of women in order to assist the I.L.O. in its work of improving women's employment conditions. It was requested that the suggestions be forwarded to the governing body and to the special committees of I.L.O. for appropriate action.

WHAT IS PYORRHEA?

Here are some general statements, or facts, I believe, about pyorrhea:

1. Pyo means pus; rheo means flow, current, discharge. So pyorrhea means a flow or discharge of pus. The full name is pyorrhea alveolaris — alveolus is tooth socket. Pyorrhea, as the term is commonly used, is flow of pus from one or more tooth sockets.

2. One may have pyorrhea involving one or several tooth sockets and obtain arrest of the trouble from proper medical and dental treatment.

3. There is no specific cause, remedy or cure for this trouble.

4. In my opinion — remember, I'm just a one-horse-and-buggy doc—pyorrhea (otherwise known as Rigg's disease, parodonitis, gingivitis, expulsiva, cemento-periostitis) is fundamentally degeneration of gum, tooth socket, tooth, jaw bone, muscle, nerve, the entire chewing machinery, which inveitably occurs from disuse and from nutritional deficiency.

5. Neither the dentist nor the doctor working alone can give the patient a fair chance of obtaining arrest of this degeneration or retrogressive change in structure and function. Only by teamwork and frequent consultation can they give the patient the advantage of good treatment.

The doctor who takes a quick look at the patient's mouth and arbitrarily orders or advises the patient to have all his teeth extracted is hardly worth fooling with. The dentist who makes or has made X-ray films and arbitrarily advises extraction of all or many of the patient's remaining teeth is, in my opinion — and I alone am responsible for what I say here — is interested in his own business and not at all in the welfare of the patient.

In some cases, good dentists tell me, it is advantageous to the patient if a single tooth on each side can be left in place to support the denture (bridge, plate or whatever it may be); in other cases, depending on the patient's jaw and gum formation, on whether it is an upper or lower denture and on other circumstances, it is to the patient's disadvantage if a single tooth on one or both side remains. I am not qualified to have an opinion about that; I'd leave it to my dentist's judgment if I were the patient — that is, whether to extract that one remaining tooth on each side, in order to give me the most satisfactory plate or other denture.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Eggs

Please tell me for what purpose or for what ailment men often order raw egg or raw egg white in restaurants. Also whether crushed or powdered egg shell is of any value to take?

(P. A. C.)

Answer.— Raw egg or raw egg albumen has no value except as food — and cooked egg — cooked as you like — is always superior in nutritive value. Egg shell is practically pure calcium carbonate, and calcium carbonate is a good ant-acid — better than sodium bicarbonate for acid stomach, etc. The calcium in egg-shell has the same nutritive value as the calcium in milk, cheese, egg yolk or other food rich in calcium. The food value and the remedial value of calcium (lime) is described in detail in the booklet "The Calcium Shortage" — for copy send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

Afraid to Take the Money?

Your answer to a query about papers, letters, books and magazines carrying disease is somewhat indefinite. Do you mean to imply that disease can never be carried by such things?

(D. S. L.)

Answer — Nothing is impossible except a mouse's nest in a cat's ear, but I'd never hesitate to take money, book, paper, magazine, letter or a pair of Annie Oakleys from the hand of a person with any disease you care to mention — provided the article was not grossly soiled. I believe ordinary soap and water washing of the hands or of any object that can be washed, is ample protection against contracting any disease through contact with such things.

Suffered Paralytic Stroke Tells How He Mastered It

In the Twinkling of an Eye He Became Doomed to a Living Death, But Fate Hadn't Reckoned With Courage and Perseverance of This Man

How a victim of a paralytic stroke mastered his affliction and is able to live a normal life again is told by L. V. Washburn, who relates his own story in "Healthways", Webster City. His article is reprinted:

I didn't realize at the time that I had suffered a stroke. I had put my coat on a hanger and was trying to hang it in the little closet in the tourist cabin. Try how I might, I couldn't reach the hook, although it wasn't much higher than eye level.

I tried again, but this time couldn't lift the coat any higher than my waist. I noticed my right army fall limp, and I was unable to exert any power over it. Then my right leg collapsed and I felt myself falling against the side of the closet door, and then to the floor.

The thing that puzzled me was that my mind remained completely alert. I could see and hear everything that went on, yet was unable to move or speak.

My first reaction was one of feeling utterly foolish as my wife called to me in alarm and I was unable to answer. I heard her scream as she came running. Men came into the cabin and lifted me onto the bed. "Heavy son-of-a-gun, isn't he?" somebody said.

When the doctor arrived, I heard clearly the questions he asked my wife and the answers she gave. Yet they both assumed that I was completely unconscious for I was unable to make any sign. Listening to the conversation, I learned I had suffered a stroke.

I am telling this now, in the hope that I may help other men or women who have had a stroke. Most people assume that when you have had one you are finished. This need not be so.

Although the stroke left me partly paralyzed on one side, and unable to speak coherently, I was determined to recover the use of my muscles, and I did. Today, seven years after the first stroke, and the two that followed it, I have regained possession of all my normal faculties. The paralysis has disappeared. My voice is back. At the age of 55, I am again handling the job from which I was once forced to retire.

I don't know what brought the stroke on. I understand that even doctors don't know the cause of these things, but perhaps overwork and physical exhaustion contributed to it. I was sales manager for a shirt company, and had been making a cross-country sales inspection, traveling an average of 400 miles a day, every day for six weeks. We had arrived late in the town where we had rented the cabin.

After the stroke, an ambulance took me to the hospital. My wife seemed to be never away from me. With her arms around me, and her face close to mine, I could hear her trying to tell me who she was. "It's Marie," she kept saying. "It's Marie. Don't you remember?"

I remembered her perfectly well, but when I tried to communicate that fact to her all I could do was make some incoherent guttural sound.

After a couple of weeks, I could move my arms and body slightly, and some of my face muscles. But I still couldn't talk.

I tried to write what I had to say, but I couldn't control my hand. The least attempt to grip a pencil and co-ordinate my muscles left me exhausted.

By now the doctors thought I was well enough to go by train to my home town, "to spent the rest of his days among his own surroundings." But there remained the problem of getting money. We had plenty in the bank, but it was in my name. Nothing to do but for Marie to write out a cheque and have me try to sign it. We made several attempts, and spoiled many cheques.

Finally, we devoted a full day to the ordeal. At the end of the day I had completed a signature which the bank would accept. But I was utterly exhausted and needed a full day of absolute rest to regain what little strength I had.

(We were told later that a paralyzed, or semi-paralyzed, person doesn't have to write his signature to withdraw money from his bank — that a simple "X" is enough, if properly witnessed.)

Back home, my strength improved until I was able to walk. But I still couldn't talk. It is a most ridiculous sensation to know exactly what you want to say, yet when you open your mouth to speak, to have only gibberish come out.

Soon I was riding the streetcar to the outskirts of the city and going for walks in the country. At first, Marie came with me. But in no time I was walking two-and-a-half miles a day. After that I went alone — alone, except for a dictionary.

I started to learn the English language all over again, beginning with "rat," "cat," and "one," "two," three." I would look at the word in the dictionary and try to say something like it. But the muscles were completely gone. When I tried to say "rat," out would come "gavikal." I would try to say "no" and out would come "bossing." I had to begin the arduous task of restraining the muscles of my mouth and throat — as I was already doing with my arm and leg muscles.

I'll never forget the day the doctors said I had recovered sufficiently to drive a car. I got the car out and drove 200 miles before stopping.

By now I had thought of something I could do. The war was on, and they were appealing for men for any kind of work. I went back to my office. My job was still there, of course, for I was a partner in the firm. But you can't manage a bunch of glib salesmen and direct campaigns when the only reliable part of your vocabulary is the word "yes." After a while I got mastery of "no," but my vocal equipment was still inadequate for the job.

I would be introduced, as I was once, to a Mr. Cavanagh. I got up cordially, shook hands, but my greeting to him was "Hi! Mr. Hobocoba!" After that I merely nodded, and kept my mouth shut.

I became chauffeur to the salesmen. I knew the territory by heart, so was able to save them considerable time, and ensure thorough coverage. After a while I began going in with a salesman while he made a call. I would nod and smile, say "yes," and "no." But gradually I was regaining confidence.

Also, I was training other vocal muscles to replace the ones that were paralyzed. On my long walks in the country I would read a few words each day—really old, simple words. And I would read books and magazines and newspapers aloud while I walked.

I found that I had to change my entire thinking process. Normally, you speak automatically, the words coming out according to the way the ideas come to mind. But I discovered that the only way I could speak coherently was to reduce all my thoughts to pictures with the words painted on them. Speaking then became like reading from a moving electric news sign.

It was more complicated than that, since words had to be broken down in advance according to pronunciation, with signs to indicate which syllable to accent. So, in speaking, I would arrange my thoughts in "typewriter" sentences, mentally, then go over them and put in the proper pronunciation and accent marks, and finally, read what I had "written."

Not until then did I realize the number of mental and physical operations necessary for the speaking of a single word. Take, the word "ulcer." First, I'd put it in mental print, and then size it up. I'd start that first vowel, that "uh," on the way out, listen to it to make sure I had it right, and then add an "l". Fast as anything I'd have to ring in an "sss" and end up with an "urr." The problem was to whip them all in together fast enough for them to come out as a single word.

One day, after I had driven a salesman to an established customer, I noticed that a new store had opened across the street. While the salesman was busy on his call, I went across to this new store by myself. Once inside, all my confidence left me. I wanted to run back to the car. What if I tried to talk and all my words came out as gibberish once more?

But a clerk was beside me before I could retreat.

"Something for you?" he asked.

I braced myself. Slowly, Slowly does it.

"I would like," I said, "to see the manager."

I felt like shouting enthusiastically. It had come out right!

Then I was in the manager's office, showing him my samples. Although I no doubt appeared to be a very slow speaker, he seemed to think nothing of it. You can't realize how I walked on air out of there — I had an order! I had talked successfully and sold my product to a stranger — the hardest type of deal to put across. You don't know what victory means until such a thing happens.

Well, I'm back as sales manager now. My health is good. My muscles are all re-trained. I've licked the stroke.

I think there's a time in everybody's life when he has a chance to lie down and die. If you want to die, you can. I didn't, and I don't think you do, either. If you want to live and recover, and if you have even a fighting chance, you can do it, if you fight hard enough. And if you believe in yourself.

The other day one of the boys came in and said he'd run into a customer who was a pretty tough nut to crack. "I'm not a good enough talker," he said.

I reached for my hat. "Show him to me," I said. "The tough one are the ones I like."

Printers' Picket Line Established At Vancouver

Vancouver, July 31. (CP)—A printers' picket line was re-established at the Vancouver Daily Province yesterday three hours after Mr. Justice A. M. Harper in Supreme Court ruled that striking members of the International Typographical Union (AFL) would resume "peaceful picketing".

Mr. Justice Harper approved amendments to an injunction granted July 15 to the newspaper's management prohibiting picketing.

The printers, on strike since June 5 now are permitted the right of "peaceful persuasion" to urge workmen, employees or others, not to seek employment in the locality "affected by the dispute".

During the two weeks the printers were prohibited from picketing, other Union sympathizers maintained a picket line and a week ago 15 men were arrested during a disturbance at the newspaper plant in which a truck was overturned and bundles of newspapers destroyed in a giant bonfire on the street.

Preliminary hearing of the men opened yesterday before W. W. B. MacInnes in city police court and 12 of the accused announced they would elect trial in higher court. Three others will be given a hearing later.

The hearing was adjourned until Thursday after evidence of two press photographers was heard.

Charles Oones, Province photographer, denied that he had taken pictures, entered as exhibits, "to show in a court of law" on orders from "some authority".

He identified one of the accused, Wilfred B. Freisen, charged with unlawful assembly and common assault, as the man who had shouted "come on over and give us a hand" to crowds outside the Province building.

The other accused face charges of common assault, unlawful assembly and obstructing police.

Luxury Airways Outfits Designed For Canadians

By MARY McGOWAN

London, July 31. (Reuters) — Luxury airways outfits for chic women who will fly between the world's capitals, consisting of a perfectly co-ordinated dress, suit and topcoat in three weights of wool, are featured in the export collection of the leading London designer, Peter Russell, which was shown to the press here today.

Mr. Russell, who is busy filling orders for Canadian clients, said that his now collection, designed for "the snows of Canada and America", already had been "bought outright" and that a duplicate had also been "bought outright".

On the theory that bright colors are best against a snowy background, Mr. Russell, whose garden is the inspiration for his dyepot, showed several examples of his interchangeable travelling ensembles in arresting Autumn and Winter shades—notably banana yellow combined with black and again with light blue, and monotones of his new shades, Winter lilac, a muted tint with overtones of gray and pomegranate, a rich burnt orange.

The full-skirted casual topcoats in velour feature flaring lapels which can be buttoned over in the face of northern blasts, wide sleeves, turned back to form soft cuffs, deep armholes with gussets to slip easily over suits, huge double hip pockets and smaller, unobtrusive pockets in the sleeves for storing tickets and other travellers' requisites or for warming frost chilled hands.

The jackets, of the long, fitted type, are one inch shorter and the suit skirts one inch longer. Dress silhouettes flare out in accordian pleats of 12 gored skirts.

WEDDINGS

SANDERS—WHITTLESEY

Picton, July 31. — Culminating a romance which started when the groom was serving overseas, the marriage of Sylvia Whittlesey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Whittlesey, Devonshire, England, and R. LeRoy Sanders, son of Mrs. Arthur Sanders, took place at Bloomfield United Church, on Saturday evening. Rev. M. Buttars officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by William Wheeler, of Grimsby, and the attendants were Miss Doris Cronk, Belleville and Donald Sanders, brother of the groom.

A reception followed at Maple Inn.

The bride flew to Canada from England earlier last week for her marriage here.

After a visit to Brockville and points east, they will reside at Bloomfield.

MEIKLEJOHN—BRESEE

Allan's Mills—A pink and white arch, flowers and fernery formed the setting in the United Church, Salem, for the wedding of Marjorie Eileen Bresee, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bresee to Rev. Grant Meiklejohn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Meiklejohn of Rylestone. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. F. Townsend of Deseronto, and the wedding music was played by the bride's brother, Mr. Claire Bresee.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was a lovely figure in her floor-length gown of white silk bengaline, with full net skirt, deep net yoke, sweetheart neckline and three quarter length sleeves. Her embroidered fingertip veil was caught with lily-of-the-valley and orange blossoms from her mother's wedding veil. She carried a circle of American Beauty roses. Her only ornament was a gold heart-shaped locket and bracelet, gifts of the groom.

Mrs. Stanley Norris, sister of the bride, wearing a white sheer floor length gown with deep inserts of lace, sweetheart neckline and long sleeves, was matron of honor. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Doreen Bresee, sister of the bride, wearing a floor length gown of pink sheer and carrying Talisman roses, was bridesmaid.

Both attendants wore waist length veils held in place by cornets trimmed with flowers.

The pretty little flower girl was Lenore Montgomery, niece of the bride, gowned in blue sheer and carrying a nosegay of sweetpeas.

Mr. Granville Meiklejohn, brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Caldwell Bresee, brother of the bride and Roy Fry, brother-in-law of the groom.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. T. F. Townsend sang "O Perfect Love".

Following the ceremony the happy couple were greeted by many relatives and friends and showered with confetti. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents where Mrs. Bresee received the guests wearing a mauve suit and a corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Meiklejohn mother of the groom, was attired in a dusky rose ensemble and wore a corsage of pink and blue sweetpeas.

Luncheon was served on the spacious lawn to fifty guests, the bride's table, covered by the bride's own embroidered Irish linen cloth, was centred with the three-tiered wedding cake. Rev. T. F. Townsend proposed the toast to the bride to which the groom replied. The groom's father and brother also made appropriate remarks.

For travelling the bride donned a pink silk jersey dress, white accessories and a blue shorty coat.

Following a honeymoon through Yellowstone Park, the couple will make their home at Coleville, Sask.

RUSSEL—MILLAR

Allan's Mills.—St. Mary's vestry decorated with white hydrangeas, was the scene of a pretty wedding on July 20th., when Jewel Rebecca Millar, youngest daughter of Mrs. E. J. Millar, Toronto, was united in marriage to Donald Green Russel, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Russel, of Campbellford, formerly of Allan's Mills. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Collins.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, wore an afternoon dress of powder blue with white accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

Mrs. F. S. Switzer, sister of the bride, was her only attendant, she wore a rose afternoon dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Mr. Frederick Switzer was the best man.

A small reception was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. E. H. Ireland.

For travelling the bride wore a turquoise dressmaker suit with black accessories. The couple will reside in Campbellford.

THE DANCE OF ST. IVES TAKES PLACE AGAIN

Every five years since 1801, in accordance with a bequest by the former mayor of St. Ives, 10 little Cornish girls have danced and sung before a 500-foot high granite pyramid on Worvas Hill near St. Ives, Cornwall. This ancient ceremony was carried out once again this year. Four of the little girls, dressed in white, are shown following their elders, dancing round the pyramid, to the music of the fiddler leading the procession.

Women's Activities

HUNTINGDON EAST

Moira.— The July meeting of Huntingdon East Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Wallace McInroy with a large number of members and young girls of the community present as this was the girls' day at the Institute.

The short course on the school lunch, which is to be held here on February 27 and 28, was discussed.

The Roll Call was answered by "an interesting event in my girlhood" or "one advantage I have which grandmother missed".

A reading "Youth of Today", by Marie Cooney was much enjoyed. Then followed a piano solo by Norma Holden.

The topic "Farm Life versus City Life,' was opened with a reading "What is Wrong When Girls Leave the Farm', by Evelyn Emerson.

Another very interesting reading "Gone—but not Forever" by Ada Thompson was followed by a discussion on the advantages or disadvantages of farm life.

A vocal solo by Grace McInroy was much enjoyed. "If For Girls" by Patsy Calberry, brought some good advice. "Limbs versus Legs", by Edith Scott gave a comparison of grandmother's dress and modern dress with some humorous pictures of early days.

The contest on a dining-room bouquet showed the young girls took an interest in flowers, first prize being won by Marie Cooney and the second, by Evelyn Emerson.

The meeting closed with the serving of refreshments by the girls.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

What do your eyes say?

Aye, aye, the eyes have it! Of all the features, they are most compelling, the longest remembered. If one is blessed with ocular beauty, one shouldn't worry if the fairy godmother did not linger by the cradle. One should make them even more charming. They should be eloquent, luminous, sparkling.

Beauty of color and form is overlooked if the eyes are hostile, if they are furtive, if they are steely cold. Think of that if you feel a touch of anger chugging up within your breast. It will reveal itself in your eyes. They won't look pretty. Eyes that make a strong appeal send kindly messages. They have warmth and friendliness. Let them twinkle with humor and good nature, and who will care what the color may be, whether eyes are large or small? We do not have to be born with eye beauty. We make our own whenever we wish.

Healthy eyes take fairly good care of themselves, if they are not abused. They have their own washing system. They are self-lubricating. They respond to alternating applications of warm and cold water that stimulate the blood streams of the surrounding tissues. This treatment is an insurance against turkey tracks, a beauty course that comes to many in middle age.

We hear a lot these days about eye exercises. A specialist tells your reporter that what most eyes need is rest rather than extra activity, and that only a specialist is qualified to say when exercises are of benefit. Your eyes are working every moment that you are awake. They are almost constantly in a state of movement. Wonderful little machines. Nobody should be senseless enough to monkey with them.

If you are a desk worker or a typist, take five minutes off several times a day, change the distance of vision. Stand at a window and look far away. Now and then, close your eyes while you count twenty slowly. Your eyes will be grateful for these moments of relaxation and release.

The eyes are your most compelling feature

Should it happen that you cannot thread a needle quickly, or are having trouble reading names in the telephone book, don't tell yourself that it is nothing, that it will pass. You need glasses. Do not have foolish ideas about putting them on. They may not make you look academic, as you probably fancy. They may not make you look older. They may be becoming, may give you a more distinguished appearance. But, even if they don't, you should be kind to your eyes, give them the help for which they are crying out.

Don't strain them by reading on a moving train; because constant readjustment of distance is necessary. This habit is a general one, but that doesn't make it right or sensible.

Sugar, Soap Chips And Paper Bags In Short Supply

Ottawa, July 31. (CP)—For Canadian housewives harried by shortages around the kitchen government officials today hold out little hope of immediate relief on three items—sugar for canning, soap chips and paper bags.

Of the three scarce items, the prospects are best for more sugar, but even that hope has little chance of being fulfilled in time to aid housewives who haven't enough sugar to can peaches and other late Summer fruits, officials say.

"Right now the prospects for a slightly larger world sugar crop seem bright," one official said.

The sugar situation is constantly under review and, if the larger crop materializes, an increased ration might be possible by September, he added.

But, for more soap chips and paper bags there seems little hope for some time. Soap manufacturers are strictly limited in the supplies of oils and fats, "the scarcest things in the world right now."

And, paper bag manufacturers recently had their allotments of basic kraft cut by 10 per cent to permit increased production of the multiple-walled paper bags so badly needed for packaging such items as foodsuffs shipped overseas and cement for the housing program.

Sun-Bathing for the Hair

Brush hair well before the oil treatment

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT IS BELIEVED, by those who are qualified to judge, that sunlight aids the growth of the hair, gives vitality to the scalp. If your hair is short, and you are given to enjoying sun baths on the beach, run your fingers through the strands, let the wind blow through them. They will sing and dance.

Exposure to the rays of the sun should not be prolonged because the hair, like the skin, can become sunburned. This state of affairs does no harm to the growth, but it may change the color.

Brown Reddens

Brown hair will redden slightly. That may be your idea of something nice to happen to your glorious crest, but the trouble is that the color change is not uniform. The hair will be streaked. To avoid this, the summer girl should give her scalp an oil treatment once a week.

Begin with a brisk brushing. Part the hair at various places, apply hot mineral oil along the partings until it is well distributed. Spread out fingers and thumbs, give the scalp a rousing drubbing. Lift the flesh and pinch it. Move it about, so it will be free of the skull bones.

Oil the Ends

Use oil freely on the ends of the tresses that are dryer than the growth close to the scalp. These treatments will condition your thatch for the next permanent.

Strong sunlight may cause dark streaks to appear in blonde hair, making it look rusty in spots. If you are a light-headed girl and desire to keep your golden crown shining bright, better keep on your bathing cap when resting in the sunlight.

White hair also suffers from sunburn, taking on a yellow cast that is the pet peeve of ladies whose locks have become frosted with the years. Oil treatments will, in time, bring color back to normal. They can be aided and abetted by bleaching rinses given in beauty shops.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Boy Friend is Too Bashful to Suit Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I would like to ask you two questions.

1. I am in love with a boy who, I am sure, loves me. How can I find out if I am right?

2. He is very bashful and does not hold my hand in the movies or walk me home, etc. I'm sure every girl likes some affection. How can I help him overcome this? I don't like to be forward, but I want him to know I'm alive.

Lonesome Love

All right, Lonesome Love; now I'd like to ask you some questions. Here they come:

If you're already sure, as you say, that this boy loves you, what are you worrying about? And how do you know the reason he does not hold your hand or walk you home is because he's bashful? Maybe he just doesn't want to. Again, why should you concern yourself about "helping him overcome this"? Suppose he doesn't happen to want to be helped in this fashion?

And finally, why on earth do girls always have to try to make their boy friends over? If they don't like them the way they are, why not let the poor things alone and hunt around for someone already nearer to their hearts' desire?

All of which is just another way of saying: if you don't want to worry your romance—if it is that—to death, I'd advise you to accept things as they are and let them take their own course. You'll have more chance of their coming out the way you want them to if you won't try to force them.

A Mother is Worried About Her Son

Dear Miss Fairfax:

What can I tell a son who thinks because he is 21 years old he can do as he pleases without consulting his parents?

While he is under my roof, have I not the right to know when and where and with whom he is going? He says that is babying him.

I have four other sons, and they have never taken this attitude. I feel he must be influenced by his companions, or I have failed, somehow, as a mother.

Worried Mother

You give me so few details about your son's behavior that it is rather difficult to tell which of you is at fault. You could be, you know, because I do not think it necessarily follows that just because he is still under your roof you have a right to know all the details of his activities. It is perfectly possible that he may be right, and you are babying him. Your other sons may be more easygoing and less independent than he is, and not feel that their rights are infringed on by your wanting to know where they are and what they are doing at all times. Which is perfectly all right, if they feel that way, but because their attitude is different, it does not make your 21-year-old son necessarily wrong in his. It seems to me that, at his age, you should be able to trust him not to go anywhere or do anything that you would not approve, and let it go at that.

On his side, no doubt he might be a little more courteous and tell you more, occasionally, about his friends and interests. If you just lend a willing ear when he feels inclined to do so, and do not demand it as your right when he doesn't, I think you'll find things go better.

Her Boy Friend's Sister is Jealous of Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going steady with a fellow since January. We are very fond of each other and get along fine.

My only problem is with his 15-year-old sister. Regardless of what I do, she seems to disagree. She resents me no end. I can't understand it, because I have never done anything to hurt her. She is not the only girl in the family; there are two other sisters. On one occasion I asked her why she acted that way, but she refused to answer. I have not said anything to anyone, but she is hurting me constantly, and I fear that she will turn her brother against me, even though he loves me. I have tried to win her affection in many ways, but it just seems useless.

What am I to do? Should I have it out with my boy friend? I want to tell him, but I fear it will hurt him.

Confused

The probability is that this girl feels a little jealous of her brother's attentions to you. That can often happen, especially if a girl is particularly fond of her brother. When he gives evidence of interest in someone else, the sister feels left out.

So, in her way, she no doubt feels hurt, too, and your cue is to try to be patient and kind with her. Be understanding enough so that you get over your hurt feelings, and try to see it from her point of view. If you are consistently nice to her, and thoughtful of her, I'm sure you can win her over in time.

No, don't bother your boy friend with the thing. Don't make it more important than it is by calling attention to it. You do your part, don't take offense at anything the sister does, and it should all work out. If your boy friend really loves you, no one should be able to turn him against you.

ON HOT DAYS
it helps to keep regular with ABBEY'S

Fashion Flashes

COOL DAYS usually bring out smart little town suits. Navy and white striped thin woollen is used for a smart suit completed by a navy gabardine shirt. The one-button jacket is collarless, is longer cut, and has slanted pocket flaps and shirtwaist sleeves.

One fashion that is going to add beauty to the city scene, is that of the smartly-handled casual coat in off-white woollen. White smoke sueded woollen is used for a belted, softly cut, casual towncoat made with rounded shoulder yokes, club collar and turned-back cuffs. It closes with shiny silver disc buttons.

Favored for Fall is the simple dress of wool jersey, so comfortable for all-day wear. Gray wool jersey is used for a smart frock made with a kerchief neckline swept to one side. The bodice is trimmed with diagonal tucks, and the skirt has two back pleats.

Pretty and practical is the coat with a hood, and it appears in almost every collection. Royal blue woollen is used for a coat made with a self hood lined with black Alaska sealskin. When not in use, the hood gives the effect of a cowl collar.

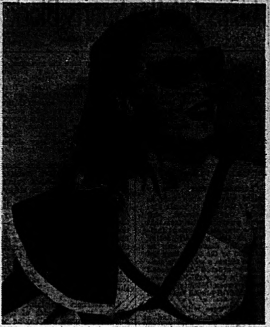
A definite spot in the fashion scene has been pre-empted by the tailored shorties of fur. Labrador hair seal is used for a smartly detailed pea-jacket with buttons and pocket binding of red lizard. Notched collar, wide turned-back cuffs and a 30-inch length.

We'll be seeing much of the short-skirted dinner dress come Fall, the street-length set off by a back-dipping skirt. This uneven hemline is used for a nice model in black rayon crepe made with a deep boat neckline marked by a wide Bertha ornamented with multi-colored sequins. The slim skirt is draped to one side and slit in front.

RAFT "OOMPH"

No, sir, your eyes do not deceive you. It is the beauteous Ann Sheridan in the first bathing suit picture we've seen of her for six years. The Warner Bros. "oomph girl," one of the most pinned up of the war, is sunning herself at a private lake near New Milford on a between-picture vacation.

A Sunny Outlook on Things



By PRUNELLA WOOD

ATTRACTIVE styling took over the practical necessity of eye glasses some time ago, with such good results that we wonder now why the lorgnette was the only high style model available for several centuries.

Remember the harlequin spectacles which gave a puckish slant to pretty eyes? They are just as popular as ever and their designer has just given us the sun glasses pictured here.

The trick is in the curved temple pieces, which give an opportunity for trimming. This pair is decorated with white plastic daisies; another style has colored fishes, in pairs, cavorting along the bars.

GOOD MANNERS

Answers to Readers Questions About Weddings

A. J.—Since your daughter is planning a very formal afternoon wedding (her gown with long train, her attendants wearing formal gowns, and the bridegroom, best man and ushers wearing formal day-attire), you should wear a floor-length dress. And yes, to the church ceremony, you should wear a hat (a flower in your hair is not enough for this wedding in church).

R.C.—If the bridal cake is tiered, you, the bride, cut the first piece from the lowest tier. . .and you share this first piece with your bridegroom.

Mrs. J. R. S.—(1) If the reception at your house following the informal wedding in the Rectory, is to be a small, informal one, you might invite the guests verbally or by telephone, with guests who live at a distance being invited by notes. (2) Since you will be the hostess of the reception at home, you remove your hat when you return from the Rectory. But the bridegroom's mother, who is the guest of honor at the reception, should wear her hat.

H.E. M.—Unless the bride is planning a very elaborate costume wedding, she rarely has pages to carry her train . . moreover, the train of a wedding dress and the long veil are much lovelier sweeping splendidly down the aisle. You may, if you wish, have a little boy as ring bearer, to precede you and your father down the aisle.

L.L.—Yes, a little 4-year-old boy may be ring bearer. And you may have two 6-year-old flower girls.

F.M.—Since both you and your fiance are divorced and are to be married by a Justice of the Peace, it would be in far better taste for you to plan to have a smaller, simpler kind of reception. (2) It is not necessary for you to have a wedding cake.

E.M.—(1)—Yes indeed, there is such a thing as a semi-formal evening wedding; and, judging from the few plans you mention in your letter, this type of wedding is just what you have in mind. (2) For a semi-formal evening wedding (at 7 o'clock, as you plan), the men may correctly wear tuxedoes. (3) With the floor-length dress you are planning to wear at this type of wedding, it would be appropriate for you to wear a short veil, either finger-tip or shoulder length. (4) For a semi-formal evening wedding the bride's mother and the groom's mother usually wear dinner dresses; and for a church wedding they should wear some kind of headdress, perhaps, just the briefest of hats. (5) Women guests also usually wear dinner dresses and men guests, tuxedoes. But if the plans are along more informal lines, guests dress with more informality: women guests wearing street-length afternoon dresses, men wearing business suits. (6) Yes, a candlelight ceremony may take place at 7 p.m.

G.S.—When gifts are brought to the reception (they should, whenever possible, be sent to the bride-to-be at her house a week or two before the wedding date), the bride may open them if there is time and opportunity, and thank the givers.

B.E.—(1)—Each bridal attendant pays for her own costume, even though it is the bride-to-be who plans every detail of the attendants' costumes. (The bride or her family furnishes the attendants' flowers.) (2) If friends realize that they may come to the church ceremony without having received special invitations, it is proper for them to arrive say between half after three and quarter to four, for a four o'clock wedding. And they may be ushered into any of the available pews behind the pews reserved for relatives and especially-invited guests.

The Bertha Is Back

Navy dress with white collar

By VERA WINSTON

THE BERTHA collar has wound itself around some of the nicest necklines this summer, being a welcome revival for frocks of the young and pretty variety. Navy lawn is used for a little dress that finds itself in smart company by virtue of the ruffled bertha collar which is of white lawn with the lace edging dyed navy blue. The broad waistband, all tucked, helps to minimize the waistline. The skirt has gathers back and front, while the sides are flat. The blouse buttons to the waist in back.

Convenient Carry-All

THE CARRY-ALL, a hybrid of the compact and the handbag, has returned to the fashion scene as an important accessory. Beautifully detailed, with jeweled accents, it can dress up a simple dinner suit or a plain evening frock. This very smart example of a practical but pretty accessory is of gleaming metal with deeply etched sunray lines and a bowknot that glitters with gem-like stones. Its slim lines hold lipstick, comb, powder sifter and change purse, with space to spare and there is a big mirror.

Brooklyn Dodgers Riding High After Whipping St. Louis Cards 2-1 in First Game of Series

31,446 Turn Out to Up Attendance Mark for Year to 1,022,400

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Leo Durocher's Brooklyn Dodgers are riding high today, bouncing along on a 3 1-2-game lead with Howie Pollet, the best St. Louis Cardinal hurler, out of the way.

Rube Melton, Durocher's long starting choice, got home 2-1 with his first victory of the season last night at Ebbetts Field although he needed bullpen help from dependable Hank Behrman in the ninth.

Once again Dixie Walker provided the base hit that put the Brooks in the ball game. His seventh-inning single through Whitey Kuroski at third base converting Pee Wee Reese's triple into the tying score. Then Carl Furillo bounced a ground rules double into the left field seats to apply the clincher.

The faithful turned out 31,446 strong to up the Ebbets Field attendance chart to 1,022,400 the sixth time the 1,000,000-mark has been reached in the club's history.

Chicago lost ground by bowing to New York Giants, 3-2, on Goody Rosen's pinch hit single with the bases loaded in the ninth. As a result the Bruins trail the Dodgers by 7 1-2 lengths.

Schoolboy Rowe Wins 11th.

Schoolboy Rowe chalked up his 11th triumph for the Phillies over Cincinnati, 8-4, with Andy Seminick's bat booming for four hits including a three-run homer. A scheduled Pittsburgh-Boston night game was postponed because of rain.

Interest in the American League turned to the second place battle between New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers as Boston Red Sox increased their lead to 12 1-2 games by blanking Cleveland, 4-0. The largest crowd of the Cleveland season, 56,060 watched Dave Ferris rack up No. 17 on a three-hit verdict over Steve Gromek. Ted Williams cracked his 28th homer.

Trucks Fans 13.

Virgil Trucks fanned 13 Yanks in earning his 12th success, 6-5. Four basers by Tommy Henrick, Charley Keller and Aaron Robinson kept the New Yorkers in the ball game. The Bengals now are only one game behind the Yanks.

Canadian-born Jeff Heath blasted a home run with two mates on to give St. Louis a 6-3 edge over Washington in 11 ininngs.

Philadelphia chased Frank Papish with a six-run seventh inning to down the White Sox, 9-2. Penetang's Phil Marchildon received credit for the victory, his sixth against 11 defeats.

BASEBALL RULES

INTERPRETED by McLOONE

SACRIFICE HIT

If there is nobody out and one man on base, or one out and one man on base and the batter deliberately bunts advancing the base-runner on to another base only to be thrown out himself, the batter shall be credited with a sacrifice hit.

All sacrifice hits must be placed in the summary. The batter who hits a sacrifice hit shall not be credited with a time-at-bat. A batter cannot be credited with a sacrifice hit on a fly ball.

PASSED BALL

If a catcher fails to hold or control a legally pitched ball, that could have been held with any ordinary effort resulting in base-runners advancing, he shall be charged with a passed ball.

KINGSTON CLUB RELEASES GEE FROM CONTRACT

Release Sent by Mail Accompanied by Best Wishes of President

Halifax, July 31 — (CP)—Melles McGaffin, president of the Kingston, Ont., Ponies baseball club, has mailed George Gee his release from the Border League team, accompanied by his best wishes, it was reported here today.

Gee, ace rookie forward with Chicago's National Hockey League Black Hawks, was placed under suspension by the Kingston club when he reportedly "jumped" his contract to play for Halifax Shipyards in the Halifax and District Senior Baseball League. He was unavailable for comment last night.

The Halifax Herald said today that McGaffin in a long distance telephone conversation with one of the newspaper's staff men explained the circumstances surrounding Gee's suspension.

The newspaper quoted McGaffin as saying Gee had asked for his release from the club to play in Halifax. The request had been granted but Gee had been asked to stick around for a week or 10 days, replacing an injured player.

The next morning, McGaffin was quoted as saying, he learned that Gee had left for Halifax and decided to put the player under suspension. But not wishing to impede Gee's hockey career, McGaffin had mailed the player his contract Monday wishing him "the best of luck."

Disapproved of Action

A report yesterday quoted Bill Tobin, Black Hawk president, as saying he disapproved of Gee's action and planned to discipline him.

Gee said yesterday that he did not think his hockey contract had anything to do with where he played baseball. He had claimed that Ponies agreed to release him, right from the start of the controversy.

Local baseball officials were unperturbed over the incident. Harry Butler, president of the Halifax League, said yesterday he had received no request from any team asking for Gee's suspension from the league.

Meanwhile, Gee is continuing to hold down the shortstop position with Shipyards. Jack Carrigan, of Winnipeg, Shipyard's manager, termed the affair a "tempest in a teapot" and said Gee would remain on the team's roster for the remainder of the season.

Shipyards dropped the first game of their best-of-seven semi-final series with Halifax Arrows 10-0, and may not need Gee's services much longer.

Mr. Trapnell was born in St. Catharines and had been clerk of the Division Court for forty years. As a school trustee, he served a total of 27 years, never losing an election.

Eight members of the crew were Negroes, the other a white man.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

One of those things that rarely happen to throw the well-known monkey wrench into the well-laid plans of mice and men, occurred yesterday. It had two softball teams in a dither, executive members running around in a daze, and the fans badly disappointed.

• • •

Yet it could not be helped. No one was to blame but old Lady Circumstance — and nothing could be done about it.

• • •

Learning that Tuesday night was an open date as far as the Fair Grounds diamond was concerned, and well aware of the fact that Time was an important factor in the play-off series, since the diamond can be utilized by the softballers but three nights a week, the executive ordered the second game in the semi-finals series between Mountain View and SACOS played last night.

SACOS were willing. Mt. View was contacted and at 10.30 a.m. yesterday the air crew stated they would be on hand ready to play. Everyone interested was so informed. Manager Maxie Peoples dashed from phone to phone calling his widely-dispersed players. The umpire-in-chief was informed and he made his arrangements. Newspaper presses were stopped to insert the news.

• • •

Then it happened. At three o'clock yesterday afternoon, Flt. Lieut. Bullis, Mt. View sports officer informed the executive that his star pitcher and other players had been flown to Montreal shortly after noon on special duty and would not be back until Wednesday night. His remaining pitcher was limping around the station with a bandaged knee.

• • •

But, he informed this desk late yesterday afternoon, "my team will be on hand tonight to play the second game as scheduled. We in Mountain View are sorry such a thing occurred, but it was one of those things we could do nothing about. Orders are orders and there the matter stands."

• • •

A lot of fans were disappointed, but, as we said before, it was one of those things that couldn't be helped, and nothing can be done about it.

• • •

The game will definitely be played tonight, and if SACOS come through with their second win, they can sit back and wait for the winner of the Point Anne-Flashes series, the second game of which will be played at the Fair Grounds on Friday gloaming.

Incidentally, Flashes are a long way from acknowledging the Point Anne team to be the better squad. "We got a bad game out of our system, and we'll be a different team when we step out against the Ox Pointers on Friday." Point Anne, however, is confident that it can take the measure of the Maroon and Yellow in two straight jousts. They played heads-up softball in the first game, and appear to be one of the best-balanced squads in the league. They have good pitching, plenty of offensive power in those war bludgeons, and their fielding is good. They should go a long way down that Intermediate "B" trail.

• • •

Dizzy Dean, who has been striking out Old Man Webster in the English League, "ain't gonna be throwed off the air by no English teachers." That is the reaction of the St. Louis fans to a reported complaint by the English Teachers' Association of Missouri about the Diz's broadcasts of baseball games in the Mo. city. The report brought a quick response from the fans. Dean's studio was flooded with letters and wires from fans defending the guy who said, "he slud to third."

The teachers complaint stated that the Diz's idea of the English language was having a bad influence of their pupil's habits of speech. Editorializing on the question, the St. Louis Globe Democrat said in part:-

"Mr. Dean does present something of a problem. Since he quit the pitcher's box to become a baseball commentator on the air, he has maintained his status as a dizzy individual which he won on the mound. It need not be argued here that the dizziness which permits him to earn a five-figure salary, after he retired as a player, is a quality more to be respected than laughed at. Dizzy is dizzy in name only; he's crazy like a fox.

"But the question remains, how damaging is Dizzy's murder of the King's English to the youths of St. Louis and its environs? We do not share the apprehension of the teachers. Exposure to shattered syntax as perpetrated by Dizzy may encourage a certain degree of laxity among his young hearers —and adults as well—but their interest is in the game, not in the linguistic precision of the broadcast."

Trenton Flyers will tangle with the Batawa Shoemen in the first round of the Intermediate "A" O.B.A. playdowns and, brother, will that be a series. Dates of the games will be announced later. Juniors meet Peterborough in their series while Kingston tangles with Ottawa. Looks like some interesting baseball all round, providing the sports department can stand the gaff.

Tonight's baseball feature is SWACO versus Batawa at the Alemite Field. Looks like a neat eyeful of diamond calisthenics for the lovers of that game. Game starts at 6.30.

Winnipeg, July 31 — (CP) — Gerhard Kennedy, donor of the trophy to be awarded annually to the winner of the Canadian Professional Golfer's Association Open tournament, has come up with something a little different in the way of a golf prize that will be a permanent reminder of the victor's effort.

Kennedy, successful Winnipeg sportswear manufacturer, hit on the idea of presenting the winners with a wood block print of a painting by W. J. Phillips, R. C.A., internationally-known Canadian artist and designer of the trophy. Kennedy believes the winners would prefer that as a prize rather than a replica of the trophy in addition to first-place money of $2,000.

To the unwary this C.P.G.A. tournament at Niakwa may cause some confusion. It isn't for the C.P.G.A. championship, this country's greatest try's counterpart of the United States P.G.A. title play slated for Portland, Ore., Aug. 19-25. The Canadian pro champ will be crowned at the tournament scheduled for the Ottawa Rivermead Club Sept. 9-10.

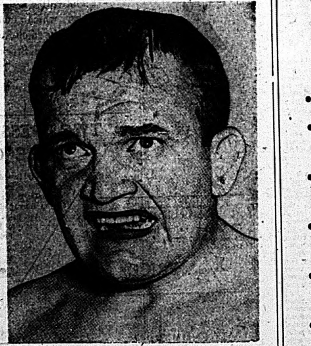
Raiding Trouble

Montreal Alouettes of the eastern Big Four League are putting a slight crimp in Winnipeg Blue Bombers' rebuilding plans. Coach Lew Hayman's agents have definitely snared halfback Ches McCance, the Bombers' place-kicking artist, and reports are rampant they've also lined up plunging half Lloyd Boivin, Bombers' most persistent ground gainer last season.

What the Montreal club is offering — and it's only mentioned in whispers since the Big Four has never changed its amateur status, son — is a lot more than what the Bombers can match to handle a pigskin all fall. The 'Peg team's officials are worried the Alouettes raiding of the Bombers won't stop at only McCance and Boivin.

Perennial Champ

To Frank Murphy, winning the Fort William Tennis Club's tennis singles title must be boring routine by now. The other day he whipped Bert Badanai 6-1, 6-3, 7-5 to maintain his record of being undefeated in a club tourney final since he first won the crown 26 years ago.



LEE HENNING

"Ha, Ha, Ha," gurgled Lee, "The Scowl" Henning, when he learned that his opposition here on Friday night at the Hume Arena was no less than "Toar" Morgan, ex-marine and one of the most popular rasslin gents hereabouts. "So he didn't get enough the last time I booted him all over the ring," chanted Henning between grimaces... "Well, he's asking for it—and brother, he's goin' to get it properly this time."

The "Toar" merely shook his handsome head and a grin spread itself all over his face. "The last time I met that cornhusker from Iowa, he took advantage of everything that came along. But I won't be caught napping on Friday. Henning has had a d—— good beating coming to him here for the last few weeks and I'm the guy that's going to give it to him. The Marines will land, and the situation is well in hand.

Handsome Mike Sharpe will battle villainous Bunny Dunlop, while Warren Bockwinkle will tangle with Karl "Krippler" Davis. Looks like a nice evening's entertainment, eh?

Akooolap Oxhead has a pet theory about the first lead in a deal. He thinks it best to lead an unassisted suit bid by the dummy hand.

His several reasons for this sound good even when they are not sound. What he fails to tell you is the one case in which such a lead is most practical.

The idea of his is to lead through the dummy strength. This is on the assumption that the dummy strength is not solid. If it has not been assisted by declarer, leader's partner has some strength.

It is not always so. But even if it was, leading that suit is not good policy. Partner of the leader may get a trick or so. But it is quickly developing the dummy suit.

Good bridge calls for developing your suit or that of partner as quickly as possible. Not the opponent suit first. If your side has a trick in opponent suit, hang onto it to block that suit.

The general rule for leads is: Follow the order of choice in tops, longies, shorts; don't lead a suit bid by opponents; against a suit contract, don't lead away from an ace or a king.

By rule, therefore, you should not lead a suit bid by dummy. This goes whether that suit has been supported or not. At least not unless other leads are undesirable.

There is only one time when it is practical to develop a suit bid by opponent. That is when your side has most of the good cards in it. As when you have a solid sequence in that suit.

North bid spades before south became declarer in another suit or no-trump. The spades are as shown here:

NORTH
♠A K 7 2

WEST
♠Q J 10 9 6

EAST

SOUTH
♠8 4

West should lead spade queen. His sequence is good enough to ignore opponent bid of that suit. If Akoolap would stick to that, he would not lose so many tricks. Or so many partners.

Hollywood Column

By HOWARD C. HEYN

Hollywood, July 31 (AP).—Charles Laughton, who leaves Hollywood this week to return to Broadway, says quite frankly that he's scared.

The heavy-jowled actor's latest appearance on the Great White Way was in 1936, with the old Vic Company. His reason for returning is to do "Galileo."

Mr. Laughton hasn't succumbed to stage fright, nor has he lost the knack of long speeches, by any means. He has a very fine reputation out here for hospital visits, on which he has been known to deliver lengthy exerpts from plays, completely without script.

He is also being helped back into the groove by his present screen role. In "A Miracle Can Happen," Mr. Laughton portrays a clergyman and is given plenty of opportunities to make with the words.

"I'll encounter the same difficulties on returning to the stage that I met when I switched to the movies," he said.

"At first I couldn't get used to arising at 6:30 a.m., walking through the bright sunlight into a darkened studio stage, and starting to act.

"Now I'm resigned to it. It's going to be difficult to wait all day, then go to work at night."

At least Mr. Laughton should catch up on his sleep.

Cecil B. DeMille tells us that the Johnston office interested in Paulette Goddard's bath for "Unconquered."

As originally planned, a considerable portion of Miss Goddard would be visible to the customers, because barrels in 1763 were just so high.

The Johnston office suggested that DeMille utilized foaming suds to help obscure the famous Goddard antomy from public view.

C. B. Consulted his research department, which said that in 1763 there were no soaps that gave billowing suds.

The Johnston office told him it would have to be suds or no barrel bathing. So DeMille relinquished a point of authenticity and ordered plenty of 1946 soap.

"If anyone tells me there were no soap suds in 1763, I shall simply refer him to the Johnston office," DeMille declared.

Jimmy Boeckh Wins Tournament With 213 Total

Sudbury, Ont., July 31 (CP)—A steady, consistent game that improved with each round gave Jim Boeckh of Toronto Lambton a 54-hole score of 213 and possession of the Seagram Golf Trophy when play in the 10th annual renewal of the event concluded here yesterday. George Harrison of Sudbury's Idylwylde Club was second with 218 and Jim Twiss of Toronto third with 222.

Playing over the nine-hole Sudbury golf course, Boeckh showed the way to a record-breaking field of more than 100 by posting a 37 the first time around, 35 on the next tour, two 36's and cutting it down to a 35 and 34 for the final rounds. In winning the qualifying round Monday Frank Wyatt of Beattie Mine had turned in a similar score and runner-up Harrison equalled it yesterday morning.

Boeckh and Harrison were tied at the end of 36 holes but the Sudbury golfer couldn't keep the pace.

Johnny Poupore, who late this week will defend the Northern Amateur Championship he won last year, disappointed by missing the championship flight Monday. However, he took the first-flight prize with a 221, 20 strokes better than Murray Lapp of Toronto.

Al Urquhart of North Bay was second-flight winner, with Bob Bolton of Sudbury taking third-flight honors and Roscoe Thornton of Chapleau fourth-flight winner.

Hockey Games In England Draw 10,000 Persons

(By The Canadian Press)

With all kinds of sport on a boom trend in Britain, the National anti-gambling league, in a spirit of opposition, brought out in its annual report that more than $1,760,000,000 is changing hands in bets on horse racing and dogs and in football pools, it was reported from London yesterday. The 1945 receipts at the Greyhounds tracks alone were estimated at £54,000,000.

Ice hockey has become so popular that schedules have been extended through the summer and regular weekly matches at Empire arena have been drawing 10,000 persons.

The Florida State Racing Commission yesterday suspended three jockeys, including Robert Keane, of Toronto, are ordered their appearance at a Miami hearing Sept. 17. They are charged with attempting to fix a Tropical Park race April 17.

High prices continued to prevail in the second day's turnover yesterday at the Keeneland yearling sales, Lexington, Ky. Best figure of the day was the $32,000 by Leslie Coombs of Lexington, for a daughter of Stimulus whose Progeny has won more than $2,000,000.

With the mercury pushing the 80-degree mark, 1,000 hockey fans cooled off at Sault Ste. Marie's Pullar stadium last night as the Canadian Sault Athletics defeated the American Sault Atomics 9-4 in the first of a series for the inter-city summer championship.

R.C.A.F. FLYERS DEFEAT KIWANIS JUNIORS BY 14-5

Twenty-Seven Hits Registered and Winners Scored in Nearly Every Innings

In one of the wildest hitting splurges of the current baseball season, the RCAF Flyers defeated the Kiwanis Juniors at the Alemite Field Tuesday night by a 14-5 count.

No less than twenty-seven base hits rattled off the war clubs of the baseball warriors with the Flyers getting seventeen and the kids ten.

The RCAFeffers picked on tall Bobby Bunton, Kiwanis starting pitcher in the first inning. They scored two in that heat, repeated the same dose in the next two chukkers; got three in the fourth, four in the fifth and topped off a neat scoring rampage with a single in the 7th.

The youngsters were blanked in the first; came back with three in the second, one in the third and another in the sixth.

Both pitchers Wade for the Flyers and Bunton for the Kiwanis felt the weight of the opposing bats. Several players of each squad knocked the apple for a safe hit, and the pellet flew in every innings to all corners of the pasture.

Touched For Ten

Wade was touched for 10 hits, struck out seven and walked three. Bunton was nicked for seventeen hits, two of them three-baggers and three two-basers. He whiffed a pair, and gave four free tickets to first via the walk route.

It was a free-hitting affair with the Flyer bats pounding the ball consistently and after the third innings the issue was not in doubt.

Jimmy Lee, Flyer catcher had a field day with the club getting three for five, a three-bagger, a two-baser and a single. Garbas got three, and Holdershaw, Matthews, Gill and Wade got a brace apiece.

Bush got three for the Juniors, with Kelleher getting two. Jimmy Lee batted in seven runs.

DETROIT BOXING FANS WANT LOUIS TO APPEAR THERE

Request Jacobs to Transfer Heavyweight Bout to the Motor City

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

New York, July 31 — (AP) — Promoter Mike Jacobs, who has come up with three world championship boxing bouts in Yankee Stadium in September, has been asked to transfer the heavyweight title fuss between Joe Louis and Tami Mauriello to Detroit.

Michigan Boxing Commissioner John Hettche phoned Jacobs, asking the head man of the 20th Century Sporting Club to consider switching the fight to the champion's home town.

Detroit fans haven't seen Louis in a title fight since he stopped big Abe Simon in 13 rounds at the Olympia, March 21, 1941, in his 15th successful defence of the crown.

Hettche told Jacobs the fans in the motor city were clamoring for the fight.

In fact, Jacobs said Hettche painted such a rosy picture that he assured the commissioner he would consider the move, although it would require asking the New York American League baseball club for a release from the contract already signed.

Jacobs said he told Hettche if he thinks it wise to make the move he will take the matter up with Stadium officials.

Briggs Stadium, home of Detroit Tigers, will not be available, however. It was there that Louis knocked out Bob Pastor in 11 rounds, Sept. 20, 1939.

In Detroit, general manager George M. Trautman of the Tigers said the present policy of the club was to use the stadium for baseball, football and civic events only.

If Jacobs doesn't change his original plans the Louis-Mauriello fight will take place at the Yankee ball park on the night of Sept. 18.

SHERMAN LOLLAR AGAIN CLOUTING BALL FOR ORIOLES

Drives Home Six Runs on Two Homers to Help Baltimore Beat Buffalo

(By The Associated Press)

Sherman Lollar, backstop of Baltimore Orioles is beginning to clout the ball in the fashion that won him the International League's most valuable player award in 1945.

The 21-year-old catcher enjoyed a field day in the second game of a doubleheader last night as he drove home six runs on two homers in leading the Orioles to a 11-0 victory over Buffalo after the Bisons had won the opener 3-0. One blow came with the bases loaded.

The pace-setting Montreal Royals divided a twin bill with Newark Bears taking the opener 3-2 behind Chet Kehn but bowing 2-1 in the nightcap to Steve Peek and Alex Mustaikis. Mike Milosevich's first homer of the season with Don Savage on base in the second frame accounted for all of the Bear's markers in the finale.

Syracuse's second place Chiefs made it two in a row over Toronto as Millard (Dixie) Howell scattered 11 hits and walked seven batters while his mates collected 14 safeties and scored a 6-3 triumph. First baseman Charley Kress led the Chiefs' assault on Luke Hamlin and Dwight Simonds with five hits including 3 doubles to drive in three runs and score three markers.

The tail-end Jersey City Giants defeated Rochester Red Wings, 7-4, with rookie Bob Rhomson's bases-filled homer in the third inning highlighting the conflict.

CHAPTER 21

"When I saw him, I guess I felt as Mark felt when he saw you. He was sure I'd turn him down again. He said he just wanted to ask me once more. Iris, what he said...."

"I've no right to hear what he said. I know he said the right thing about—Julian."

"I couldn't be happy if Julian opposed it. I'd feel it. We're going to be married in Boston tomorrow and you and Mark are going with us. I don't know how we're going. I couldn't think of taking my bridal party on a miserable bus."

"Did Mark drive up?" Iris asked. "He probably did."

"Then that would make it perfect. After the wedding in Boston," Mary went on, "we'll go back to New York and my honeymoon will be a trip to China. I've always wanted a home of my own." She smiled. "He doesn't know anything about my money. I don't think I'll tell him until after we're married. Then he can't object to it."

Mark and Clive came back. "They're sending dinner to Bluff House," said Mark. "With champagne. I'll walk back and get the car."

"Then you did drive up," Mary said delightedly. "It's going to be a more important car from now on. You're taking us to Boston tomorrow to be married."

* * *

The dinner party at Bluff House was one they were never to forget and for each of them it had a special significance. For Mary it meant the end of flight and for Clive the end of loneliness. To Iris it meant the end of the most enduring and closest friendship she had ever known with a woman. Mark watching her face in the flicker of the candles, marveled at his restraint and the casualness of this meeting with Iris. When Mary was married tomorrow, he and Iris would come back to Eaton Forest....alone....

Clive stayed with Mark that night. Iris, restless all night, heard Mary's peaceful breathing as she slept. There were no questions, no doubts ahead with Clive.

They breakfasted at Bluff House. The residents of Eaton Forest were just getting about their morning exercises and chores when the large car went by.

When they were on open sunny road, Mark said, "I've never been married but it seems to me one has to do something about a wedding ring and flowers."

"And the licence," said Mary, laughing. "I want this perfectly legal."

In Boston the ring was bought, a tiny diamond circlet, and a pretty girl in a florist shop, made two orchid corsages. Half an hour later they were standing in the chapel of a famous old church.

Iris, her eyes lowered, had never heard the wedding ceremony so distinctly before, and the deep solemn voice seemed to be saying the words to her. In a few weeks from now another solemn voice would be saying the same words to Joel and her, binding them by strict vows to each other. Then Mark would be lost....lost.... A flicker of pain crossed her face. She drew in her lips. She did not look at Mark beside her, knowing their thoughts were the same. He, too, was thinking. "In so short a time from now....lost."

What was Mary thinking of now? Of Julian? Or that much younger Mary who had heard these vows before, never dreaming of the tragedy that would sever them? Iris wanted to say, "Don't divide yourself, Mary. I'm divided and I know what it is."

They went to a hotel for lunch. It was gay and it was sad, these last moments together, but they would not admit the sadness of separation.

"China isn't really so far away" said Mary, "and Clive and I will be coming back one of these days." And Mary's eyes said, "Why, oh why, must you marry Joel when you belong to Mark? That's the only cloud in my happiness, Iris—seeing two people in love estranged."

Mark said, "Don't worry about Iris. I'll take care of her and see that she gets safely home."

If Iris was never to see Mary again, her last memory was a happy one, with Mary's arm through Clive's, her mouth smiling, and tears in her eyes when they said good-bye in the lobby of the hotel.

When Iris and Mark had gone, Clive asked, "Why are you crying?"

"For them, my dear. For pride that's too great—and faith that's blind. He'll never ask her now. He'll wait for her to come to him and Iris will never do that. Clive, tell me more about China."

* * *

The residents of Eaton Forest saw much of the "hermit" after that and found him to be an entertaining host. To the various parties in the Forest he went with Iris and his own parties at Bluff House were to make history for the residents who came year after year. There were midnight suppers and swimming parties late at night when every one went to Bluff House for a bite to eat and steaming coffee.

Iris lived in a state of suspended happiness. There was no time for brooding even over Joel's consistently lugubrious letters and Mrs. Wade's old complaint of the lack of money. When Iris opened her eyes in the morning in the little lodge, she hurried to dress and meet Mark in the dining room. After that they swam, played tennis, and there was usually a party in the afternoon and at night every one went to Bluff House.

She had never had a vacation like this. When some of the residents talked of, "When I was in Spain the summer before I lost my money," Iris felt no envy. Eaton Forest, with its merry sunburned people and Mark at Bluff House, were the fulfillment of her wildest dreams.

"In a week we go back," she said one night.

Mark said, "I've nothing to go back to. I've everything here."

She was sitting on the ledge of the stone porch, wearing blue pajamas and a white sweater. Inside the radio was playing and people were talking and dancing in high spirits.

"This will always be slightly unreal to me," she said. "This is the first playing I've ever done in my life. I didn't know how to play before. I didn't know that people could live so harmoniously as they do here."

Didn't she know, he wondered, that all this entertainment and keeping the house filled with people was to spare him the madness of being alone with her? He remembered the drive back from Boston the day Mary was married. They had been silent most of the way, uneasy, terribly conscious of each other. Maddening for him, maddening for Iris. And so he had opened the big house to the residents, and moments alone with Iris had been rare. They had swum together in the cold lake water, he had improved her tennis and commended her splendid serve, loving almost to distraction Iris in her clean white tennis dress, her arms and legs bare and brown. Play! They could play around the world if only....

Iris said, "I'm going in." She had to go in—away from him.

There was a letter from Louis Tracy the next morning. "I can tell by your letters you're having a great time," he wrote. "You merely said that Mark was there. Trying to kid me again? You know perfectly well he's there. Good friends, I suppose, good pals. What deceit, Iris!

"What am I doing? I'm being divorced and I suppose Annette will marry young Johnson. It was a shock at first but it is the sensible thing to do. I saw Camilla in a new limousine yesterday so I guess her troubles are over with her marriage to the old bank president.

"My new secretary? Is she fifty and homely, you asked, to keep me out of further complications? She is not. She's young and attractive and her name is Anita Rogers. She's a better secretary than assistant and the patients like her because she has a soothing smile like yours."

Letters from home were from a world of strife and conflict, and soon she must go back to that world of strife and conflict—for better or for worse..

The last day at Eaton Forest, Iris tried to enjoy to the fullest extent. In brown linen slacks she joined Mark at the breakfast table in the dining room.

Elise Henshaw, feeding small Tuck, cried out, "The place will be dead when you and Mark leave, Iris."

"Don't remind me of it," said Iris.

"We'll take good care of Mark's car," said Elise. Their flivver was falling to pieces and Mark was leaving his car for them to drive back home to Washington. "It'll be like old times driving a real car again. We'll have quite a caravan with the three youngsters and Major. The children are all crazy about that dog pal of Mark's."

Iris played tennis with Mark that morning and swam with him. At noon that day the Henshaws and her other friends looked for her, but Iris did not come in for lunch. Mark ate alone.

With her hands dug deeply into her brown slacks, she was standing on the platform at Bluff House, looking at the waterfalls. The bite of early autumn was in the air. Pine needles made the ground a green bed around her.

Good-bye to all this..Once, many months ago, she had prayed to be faithful to the old love. Now in this place where there was no sound except the echo of birds in the pines below she prayed again. "I want to be a good wife. I want to be true and loyal. Thank you. Thank you for this. Mark called it Eden. I'm going back to marry Joel when my heart is full of Mark."

Back at the lodge she put on clothes for traveling. Going out, she locked the door and looked around for the last time.

Was Mark standing on the bluff saying good-bye, too?"

Each house had to be visited. Men took her hand and said, "Come back next year. This has been the jolliest season yet — thanks to you and to Mark's hospitality." Women kissed her and said, "Iris, darling, do visit us this winter."

Each Henshaw child had to be kissed. Elise's motherly arms took her. "My eyes see things straight, my dear. Mark's in love with you. Something, I don't know what, has put a barrier between you. Take it down, Iris. Come to see us in Washington. We have a funny little house and a back yard full of animals."

Mark came and Wilson Henshaw drove them to Boston.

She felt a tremor when the gangplank was raised. She stood alone at the railing, her coat collar high, her hat pulled down to shield the bleakness in her eyes. Going home....going back to Joel, to Selina, to her marriage in three weeks or so.

She felt strong hands on her shoulders. She did not turn around. Mark was there, his hands giving her courage. They stood there, watching land slowly become a narrow straight line, like a thread, in the distance.

"I guess Mary is in China now," said Iris, frowning as the wind cut across the deck.

Mark puffed on his pipe. "Mary acquired a husband and you a shadow."

"A—what?"

"Oh, a nondescript young man with a nose that's too sunburned and slightly peeling, and an uncontrolable cowlick."

Iris grinned. "A very callow youth."

"You might smile at him and let him treasure that."

Formerly a star athlete, now Canada's top coaching expert, "Ace" says: "Part of every athlete's success is due to right training, part to right eating, part to knowing 'inside' tricks. Here's a way to improve your crawl stroke."

SHOULDER FIRST
When you are swimming the "crawl," be sure to lift shoulder out first. Don't roll to side when lifting. Use a shrugging action to raise your shoulder.

ELBOW NEXT
After shoulder is lifted, bring elbow out. Keep arm relaxed, let forearm hang loosely from elbow. Lift elbow high enough to bring hand out of water.

DON'T LIFT TOO HIGH
Lift hand out far enough to clear water. Reach forward for new stroke with hand nearly touching water. Don't lift hand too high. You will spoil smoothness.

MOLOTOV

"The conference should be interested in preventing a play on votes and should be concerned with assuring the authority of the recommendations it is going to make, and not in attempting to set off 12 countries against seven or eight countries.

"It should repudiate any play on votes and see to it that the prestige of the conference and the authority of its decisions should not be undermined."

He predicted there was every possibility the conference could reach each termination with every proposal adopted by a two-thirds rule.

"Is there any reason to believe that a decision reached by an 11-to-10 vote is better than a decision reached by a 14-to-7 vote?" he asked. "It would be hard to explain that."

State Secretary Byrnes of the United States told the conference yesterday the United States was supporting draft treaty proposals prepared by the four Foreign Ministers of Russia, the United States, Britain and France, but that if two-thirds of the 21-power conference disagreed with the four-power decisions he would support the conference's recommendations for revisions.

The Yugoslav proposal plunged the committee into spirited debate, with spokesmen from Australia and The Netherlands arguing that a simple majority should be sufficient.

Both Australia and The Netherlands said the two-thirds proposal would mean Big Four domination.

Moisha Pyade, vice president of the Yugoslav Assembly, presented the motion, and also urged that Albania be admitted as the 22nd member of the conference, which is considering peace treaties for five former enemy countries.

The Rules Committee meeting was open to newspapermen, in line with a recommendation by the committee yesterday for a "wide open" press. A total of 67 newspapermen from 26 countries were present. Delegates to the conference, meanwhile, awaited a policy-charting speech which Mr. Molotov was expected to deliver before the full conference at 4 p.m. (11 a.m. E.D.T.) this afternoon on Russia's attitude toward treaties with Finland, Italy, Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary, made public last night.

Arguing for the admission of Albania, Mr. Pyade said she had been one of the first countries invaded by Italy and had been devastated by the Italians.

A Dutch spokesman proposed that the permanent chairmanship of the conference be given to France, as the host nation, instead of being rotated among the Big Four or the Big Five.

DIVIDE PALESTINE

the qualification of persons who might wish to take up permanent residence in their territories."

In addition to the Jewish and Arab provinces, said Lord Addison, Dominions secretary, the joint commission of experts proposed to establish a district of Jerusalem and a district or Begeb.

The latter section is a piece of desert land lying in southern Palestine in which Jewish migration was permitted under the 1940 Palestine land transfer regulations.

Lord Addison opened a Palestien debate held simultaneously in both Houses of Parliament.

Deplores Letter

He also announced that the British government had dissociated itself from a bitter anti-fraternization letter written by Lt.-Gen. Sir Evelyn Barker to British troops under his command in Palestine.

Gen. Barker's action has been referred to Field Marshal Montgomery, chief of the Imperial General Staff, Lord Addison said.

Lord Addison said the British government accepted the four-area plan for Palestine as a basis for negotiation.

"We had hoped before the debate to receive from President Truman his acceptance," he said, "but we understand that he has decided to discuss it in detail wtih the U. S. expert delegation, who are returning to Washington for that purpose."

He added that "the situation in Palestine will not brook delay."

"We mean to go ahead with discussions with Arabs and Jews for a constitutional scheme on these lines. We believe it offers many advantages to both communities in Palestine."

Under the experts' plan, it was explained in both Houses, the Jews "would be free to exercise much control on immigration into their own province and it would be open to the Arabs in their own province to admit or refuse permission to Jews to purchase land" in the Arab province.

The Arabs "would be free from any fear they might have of Jewish domination and there would be safeguards for Arab minorities in the Jewish province."

On top of all the many other injuries which have plagued Detroit Tigers, World Baseball Champions, Hal Newhouser, 20,-game twirler, was found yesterday to have suffered a nerve injury in his pitching arm which will keep him off the mound for a week.

Study Report Of E Vitamin Use In Heart Cases

Toronto, July 31 —(CP)— Ontario Health Minister Kelley said today that the Health Department would investigate the reported successful treatment of heart disease with expensive vitamin E and if the treatment was shown to have merit the Ontario government would "do everything possible" to make it available at low cost.

Mr. Kelley said he will visit Guelph Friday to make personal investigations of the "wheat germ" remedy and to interview Dr. Wilfrid Shute, the Guelph specialist who with three other men reported successful use of vitamin E.

The others are Dr. Evan V. Shute and Dr. Arthur Vogelsang, both of London, Ont., and Floyd Skelton, a student at the University of Western Ontario medical school in London.

The vitamin E tablets now cost a patient about $2 a day.

Mr. Kelley said his intention was drawn to the treatment by a letter from Phil Lawson, Toronto sportsman, who said he had "what seems like a miraculous cure for my coronary thrombisis."

The letter asked the minister to consider "the thousands of heart cases in this province who are doomed to miss this life-giving treatment through lack of funds."

Mr. Lawson has offered to contribute $100 to a fund to make vitamin E available at less cost if the Provincial government was unable to make such arrangements.

Mr. Kelley said any government plan to assist in making the tablets cheap enough to be within the average budget would have to be worked out after the Health Department was satisfied the treatment had merit.

Guy Lombardo Will Attend Picton Regatta

Guy Lombardo, Canadian band leader, who has made a name for himself with his band in night spots and radio, will attend the Picton Regatta on Civic Holiday along with Mrs. Lombardo and an executive of the Grumman Aircraft Company. The party will be piloted to Picton in a Widgeon aircraft and land on the Picton harbor. He will not attend any other regatta in this district as he will fly back to New York after the races on Monday to fulfill a radio engagement on that night.

Mr. Lombardo notified the racing committee that his boats would arrive in advance of the party with mechanics and the jet-propelled one would be ready to participate in the mile trials early Monday morning. The other boat will take part in the race for the Gold Cup being offered for competition in the 225 class.

Armed Robbery Holds Up Nurse in Office

Windsor, Ont., July 31 —(CP) —Mary Walker, night nurse at the Grace Hospital, today told police that a lone armed robber who appeared to be about 25 years old held her up in a hospital office shortly before midnight and escaped with $200 in cash.

The man missed an envelope containing $400 which had been taken to the hospital's main office an hour before the robbery.

Miss Walker said she was alone in the office when she heard someone in the admitting room. She noticed a young man who, "appeared quite nervous." He enquired about a patient, a Mrs. Ouellette. The nurse began thumbing through the admittance cards."

"Never mind Mrs. Ouellette," the stranger told the nurse, and she looked up to be confronted by a black revolver. "I want the money in the cash box."

Miss Walker said she did not move from the desk. The intruder snatched the cards from her and repeated his demand. Still the nurse did not move.

"Finally, he walked over to the drawer which contained two cash boxes and helped himself," Miss Walker related. "He knew exactly which drawer to open."

Artist Predicted in '19 Versailles Conference Would be Failure

London, July 31. (CP)—The Labor Daily Herald reprinted today the prophetic cartoon published May 17, 1919, in which the late Will Dyson, Herald artist, predicted the failure of the Versailles conference.

The cartoon, to which Prime Minister Attlee referred yesterday in his speech to the current Paris conference, depicts th 1919 "Bif Four"—David Lloyd George, Woodrow Wilson, Georges Clemenceau and Vittorio Orlando—leaving Versailles Palace, the peace treaty written, while behind a palace pillar a child bearing the label "1940 class" is weeping.

Clemenceau is saying: "Curious, I seem to hear a child crying."

Build Pillboxes On Outskirts Of Shanghai

Shankhai, July 31 (CP)—Pillboxes are being built on Shanghai's outskirts today, one of several steps to safeguard the city from assault or from an uprising from within. Government authorities took the measures despite assurances by Communist Gen. Chou En-Lai the Chinese Reds have no intention of attacking in the direction of Shanghai.

The government garrison commander has announced a curfew will be reimposed Aug. 1.

Meanwhile, at Tientsin government sources claimed today that more than 2,000 Communist troops laid down their arms and joined government forces Sunday near the coal mining centre of Tangshan.

British House Takes Summer Vacation Friday After Hardest Year's Work in its History

Voter Waiting to See Results of Labor Legislation Before Passing Judgment

By RUSHWORTH FOGG

London, July 31 — (Reuters)— Parliament will take its summer vacation on Friday after the hardest year's work in its history. Never before has there been so many all-night sittings of the House of Commons and never has so large an amount of legislation been produced.

After a full year of labor government, the attitude of the average British voter seems to be he is still waiting for full results before passing judgment. Meanwhile the labor government continues to hold in by-elections all its seats that fall vacant.

Critics of the government complain there has been a tendency to rush through Socialist measures without giving members time to examine them.

The Bank of England was nationalized against mild opposition.

Nationalization of the coal mines now is law, and they are to be administered by a national coal board, but the date they are to be handed over to the state has not yet been fixed.

Nationalization of the empire communications network of Cable and Wireless, Ltd., and of civil aviation is the object of bills at present before Parliament. They have aroused little interest among the general public.

Health Service Approved

A subject much more productive of arguments is the national health service bill which received final approval in the Commons July 27. It makes the hospitals of the country, hitherto mainly maintained by public subscription, the property of the ministry of health. It gives everybody in the country the right to free medical, dental and hospital treatment.

Doctors can become public servants and receive a guaranteed income, or stay outside the scheme and practice privately as before. The British Medical Association has strongly opposed the provisions governing medical practice.

Public ownership of railways and road transport, of the production of electricity and gas, and of the iron and steel industry are projects which have not yet been given the form of bills. It is generally thought that they will in due course become law.

Housing Problem Failure

An argument that carries weight with those who oppose the government, and may sometimes cause doubts among a section of its own supporters, runs something like this: Leaving aside the question of the desirabilty of natonalization, should not the government leave them to a later date and tackle the many immediate problems.

Most often quoted as a failure is the housing problem. Something like 4,000,000 new houses are needed. Only 48,000 dwellings most of them of the temporary, prefabricated type, have been built since the end of the war in Europe.

Such critics as Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express blame bureaucratic methods and the government's policy of giving municipalities the man responsiblity for bulding.

The government's reply to criticisms on housing is that the matter is being dealt with much faster than after the last war, when only 72 houses were bult in the first two years, and that if controls were lifted private enterprise would build for the more prosperous classes rather than for the mass of the population.

SEEKS SEAT

Mrs. Waitstill H. Sharp of Wellesley, Mass., will seek election to the Massachusetts 14th Congressional seat in the U. S. Mrs. Sharp was born in Providence, R.I., on what she insists must remain an unspecified date. She was educated at Pembroke College, the Recreational Training School of Chicago at Hull House, and received her master's degree from Radcliffe.

London Letter

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 31 (CP)—London soot, the target of grumbles for centuries, is under attack by medical and scientific experts who hope to eliminate its soiling and unhealthy presence by new-type heating equipment.

"It is the horrid smoake (sic) which obscures our churches, and makes our palaces look old, which fouls our clothes and corrupts the waters, so as the very rain, and refreshing dews which fall in several seasons, precipitate this impure vapour, which, with its black and tenacious quality, spots and contaminates whatever is exposed to it," complained John Evelyn in Fumifugium, published in 1661.

There has been little change since then; except an expansion of the area covered by the "hellish and dismall cloud of seacoale." Experts estimate that on London alone soot falls at a yearly rate of 400 tons a square mile.

The Fuel and Power Advisory Council which recently outlined a domestic fuel policy, urged legislation creating "smokeless zones" and noted that "the grievious damage done to buildings, plants and above all to human beings by the pall of smoke which so often hangs over our great cities is due in large measure to the domestic chimney."

The council said that domestic smoke could be abolished by the use of smokeless solid fuel, gas or electricity, and all new houses should be built with that in mind. To make use of such equipment general, however, would take up to 30 years, so an interim program of improved appliances which would burn bituminous coal with a minimum of smoke was recommended.

Elimination of smoke would do more for health than all the sanitary improvements of the last 50 years, Sir George Elliston, Chairman of the City and London Health Committee, said in an address on smoke abatement.

School Inspectors Search Frantically For More Teachers

(By The Canadian Press)

With only one month left of summer holidays school inspectors in rural areas throughout Canada are frantically continuing their search for enough teachers to meet increased enrolments.

A Canadian Press survey today revealed that in many areas and particularly in the Prairie Provinces the shortage of teachers will be even more acute this fall than it was a year ago.

Predicting 400 vacancies in Alberta public schools next September, education department officials have prepared to pool the teachers in needy communities.

In Manitoba the shortage of 275 fully-qualified teachers will be made up of "permittees" (high school graduates without training and also some who have taken a six weeks' summer course).

In Victoria Dr. C. B. Conway, of the teachers summer school, said the shortage in British Columbia would be worse than at any time during the war.

In Prince Albert, Sask., about 25 per cent of the vacancies will remain unfilled.

Reasons for the continued dearth are varied. Many of the married women have returned to their homes now that husbands have come back from overseas. On the other hand single women have married and no longer wish to continue teaching.

Left For Better Jobs

Then again it would seem both men and women have left the little red school-house for more lucrative jobs.

Although in Ontario, education department officials report the teaching situation has improved now that war veteran teachers have returned to their jobs, nevertheless salaries have been raised in the last year from $1,000 to $1,200 to make their return worthwhile.

The Nova Scotia Department of Education announced that a higher salary scale ranging from $900 to $1,600 would probably reduce the teacher shortage this year. Salaries in Nova Scotia previously were bracketed between $700 and $1,200.

In Montreal Leo Luindon, President of La Corporation Generale Des Instituteurs Et Institutriees Catholiques De Quebec, said unless rural Catholic school commissions change their attitude on salaries, several hundred schools will remain closed this fall.

Saskatchewan Education Minister W. S. Lloyd said some boards still "unfortunately and unfairly" discriminate against married women.

One bright spot on the teaching horizon is the fact that the number of normal school graduates and applicants for next year is rising steadily.

Death Penalty For 22 Defendants Asked by Court

Nuernberg, July 31 (AP) —The dealth penalty for the 22 defendants in the war crimes trial was asked today by Lt.-Gen. R. A. Rudenko, Russian prosecutor, who told the International Military Tribunal that such a verdict "will be greeted with satisfaction by all progressive mankind."

"Speaking on behalf of the U.S.S.R." Gen. Rudenko said in his summation, "I consider all charges against the defendants as fully proven, and in the name of a sincere love of mankind which inspires the peoples who consented to the greatest sacrifices in order to save the world, freedom and culture, in memory of the millions of innocent human beings slaughtered by a gang of murderers who now are before the court of a progressive mankind—I appeal to the tribunal to sentence all the defendants, without exception, to the supreme penalty."

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed all night last night, and after supper pop was reeding his paper and me and Artie were sitting on the floor laughing at each other without hardly beng able to stop even if we wanted to, which we didn't, and pop said, Giggle giggle giggle, for Peet sake you probably haven't got the faintest idea what you're laughing about, either one of you.

Well G. pop, people can laugh without actually knowing what they're laughing at, cant they? I said, and pop said, Not me. Maybe I knew how at one time, but I'm afraid I've lost the recipee. By gollies if you could teech me how to do that again it might give me a new lease on life and even make my hair grow back again, and I'd reward you beyond your widest dreems, he said.

Do you mean you'd give us each 5 dollers? I said, and pop said, Well, I didn't think you could have a dreem as wild as that.

Then how about a dime between us? I said, and pop said, Oh, I guess I could raise that much.

Okay, then, all we have to do is just look at each other and we start laughing, I said. That's all there is to it, aint it, Artie? I said and Artie said, sure, we'll show you, Uncle Will.

Which we did, opening our eyes wide and looking at each other and starting to laugh like anything, and pop said, It seems like a simple enough recipee, but maybe there's a special nack to it.

No sir, pop, let's all 3 of us try it together, I said.

Which we did, me and Artie looking at pop with big eyes and pop looking back at us, and me and Artie started to laugh even werse on account of it seeming even funnier, but pop didn't even smile, and I said, Heck, pop, maybe you reely do have to be a certain age.

Which maybe you do, and pop gave us money for ice creem cone just to prove he was a good sport.
